Short Crop of Cow Peas.

Prices Are Going Up.

The enormous demand for Cow Peas last year carried the price very high, and as the crop is very short and the acreage is rapidly extending, there are many indications which point to much higher prices as the sowing season approaches.

Whip-Poor-Will Cow Peas.

The Whip-poor-wills are generally preferred in the Central and Southern States. They are bush form, early maturing and especially de-strable for Peas.

New Era Cow Peas.

New Era's are a little earlier and make more vine than the Whip-poor-wills.

Wonderfuls, Clay and Mixed Cow Peas. For Hay, the Wonderfuls or the Mixed Cow For Hay, the Wonderfuls of the Mixed Cow Peas are more productive, they should always be planted with an occasional grain of corn, Sorghum Seed, Kaffir Corn etc., which will pre-vent the vine from getting damaged by coming in centract with the ground.

Black Cow Peas.

Black Cow Peas are a little later in maturing than the Clays, they make a good growth of vine, are exceptionally good for medium or poor land and will stand almost any amount of wet weather without injury. We can also supply Shinney Peas, Red Rippers, Blackeye Peas and Soja Beans.

REMEMBER BOLGIANO'S COW PEAS ARE UNQUESTION-ABLY THE BEST .-- IF YOUR LOCAL MERCHANT WILL NOT SUPPLY YOU WITH BOLGIANO'S COW PEAS--WRITE US DIRECT. AND WE WILL TELL YOU WHERE TO GET THEM. FREE—Send us 5c. in stamps to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we will send you free a 25c. package of "My Maryland" Tomato Seed, also our 1911 Catalogue of Seeds and our 1911 Poultry Supply Catalogue.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.-Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Another improvement that will soon be enjoyed by Emmitsburgians will be the new concrete sidewalk leading to the railroad station. For years pedestrians have been forced to wade through mud and stumble over wornout bricks and flagstones on their way to trains and at last this discomfiture is to be done away with. Upon the requirement of the Burgess and Commissioners all property owners from the Square to the Station have let contracts for cement pavements and the Emmitsburg Railroad Company has voluntarily agreed to continue the work up to its buildings. The new station is most creditable to the Railroad and a decided improvement to the town, and when the long stretch of modern and substansouthern entrance to town will be greatly beautified.

FREDERIC WELTY.

When Kurds and Turkomans Fight. Describing a feature of a fight between Turkomans and Kurds in Persia, a traveler says: "The Turkomans, who always fight on foot, were ultimately defeated with heavy loss, and many prisoners were taken, and still more captives were released. Among the Turkoman prisoners was an old man of ninety, who said that he had joined the expedition in order to secure a new wife. The damsel in question came up during the interrogatory and brained her captor with a stone. During these raids, past and present, the Turkoman appeared to have enloyed a great and permanent advanage in that neither Kurd nor Persian ever carried off their women or chiltended the majority of mankind of what his neighbor will say or dren owing to their ugliness. The Trade Winds.

The constancy of trade winds is due to the permanence of the conditions which rule them. As the heated air at the equator ascends surface winds set in from north and south and, uniting, ascend in their turn and flow off in opposite directions. As the velocity of the earth's revolution from east to west is much greater at the equator than at the poles, wind blowing along its surface to the equator is constantly arriving at places which have a higher velocity than itself; hence it is retarded and must lag behind, and under the influence of two opposing forces it is compelled to take an intermediate dithe pale; when we have factories, ing alike, eating alike, reading rection, so that what was originally a north wind is deflected and flows southwest, while what started as a south wind becomes northwest. From the great service they have rendered to navigation these reliable winds are

Center of the Earth.

If a shaft were sunk vertically to the center of the earth and an object suspended from a spring balance were lowered down the shaft the weight of the object, as indicated by the dial of the balance, would at first increase as the descending object approached the deeper and denser strata. After passing a certain depth, however, the weight would begin to diminish, and it would continue to diminish to the center of the earth, where its value would be zero, because the object would there be equally attracted in every direction.

Psychology of Store Planning. The basement of a store was formerly regarded merely as a cellar, fit for storage, packing boxes, etc. Then came a merchant of the present day. gifted with an imagination to an unusual degree, who recognized—though, perhaps, not in these terms-that the customer was guided by subconscious control and argued that the lack of effort in going downstairs would appeal to the subconsciousness and that the glimpse of displays seen at the foot of the stairs would lead customers to the basement, notwithstanding the low ceiling, the imperfect ventilation and the absence of daylight. This merchant has lived to see not only a daily attendance on a basement floor ten or a dozen times greater than that on the average floor above the first, but also to see his discovery copied by practically every store in the land. The real gist of his discovery was that subconscious control leads us to do the easy thing first-namely, go downstairs-without reckoning with the next problem, which was, of course, getting out of the basement.-Cassier's Magazine.

The Kangaroo's Defense.

In the kangaroo hunts of Australia capture is sufficiently easy, but sometimes the kangaroo makes an original defense.

If possible the kangaroo directs his flight toward a river. If he reaches it he enters, and, thanks to his great height, he is able to go on foot to a depth where the dogs are obliged to swim. There he plants himself on his two hind legs and his tail and, up to his shoulders in the water, awaits the arrival of the pack. With his forepaws he seizes by the head the first dog that approaches, and as he is more solidly balanced than his assailant he holds the dog's nose beneath the water as long as he can. Unless a second dog speedily comes to the rescue the first one is inevitably drowned. If a companion arrives and sets him free he is glad to regain the bank as quickly as possible. A strong and courageous old kangaroo will hold his own against twenty or thirty dogs, drowning some and frightening others, and the hunter is obliged to intervene with a bullet.-New York Press.

Straining the Keg.

Rufe Blevins, a giant woodchopper, whose good nature and ready made him a welcome addition to the store circle, entered the village grocery. The loafers moved a little closer together to make room for Rufe on a soap box, but he marched past the friendly circle, plumped an empty molasses keg down on the counter and drew a stained bill from his pocket, which he held out to the proprietor of the store. An expectant grin went round the circle, for Storekeeper Jones had the reputation of never wronging himself by overweighing or undercharging. The merchant adjusted his glasses and looked expectantly from the bill to the woodchopper.

"Notice you charged me for five gallons o' molasses last time I had this four gallon keg filled," drawled Rufe. "I don't mind payin' for the extra gallon, Mr. Jones, but I do kinder hate to have a good keg strained to pieces." -Youth's Companion.

The Samurai's Servant.

Here is an interesting legend about an ofuda which appears as the badge of a family at Matsue. The story, as Hearn tells it, is that: "Once a servant of the family went to Ise, in despite of his master's orders to remain in the house. When he came back the samurai flew into a rage and killed him. Then the murderer felt sorry and buried the body in the garden or bamboo patch. The day after the servant came back again and apologized for his absence at Ise. You can guess the rest of the legend. When the grave was opened there was no dead body there-only an ofuda cut in two, as if by a sword slash."

Never Suffered From Bath.

There are quarters in London in which the uselessness of the bath is no novel proposition. A district nurse called at a house where there was a case of infectious disease.

"Have you a bath in the house?" asked the practical visitor.

"Yes, mum," was the reply; "but, thank God, we've never 'ad to use it." -London Chronicle.

Atmospheric Resistance.

The resistance of our atmosphere materially retards raindrops, hailstones, aerolites and all other bodies which fall through it, and were it not for the resistance it presents every rainstorm would be disastrous to the human race, as each drop would fall with a velocity great enough to penetrate the full length of a full grown man's body.

Ambiguous.

When Bilkins was away from home on a long business trip he got a letter from his wife that still puzzles him. It ended thus:

"Baby is well and lots brighter than she used to be. Hoping that you are the same, I remain, your loving wife." -Everybody's Magazine.

An Observant Youth. "Is that man a bill collector?" said the new clerk. "He may be in some places," replied the messenger boy, "but not in this office."-Washington Star.

Unfortunately, Yes. The trouble with the story which you tell is that it is almost sure to remind somebody of another which is just as old Chicago Record Herald

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

In New England are two colleges in close proximity. In one young men are educated, in the other young girls. One day Edwin Langdon, a senior in the man's college, was strolling on a road not far from the women's institution when he saw a black spot above him. He watched it sink gradually till it appeared as a paper balloon rocking in the air and fell not a hundred yards from him. Going to where it lay, he took it up and noticed that to the cross wires holding a sponge that had been saturated with alcohol hung a piece of pasteboard on which was written in a feminine hand: I contain a secret.

"Yes," said Langdon to himself, "and judging by your handwriting the secret is not to be kept. Some undergraduate of the women's college has sent you off for the purpose of telling her secret."

The student carefully examined the balloon in every part, but the secret was not found. Thinking it might lie under the pasted seams, he took it to his room and moistened and opened them. He was not rewarded for his

"I have it," he exclaimed suddenly. "Some girl has written the secret with a fluid that requires a chemical agent to bring it out. I'll take it to the laboratory and apply tests." He did so and succeeded. By soaking the paper successively in several different acids he at last found one that brought out letters containing a message.

You are warm, but you haven't got me yet. If you do a kiss-

The writing stopped abruptly. "Oho!" said Langdon inwardly. "So I'm warm, am I? That means that I'm on the right track. And a kiss is to be my reward if I get your secret. Only you didn't like to call kissing you a reward. Any man who wouldn't under such circumstances exercise all his wits to reach the goal is no man

Ned Langdon tried all the chemical agents he could think of to bring out another message, but they failed. He puzzled over the matter for a week, then temporarily gave it up-that is, as to investigation. He continued to think about it pretty much all the

One evening he was holding the balloon close to a gas jet examining the paper with a magnifying glass, turning successively different parts to the jet, when on the paper, very near the flame, out came brown letters. They were too faint to be read, but Langdon knew he had got the secret-that is, if there was no more of the problem to be solved. Heat was the element required to bring out the writing. Holding the paper very close to the burning gas, a message in deep brown letters appeared:

Junior prom. Violets on left shoulder. "Well, upon my word!" exclaimed Ned. "That's a round about way of making the acquaintance of a stranger. And to think that I didn't get on to the heat explanation. That message was probably written in common lemon juice. But the "junior prom." comes off vext week. In four days more I would have been too late."

That ended Langdon's studies till the "junior prom." had taken place. He had no thought but for the girl who had sent the paper balloon. So she would be known at the function by violets on her left shoulder!

And what must have been the feelings of that girl as the evening in question approached? There were few chances of the balloon falling into the hands of one she would care to meet. And if it did, would he have the ingenuity to extract the secret?

"I'll bother that girl," mused Langdon, "by pretending not to recognize the token.'

He entered the hall late purposely and stood in the background till he saw a girl pass with a bunch of violets on her shoulder. She was as pretty as a peach. He was enraptured.

Langdon showed himself in the company of different girls for half an hour, then secured an introduction to the girl of the secret, pretending not to notice her violets. He made himself agreeable, however-indeed, paid her marked attention. After having been with her for some time he gallantly asked for a souvenir, looking wistfully at the violets. The girl did not take the hint.

There was a gallery at one end of the hall, used during religious services for the choir. Langdon invited the Kate Greenaway and poke bonnets girl to go up there with him. She accepted, and they sat back where they would not be seen. Beneath them was that mingling of voices common at social gatherings resembling the running Suddenly every voice stopped at the sound of a muffled shriek. Fortunately sound has no direction for the ear. "Some girl has been kissed," remarked numerous undergraduates. The professors looked shocked.

The hero and heroine of this story have long been married, and their sons and daughters are now fitting for college. The mother dreads to send her daughters where she cannot overlook them. When she talks this way her husband replies:

"Will you kindly tell me, my dear, what avail it is to watch a girl? They say that 'love laughs at locksmiths,' but I once knew a girl who got a husband by sending up a paper balloon with a secret in it so concealed that"-"Oh, heavers! Shall I never hear

NO FLIES ATE THESE RADISHES

New Remedy to Kill the Pests Is Based on Arsenate and Wool Fat.

The radish fly is bound to make its appearance in early spring, says Farm and Fireside, and to lay its eggs on or near the roots of the radish plants it happens to find, and the eggs will hatch, and the young maggots will bore into the radishes. No method of manuring, whether with stable manure, old compost or chemical fertilizers, will protect the plants. Boiling water will, of course, kill the maggots or eggs it touches, but it cannot be applied free-

The free application of tobacco dust. with or without bonemeal, next to the rows of plants, will tend to keep the fly away and prevent in some measure the deposition of eggs. Many sprays, especially tobacco tea, kerosene emulsion and probably lime sulphur solution will also kill the worms touched by them, but the applications should be made repeatedly at short intervals so as to catch the maggots before they find a safe retreat inside of the root. This year we have a new compound remedy in a combination of lime and sulphur solution with lead arsenate and wool fat.

Double Your Milk Supply. Think of what a chance the dairy farmers of the United States are missing to make double the profit they now do. A few years ago the average product per cow in Denmark was 3,000 pounds of milk. Simply by following the advice of the Danish dairy students the production of milk has been brought up to 6,000 pounds per cow. The Danish farmers have been willing to learn, willing to appreciate good advice when they got it and are making double the profit they once did. American farmers can do the same thing if they will follow the same good dairy

After more than 6,000 years of production in the older countries of Europe the yields of crops are large and increasing from their more intelligent methods of intensive culture.

By some seedsmen sweet clover is catalogued as Bokhara or bee clover It is a fine thing for bees, as the flowers secrete a fine quality of nectar and large amounts of it.

Honey is becoming more and more generally used as a food and holds its own in price, and with the advance in price of all other foodstuffs there is no reason why it should not bring a higher price.

Bees may be fed a sirup in small quantities made of half granulated sugar and half water, either hot on cold process-hot preferred-and fed warm in an Alexander or Boardmar feeder. The Alexander is handier safer and less liable to encourage rob bing. The bees should be fed about sundown and about one pint per day.

The first few flights that the bees have in the spring determined to a great extent their power for the fu ture harvest. The weak among bees are disposed to be imposed upon by the stronger. Oftentimes when the beetake their first spring flights they find hives unguarded, some hives containing honey and no bees, etc., which I rooms of the late Chinaman's house .they at once take possession of. Bees become frantic over stolen sweets the same as some men become frantic over stolen money. The bees seem to follow the oft quoted law-the surviva! of the fittest makes the race stronger Here is where the careless beekeeper often falls down. He allows the bees to rob each other, carrying disease from hive to hive, making an uprous in the apiary, becoming cross and causing bad neighbors, etc.

Josh Billings.

The quaint spelling that helped to make Josh Billings famous was natural to him. Josh was not an educated man in the academic sense and was a poor speller to the last. When he started out in the humorous line he observed that the way in which he put together his words-a style that he followed simply because he knew of no other-tickled the people and helped to sell his writings, and like the wise, sensible man that he was, despite his literary deficiencies, he stuck to it to the end. Of course had there not been the keenest wit, humor and satire behind the "outlandish" spelling he would have twisted the king's English in vain.-New York American.

Rameau and the Dog.

Many eccentricities are pardoned in musical geniuses. Unfortunately the object of a musician's wrath is quite apt to be unable to appreciate why he has offended. One can fancy the possessor of the untrained voice who figures in the following story thinking hard things of the celebrated composer Rameau.

One day Rameau while calling on a good naturedly. Suddenly Rameau the answer thus: seized the poor little fellow and threw him out of the window.

"What is the matter?" asked his hostess much alarmed.

"He barked false!" said Rameau indignantly.

Homing Pigeons. Homing pigeons are not only endowed with marvelous speed, but with great endurance. Some years ago a bird belonging to the late King Enward, who was a great pigeon enthusiast, made a record for 510 miles at a velocity of 1.307 yards a minute.

TRIALS AND TROUBLES.

What is the use of being blue and despondent? The world has plenty of trouble and worry to hand out even to the best of us from time to time, and there would be no need for men and women—we could all be babes—if there were no great problems to solve, no burdens to bear, no sorrows to live down. These are the balance wheels of They strengthen and broaden us to the opportunities and real happiness that riches do not command nor poverty bar.

Banners at a Chinaman's Funeral. When a rich and important Chinaman dies his funeral is conducted with much pomp and splendor. His friends and relatives instead of sending wreaths send innumerable banners. These are made of white silk, with inscriptions beautifully worked in black velvet, and express the sender's good wishes to the deceased himself or to the members of the family for many generations. On the day of the funeral these banners are carried by hired men, who are all dressed alike for the occasion. After the funeral, which lasts several hours at the cemetery, is over the banners are all brought back and eventually grace the Shanghai Times

The Difference.

"No. sir," said the clerk to his employer, "I don't think there's anything unreasonable in my asking for an increase of salary. You may remember that you promised me a raise when I had been with you a year."

Making his rounds in an isolated village, the census taker gave one of his official papers to a woman that she might fill in the required answers. Daddy's Bedtime

The Dog That Earned His Pleasure Trip

Roger Bringing In His Blanket

UR teacher read a story to us today," said Evelyn-"a story from a newspaper about a German dog that could speak nine words so that any one could understand him. Do you believe that, daddy?"

"Well, I don't know, dearie," answered daddy. "In these wonderful days almost anything can happen. I once told you about the man who learned to talk like a monkey. Now, why shouldn't a dog learn to talk like "That sounds fair," put in Jack.

"But," said daddy, "I once knew a dog that really understood words and could, in fact, do everything but talk. Shall I tell you about him?" "Please!" cried the children.

"This dog's name was Roger," began daddy, "and he belonged to our family doctor. Roger was a brown setter, with a coat so silky that he fairly shone when the sunlight hit him. His great friend was Billy, the doctor's horse, and he was Dr. Mitchell's constant companion on his daily drives. He could never bear to see Billy get a cut of the whip. Even if the doctor would only snap the lash Roger would bark, and if the doctor really had to hit Billy, Roger would howl until you would think his heart was broken.

"One snowy day Roger was sitting in the hospital window keeping watch on Billy while the doctor was upstairs. Suddenly Billy slipped and fell. Roger rushed to the matron, caught hold of the hem of her dress and tugged her to the window, where she saw what had happened and called for help. Roger was the busiest one in the crowd that got the horse on his feet, and when he saw Billy was all right Roger almost wagged his tail off.

"And now as to his knowledge of English. He could be sent to any part of the house for the doctor's medicine case, his satchel, his umbrella, his cane, to call one of the two servants or to perform almost any kind of an errand, and he never made a mistake.

"One very cold night the doctor was preparing for an early start for a long drive. 'Are you going to take Roger?' asked his daughter. 'No,' said the doctor; 'it's too cold, and, besides, I wouldn't know where to find his blanket' Roger was on hand at the unusually early breakfast, but seemed worried. Finally he disappeared to come back with his blanket, which he put down in front of the fireplace to get warm. Then he took it in the study and hung it over the doctor's packed valise. "By this time the family was in screams of laughter, and Roger had his ride as usual.' "Splendid!" laughed the children.

Oh, promise me that when with bated breath

And softly breathe these words in accents sweet: Come some time to me from that distant Caress and comfort as in days of yore.

—De Koven. A SONG OF THE ROAD.

H, I will walk with you, my lad, whichever way you fare! You'll have me, too, the side of you with heart as light as air.
No care for where the road you take's a-leading—anywhere! It can but be a joyful jaunt the while you journey there.

The road you take's the path of love, and that's the breadth of two, And I will walk with you, my lad, oh, I will walk with you!

Oh, I will walk with you, my lad, Be weather black or blue, Or roadsides frost or dew, my lad! Oh. I will walk with you!

Aye, glad, my lad. I'll walk with you, whatever winds may blow,
Or summer blossoms stay our steps or blinding drifts of snow.

The way that you set face and foot's the way that I will go,
And brave I'll be abreast of you, the saints and angels know.
With loyal hand in loyal hand and one heart made of two,

Through summer's gold or winter's cold
it's I will walk with you. Sure, I will walk with you, my lad, As love ordains me to. To heaven's door and through, my lad, Oh, I will walk with you!

THE PROBLEM.

-James Whitcomb Riley.

THE millennium was dawning. War and strife were fain to cease, And the nations were expectant Of the universal peace

THERE was ringing of the anvils Where the fires of forges burned, And the swords of battling millions Were to plowshares being turned.

WITH fraternal true affection All the hearts of men were warmed, And the spears of warring brothers Into pruning hooks were formed.

But, while mankind's bloody weapons Wore a changed and peaceful air, None could plan a transformation For the hatpins of the fair. -Philadelphia Ledger.

BY A GRANITE WALL. Say, rugged stones, so thick, so Who tore you from your mountain

Who piled you stone on stone and

You in this lofty parapet? I strain my strength against you, My answer is a bloody hand.

Has man-that thing of brittle bones-Thus wrought with you, eternal stones?

-White Fehr.

THE CALL OF THE CITY. THE child of the great city, can you wonder if it call me To its highways and its byways, with a voice I cannot still?

If the silence and the solitude at times well nigh appall me And I sigh for that old tumult, with its glamour and its thrill?

WHEN 1 paced along the busy streets with scanty sense of pleasure,
One of countless hurrying thousands, every face with purpose set, How I yearned for some wide stillness, where time passed in restful leisure, Now the days are drear with longing and the nights with vain regret. FOR the voice is calling, calling, and I cannot choose but listen When the wearying winds are quiet and the land is dim with rain.

my heart is turning eastward; with slow tears my sad eyes glisten. There is life in all its fullness-here the exile's bitter pain. -Pall Mall Gazette.

LOVE. LOVE came at dawn when all the world was fair. When crimson glories, bloom and song

Love came at dawn when hope's wings fanned the air
And murmured. "I am life."

LOVE came at even when the day was When heart and brain were tired and slumber pressed Love came at eve, shut out the sinking

And whispered. "I am rest"

-W Wilfred Campbell
