Republicanism In Serious Danger There

MACHINE TACTICS MUST CEASE

Situation Unimproved May Mean Loss of 1912 National Campaign.-Administration Anxious.

Senator Elihu Root spent Sunday in IS EASILY MADE AND ADEQUATE New York in conference with Timothy L. Woodruff, chairman of the Republican State Committee and the New York leaders, on the question of Woodruff's retirement from the chairmanship. In this situation there is a good deal that bears on national politics.

Root was working for Taft, who together, according to one of the politicians, "are setting the stage for the national campaign of 1912 and the Administration feels that unless the present State organization joins with Governor Hughes a party split will follow that will give the State to the Democrats next November and seriously jeopardise the Republicans' chance of capturing New York's thirty-nine electoral votes for their Presidential nominee. Woodruff will remain chairman and the large measure cease so that no split may occur, if the Root plain is carried out, but the election of Senator Cobb as president pro tem of the State Senate has so strengthened the hands of Woodruff and his friends in the organization that they may elect to advance such legislation as they please at Albany, and so doing, will split the party wide open. In that event our hope lies in Theodore Roosevelt who will be asked to assume the leadership of the party "THE EMMITSBURG CHRONICLE," says and his return is only three months

NEW YORK POLITICS HOW TO BUILD GOOD ROADS

ECONOMY OF LOG DRAG

Description of King's Celebrated Contrivance

Experience of Road Supervisors in Carroll County. - Dirt Roads Made as Good as Pikes at a Very Low Cost.

Much is being said and done in favor of the adoption of the King split-log drag by our road supervisors. In the issue of The CHRONICLE for June 29, 1906 this contrivance, now growing so popular, was fully described and enthusiastically advocated.

The following suggestions for building the drag are timely: After several years trial, it has been developed that the best kind of a drag is made by splitting a log and placing the pieces about thirty inches apart, with the flat sides both facing in the same direction and pinning them together. It is better not to use oak wood; the best timber is red elm. The lower edge of the front piece should be protected with iron and a wagon tire will answer for this purpose. The log should be ten or twelve inches thick and perhaps nine feet long. A chain or heavy wire is fastened three or four inches from the right-hand side and about half way up. It is then carried to the front till it is about two feet away from the drag, then to the left and over the top of the front slab and fastened around the cross bar.

The team should be hitched so that the drag will move the dirt to the center of the road. The importance of hitching up properly cannot be overestimated as it is only second in importance to the time at which the dragging is done. Used properly it crowns the road, fills the ruts and depressions and

Only One Kind of Lock the Expert Burglar Can't Pick.

"There's only one lock in the world that I can't open if you'll give me a few minutes at it, and as for ordinary door and drawer locks, I'll open them as easily as if there was no lock there. Any expert burglar can do the same."

The foregoing statement was made by an experienced locksmith of Kanmas City.

"Few persons know how insecure their homes are," he continued. "Few persons realize that the average lock is absolutely worthless for keeping out an experienced burglar. The ordinary door lock is good for nothing but reminding casual business or scial callers that they must ring to be admitted. None of these ordinary 'door fasteners,' and that's the best you can call them, will deter a burglar two whole minutes. If there's no key in the lock, he soon fits one to it. THE SHREW MOUSE.

Some Queer Superstitions About a Harmless Little Animal.

The shrew, or shrew mouse, as it is commonly called, is found in nearly all parts of the world. It is distinguished by an elongated, pointed muzzle, small eyes, plantigrade, six toed feet and glands that secrete a musky fluid. Altogether it closely resembles a mouse, but it is really not related to the mouse family.

When at home it is either under a pile of rubbish or in a hole which it has burrowed in the earth. It is nocturnal in its habits, but perfectly harmless, yet at one time it was much disliked and persecuted because it was thought to be a dangerous, mischievous animal. Among the Italians the notion was prevalent that the bite of a shrew ton. It recited that Loa Cogswell, was extremely poisonous. The French alias Pfeffer, alias Hay, alias Goodrich, and the English believed that if a was wanted in Chicago for swindling. shrew ran over an animal's foot the She was supposed to be making her animal felt great pain and eventually escape to London or Paris. The girl bowed her willingness, and the two men filed sheepishly out of the "Where, madam, is your husband?" car. Arresting a confidence queen was one thing. Mistaking a friend of the "He's under the seat," she answered, son of the governor of the state was quite another. They were glad they were let off so easily.

Una turned to Clayton "I am very much obliged to you," she said softly. "I don't know what I should have done had they taken me off the train. I am to sail in the morning with Uncle Jim and a party of friends. Father sent him a draft for my expenses, and I should have landed in New York without funds or friends she said demurely. "You certainly made an exhaustive study."

"I did not mean to be impertinent," he said. "I did not know that I was corrected every Thursday morning, are subject to daily changes.

"You were not," she conceded. "It was more that I was-well, let's observant."

Clayton flushed. Somehow the had made an impression on him w she first came into the car. It pleasant to think that she, too, been interested. The thought g him courage, and almost before t realized it the porter began to br the passengers down.

"Mercy!" she cried, "I did not kn that time was passing so. We are most in New York."

"I wish we were headed the other way," he said regretfully. "May I call Chickens, per b..... before you go?'

"May I write?" he asked eagerly. "I Lard, per b...... do not want to have you slip right out of my life." "I think it would be better," she said

She had slipped down the steps and was lost in the crowd before Clayton had recovered from the audacity of that last speech. He knew that it could not be true, yet for a moment the suggestion shocked him. He hurried down the platform after her, but the $10.50@ boats were just leaving their slips as $9.00@$10.00 he passed through the gate, and she was lost.

For weeks Clayton puzzled over that speech. He knew very well that she was not the swindler, yet why did she choose to create that doubt? The more he reasoned the more puzzled he became. Only one fact stood unchanged. He loved her. That was certain.

Business called him to London, and there, away from his friends, he came to his decision. When his business affairs were straightened out he would go straight to Detroit and see if he could locate the Ormondes.

But he did not have to wait that long. He took the boat at Southampton, and at Cherbourg the passengers from Paris came on board. Clayton, leaning over the rail on the upper deck, saw a figure ascending the gangway that caused his heart to beat faster.

It could be none other than Mile. Alias. He hurried down to the lower deck, but could not find her, and, though the passenger list gave her name, for two days he looked for her in vain.

Then, late in the evening, a wan little figure was helped out on deck and established in a steamer chair. Clayton hurried toward her.

"I have been looking for you for two days," he said when greetings had been exchanged. "Where have you concealed yourself?"

"In my berth," she explained. have been most miserably seasick. Why did you search for me?"

What Books Do.

Books are friends whose society is extremely agreeable to me. They are of all ages and of every country. They have distinguished themselves both in the cabinet and in the field and obtained high honors for their knowledge of the sciences. It is easy to gain access to them, for they are always at my service, and I admit them to my company and dismiss them from it whenever I please. They are never troublesome, but immediately answerevery question I ask them. Some relate to me the events of past ages, while others reveal to me the secrets of nature. Some teach me how to live and others how to die. Some, by their On Saturday, March 19, 1910, WM. SMITH, Auct. ELIJAH BAKER.

Riding The Foam. (New Orleans Picayune.)

There is no question that Theodore Roosevelt continues to be, as he was at the beginning of his second term, the most popular man in the United States his popularity being chiefly among the masses of the people, and now that a wide rift has made its appearance in the Republican party, even this early in President Taft's administration, it is not too much to say that in the present condition of dissatisfaction, which has been largely created by the tariff Mr. Roosevelt is more popular than ever.

It must be admitted that the present is the era of the people. They assume the right to rule in everything, and they are not always wise in their choice of leaders, being too much inclined to be carried away by showy demagogy than by prudent and sagacious statesman-

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Each Other and From the Ruins a New Thing is Expected.

(Special Washington Correspondence.) WASHINGTON, D. C., March 17.-So many signs of a battle to the finish at Republican party have appeared here during the past few days that any ground of compromise between them is now considered out of question.

Both sides realize that the cleavage is permanent and that the party can not again become harmonious until one or the other has been definitely and decisively rejected by the people themselves, who are regarded as the jury before which the fundamental differences of opinion concerning the conduct of the government must be tried. Hence each is seeking every possible ally and not overlooking any point of vantage that may help to win. The Regulars are closing up their ranks and ousting every man who fails to give full support to the President and the leaders of the House and Senate. The Insurgents are seeking support for the principles for which they stand and care not from what quarter it comes.
