A PROCLAMATION.

"The season of the year has returned when, in accordance with the reverent custom established by our forefathers, the people of the United States are wont to meet in their usual places of worship on a day of thanksgiving appointed by the civil magistrate to return thanks to God for the great mercies and benefits which they have

"During this past year we have been highly blest. No great calamities or flood or tempest or epidemic sickness have befallen us. We have lived in quietness, undisturbed by wars or rumors of wars. Peace and the plenty of bounteous crops and of great industrial production animate a cheerful and resolute people to all the renewed energies of beneficient industry and material and moral progress. It is altogether fitting that we should humbly and gratefully acknowledge the divine source of these blessings.

"Therefore, I hereby appoint Thursday, the 25th day of November, as a day of general thanksgiving, and I call upon the people on that day, laying aside their usual vocations, to repair to their churches and unite in appropriate services of praise and thanks to Almighty

Money and Sympathy

MYSTERY OF A LOCKED VALISE

"Darling Daughter", Dead Patriot and Tidy Sum of Money Bait the Hook That Has Caught Many.

The State Department at Washington has sent out a lengthy warning against the so-called "Spanish Swindle." In the warning is embodied portions of a report of the American Consul-General at Barcelona, Spain, in regard to the band of swindlers operating in various towns and cities in Spain, who make a practice of writing to persons in the ing to clarify the waters troubled by United States respecting the imprisonment of a relative and the guardianship of a child.

The Consul-General states that the alleged prisoner generally describes himself as a political prisoner from Cuba; he is at the point of death and has but one friend-the prison priest-through whose good offices he is enabled to smuggle an occasional letter out of the prison fort.

The prisoner is rich. He has a fortune in cash on deposit in the United States, but the certificate of deposit is concealed in a secret receptacle of his valise; the valise itself has been taken possession of by the court at Carthagena, which tried and condemned him, and will be held until the prisoner or his representative has satisfied the costs of the trial. The prisoner has an only daughter; dying in his prison, his sole thought is of this beloved offspring. He has no friend or relative in Spain to whose care he can commit her. In this emergency his thoughts turn to the distant relative in the United States whom he knows only through hearsay or the family tree. Will the distant relative assume the guardianship of the darling daughter, and the darling daughter's fortune of about $30,000? If the distant relative accepts the trust onefourth of the prisoner's entire fortune will be the material reward. The good priest will go at once to the United States and take the darling daughter with him. There is but one condition; the ready money which the prisoner brought with him has been exhausted; the distant relative is therefore requestcontaining the secret receptacle and the certificate of deposit. This money is to be sent to the good priest at an address indicated, and, having received it, the and start for America, the "land of the free and the home of the brave," with the darling daughter.

The above is generally the first letter of the series. It is quickly followed by another in which the prisoner states that his strength is rapidly failing and the end is near. The third letter is from the good priest himself, who in brief, touching terms, and hopelessly bad English, announces the death of the unhappy prisoner, &c.

VARIOUS ESTIMATES

Not a Political Success From One Point of View

DISAPPOINTMENTS INEVITABLE

He Has Been Able To Harmonize Many Differences. - After His Audience Becomes Cultivated He May Shine As a Star.

President Taft has made his rounds and is again back in Washington trythe bomb Mr. Glavis dropped last week near Mr. Ballinger, a member of Taft's Cabinet. The President's winning smile did not wear off in his long trip through the country and he still beams on official life in Washington but whether he was successful in dispelling the political clouds and fogs that have settled over the Middle West and Far West, and whether the refulgence of his person left no shadows in the South

"Judged as a political mission giving opportunity for the expression of administration views and policies," remarks the Detroit Free Press, "the tour of the President cannot be pronounced a marked success. Mr. Taft has said few things calculated to draw him closer to the great heart of the people. A suspicion that has found repeated oral utterance is that Brother Charles P. Taft, the multi-millionaire, has a very great influence over the presidential mind in the matter of economic issues.

"But estimates as to the value of the trip based on the public addresses delivered during its progress are not the only estimates that can be formulated. There might, for instance, be an estimate based on the influence of the Taft personality.

"No small percentage of the voters of the country have had a chance to see Mr. Taft at close range, to take note of his agreeable qualities of his great patience and good nature, and above all, of his obvious 'sincerity and desire to do the right thing. A strong impress must have been left on these ed to send enough to liberate the valise many voters, for Mr. Taft has a way of inspiring confidence in those with whom he comes in close contact.

"It is inevitable that there should be some disappointment with any new president in the first months of his administration, especially with a new president who succeeds one of Mr. Roosevelt's popularity and strongly marked mannerisms. It is as when the matinee idol is succeeded by the understudy. The latter may have merits the star did not possess, but the audience's interest in him has not yet been cultivated. It is likely, for a time to contrast him with his predecessor, to the latter's advantage, but the understudy often eclipses the star, after the public has had a chance to get used to him.

to the sweep of winds-in open defiance of death dealing storms. They willingly did a prodigious amount of work each day, and then as bedfellows they offered their fur as shelter and bones as head rests to their two footed companions. We had learned to appreciate the advantage of their beating breasts. The bond of animal fellowship had drawn tighter and tighter in a long run of successive adventures. And now there was a stronger reason than ever to appreciate power, for together we were seeking an escape from a world which was never intended for creatures with thumping hearts.

Much very heavy ice was crossed near the eighty-eighth, but the endless unbroken fields of the northward trails were not again seen. The weather changed considerably. The light cutting winds from the west increased in force, and the spasmodic squalls came at shorter intervals. The clear purple and blue of the seas were gradually changed to light gray, and a rush of frosty needles came over the pack for several hours each day.

Could Brook No Delay.

The inducement to seek shelter in cemented walls of snow and wait for better weather was very great. But such delay forestalled certain starvation. Under fair conditions there was barely food enough to reach land, while even short delays might easily jeopardize our return. We could not, therefore, do otherwise than to force ourselves against the wind and drift with all possible speed, closing the eye to unavoidable suffering.

With no alternative, we tried to persuade ourselves that conditions might be worse.

The eighty-seventh was crossed, the came a time when both mind and body wearied of the whole problem of forced resolution.

The hard work of igloo building was Oats now a thing of the past-only one had New Corn ..... been built since leaving the pole, and in it a precious day was lost-while the atmospheric fury changed the face of the endless expanse of desolation. mained as a reminder of reckless daring. As we now moved along the feeling of elation slowly subsided with perpetual flush was lost in a frigid blue, the time was at hand in lower latitudes for the ice to break and drift

With correct reasoning all former expeditions had planned to return to land and secure a line of retreat by May 1. We could not hope to do so until early in June. It seemed, therefore, probable that the ice along the outskirts of the polar sea would be much disrupted and that open water, small ice and rapid drifts would seriously interfere with our return to a sure footing on the shores of Nansen sound. All of this and many other possibilities were carefully considered before, but the conquest of the pole was not possible without risks.

Famine and Frost.

We started earlier than all other polar aspirants, and no time had been lost en route. If misfortune came to us it could not be because of wasted energies or unnecessary delay. In the last days of the onward rush to success there was neither time nor opportunity to ponder over the bitters of subsequent remorse, but now, facing southern skies under which were home and all for which we lived, the back trail seemed indescribably long. In cold sober thought, freed of the intoxication of polar enthusiasm, the difficulties darkened in color. We now saw that the crucial stage of the campaign was not the taking of the pole. The test of our fitness as boreal conquerors was to be measured by the outcome of a final battle for life against famine and frost.

THANKSGIVING.

Next Thursday, the twentyfifth instant, has been set apart by the President as a day of general thanksgiving, and he has called upon the people to lay aside their usual vocations at that time and "to repair to their Churches and unite in appropriate services of praise and thanks to Almighty God." Nor will the christian people of this great land fail to avail themselves of the privilege. They indeed have much to be thankful for and on that day they will outwardly show their gratitude for the infinite blessings which they have received from their Heavenly Father whose mercy and loving kindness have no bounds.

"We have," says the President in his official proclamation, "lived in quietness, undisturbed by wars or rumors of wars. Peace and the plenty of bounteous crops and of great industrial production animate a cheerful and resolute people to all the renewed energies of beneficient industry and material and moral progress." For these benefits we should be devoutly thankful, but, as Cardinal Gibbons appropriately suggests, we should look beyond the material things of life to things spiritual and thank God for these also. We are reminded that even for the cup of sorrow that is raised to our lips we should be thankful, for sorrow teaches us great truths we never knew before, and after

PERSONALS.

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

IT IS CONVENIENT TO DO SO.

Frederick is the logical trading place for residents of Frederick county and nearby sections of adjoining counties.

Three steam railroads and a trolley line enter the city, their schedules furnishing convenient transportation facilities.

Frederick has good hotels and restaurants, at which meals can be secured at low rates.

For persons who drive to Frederick, there are abundant stable facilities for the care of teams. Well-lighted store-rooms make it possible to examine goods carefully, and proprietors and clerks are always ready to give courteously any aid needed in making selections or securing what is wanted.

There's no town in Maryland that has better stores.

There's no town anywhere in which you can do your shopping to greater advantage, or greater satisfaction.

There's no town anywhere in which there is keener competition---and keen competition means up-to-date and complete stocks of goods, and low prices.

Frederick's stores fear no competition. They ask only that what they have to offer be compared fairly with what the stores of any other city have to offer.

And when you come to Frederick to see what its stores have to offer, you will find a cordial welcome at every one of them.

IT WILL PAY YOU TO DO IT.

Frederick's stores are noted for the reasonable prices charged by by them.

Rents and other fixed charges are lower in Frederick than in other cities, making it possible for Frederick merchants to put low prices on their goods-and they must make the prices low to meet competition. This is true in all lines of trade.

DEATH OF REV. JACOB BREWER KERSCHNER.

be both is a rare distinction, and therefore worthy to be noted.

Prof. Kerschner was both, and the little world in which he moved with the inborn grace and courtesy of the old-school gentleman, and which he enrich-place by Rev. Father S. J. Milner. ed with the attainments of the ripe ed with the attainments of the ripe scholar ever-learning and yet not quite attaining, will stop long enough to make grateful note of it and pay reverent and loving tribute to his memory.

To some who know, the path he trod on his pilgrim way, was not the smooth and easy road that keeps the feet from stumbling and the spirit from troubling weariness. Of labor and suffering and weariness. Of labor and suffering and sorrow he had his full share; and he knew the taste of the "bread of bitterness;" but he knew also, and had his full share in, the sustaining power of the slow-growing body of successful achievement.

Modest and shrinking by nature, his ideals of life, as is ever the case with the genuine seeker after the highest, were continually taking on a more and more perfect form, as they were jus as continually being attained more and more fully by partial realization; and so he seemed never to be quite reaching the goal. But it is the old way over which he was going—per aspera, and he knew whither it led—ad astra, and walked in it, feeling his way step by step and sometimes faltering, but never los-ing sight of the shining beacon beyond. And so he came, by striving and strug-gling and deep inward communing with the spirit of the Master he loved and trusted, nearer and nearer to the greatest of all earthly attainments,—"selfreverence, self-knowledge, self-control.

He knew no such thing as compromising with truth and duty; and his scorn of the false and base was the seal of his absolute sincerity in all that he said and did. His old students will never forget the deep debt of gratitude they owe to him for the inspiration of his example in holding them steadfast in the pursuit of truth, not only for its own sake, but also for the sake of the binding power it has to knit together the tangled threads of our social life in its deepest and tenderest relations.

He had the instincts of the scholar, and with rare natural gifts of mind he followed them with the zeal of the lover. This led him into many fields, and few men have garnered a richer and more varied fund of accurate knowledge and priceless wisdom than he. But of this we cannot speak for lack of space, and we mention it only to indicate the industry, the patience, and the uncommon keenness of intellect that characterized his mental pursuits.

To live a life as he lived his, as long and under similar circumstances, is to serve the Master. Thoughtful, earnest, faithful and true, unselfish and kind and gentle, deeply and quickly sympathetic and tenderly affectionate, he has passed to his reward. Those of us who remain will cherish his memory, and as we recall his goings in and out among us and his more intimate relations with us, whilst we shall not formed the brilliant whilst we shall not forget the brilliant scholarship that crowned his studious labors, we will most of all remember and prize his human and christian virtues—his gentleness and kindness and charity, mellowed through the years of his later experience, and ripened into the fruits of victory in the long warfare of the new life with the old. You may make all your purchases at one store or you may make your purchases from any number of different stores -- just so your total purchases at the stores named amount to $20 or more, the Retail Bureau of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Baltimore will refund your full round-trip fare to Baltimore and return, or will refund half your fare if you purchase $10 or more.

The Baltimore stores are now aglow with Christmas gift-things of every sort---the beautiful, the useful, the entertaining. Brilliant displays of holiday stocks are seen on every hand. Wonderfully varied are these displays--enchanting to see, full of helpful suggestions and comprising every line of merchandise that is interesting to the public at this joyously-bustling Christmas-shopping time. Come to Baltimore, roam through the various stores and make your selection of gift-things now, when the stocks are largest, freshest and most diversified.

These free trips continue throughout November and December, clear up to December 31, 1909. Come any day you choose, but it is best to make your shopping trip as soon as possible.

This great opportunity for out-of-town shoppers is fostered and financially supported without the aid or support of the Merchants & Manufacturers' Association, or any member thereof, except those of the Retail Bureau, consisting of the above firms.
