MILLION A DAY DESTROYED

END OF WORN MONEY

During Year Government Got Rid of $640,000,000

ABOUT $1,000,000 A DAY REDEEMED

American People Fastidious About Money.—People Want Fresh, Crisp Bank Notes.—Dollar Bill Will Wear Fourteen Months.

"The redemption of wornout paper money is now averaging $1,000,000 a day. During the fiscal year just closed the government redeemed and destroyed the enormous total of $640,000,000, which is easily the largest amount redeemed in any single year. These figures show that there is great activity in business circles throughout the country."

The foregoing statement was made by United States Treasurer Charles H. Treat. He says that one of the best barometers of the state of national prosperity is to be found in the daily report of the redemption division of the Treasury Department. When trade is brisk through the country and people are buying and merchants are selling, the medium of circulation passes rapidly from hand to hand. When paper money, wornout and ragged by rough usage, finds its way to the Treasury for redemption it is an unfailing sign that times are good.

All past records have been broken in the redemption division during the last few months. The value of bills turned in to be exchanged for new ones has been running over $2,000,000 a day for a long period. About six years ago the daily redemptions were less than a million dollars. The great volume of wornout bills are in denominations of $1 and $2. The activity of business is further shown by the frequent requests for redemption of $5 and $10 notes with ones. During the last six years there has been an increase of 50 per cent. in the total number of $1 bills in circulation.

"The people of the United States," said a treasury official, "are growing more fastidious every year in the matter of handling money. They have gradually become accustomed to fresh, crisp bank notes or Treasury certificates and do not care to handle soiled and dirty looking money, suggestive of microbes. The Government has encouraged this tendency to demand clean notes."

"A big money factory is maintained here for the purpose of renewing the supply and it costs very little for banks to get it. The only charge for the exchange is forty cents per $1000 for transportation. The banks have learned that their customers like clean money and they do not hesitate to return crumpled and worn notes and demand new ones. It is a rare thing for the department to send back these notes with a statement that they are still fit for circulation. The average wear of a one dollar treasury certificate is fourteen months. Formerly a note would stay out for three or four years. Roughly speaking, the body of the circulation is entirely renewed every two and a half years."

The business of redeeming paper money has grown to such proportions that the Government recently found it necessary to improve its machinery for destroying notes. For more than half a century paper money for redemption was destroyed by being cut in two by a giant steel blade operated by a strong arm employee. Now the notes are mutilated, first, by an electrical punch which puts four holes in each bundle of stacked up bills. Then they are further pushed under a knife, also operated by electricity, which deftly cuts them longitudinally through the middle. Between 600,000 and 1,200,000 individual notes are thus destroyed on every day.

Demand For Lincoln Cents.

The Treasury is receiving many requests for the new Lincoln cents. National banks, department stores and other business shops throughout the country are anxious to obtain, as soon as possible, large supplies of these pennies with the idea of distributing them to their patrons. It is realized that there will be a great demand for the new coins. The department will not issue a single Lincoln cent until Aug. 1. On that date they will go out to the country by the millions. An enormous supply is being prepared, so that there will be plenty for distribution in every city.

MACHINE FALLS IN SEA

Aeronaut Almost Crosses English Channel

LATHAM'S MOTOR GIVES OUT

Frenchman Sails Twelve Miles Before Landing in the Water.—Description of His Aeroplane.

Hubert Latham Monday morning made his long-expected attempt to win the London Daily Mail prize for a flight across the English Channel. He failed after covering a distance of about 12 miles, when his motor stopped as the result of slight irregularity in the ignition system.

He glided gracefully to the water, lighted a cigarette and waited until the crew of the torpedo-boat destroyer Harpoon picked him up uninjured 10 minutes later. He had covered one-third of the distance and had remained in the air 11 minutes.

Even to the experts present familiar with aerial experiments the departure of the aeroplane was a thrilling one, as the graceful machine soared through the air almost 500 feet above the sea level as steady as if running on invisible rails and as speedy as an express train. Six minutes passed, the aeroplane growing smaller and smaller as it increased the distance between itself and the French coast.

At the end of seven minutes it was a speck, apparently immobile in the sky; at the end of eight minutes nothing more could be seen, even the destroyer, which had departed some time ahead of the airship, being only distinguishable by reason of its smoke.

Herbert Latham is a Frenchman. His flying machine is built with a single horizontal plane as against the double planes used by the Wright brothers and most aviators. Although he made short flights last May, his first important flight was in June, when he remained in the air 1 hour 7 minutes and 47 seconds, thus for the first time attracting serious attention to his new single plane device. Since then he has made several short flights.

The machine used by M. Latham suggests a bird. It has two rigid wings a foot thick in the center and tapering into flexible fins designed to give stability. The space between the two layers of canvas is watertight, and was calculated to insure safety should the machine fall into water as it did Monday.

LIVELY SESSION IN THE HOUSE

Several Tilts Take Place Between Members on Monday.

Having gotten over the baseball "spree" of last Friday, the House on Monday transacted a general assortment of business. It began by passing an omnibus bridge bill; then listened to an apology by Mr. Hobson of Ala., for having last February made some complimentary statements about Ambassador O'Brien at Tokio, and further considered the urgent deficiency bill.

By way of making the session especially interesting there were several lively tilts, one of which culminated in an announcement by Mr. Macon of Ark., that he would resign his seat if it could be proved that he was a legislative obstructor. The air was surcharged with crimination and recrimination, but the most serious discussion centered about Francis J. Heney, special assistant to the attorney-general.

Curtiss Makes Best Air Record.

Glenn H. Curtiss, who has been making flights in his aeroplane on Long Island, on Saturday sent his flyer 24.7 miles in 52.3 minutes. This is the longest flight made with an aeroplane in America this year. On Sunday his machine was broken while under the charge of an amateur. The driver lost control of himself when the machine rose and when 30 feet up it careened and swooped to the ground.

Big Salary and No Service.

That Francis J. Heney, special counsel of the Department of Justice, and also assistant prosecutor in the so-called graft cases in San Francisco, received from this government last year $23,000 for which he performed no service, was the frank admission of Chairman Tawney, of the Appropriations Committee, in the House on Monday.

Well For Few Days Then Dies.

Miss Emma J. Rogers, of Fayetteville near Hagerstown, a paralytic invalid since birth, who several weeks ago rose from her bed and walked around the house much to the surprise and delight of her parents and friends, died last Friday night. A few days after her marvellous recovery she was again stricken and never recovered.

BOQUETS FOR OLD EMMITSBURG

THE TOWN EXCELLED HERSELF IN HOSPITALITY

Not a Kick Registered, Not An Arrest Made, Twelve Thousand People Entertained

WHAT THE MANY VISITORS THINK OF THE GLORIOUS CELEBRATION

Revelation of Possibilities of Determined Men and Women Working in Concert.—Pace Set Hard to Follow.—Backward Look Over Details of Week, Parade, Music, Bands, Firemen and Other Organizations, Grounds, Dancing, Lights, Ball Games, Etc.

Now that it is all over retrospection is in order. Emmitsburg if it were a town of 10,000 inhabitants would have been proud of the success of its Old Home Week celebration. There were entertained during the four days at least 12,000 people. Of these none has registered a kick. There were nineteen police officers on hand in case of trouble. These men on account of the splendid conduct of the throngs were not called upon to make a single arrest. This is almost unprecedented. Emmitsburg is not a dry town but the only drunks noticed were those who make it a practice of getting on a jag every time they can lay their hands on the price.

The celebration was a revelation to many of the possibilities of determined men working in concert for the attainment of a purpose. Emmitsburg has set a pace that will be hard for others to keep up. Success followed our efforts because we made it follow. The zeal and determination of the men behind this project demanded such a celebration and they got it. Their horizon was more distant than their nose. They were not dollar-scared nor were they extravagant. Their plans were well laid and the same skill was shown in carrying them out.

The two monster parades on Wednesday and Thursday, under the skilful direction of Chief Marshall C. R. Hoke and his aides were handled just right. They moved off in time and, notwithstanding the crowded streets, in perfect order. The music was properly interspersed among the participants and the whole thing ran as smoothly as if there had been many rehearsals.

The choice of bands was most happy. The Emmitt Cornet Band, the Gettysburg Band, the Monocacy Valley Band and the musicians of the "Gallant Fifth Regiment," gave Emmitsburg music that will be hard to duplicate. Members of the Fifth Regiment Band, the premier organization of its kind in this state and one of the best in the country, were extremely gracious in their praise of our local musicians. Our people are deeply indebted to Mr. Nelson C. Kratz for the beautiful cornet solos of the several concerts. Mr. Kratz is an artist of great ability. These concerts of the Fifth Regiment Band were a revelation to many of our citizens. One man expressed the opinion of all when he said "I will stay here and listen as long as they will play."

The Vigilant Hose Company in their new uniforms made a splendid appearance. This body of men in many ways is the pride of Emmitsburg. The Emeralds, too, attracted much attention. Emmitsburg felt highly complimented by the number of visiting organizations who graced the occasion. The Frederick Business Men's Association must be mentioned in particular. Their representation was large and their many automobiles added much to the parade on Thursday.

In a large gathering such as Emmitsburg entertained the crowd is more or less "promiscuous." This is generally remarked more especially on the dancing floor, but under the efficient management of Mr. Brooke Boyle, the dances were as orderly and select as if

JOHN J. CRAPSTER'S FATAL FALL

Back Broken In Two Places He Dies Instantly.

Mr. John J. Crapster, a prominent resident of Taneytown, fell from a ladder on Tuesday afternoon sustaining injuries from which he died in a few minutes. Mr. Crapster was fixing some spouting on his house when the ladder gave way throwing him backwards from a considerable height. He fell on an iron fence and his back was broken in two places. Dr. Birnie was instantly summoned but the man was beyond help. He is survived by his wife and five children: Ellen, Anna, John, Walter and Elizabeth. The funeral service was held this morning at 10 o'clock at the Piney Creek Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Crapster was one of Taneytown's most successful business men and was held in high esteem in the community in which he lived. A man of sterling character he was a director of one of the financial institutions of his home town.

UNITED STATES TO GET SHARE

Promised a Fourth of Railway Loan in Chinese Empire.

American participation in the loan of $27,500,000 about to be negotiated by the Chinese Government on the Hankow Sze Chuen Railroad and other enterprises will be arranged to the entire satisfaction of this Government, thus assuring the maintenance of the "open door" in China.

Assurances to this effect came to the State Department on Tuesday from Peking. American bankers are expected to be given one-fourth of the loan.

To Secretary Knox the news was particularly agreeable. American Minister Conger was given the promise in 1904 that American and English money should be preferred in any future loans made by China to foreign countries on the Hankow Railroad. In conformity with this promise, the United States has insisted that she be allowed to come in with the European financiers as an original party to the loan.

FREDERICK'S BIG FIRE

Property To Value of $50,000 Destroyed on Sunday

SPLENDID WORK OF THE FIREMEN

Carload of Hay Catches Fire.—Flames Spread to Adjoining Buildings.—Reflection Seen Here.

On Sunday night one of the largest fires in years destroyed $50,000 worth of property in Frederick. The tannery of George K. Birely & Sons, paint shop, freight shed of the Frederick and Mid-dletown electric road and two dwellings beside several freight cars and a passenger coach were burned.

The blaze started in a carload of hay and was quickly communicated to the paint shop of the company near where the car stood. Before the arrival of the firemen the brisk wind had fanned the flames and carried sparks to the bark shed of the big tannery. From here the fire was spread to adjoining property. The roof of the double frame 14-story dwelling property of Mrs. Mary J. Baer, occupied by herself and son-in-law, Mr. Wm. T. Baer, on B. & O. avenue, was burned. The cornice of the dwelling of Mr. John M. Zimmerman, was burned. The roofs of the dwellings occupied by Mrs. Susan Frazier, Mrs. Thomas Strickler and Colt & Dixon's factory building caught fire, but the flames were extinguished before any serious damage was done. The roof of one of the houses in "Whitehill's Row," also caught, but the flames were quickly extinguished.

Several firemen were overcome by the heat and smoke but none was seriously injured.

A member of the firm of George K. Birely & Son stated that as soon as the site could be cleared of the debris the plant would be rebuilt. Their loss, estimated at between $35,000 and $40,000, they stated, is covered by insurance. In the fire 600 tons of bark was consumed, the sheds in the tannery yards having been only recently filled. The loss of the Interurban Railway Company is also covered by insurance.

The flames and reflection of the fire attracted a great deal of attention here where they were plainly seen. The splendid work of the volunteer firemen is commended on every side.

CATHOLIC PRIEST ENDS TROUBLE

Strikers Return To Work on Compromise at Butler, Pa.

The strike which for four days has tied up the Standard Steel Car Company's works at Butler, Pa., was settled late Tuesday and 3,500 employees returned to work on Wednesday. The settlement is a partial victory for both sides.

The strike was brought to an end through the efforts of Rev. F. Beczewski, of the Polish Catholic church, under whose advice the men have been acting almost from the beginning. Following the presentation of an ultimatum by the men Attorney Levi M. Wiss and Father Beczewski were called into consultation with company officials. The officials agreed to take back all of the workmen and consented to a reduction of the per cent. of delinquent rents taken from the pay envelopes of each week.

Will Visit Hawaii In August.

A party of twenty-five Senators and members of the House of Representatives is preparing to visit Hawaii. The visit will be made in response to an invitation extended by the Hawaiian Legislature at its last session, and the party will sail from San Francisco on the steamer Siberia, August 24. Eighteen days will be spent in Hawaii, during which time the four largest islands of the group will be visited.

Inquiry as To Cause of Sutton's Death.

The contention raised by the family of Sutton is that he was murdered. The testimony appears to strengthen the finding of suicide.

INFLUENCE OF THE HOME

SUPREME IMPORTANCE

Echo of Former Governor Warfield's Speech

PLEA FOR CLOSE COMRADESHIP

Change Taking Place Around Domestic Hearth and Its Effect on Future Citizens.—Call Home the Prodigal and Kill the Calf.

In his speech last week at Emmitsburg's Old Home Week celebration former Governor Warfield emphasized the supreme importance of the home; the effect of its influence on the state or nation. He told the good people plain, homely truths of their duty to their children and gave them a few suggestions of that good-fellowship, comradery that can and should maintain in the household of a typical American family.

"To the accomplished people of Frederick county," said Mr. Warfield, "let me impress one idea upon the minds of fathers and mothers: It should be your purpose to make the home attractive, so that your children will want to spend their time there. Fathers, make a companion of your son. If he wants to go fishing, go fish with him; if he wants to play ball, play ball with him. Do not forget that your children must have amusement. Do not forget your daughters, and daughters show your affection for your parents. Do not be ashamed to kiss your father in public."

Surrounded in the formative period of their lives by the sweet influences of a real home, our future citizens will be men of mettle who will perpetuate those principles that alone can preserve this nation as the home of the brave and the land of the free. Mr. Warfield's ideas seem to have taken hold in his own home. The Ellicott City Times recently published the following editorial on the subject of home influence:

We may laugh at the many ways of our boys, and make merry over their attempts to copy our own actions, but when we reflect that, with the manners of childhood they lost its innocence, our laughter will at once yield to bitter tears. The precocious dissipation and vice of our youth is a frequent theme of the preacher and moralist, and is one worthy of all their efforts. There is something more required, however, than the sermon and the lecture; this something more is the influence of home, and we must contrive some means to keep the children there that they may feel its full force.

Is it that the strict formality of our domestic manage is not sufficiently accommodating to youthful impulse: Is it that our youth is merely educated to the outward forms of a regard for home as lads in school, who are only taught to conjugate "I love" and never feel it? Whatever may be the cause, there is no doubt of the fact that our young people are in the habit of seeking elsewhere than under the parental roof for means of gratifying their taste for pleasure. It would startle mothers (fathers are too hardened by the world to be so sensitive) if they could go into some of the haunts of our metropolitan youth, and see with what practiced ease their children, like a crowd of young serpents, are gliding into the pathways of vice.

One cause of this is the change that has taken place around the domestic hearth. The master of the house rarely dines at home, and the boys as they grow up, find it pleasant to get their dinner somewhere else. For them, home has no enjoyment, and they pass as little time there as possible.

Make every home where there are boys, cheerful, comfortable and enjoyable. Remember the good example, taught us by the best of books, let us kill the "fatted calf" for the prodigals. Then they will not frequent billiard and drinking saloons, but will love and enjoy the friendship of the fireside.

Mr. Page Quits Theatre Panic.

On Monday evening someone shouted fire at a crowded performance of a moving-picture exhibition in the Frederick Opera House and almost caused a panic. Instantly the crowd on the side aisle started for the side exits. In the midst of a great commotion Mr. Dudley Page announced that there was no fire about the building and advised the crowd to remain quiet. In a short time order was restored. The alarm was caused by a cry of fire on the street, occasioned by the burning embers of the Birely tannery fire. The audience was mostly made up of women and children.

An attempt was made on Tuesday to rotten-egg Rev. R. T. Coursey of Cambridge, Md., for his opposition to the Sunday sale of tobacco.

CITIZENS BANK NEW HOME PRIDE OF FREDERICK Most Substantial and Beautiful Building

DESCRIPTION OF STRUCTURE
Fire and Burglar Proof Throughout.—Granite, Marble, Bronze and Concrete Used.—Comfort of Patrons Provided For.

The new bank building, erected for the Citizens National Bank at Frederick, opened for the first time on Saturday night, has a frontage of 72 feet on Market and 59½ feet on Patrick street, occupying a total ground area of 4284 square feet, leaving an open light space between the bank and the adjoining properties of 3 feet on Patrick street and 4 feet on Market street.

The exterior of the building is designed in the Doric style of architecture, so well adapted by its simple and dignified lines to this class of

The main entrance is at the corner of the two streets and has been emphasized by a heavy and deep granite frontispiece flanked by a pylon on either side. The doorway, like the window sash, is of heavy polished statuary bronze filled with polished wire plate glass, making the entire exterior a color study in white, gray and brown.

Immediately over the entrance is enclosed in a bronze frame, built stationary into the granite wall, a self-winding and electrically lighted clock, showing through double face glass dials the time both day and night on the inside as well as from street. The movement of the clock is connected by Western Union wire with the United States Observatory at Washington, from which point the clock is regulated every day.

The roof construction, similar to the floor, is supported on heavy steel columns, girders and beams, all embedded in concrete, on these roof trusses is laid the mezzanine story.

The wall spaces of the interior room, as well as the vaults, are faced with Italian marble wainscoting about 10 feet high, set upon a green marble base, and running in fluted pilaster form with bases and capitals between the windows ing demands of the bank and is convertible on special days to meet heavy business pressure. In design the counter follows the treatment of the exterior and consists of marble with transparent plate glass panels in its base.

The bronze banking screen with its metal desks, which are set upon the marble counter, is of richly moulded bronze and plate glass, having eight openings protected by heavy bronze grills for the use of the teller, etc. While three sides of the working space are enclosed by the marble and bronze counter and screen, the fourth or south side consists of the formidable and massive burglar and fire-proof vaults.

The vaults of which there are two on the banking floor, one called the Security vault, is for the exclusive use and safe keeping of the valuables, securities, cash and deposit boxes, and the other adjoining and encased with the Security vault, is for the protection of the business books, papers of value and ready references. Both vaults are located in the bank so as not to adjoin any outside wall, but have a clear space all around, which is in full view from the two streets on which the bank is located.

The foundations of these vaults are worthy of especial note, being of solid monolith concrete and steel, all excavated to and set upon the natural bed rock about 8 feet below the basement floor, making the foundation a solid cube 16 feet deep, 29 feet long and 13 feet wide, all brought up level with the bank floor. Upon this foundation are built the overlocking steel rail vaults 5 inches thick throughout and weighing 147,000 pounds, all of the most thorough construction, making in themselves a burglar resisting vault.

Inside of these rail vaults are encased the two steel burglar and fire-proof vault linings, making in the case of the security vault 3 inches in thickness of Chrome and Bessemer drill proof steel, all securely bolted and electro welded together. To this steel security vault and amalgamated with it is joined the vestibule. To this vestibule is hung an enormous crane and ball-bearing hinges the steel door 12½ inches thick, weighing 12 tons, and which in addition to further safety has double vestibule doors 4½ inches thick.

The Book vault is also constructed in the most thorough manner and on lines similar to those above described.

To provide for the future expansion of the business of the bank there has been introduced a mezzanine story over the offices of the President's and Directors' rooms, opening into the Banking Room by large bays screened by perforated marble railings and located directly opposite the main entrance, this second floor is reached by a concrete, iron and bronze stairway and is divided into one large room and two smaller rooms, all sufficiently lighted and made suitable for book-keeping and other banking purposes.

The heating and ventilating of the building has also received considerable thought, and is possibly the best system devised to introduce a large volume of warmed air and at the same time exhaust by means of warmed ducts the vitiated air in quantity to keep a full supply of pure warm air for the breathing of the occupants of the several rooms.

The electrical, gas and combination lighting fixtures are a feature well worth mentioning. Most of them are made of cast bronze from special designs for this special building. There are four large dignified dome lights suspended by heavy chains from the ceiling of the banking room, while richly chased bracket lights are spaced around the walls and counters. The various offices and rooms have their special system for lighting, either from the ceiling or side as the condition of each room requires, so the building has an abundance of both natural and artificial light.

COL. CLAGETT'S ROUGH RIDERS

Feature of the Old Home Week Parade.—Organization to be Permanent.

One of the most pleasing scenes in the Civic Day Parade of Old Home Week was presented by the troop of 150 "rough riders" under command of Col. Jesse C. Clagett. This company was composed of horsemen from throughout this section and their deportment and skill in handling their mounts was the subject of much favorable comment. Great credit is due also to Mr. W. F. Fisher, of Motters, for his valuable aid in assembling and uniforming the men. The complimentary allusion to them by Mr. Warfield in his address on that day should be a source of great gratification to all who took part. The second public appearance of this troop will be next month when the entire organization will go to Liberty.

It is understood that those who rode on Thursday are to form themselves into a permanent organization of "rough riders," and it is therefore regretted that the names of all the members could not be secured for publication at this time. A roster of the officers only appears below: Jesse C. Clagett, colonel; B. S. Jenkins, adjutant rank of major; Charles Stanbury, captain; Edgar Stanbury, first lieutenant; Paul Corry, second lieutenant; Allen Dorsey, first sergeant; Dr. B. I. Jamison, surgeon rank of major; C. Smith and Milton Hesser, file closers.

In compliance with a suggestion made by Col. Clagett, THE CHRONICLE requests that each man in the saddle on Civic Day send his name to this office as soon as possible in order that a complete roll may be made.

Democratic primaries will be held in Washington county tomorrow, Saturday.

building where strength and massiveness should be the chief components to create a building to house securely the business and values of a banking institution. The building is but one story in height, however, sufficiently high (41 feet) to allow a mezzanine story for additional rooms built in its height.

The exterior walls, columns, cornices and balustrade, extending to a height of 41 feet above the sidewalk rest on a solid mass of concrete foundations from three to five feet thick, and have their street facades wholly built of white Concord N. H. granite, considered the finest for monumental and public work. The facades are divided by massive monolith columns 4 feet in diameter and 22 feet high, set on a heavy continuous base; into large bays, four on Market and three on Patrick street, giving each bay a window area and doorway upward to meet the interior wall spaces into bays similar to the classic treatment of the exterior.

Particular attention has been given to every detail of the interior construction and neither was time, thought nor labor spared to make this building, as an integral whole and in each individual part as absolutely fire-proof as is possible by discriminating selection of fire resisting materials. From basement to roof not a particle of wood has been used in the construction or finish; the builders relying on such materials as masonry, concrete, structural steel, marble, tile and bronze, the latter a so applying to all the doors and finish for same; all plastering where such was required has been done with cement on steel lath.

The floor was built of heavy steel beams enclosed and spanned with concrete plates to carry 350 pounds per

These windows are provided with heavy polished wire fire glass, thus not only securing an abundance of light for the interior, but giving the greatest possible protection in case of adjacent fires. A precautionary measure of setting the windows low to the street level so as to give a full view of every portion of the banking room proper from the street, both night and day, is a feature especially to be recommended on account of the greater publicity and consequent safety.

[Editorial from The Chronicle, June 8, 1906.]

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE

There is but one answer to the question, "What made Emmitsburg's Old Home Week a success?" It is this: The willing, conscientious, untiring, unselfish and thorough work done by the Executive Committee and the efficient sub-committees which cooperated with it. Work, hard work and plenty of it, was the portion allotted to these committees, and never for a moment did they falter in their duty. The men and women who assumed the responsibilities of this big undertaking mapped out their programme and followed it to the end, and that end was Success. Nor did they have an easy road to travel. They encountered obstacles at the very outset, but they overcame them, and impediments and discouragements that would have taken the heart out of many less determined than they, were tossed aside as "trifles light as air"—all because to these men and women who shouldered the burden there was no such word as "fail." Theirs is the credit, share and share alike, for the splendid result that crowned their efforts. To them the people owed whatever praise there was. We say owed, for not a congratulation has been withheld. Those who from the very inception of the affair were helpful and encouraging, even though they took no active part, have been most generous in their appreciation, and from others who at first were skeptical have come kind words of commendation. So the debt is paid and a spirit of genuine good feeling and a desire to do still more for old Emmitsburg pervades the air.

THE MOST POPULAR MAN IN MARYLAND.

Because he is not the minion of self-interested politicians; because he is not the tool of a political clique; because he did not and will not serve the interests of a machine or buy a seat in the Senate, ex-Governor Warfield has enemies—a few. And just for these very reasons; just because he stands for purity in politics, for high principles, for things that are just and right and of good report; just because he is a big, broad-minded, able, resourceful man, the ex-Governor has friends inside and outside the State—and a host of them. Rightly does the Star refer to him as a "representative of the highest type of the present-day Marylander." He is all of this. He is a representative of the highest type of Christian gentlemen; a man who lives and carries into every day life the religion he professes, and withal a man who believes in the people.

His knowledge of finance is the knowledge of an expert. His executive ability is universally recognized, and no governor of this commonwealth ever had a cleaner or a more constructive administration. Mr. Warfield then stood where he stands today, a stalwart in the people's cause.

And these very people who believe in him demand representation through him. They want him back in public life again. And where, let us ask, could a better or a more popular man be found?

In a recent address before the Phi Beta Kappa Society at Cambridge, President Woodrow Wilson said, "What we should seek to impart in our colleges is not so much learning itself as the spirit of learning."

This is the paramount obligation of the College. The curriculum offered by every educational institution, every school, should serve the graduate as only the syllabus of the more extended and never ending curriculum of that larger university—Life. And only by inculcating and fostering a desire, an appetite for learning, for wider knowledge, can a college fulfil its duty to its students. Only by impressing him with the truth that, after all, the student leaving college is simply better prepared to delve more systematically into deeper channels of learning can the college hope to accomplish its chief mission.

AFTER the recent interview of Evelyn Thaw, in which she laid bare still more of the sickening particulars of her unenviable career, can anyone be expected to sympathize either with her, or that picaresque person, her husband, who is attempting to regain his liberty? For the public's peace of mind, let us hope that Thaw will be detained indefinitely where he is, and for the same reason let us hope that Evelyn and every recollection of the notorious, sensational trial and all else connected with the name of Thaw will soon be shrouded in everlasting oblivion.

Up in Essex county, New York, one is confronted by this sign on every road:

"Don't drive on one track. Avoid making a rut. Use wide tires."

The roads in Essex county are kept in good condition just because the people there are considerate enough to follow the sensible suggestion on that sign. Maryland roads could also be kept in condition—those which have been properly made—if the people who use them would only follow those simple rules. And in the end they are the ones to profit by observing them.

MAMMONISM is only an effect of which selfishness is the cause. Selfishness—the assertion of self against the law of the universe, self-gratification instead of the general good—this is the disease of the world; and we can never have social health until society is saved from selfishness.—Homiletic Review.

This applies in a very particular sense to small communities where too often "what am I going to get out of it" is the first thing one hears when any undertaking for the public good is inaugurated. Whenever selfishness is put aside and public spirit takes its place; whenever the people of a community get shoulder to shoulder and push, nothing is impossible.

A NEWS dispatch chronicles the breaking into the house of a musician by a troop of Serbian bandits and the destruction of a collection of 1600 songs. What a boon it would be to suffering America if these same bandits could be persuaded to cut loose in some of the emporiums in this country where so-called "popular songs" are dispensed for a consideration.

NOTWITHSTANDING two or three mishaps and a dozen or so delays everything seems to be Wright at Fort Meyer.

BALTIMORE is still crying for greater representation at Annapolis. But before going away from home hadn't Baltimore better wait until it can obliterate that prominent mis—in so far as her local government is concerned—that insistently looms up to form the prefix to representation?

It was truly a no limit game that was pulled off in the Senate and everybody chipped in liberally. There were also some "standpatters" with pretty good hands. But Big Bill called them, and on the show down—well, they haven't all cashed in yet.

WHAT MONEY IS LEGAL TENDER

Few People Know That Gold and Silver Certificates Are Not.

Many people know the definition of legal tender but few know what money a debtor may require his creditor to receive. "Gold certificates," says a treasury official, "are not legal tender, but are receivable for customs, taxes, and all public debts. Silver certificates are not a legal tender. Neither are national bank notes. They are receivable however in payment on taxes, excises, public lands and all other dues to the United States, except duties on imports. Trade dollars and fractional currency are not legal tender. Fractional currency is receivable for postage and revenue stamps, and also in payment of any dues to the United States less than $5 except duties on imports. Foreign gold and silver coins are not legal tender.

"The following are legal tender, in all that the term means:

"Gold coins of the United States, standard silver dollars, subsidiary silver coins, minor coin of copper, bronze or copper-nickel, up to twenty-five cents; United States notes or greenbacks, demand treasury notes, treasury notes of 1890, Columbia half dollars and Columbia quarters, Subsidiary silver coin, including Columbia half dollars and quarters, are legal tender up to $10."

Maryland's Most Representative Man

Outside the state, says the Baltimore Evening Star, Edwin Warfield is looked upon as Maryland's most representative citizen. First as a financier, then as Governor, and again as financier, Mr. Warfield has left his impress upon the politics and business of the country. He was the pioneer of American surety business, and it is something to have created the nucleus of an industry of continent wide importance. It is more than a mere honor to have furnished the brains and ideas which helped to make that industry the greatest of a great state and one of the greatest of a great country.

Of impressive learning and distinguished visage, Governor Warfield stands as a representative of the highest of the present day Marylander. He would be this state's Grand Old Man if he were old enough, but he isn't.

That's the Answer What's the Question.

Senator Taylor of Tennessee tells of an old negro whose worthless son was married secretly. The old man heard of it and asked the boy if he was married. "I ain't sayin' I ain't," the boy replied. "Now, you Rastus," stormed the old man, "I ain't askin' you is you ain't; I is askin' you ain't you is."—Troy Times.

MOUNTED POLICE AT WORK

The State Constabulary of Pennsylvania At Strikes.

(Springfield Republican)

If one reads the reports of the progress of the strike at the plant of the pressed steel car company at McKee's Rocks, Pa., frequent references to the Pennsylvania state constabulary will be encountered. The strike is in itself comparatively unimportant, but it affords the constabulary another opportunity to demonstrate its ability to handle mobs and relieve the militia of disagreeable duties in the smaller labor wars. We select from the news reports of the past few days illustrative extracts, as follows:

The mounted troopers of the state constabulary are ruling the affected district with an iron hand. Last night several hundred idle sightseers who had journeyed to the plant from Pittsburgh in anticipation of further rioting, found their way barred by a detachment of troopers who occupied the bridge leading into McKee's Rocks over the railroad tracks.

An exciting arrest was made when Trooper Feely encountered a group of sullen foreigners in Olivia street at noon. The men became ugly when commanded to move on. The trooper rode toward them and they ran, all entering the blacksmith shop of Albert Elcessor, a Pole. The men slammed the heavy door, but the trained horse ridden by Feely threw itself against the portal, breaking it open. Feely rode in and was in time to see the men rushing across back lots, they having emerged from a rear door. Elcessor berated the trooper. Feely arrested him and took him to the box car jail in the mill yard.

The state constabulary works with the nerve and discipline of regular army cavalry men. There are 600 mounted men in the entire force, divided into four troops of 150 men each; and they have been recruited almost entirely from men who have served in the United States army. Many of the officers are former sergeants of the regular service, who entered the constabulary with the best of records; and the state has no difficulty in securing them because of the attractive pay it offers. As constabulary men, they are specially trained to deal with rioters without using firearms, except as a last resort, and to this end they carry billies in place of the cavalryman's sword. It is an essential part of their tactics, when dealing with mobs, to exercise all the restraining moral influence that comes from unflinching courage and daring initiative. With their reputation established as men who always do what they set out to do, their appearance in a locality has a restraining effect upon turbulent spirits. It is estimated by the commander of the constabulary that each trooper is a match for 100 men in a mob. In their early days—the force was first organized in 1906—the troopers were put to the test by a strike at the Cornwall ore banks, where rioters were assaulting workmen who refused to quit work. As a Pittsburgh correspondent of the New York Evening Post tells the story:

The sheriff telephoned for aid. "Send your whole force of constabulary," he urged. "These rioters are desperate!" A sergeant and 10 men of the new force were dispatched on the run. There was no time to get the horses entrained, and the detail went whirling to the scene of trouble in a caboose and engine. No sooner had they arrived than the smallest man in the bunch forced his way bodily into a crowd of angry aliens and grabbed a big foreigner who had "pulled a gun." The prisoner showed fight, and his friends offered to help him. The trooper swung his stick just once, the big fellow dropped, and the crowd ran like sheep.

And from that performance to Trooper Feely's act, on Saturday last, in rushing his horse through the heavy door of a blacksmith-shop in his pursuit of rioters, the constabulary has lived up to its high military standards of dash and initiative.

While riotous labor wars, entailing upon the state large expense for service by the militia, were the immediate cause of the creation of the Pennsylvania constabulary, the force is exceedingly useful the year around in patrolling rural districts which are the ordinary prey of ruffians, highwaymen and various desperate characters. Very many of the townships can maintain only a weak local police at the best; and in protecting the nonurban regions from criminals, the state constabulary, which is ever ready for service in any part of the commonwealth, renders important service. Its existence is made conspicuous only during times of riot, or in strikes that develop mob violence; yet the force is constantly employed winter and summer in enforcing law and preserving the peace in the more inaccessible sections of the Keystone state.

Discussion of Affairs in General from Leading Journals of The Country.

Won Their Point and Lost.

(New York Tribune)

Mr. Aldrich and his supporters have had their way with the dutiable schedules and the free list. Yet in a larger sense they have lost their fight. For they have had to confess that their bill was incapable of producing sufficient revenue, after stoutly maintaining that it was capable, and have had to incorporate into it a form of special taxation much more objectionable than the House bill's inheritance tax, which they discarded. They have also had to make provisions for a board of experts to furnish data for guidance in applying the rule laid down by the last Republican National Convention, that the protection given the domestic producer ought to cover the differential in cost of production here and abroad, plus a reasonable margin of profit. Had such data been available this summer, it requires no stretch of imagination to hold that they would have compelled the framing of a measure widely different from the present Senate bill.

Goes Dr. Elliot a Few Better.

We do not all like or need the same kind of diet, either in food or in books. No precise formula can suit every case. Following Dr. Elliot's list, Mr. Roy L. McCardell, who wrote "The Gay Life," and afterwards expressed sorrow for his act, has announced his choice of "five feet of books." Mr. McCardell is rather better as a literary expert than as a dramatist, and no one need view his opinions in this line with an utter lack of confidence simply because he slipped up and sprained his ankle in "The Gay Life." This is his literary choice:

Mrs. Opie's works.
The six best sellers.
Cowper's Poems.
Patent Office Reports (selected).
Bound volumes of the Congressional Record (go as far as you like.)
Ayer's and Hostetter's Almanacs for 1881.

Queen Victoria's "My Journal in the Highlands."

New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad time-tables for 1908.

The Philadelphia City Directory.

Roosevelt's Messages.

"Triumph of Democracy," by A. Carnegie.

"Side Talks to Fair Fudge Makers," by Edward Bok.

Of course, not all these books would be approved by the most conservative thinkers, but in some respects the list has its commendable points, like the list furnished by Dr. Elliot. It is always doubtful, however, if any strictly humorous work should ever be included in a list of the world's best books, and for that reason it may seriously be questioned if Mr. McCardell showed good judgement in including any of the bound volumes of the Congressional Record.

Ministers Should Go To Church.

(Universalist Leader)

Every minister on his vacation should go to church. It will do him a lot of good to try being a model layman for a few Sundays! He should do exactly what he wants his men to do. On Sunday morning he should get up and dress himself well so as to command his own self-respect; he should scorn the Sunday newspaper; he should be on time at the church with his whole family; he should take his seat and show a proper respect for the sacred place; he should take part in the service whenever the congregation is given the privilege—not overlooking the collection! He should listen to the sermon with serious attention. He may feel that he could preach a great deal better one from that text, but as a general thing, there is nothing ministers need quite so much as to listen attentively to other ministers! When a minister gets the notion that he is to go to the church service or to a meeting of any kind only when he has something to say himself, the end of that man is not far off. Go to church during the vacation; go to church to listen, to worship; try to get into the spirit of the layman in the pew and you will be a better minister in the pulpit.

Tilden's Forecast Realized.

(Letter in Philadelphia Ledger)

At the time of the civil war patriotic orators who were of the North declaimed and patriotic poets wrote alleged poetry, in which it was set forth that King Cotton had been supplanted by King Corn. But after the civil war was ended, and the demoralization consequent upon reconstruction had been in some measure eliminated King Cotton again asserted his supreme authority.

In 1877 Samuel J. Tilden returned from a summer sojourn in Europe. After the electoral commission declared that Rutherford B. Hayes had received one more electoral vote for president than Gov. Tilden the defeated candidate decided to sojourn in Europe during the summer months. On the evening of a day in September, when the first frost of that autumn was chilling the air, Gov. Tilden addressed a very large throng who assembled in front of his house in Gramercy park to welcome him home. He did not touch upon American politics. His theme was the development of our commerce with Europe. He spoke with real eloquence because he was very earnest and sincere, of what he regarded as sure to be ultimately the greatest in money value, in its wealth-producing qualities and in quantity of the American harvest—namely, Indian corn or maize. Gov. Tilden said that it might require a generation of time to teach the people of Europe the food value that is in Indian corn.

Gov. Tilden said that there was no reason, why, within the course of a few years, the United States should not raise a harvest of 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn. He ventured to predict the money value of a harvest of that kind at not far from $1,600,000,000, and in graphic manner depicted the relation of so great a harvest as that to the prosperity of American railways. In the last five or six years of Gov. Tilden's life he frequently, in private conversation, referred to the wealth producing possibilities for the American people that lay in the production of Indian corn. What he then predicted is this year realized. We are to have at least a 3,000,000,000-bushel harvest of Indian corn, and the money value of that will be from $1,600,000,000 to a little under $2,000,000,000.

It also means no idle cars for the railways, renewed net earnings of great amounts, the ability of American financiers to lead to some extent in the foreign exchange markets and to take up the finance bills that have been discounted in London this summer.

Popular Election of Senators.

(Nebraska State Journal.)

Direct election of senators has received so substantial a boost by the Senate this summer that it can hardly be staved off more than half a dozen years more. The Senate's independence of public opinion has never been so pointedly demonstrated or the free-born American so galled by his helplessness. The politician who is not a senator must soon see the necessity of pushing the direct election movement. Does it mean nothing to him that a senator who is beyond popular control should be establishing policies which the humbler politician must depend upon for his votes at the hands of the people? Moreover, the Senate itself has destroyed the last argument against popular election.

It has been held that the senator represents the state and should therefore be chosen by the state, the Legislature. The tariff debate proves beyond peradventure that the average senator does not represent the state. One represents coal mines, another railroads, another paper mills, another woolen mills, another sugar factories, another lumber owners and so on through the dreary tariff schedule. If the states are to be represented surely the best thing to represent is the people thereof which comes only by popular nomination and election. Twenty-seven states have already called for a constitutional convention to make the necessary change. Four more only are needed to make the demand effective. In the circumstances they will surely be forthcoming at the next round of Legislatures.

Will Get What He Wants.

(New York Evening Post.)

President Taft has at last spoken out on the pending tariff bill, and his trumpet gives no uncertain sound. It was straightforward, and it was also sagacious, for him to let the public know what he said to the twenty-two Republican members of the House who went to him to protest against free raw materials and lower duties. The President's reply is a notification at once to Congress and the country. If words are half-battles, such a statement as his is a whole battle. Mr. Taft feels himself the representative of the whole people, obliged, as he says, to take a "broader point of view than that of a single member of Congress in respect to articles produced in his district." Somebody has got to speak for the consuming masses. Somebody has got to consider good faith with the people. In declaring flatly for a downward revision of the rates, and maintaining that the Republican party is in honor bound to give it, President Taft openly antagonizes Aldrich, and gives the lie to Senator Lodge; but that will only increase the country's sense of indebtedness to his courage. The response of the people will, we are convinced, come up to the White House like the sound of many waters. The whole situation is changed by this explicit and manly utterance of Mr. Taft's. The Aldrich bill is dead. If it is not cut to pieces in conference, it will be vetoed by the Executive. But the chances are enormously in favor of the President's getting what he wants from Congress. This will be, not simply because he wants it, but because the country demands it.

Paul's Second Missionary Journey—
Athens. Acts xviii: 13-34.

Golden Text.—God is a spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth. John iv: 24.

Verse 16.—Can any true man, at this time, see the folly and sin which thousands so eagerly follow, without his spirit being stirred?

* Verse 17.—Notwithstanding that we all, necessarily, have trades and callings to pursue, should, or should not, our chief concern be the tremendous issues involved in spiritual truth, and why? (This question must be answered in writing by members of the club.)

Verses 18-21.—The Epicureans and the Stoics had a contrary philosophy of life, state briefly what they each taught.

Which brings the more lasting happiness, and develops the nobler character, a life devoted to the pleasures of sense, or a life devoted to service for others, and to self denial?

What as a matter of fact, is the substance of what Paul taught?

Should we lend a respectful ear to all new theories of life, and eternity, or reject them without examination?

Verse 22.—Which is the better man, an active skeptic, or an indifferent and thoughtless Christian?

Which is preferable to be ever speculating about God, or to have no thought concerning him?

Is belief in and a longing for God, peculiar to Christianity?

May a heathen who has never come into touch with Christianity, find out, and know, the true God?

What then is the advantage for a true hearted heathen, coming into contact with Christianity?

Verse 23.—Can one man who knows God, be the means of imparting that knowledge to another who desires to know him?

Verse 24.—How do we know that God made all things?

God does fill heaven and earth with his presence; but does he not also dwell in temples that are made in which to worship him?

Verse 25.—While God does not need the support of man's hands, does he not desire the worship and love of men's hearts?

How does God give to all "life and breath, and all things?"

Will we in heaven be able to see God, in any different way from the way in which it is our privilege to see him now?

Verse 26.—What is the evidence that all races of men, sprang from the same original stock?

Has God had anything to do with the national, and geographical, divisions of the globe, as they exist to-day?

Has God had anything to do with our present individual conditions?

Verses 27-28.—What is both the chief joy and object of life?"

Is it possible for every man to find God if he will but seek him, and what is the only condition for seeking him?

How do you conceive of the thought that "in him we live and move and have our being," can you illustrate the thought with air, that is both in us, and around us?

Verse 29.—Can any work of art represent God to any practical advantage?

Verse 30-31.—What makes the need for repentance?

In what way will Jesus judge the world?

Verse 32.—Why did some mock when they heard of the resurrection?

Verses 33-34.—Did all who were true to God accept of Paul's message, and were all untrue to God who rejected it?

Household Hints.

Clean the Back Yards and Help Fight
Flies and Mosquitoes.

Remove from the yard all old tin cans, broken dishes or bottles, disabled buckets or pans, or other receptacles that will hold rain water in which the mosquito breeds. All cisterns, tanks, shallow wells, rain barrels, etc., should be closely covered, and all drains and garbage heaps should be disinfected. Mosquitoes breed in water, and flies breed in filth, and in order to exterminate either, there must be neighborhood co-operation in the work. Only by concerted action can much headway be made. One dirty, careless family can stock a wide area in spite of the care of others. It is absolutely unnecessary that the back yard should be allowed to look worse than the front or side yards. Right now is the time to clean up, and during the rest of the year is the time to keep cleaning up. Fight the flies and mosquitoes unceasingly.

Green Apple Pie.

Do not stew the apples before making the pie, and this presupposes good apples. Cover the bottom crust to the edge with apples, peeled, cored and quartered, and each quarter cut into three pieces lengthwise. Lay them evenly and sprinkle a very little salt over them, not quite enough sugar to sweeten, a thread of good molasses over every part of the apple to enrich and brown it, a dust of cinnamon and the same of grated nutmeg, distributing it evenly so all will cook well into the fruit. If the fruit lacks juice, add a spoonful of water; if liked a few drops of lemon juice, dropped here and there, adds to its flavor. Secure the upper crust firmly to the under and bake in a moderate oven. In making apple pies, green or ripe, remember there are apples and apples, and be sure you get the right sort.

Stains.

Oxalic acid removes obdurate stains, and if kept for use in the laundry it should be plainly labeled and kept out of the way of ignorant and careless hands, as it is extremely poisonous. Buy the acid in crystals, put in a bottle and cover with cold water. If it does not all dissolve at one filling, add water as the solution is used.

Iron stains on marble may be removed by applying a mixture of oxalic acid and spirits. Leave it on a short time and then dry with a soft cloth. Ink, if fresh may sometimes be removed with lemon juice. Stains may be removed from steel knives by rubbing with a freshly cut raw potato dipped in brickdust.

FUNERAL OF JAMES BOYD

Killed By Power Belt at Pumping Station at Braddock.

The funeral of James Boyd, the 10-year-old son of Mr. Allen Boyd and grandson of the late Chief Judge John Ritchie, who was accidentally killed while at play at the Braddock pumping station Friday afternoon, took place from the home of his aunts, the Misses Ritchie, in Frederick on Sunday afternoon.

The lad, with several companions, among them an older brother and younger sister, was playing by the side of a large revolving flywheel, carrying an eight inch belt. He attempted to jump across the belt, and in failing to clear the distance his body was caught up and whirled with tremendous force against the top of the building. He fell to the floor unconscious by the side of one of his little companions, all of whom had witnessed the accident and had become terror-stricken.

Harry Zimmerman, keeper of the station, picked up the unconscious form of the lad and carried it to Edgemont cottage, the home of William H. Elliott, along the National pike, where Mrs. Boyd and her children have been spending the summer. Dr. William Neill, of Charlestown, W. Va., found the child unconscious and far gone. In the meantime Dr. William Crawford Johnson, of Frederick, was summoned, but the lad's injuries were of such a nature that nothing could be done to save his life.

A sad feature of the accident was the arrival of Mr. Boyd at the house soon after the child died, without knowing of the accident. He came from Washington on his regular visit to his family and had not heard of his son's mishap until he entered the room where the little body lay cold in death. Both Mr. and Mrs. Boyd were overcome by the accident.

C. J. Magness Free Joins Wife.

Charles J. Magness, the first-class musician in the navy, who married a daughter of the late Senator Gorman, of Maryland, and was sentenced to serve a year on the prison ship for desertion, was released Saturday morning and left at once for Washington to join his wife. Magness was sentenced to serve a year last November, but owing to good behavior this was cut down to eight months, and he was favored in every way by the officials at the navy yard in getting away without being seen.

Bring Report on Petrosino Case

J. R. Crowley, A. B. Simon and A. F. Vachais, American detectives, left Rome Tuesday on their way back to the United States, after making thorough investigation of the murder of Lieut. Joseph Petrosino, the New York detective, who was assassinated at Palermo, Sicily, last March. The American detectives were assisted by the Italian police, and it is understood that an important report on the case will be made when they reach New York.

Anniversary of Death of Leo XIII.

Tuesday was the sixth anniversary of the death of Pope Leo XIII, and a funeral mass was read at the sacred college at Rome, in the presence of Pope Pius and the high dignitaries of the church.

Field And Garden

A Few Valuable Pointers Taken From Exchanges.

Good roads increase very materially the value of the farms they serve. They lessen the time between the farm and town, and in effect set the farm miles nearer its trading center. They serve as an index to the character of the neighborhood through which they run. They promote neighborliness. They save time, feed, horseflesh, and the wear on wagons and other vehicles. They make it possible to market grain hay and other bulky farm produce at unfavorable seasons of the year, when prices are good and farm work slack.

French poulterers believe in boiling the grain. It is put in a pan of water and boiled until soft enough to be easily bruised between the fingers. It is claimed that four pints of oats boiled will fill a pint measure seven times; four pints of barley boiled will fill a pint measure 10 times; four pints of buckwheat boiled will fill a pint measure 14 times; four pints of corn (maize) boiled will fill a pint measure 15 times; four pints of wheat boiled will fill a pint measure 10 times, and four pints of rye boiled will fill a pint measure 15 times.

Late broods are successfully grown in the garden. If the mother hen is kept in the coop and the young chicks permitted to roam among the garden stuff, they are beneficial rather than injurious to the plants, gathering injurious insects, eating little of the produce and adding valuable meat to their own bones. It is wonderful how they improve if permitted to follow the hoe and pick the worms and bugs from the newly-turned soil.

As a rule milk is unfit for use at least two weeks before calving time. However, some cow's milk seems to be good almost up to calving time. Milk is usually not saved for house use until the eighth or ninth milking afterward, although it has been known to be perfectly good after the fourth milking.

A woman that makes fine butter says that she skims the cream of two or three days' milk together, letting it all sour at one time, and churns as soon as it is sour. She makes pound rolls, and her butter always commands the highest price, her customers preferring it to creamery butter.

Dirt and vermin are especially detrimental to the summer-hatched chicks. While they are young and the weather is hot, they are susceptible to all diseases. The older chicks will withstand conditions that would destroy the younger ones. Therefore these late-hatched chicks demand particular care.

In feeding a ton of cottonseed meal having a fertilizer valuation of $29.50 to fattening animals, that portion of its fertility which passes into the solid excrement has a valuation of about $12.40, and that which passes into the urine of about $15.

If the next crop of apples is anything like a normal, or better, it will mean large quantities of fruit which should be worked up into cider and vinegar. Forehanded farmers and orchardists are already taking steps to care for the yield.

June broods develop more quickly if kept to themselves with the mother hen or in a brooder. If permitted to live among the older chicks, they are trampled on and do not prosper as they should.

More good cows are now going into dairy herds than ever before. Keeping the records of cows and what they will do in a year is weeding out the poor ones.

Salting cows regularly has much to do with the ease or difficulty with which the butter will come.

WRIGHTS COMMENT ON LATHAM.

Say That The Motor Is The Main Question In Aerial Flying.

The failure of Herbert Latham to cross the English channel Monday brought forth expressions of confidence from the Wright brothers at Washington that their machine can make a successful flight across that body of water. "Have you any ambition to cross the English channel?" Wilbur Wright was asked Monday. "No," he replied. "If I had I should have done it long ago."

Mr. Wright said the motor of Latham's aeroplane had rarely been known to run satisfactorily for more than five minutes at a time. Speaking about the probable result should the Wright aeroplane descend into a body of water, Mr. Wright declared that its curved surfaces would support it on the water for a time if it lighted squarely. In case the machine plunged forward, he said, it would undoubtedly sink to the bottom.

CLEMENCEAU CABINET FALLS

French Premier Attacked on Account of Administration.The French Cabinet fell suddenly Tuesday under dramatic circumstances at the conclusion of a violent debate over the naval scandals extending over several days.M. Delcasse, chairman of the investigating commission, led the attack upon the naval administration, especially during the incumbency of M. Pelletan and M. Thomson, former Ministers of Marine. But M. Picard, who succeeded M. Thompson, had promised, in the name of the Government, to complete a series of reforms, both in the administration of the department and the methods of construction, and the chamber was ready to vote confidence in the Government when an incident occurred which changed a majority into a minority.Premier Clemenceau, over confident of a majority, taunted the ex-Minister of Foreign Affairs, who was thrown over-board by the Rouvier Ministry, at the dictation of Germany, in the crisis of 1905, with having led France to humiliation at Algerias. The scene when the Premier took his seat was indescribable. Amid the wildest excitement the vote was taken, and when it was announced that the Government had been beaten, 212 to 176, Clemenceau clapped his hat on his head, pulled it far down over his eyes and stalked out of the chamber, followed by the other Ministers, in token that he intended to resign.

BOUQUETS FOR OLD EMMITSBURG

and I want to say that this paper ex-cells in every respect anything I have seen in the newspaper line in a town the size of Emmitsburg. The Old Home Week number is an exceptionally good one, and I have sent a copy to a son in Alaska, also one to a son in California.
"Some of my friends were here.
They were delighted with Emmitsburg, the scenery, the hospitable people, the beautiful decorations and the grand celebration."Mr. Grayson said:—"I have been away fifty years. I am simply delighted to be here again. When I heard of Emmitsburg's Old Home Week, I was bound to be there for the celebration.
I wanted to see the old people and I have greatly enjoyed meeting old acquaintances, but only a few of my friends remain for a new generation has taken their places."Great preparations were made, every one was so hospitable, the decorations were beautiful, and the entire celebration a grand success."Mr. Thomas Smith:—"I was more than pleased to be here for the grand celebration of Old Home Week. I have many friends here in Emmitsburg, and always look upon this town as my home. Of THE CHRONICLE I can say that I think it is the best town paper published."Henry H. Rowe writes: After an absence of many years it was my good fortune to be one of the many old home comers, and to say I was pleased is to put it very tamely and does not half express my feelings. I was very agreeably surprised at the spontaneous welcome we received on every hand. When I first read of the intention to have a homecoming I determined, if possible, to be one of them for I am always interested in anything that may occur at Emmitsburg. And why? Because it is in my native county and in that vicinity I was born and spent my happy boyhood days, and Emmitsburg was the first town I ever knew and here in the Lutheran Church I was confirmed and beneath the sod of that yard rest the ashes of those from whom I sprung.
All these scenes are so indelibly impressed on my memory while other things that may happen are so soon forgotten. Memory calls to mind the names of many of the old citizens who were an honor and a credit to the town, viz: the Baughers, Annans, Smiths, Troxells, Motters, Zimmermans, Sheets,
Rowes, Eichelbergers, Helms, Stokes,
Eysters, Taney, Bushmans, Agnews, Winters and others, many who have long since passed away.And now I must congratulate you on the decorations. When on entering the town I saw at once the improvement on every side, I realized Emmitsburg was not a dead town but very much alive. That your homecoming was a success goes without saying and must be a satisfaction to all who were instrumental in getting up the splendid Homecoming.And now, in conclusion, I must thank the citizens for the hearty welcome we all received, for not only their hearts but their doors were thrown wide open and all were made welcome. I will venture just one suggestion for your next homecoming: Have it later in the season when the weather will not likely be so warm, and if spared I will be with you again, as I desire to give expression to my feelings, I am sure I voice the sentiment of all the home-comers I came in contact with. I hope the citizens were all as well pleased as an Old Homecomer.The Record Publishing Company of Cambridge, Md., has been sued for libel by Emerson C. Harrington.

SHOT DOWN BY VICIOUS NEGRO

Boy Badly Hurt Because Father Refused
Black Food.Because John Vanderau near Guilford Station on the Western Maryland railroad near Hagerstown, refused to give food to a strange Negro man on Sunday a young son of Mr. Vanderau was shot and badly injured Monday evening by a Negro about 30 years old, believed to be the same Negro who was refused food by the boy's father.On Sunday the Negro called at the Vanderau house and said he wanted dinner for himself and four companions.
Mr. Vanderau told the colored man to move on, as he did not keep a boarding house.Monday evening Mr. Vanderau's two sons were watching cows in a pasture field near the house. The elder brother left the field to get a drink of water and during his absence a tall Negro came along the railroad track. Without giving warning the Negro raised a gun he was carrying, aimed at the young boy and fired. When he saw the lad fall the Negro ran away.Thirty-five shot entered the boy's body, mostly in the legs and hands.
The end of one finger was shot off. One thumb was punctured. Most of the shot were taken out. Unless complications ensue the boy will recover.News of the malicious attack spread rapidly and a large number of neighbors collected. A posse was organized and a search made, but the culprit escaped.

CONSCIENCE-STRICKEN CITIZEN

Marylander Sends Treasury Twenty Dollars Regularly.Something happened to the conscience of a man living at Annapolis, Md., about six months ago. Nobody seems to know exactly what struck the man, but every two or three weeks he sends a $20 gold certificate to the Secretary of the Treasury with this note: "Due to U. S." There is not another word about the missive to indicate the name of the sender. The envelope is always plain and without any legend save the address. The envelope, the writing, and the inclosure are always the same. The remittance comes almost with the regularity of a city tax bill. The money is credited to the conscience fund, and is turned into the Treasury.The Government has another regular conscience fund contributor residing in Washington. He is not so methodical in his habits as the man at Annapolis and his contributions are smaller. His conscience hurts him every two or three months for some fraud imposed upon the Government, and he sends $10 or $15 to the Treasury with a confession that it belongs to the Government.

JOSEPH WOODS OUT ON BAIL

Man Who Killed Policeman Orrison
Released in Sum of $5,000.Joseph Woods, who, on the night of June 29, last, at Brunswick, this county, knocked down and beat Policeman Wm.
E. Orrison, of that place, inflicting injuries from which Orrison died almost instantly, was taken before Judge John J. Motter on a writ of habeas corpus on Monday for the purpose of securing his release from the county jail, in which he has been confined since the day following the killing of the policeman.
The testimony at the hearing showed that Woods interfered with Orrison as the latter was taking a prisoner to a magistrate's office, and was struck by the policeman, whereupon Woods struck Orrison, knocking him down, and beat him as he lay upon the ground. Orrison's skull was fractured. Judge Motter decided that Woods might be admitted to bail, and the amount of the bond was fixed at $5,000. Woods was released, his mother and a friend going on his bond.

MCCALL'S FERRY DAM CO. FAILS

Big Susquehanna Power Project In Hands of Receivers.The McCall's Ferry Power Company, upon application of the Knickerbocker Trust Company of New York, is now in the hands of receivers.Incorporated in Maine five years ago, the concern had as its project the erection of a gigantic concrete dam, 60 feet high and a half mile in length, over the Susquehanna river, 14 miles below Columbia, Pa., for the purpose of generating and transmitting electricity. With the dam more than two-thirds completed, the company was forced to suspend work for lack of funds.

Latest Bryan Story.

A southern Republican congressman is responsible for this latest Bryan story. As he recited the yarn in the cloakroom at the House the other day, he was coming by train to Washington from his state not so long ago. In front of him were seated two men, and scraps of their conversation floated to him. They were discussing, a rumor which one had heard, that William J. had decided to give up politics and become a preacher."If he should become a preacher," said the man fervently, "he would be one of the greatest pulpit orators the world has ever known."
"Yes," responded the other man,
"and if he had the same effect on the cause of salvation that he has had on the Democratic party, we'll all go to hades."—Boston Herald.
