Its symptoms are easily discernible. They manifest themselves in only the most agreeable manner and cause those affected by the fever to enthuse most commendably over the coming event.

Every merchant is preparing for Old Home Week. Everyone is looking forward with keenest pleasure to those four days in July that will mean so much for Emmitsburg. The affair has been advertised far and wide, acceptances are being received by every mail, the committees are hard at work perfecting their plans and the genuine interest shown by every one in the neighborhood foretells the success that will crown the splendid efforts being made in furtherance of this laudable enterprise.

"We'll do our part" is an expression heard on all sides, and this sentiment may be taken as characteristic of the spirit that animates our citizenship. PERSONALS.

It is the sim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

by Saint Vincent de Paul, in Paris in the seventeenth century. In 1810 overtures were made to that effect, to the Superior General in Paris. These measures were so far successful, that Bishop Flaget, of Kentucky, through whom the negotiations were carried on, brought over with him on his return to the United States that same year; but, and forbidden by the government of since which period the Community at Emmitsburg is subject to the Superiors from 1810-49 they had observed the tention to honor the memory and permunity whose costume they then adopt-her successors. The site for the Church had been nai selected by Mother Seton, herself; its erection was the dearest wish of her Cu heart. In 1839 the cornerstone was laid, and on May 6th 1841, the sacred edifice was consecrated by His Grace the Most Reverend Samuel Eccleston, D.D., Archbishop of Baltimore. Connected with the Church is a circumstance which cannot fail to impress all stance which cannot fail to impress all who are interested in Saint Joseph's Centenary: The bell which hangs in the steeple of Saint Joseph's Church, is one of the many articles of this descrip-tion which were brought to this country from Spain during the ascendency of Espartere, when human progress found another illustration, so common with our political radicals, in the spoiliation of the Church and her holy institutions. Several of these bells were for sale in Baltimore, and in the selection of one of them for the sisterhood at Emmitsburg, a singular coincidence presented itself which deserves to be recorded. In order to judge the tone of the differ ent bells, the Rev. Thomas R. Butler, agent for the institution, stationed himself at some distance from the place where they were suspended. They were now rung one after the other, and were distinguished by the numerical order in which they were sounded.

Mr. Butler having chosen one that appeared to him adotted to the peared to him adopted to the purpose, found upon examination of the inscription which it bore, that it had been cast in the year 1809, the very period at which the sisterhood was established all the magnificent ceremonial that the at which the sisterhood was established at Emmitsburg; also, that it had been dedicated in honor of Saint Joseph, who was the chief patron of the institution and chapel in the Valley. Thus at the very time that Saint Joseph's community was commencing there, a bell was prepared for it in a far distant land, with an appropriate inscription, and destined to be brought hither, after thirty-two years, upon the completion of the sacred edifice that was to receive it. But Saint Peter tells us, "that one day with the Lord is as a thousand destined to the Distribution at St. Joseph's Academy, June 17th.
