Having been unwilling to accept at the session of 1910 a cumbersome and having sought to amend it along practical and economical lines, I have been represented as being antagonistic to any legalized primary in the state, when, as a matter of fact, I was the author of the first legalized state primary law ever placed upon the statute books, and still favor a legalized primary which gives to everyone, regardless of his pecuniary condition, an opexpress their choice.

Likewise an honest attempt on my part to amend in some respects the day. present public utilities law has been construed in some quarters as hostility to the measure, when, as a matter of fact, I have been and am still in hearty sympathy with the idea of regulation of corporations rendering public service both as a protection to the corporation and to the individual.

If, by the grace of the Democratic party, I shall be nominated as its candidate, and if ultimately I shall be honored by the people with the election to the high office of governor, I believe the knowledge gained by a service of eight years in the state Senate, during which time I was a member of its most important committees, and at the last session of which I was its president, will be a material aid in administering the affairs of state, and I shall devote the best efforts and energies which I possess to give to the people a clean, careful, conservative and business administration.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn .- Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATE.

There is apparently no discord among the Republicans in the choice of a candidate for the gubernatorial nomination. Such excellent men have been mentioned and one very strong man, Mr. William B. A gentleman passing by the grave, which had not been filled up, thought he saw the servant he disinterred the convict, who was still alive. It was the custom in those days to bury suicides and executed criminals without any coffin The man was carefully treated and entirely recovered. He became hostler at the coaching house in York and lived a most exemplary life. When asked what he could tell in relation to hanging, as having experienced it, he replied, "When I was turned off flashes of fire seemed to dart from my eyes, from which I fell into a state of darkness and insensibility."

His Choice of Weapons. In "A Century of English Ballads," a book by Harold Simpson, there is a delightful story of Stephen Incledon, an eminent tenor of other days, whose singing of "Black Eyed Susan" was peculiarly to the people's taste. While staying at a country inn Incledon had quarreled during the evening with an army officer. He imagined he had closed the controversy by going off to bed, but the officer, left downstairs to brood over his wrongs, thought otherwise. Making his way to Incledon's bedroom, he found the singer fast asleep. When he succeeded in wak-

"Satisfaction?" murmured Incledon sleepily. "Well, you shall have it." Whereupon he sat up in bed and sang "Black Eyed Susan" in his best style. West Point Traditions.

"It is an interesting fact, often referred to at alumni reunions and in addresses delivered to the cadets at West Point," said a retired army officer, "that one of the most distinguished of the graduates of the academy, who afterward wore the epaulets of a major general, was once a bootblack on the streets of New York and was plying his trade when he noticed in a newspaper an announcement of a vacancy at the academy for the district in which he lived, and he applied for it.

"Another of the traditions," continued the officer, "is that one of the best cadet officers that ever wore the gray was the son of a convict, and, although that fact was known to every one of his comrades, it never made the slightest difference in his social standing. I do not know of any other institution where the same social recognition and the same loyalty of comradeship would be displayed."-Washington Herald.

"It is nothing but kindness that makes animals really tame," said a trainer. "All the terrible accidents that used to occur so frequently to trainers and tamers were due to the fact that the animals had been cowed and not wen by kindness. I remember a savage Bengal tiger which was sent to me from Calcutta some years ago. When he arrived he was in a state of fury and rage and for several days would fly at me whenever I approached his cage. I paid him a daily visit, purring as I approached, which was like speaking his own language, and he gave up gradually his furious greeting. After a week I took a piece of meat at each visit, for the way to the heart is through the stomach, and that does not apply to tigers alone. At the end of four weeks I could touch him, and three months later he had quite realized that no one wanted to hurt him and used to come quietly to the bars to be stroked each day."

Sir Walter and the Royal Glass. In 1820 George IV. conferred a baronetcy upon Walter Scott. Two years later the king of England went to pay a visit to his Scotch subjects. He was received with indescribable enthusiasm, and Scott led the manifestations organized in his honor.

"You are the one Scotchman I have chiefly desired to see," said the sovereign. The two men then drank one another's health, and Scott begged George IV. to give him the glass which he had just put to his lips. The favor was granted, and the poet put the glass in his pocket.

He Took Her For a Thief

By DANIEL WINSTON

Copyright by American Press Asso-Perry Atkinson, immaculately dressed and with a pearl stickpin in his cravat, was waiting on the platform of a seaside station at the height of the summer season. A number of persons were there, some to receive friends, some to see friends off, all waiting for a train. When it rolled up to the station Atkinson craned his neck with the rest, like a turkey gobbler hunting for some favorable point to fly over a fence.

While thus looking up he suddenly felt two arms thrown around his neck and a pair of lips pressed to his.

Now, at this especial resort, situated not far from a large city, were many different classes of persons, from the highest to the lowest. When Atkinson felt himself in the embrace of a woman who was a stranger to him the first explanation of the situation that entered his head was that it was a game to relieve him of his money. Disengaging himself as quickly as possible, he clapped his hand to his hip. where he kept his pocketbook. He was relieved to find the wallet there. Then he instinctively felt for his pearl scarfpin, and it was gone!

By this time the woman who had embraced him-a girl of twenty-was standing looking at him with a puzzled expression which, as she gazed, developed into one of horror.

"I greatly fear," she stammered,

"that I have made a mistake." "You certainly have made a mistake if you take me for a 'flat.' You hand out my stickpin mighty quick or I'll call the police."

At this the girl put on an expression to describe which language is inadequate. Her face was scarlet; her eyes flashed alternate indignation and fear. Then suddenly Atkinson made a dive for her skirt, where he saw his scarfpin hanging, and caught it as it was about to fall to the ground. Putting it in its proper place, he gave the girl a final glance and was about to turn away when she said:

"Do you mean to tell me that you are not Ben Willard."

"I don't know the gentleman." "You are the image of him," the girl added, ready to burst into tears.

Atkinson gave her another look as if undecided whether to apologize or say something harsh, then walked away very much disgruntled. While he had been thus engaged a friend he had come to the station to receive had escaped him. As he walked to the summer residence where he was staying he began to see the episode in its true proportions and to become conscious of having made a guy of himself. Before the day was over he regretted not having apologized to the girl and longed for an opportunity to undo what he had done.

The next time Mr. Atkinson met the young lady whom he had mistaken for a thief he was dancing the cotillion at one of the "cottages." A line of Octagon mesh veiling in clusters of henille dots is seen on hats; also fillet of gentlemen, and as the lines met the first gentleman whirled away with the first lady. In the coming line of ladies Atkinson suddenly espied the heroine of the stickpin. This in itself was embarrassing, but when he counted the men ahead of him and the ladies ahead of the girl in question and discovered that she would fall to him for a partner his heart sank down into the heels of his patent leather boots.

When the couples ahead of them were reduced to three Atkinson saw the girl's eyes fixed upon him and shuddered. He saw by her expression that she was about to take her revenge. When all those who had preceded them had sailed away in the dance and they stood face to face the girl turned on her heel, presenting her back to Atkinson in sight of all present, and marched out of the room.

Atkinson made way for the man next behind him, wishing that some of those standing about would shoot him. He made his exit through a door opposite the one by which the young lady had passed out and left the house.

The rest of the evening was given up by those who were not dancing to a discussion of what Atkinson, who was known to be a gentleman and a favorite socially, had done to draw forth an expression of such contempt.

The next fortnight was one of profound suffering to Atkinson. He sent friend after friend to the young lady, Miss Langdon, with explanations and apologies. No reply came from any of them. When he met her on the beach she did not notice him. Had she shown again signs of her contempt he would have liked it better. He declined all invitations, fearing that he would meet her. But when an intimate friend gave a cotillion party at which he was obliged to be present he was horror stricken to see Miss Langdon among the guests. He tried to shirk dancing the cotillion, but failed. Sitting in his chair, the picture of misery, waiting while the ladies were offering favors, what was his astonishment to see the girl he had taken for a thief advance toward him, smiling, and hand him a

It seemed as if the tortures of Tartarus were replaced by a heavenly balm. Placing his arm around her waist, he sailed away with her, neither speaking, yet both attracting, from the nature of the case, much attention. When they had finished their whirl Atkinson said to her:

"Only an angel would have forgiven me my stupid blunder."

"Only a fiend would have denied you forgiveness."

A FAIR EXCHANGE

MANY people have things that they no longer have use for, but keep them in the house taking up room and doing no one any good.

Better sell or trade off things you don't want. Advertise them and you will find that there are people ready to take them and pay cash, or trade for them. You will find it easy through the Columns of

THE CHRONICLE

A PERSONALS.

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish s many personal and social items as possible, as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who nave guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

BARN DESTROYED DURING

WEDNESDAY'S STORM

Heavy Rain Fall Accompanied by Vivid Lightning Does Some Damage. Zimmerman's Horse Killed.

On Wednesday evening the barn on Mr. Daniel Shorb's place in Liberty township, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground together with its contents, hay, straw, harness and several vehicles. The heavy rain that accompanied the storm kept the fire from spreading.

Mr. Joseph R. Hoke had an exciting experience during the storm. He had gotten as far as the Middle creek hill, on his way to Emmitsburg from Gettysburg when a tree near the road was struck and his horse was thrown to the ground. Mr. Hoke was partially incapacitated by the bolt but "Slim Jim" a well-known hobo, who was in the bridge, came to his rescue. Nothing was injured.

A chimney on St. Euphemia's School building was struck and partially destroyed.

Early the next morning another storm passed over Liberty township. Two horses, the one dead and the other nearly so, were found in a field of hit them.

A cow and calf belonging to Miss Annie Hardman, of Friends Creek, Mr. and Mrs. Callghan and son, George were killed during the same storm, while in the field.

WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

The Equal Franchise League of Emmitsburg assumes responsibility for all statements, facts and arguments published under this heading.

The Equal Franchise League of Emmitsburg has for its object "The promotion of the franchise for women in Frederick county and in Maryland; the endorsement of all legislative measures which affect the welfare of women and children, and the betterment of civic conditions in Emmitsburg."

With such a splendid ideal and with the intense earnestness of the thinking women of the town, the Suffrage Club is launched. Surely the majority of Emmitsburg citizens can come together on at least two of the issues.

All men and women who endorse the object of the organization are eligible for membership. The dues are 50 cents a year, and Miss Anna Annan, the Secretary, will be glad to answer communications concerning the League work.

The League will mail literature and do propaganda work during the Summer, but is planning splendid things for its future activities. Already two active committees have been formed: Press and Literature, and Sanitation committee.

Thurmont has also organized an Equal Franchise League with Mrs. G. E. Rogers, President, Miss Emma L. Eyler, Treasurer, and Miss Kathleen Beard Secretary. Its work will be along similar lines; and with two such centers, plus the clubs already organized in Frederick city, Frederick county will come to the front in the march of

Mrs. Lucy B. Johnston, President of the Kansas Equal Suffrage League

We are busy now with the organization work and this work will be carried down to the "grass roots" but will in no way be spectacular."

Besides the regular officers there are eight District Presidents on our State

Executive Board, whose duty it is to organize each county in her district. Each county organization will have its full quota of officers, so that when our one hundred and five counties are or-ganized and our State Chairman in the departments of Membership Extension Press Work and Education get their work extended in the same way to cover the State, we will have more than one thousand women officially interested, and we hope that by touching a button at State Headquarters we may be able to send the "thrills" all the way down into the voting precincts.

In one county, which was organized two weeks ago, they are already hold-ing suffrage teas and organizing in the voting precincts. In Riley county in a precinct of 100 voters, 55 women attended the "Tea Party" and 50 joined the league. These suffrage tea parties are not given in just the same spirit as was the one by our forefathers and foremothers in Boston Harbor, but the same principle is the inciting cause. At our next Board meeting full plans for the future will be made, but our wo-men are conservative and methods wil not be of the spectacular kind. We will have a good deal of publicity work—speaking at fairs, chautauquas, and so forth—but will rely strongly upon the press and the strong sense of justice we believe our men of Kansas are possessed of. One hundred newspapers in county seats have promised to support our measures, and all our largest and best dailies have made a like pledge. It is too hot to do anything but desk work now, but by the first of September we will be prepared for more active work.

The Watch Below.

Those whose privilege it may be to inspect a liner or other large passenger ship will be wise to leave their watches at home, says the Sheffield Telegraph This may sound strange. There is no fear of losing their watches, but they delicate shade. may find their watches lose, all the same, and very considerably too. In the lingerie hat are fashioned with the engine room, where the electric dynamo is at work, the air is so powerfully charged with electricity as to affect any watch, even when carried in the pocket and not actually close to the dynamo. Engineers invariably leave their watches in their room, never, except by accident, carrying them

An engineer wishing to demonstrate the wondrous power of the dynamo held an iron hammer in his hand some inches from it. The dynamo drew this hammer from his hand with a clang as a magnet would a needle. Doubtless many persons who have gone below at some time or other have subsequently wondered how their watches have become "deranged," ignorant of the fact that it was done by electricity, which plays havoc with the delicate mechanism of a watch.

Rossetti and His China. Ford Madox Hueffer tells in "Memories and Impressions" a story of Rossetti and his china collecting. A certain potter had acquired a valuable set of Chinese tea things of which he had duplicates made in his pottery. Then he got an agent to sell the imitations to Rossetti for a large sum.

"Coming to tea the next day," relates Mr. Hueffer, "he remarked to Rossetti. Hello, Gabriel, where did you get those clumsy imitations? And eventually he sold the originals to Rossetti for a figure considerably over that at which each visit thereafter he brought one of the forged cups in his pocket, and while Rossetti's back was turned substituted the forgery for one of the genuine cups. At the end of the series of visits, therefore, Rossetti once more possessed the copies and the potter the genuine set, which he sold, I believe, to M. Tissot."

Morphine and Morality.

Morphine stands unequaled as a per verter of the moral sense. Whisky may disturb the imagination and judg ment, causing many foolish and unwise actions to follow its use, but morphine strikes deeper and creates a per son whom the father of lies must recognize as kindred to himself. Stories that are the creation of a disturbed brain, told in a manner to appear so intrinsically true that the stories become works of art, are what you will promptly forwarded to you by mall. A Tale of Two Hairs.
Of the dandy D'Orsay's not very brilliant "wit" this is from Feinmouth's biography: "The company were lounging about the fireplace when a singularly tactless gentleman of the name of Powell crept up behind the count and, twitching suddenly a bair out of the back of his head, exclaimed: 'Excuse me. count: one solitary white hair!' D'Orsay contrived to conceal his annoyance, but bided his time. Very soon he found his chance and, approaching Mr. Powell, he deliberately plucked a hair from his head, exclaiming, 'Parrdon, Pow-ail: one solitary black 'air!' "

Not His Air.

It was a very fashionable concert. and the artists were very well known ones, but the two young things were too busy with picking out their peculiarities to hear the music.

In the midst of a beautiful selection the pianist suddenly lifted his hands from the keys, and one of the young things was heard to say clearly:

"I wonder if that hair is his own?" The old man who sat beside her was slightly deaf, but he turned with a benevolent smile. "No, miss," he imparted pleasantly; "that is Schubert's." - Philadelphin Times.

A Friendly Tip.

"I'm going to keep on climbing until I reach the top of the ladder." said the candidate who had just been elected to a petty office.

"That's all right," rejoined the old politician, "but take my advice and keep an eye on the men at the bottom. They are the chaps who can upset the ladder."-Pittsburg Post.

A Straightforward Answer. J. B. Lippincott once ventured to ask Ouida, the novelist, how she came to know so much about clubs, camp life barracks, gambling houses and other places which are only visited by men. She placed her hands upon her knees

said, "It is none of your business."

THE WANT.

IFE, though the massy table With glass and silver rare And glows with many a far Which maketh sweet the air,

A thought is knocking at my brain, A question at my heart— Why are we two, who seem so near, So drearily apart?

Since never doubt or soil of faith, Nor wavering of a thought, Nor wrong that rushes into words Has this division wrought,

No silent ebbing of belief, Nor hands that vainly crave, Nor sight of all illusion cured, Nor glamour in its grave.

Estrange; a kindness yet abides, The gray of what was green, Yet some inexorable want Broodeth our souls between.

夏夏夏夏

True that no child to us is born To bind us with its eyes Or with its babble closer draw, Its chuckle toward the skies. But, oh, the want is deep within!

We shrink, and we congeal In dreadful gliding of a life Where oiled is every wheel. The shining horses without noise Waft us on cushioned seat, And softest carpets give no sound

Back to our moving feet. On straw without some stricken house How dull the traffic rolls!

So muffled all the mighty world Passes our languid souls. Hence let us fly a mortal ease
And share the common strife, Into the human welter plunge And lose ourselves in life!

-Stephen Phillips. OUR PURPOSE HERE.

YOU ask me, oh, sincerest friend. What is our purpose here,
While passing days may onward trend
And year supplanteth year?

WHAT purpose largest place should hold In heart and life and plan? What is a soul's most treasured gold In this the sphere of man?

THE answer is not hard to see. Has it escaped your view,
And have you learned so scant of me
And I so small of you?

OH, kindly friend, the answer seen, Like stars that shine above. Is this and only this, I ween— We live that we may love! -Douglas Dobbins.

THE TEST.

HE test of a man is the fight he makes,
The grit that he daily shows,
The way he stands on his feet and takes Fate's numerous bumps and blows. A coward can smile when there's naught to fear,

When nothing his progress bars,
But it takes a man to stand up and cheer
While some other fellow stars.

It isn't the victory, after all,
But the fight that a brother makes.
The man who, driven against the wall,
Still stands up erect and takes
The blows of fate with his head held high, Bleeding and bruised and pale, Is the man who'll win in the by and by,
For he isn't afraid to fail.

It's the bumps you get and the jolts you And the shocks that your courage stands, The hours of sorrow and vain regret, The prize that escapes our hands, worth. It isn't the blows you deal But the blows you take on the good old That show if your stuff is real.

DUTY'S REWARD. HEN love has gone out of your And you have no more to give And you wonder why in this world of strife

Then try the tonic of duty, The very best tonic to take. It will round out your life in beauty As you live for humanity's sake

There's not more incentive to live

Then the love that you thought had van-ished, Isned,
The love that you thought was dead,
And the soul that has long been famished
Will revive, by sweet duty fed. -Mrs. A. J. Pruden.

LOVE.

How love came in I do not know, Whether by the eye or ear or no,
Or whether with the soul it came
At first, infused with the same:
Whether in part 'tis here or there
Or, like the soul, whole everywhere.
This troubles me, but I as well As any other this can tell— That when from hence she does depart The outlet then is from the heart. -Herrick

THAT MAN

Who leads in anything that is worth while being leader in, is nearly always dressed in the fashion that leads. The man who wears has the certainty of good fashion and of being among the leaders in good fashion, because they have INDIVIDUAL-ITY and are made from the Newest Fabrics.

Lippy Made Clothes
