favor the great resources that the or ganization controls. If political organizations in the future are to place candidates in the field, then the Primary Election law is a travesty and a delusion, and it might as well be swept from the statute book.

"The right of the people to nominate and then the duty of the organization and of every regular party man to support the candidate is the great fundamental reform that is now agitating the minds of the people. Upon the daily pages of an enlightened press, upon public platforms, on the hustings, in legislative assemblages, and in the halls of Congress, the battle cry of this great reform is ringing through the country. Our primary law was placed upon the statute book to effectuate this purpose, and there is no step that we can take in Maryland that will do more to unify the party than to recognize its inherent and inalienable right, without dictation from anyone, by the untrammeled suffrages of its electors, to nominate its own candidates at the polls.

"The leaders who observe this trend of public opinion and do not attempt to dominate or manacle it are the men of "This principle was lately put into practice in the State of New York. Mr. make the food wholesome for her chil-Sheehan, the candidate of the organiza- dren. tion, was a man of unquestioned ability but public opinion seemed to be against him and the managers yielded.

"What was the result? Senator O'Gorman was elected, as splendid a representative as ever made his appearance in the Senate of the United States | fection resulting. a man of the deepest convictions and of the most fearless independence, a representative of free institutions and exemplifying in a high degree the loftiest ideals of American citizenship.

"What took place in New York is taking place in other States. This great reform, the right of the people and not of organizations to select the candidate, is being asserted now in almost every State in the Union, and State central and executive committees and political organizations are officially and publicly proclaiming their purpose not to concentrate their influence in favor of any candidate at the primary polls.

"This reform is bound to come in Maryland, retard and delay it as we will. Of all the issues before the country the right of the people to nominate their own candidates is the strongest weapon in the hands of a progressive Democracy.

"I want to do all that I can to help the party in Maryland and not to divide it, because I can forsee the triumph of Democratic principles in the country, and my heart thrills at the coming steps of a conqueror at the next Presidential election. The way to harmonize it is to give every candidate an equal chance and not mar and destroy the whole symmetry of the Primary Election law by throwing the organization in favor of any candidate.

"Shall the people rule? From now and upon the affirmative of this issue, ascendancy of the Democratic party in Maryland."

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.-Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

Maryland has such a direct primary but to realize the benefits it must be used. It is a privilege, of course, but it is likewise a duty to vote at such elections. At the polls you give public expression of your private judgment of the candidates and the heavier the vote the more discriminating will be the choice and the better the candidates.

No matter how the voter relies on his party for political "principles," however hidebound, howsoever loyal to his organization, and dependent on the "leaders," in the primary he is expected to stand alone, choose for himself and be his own leader. Our increase in population during the last decade was greater than before and to meet this growth a corresponding impetus has been given to building. The paving of the sidewalks is gradually becoming uniform, and the standard is the best. Public spirit is growing more pronounced and among other evidences of this we can point with great pride to our public play ground. Property owners have done much to make our public streets more beautiful, and the town is the brighter by reason of paint and well-cared-for buildings than ever before.

The town is growing wholesomely and adapting itself to new conditions in a way to give eral of his colleagues in the House pride to its well-wishers. There are more things to be done and they will come in good time.

The sand fly is perfectly harmless. It does not bite. It has no sting. It cannot even eat. All it can do is to flit about for a few hours, enjoy the light of day or the glare of an electric lamp. The sand fly is known to scientists familiarly as the May fly. In scientific terms it is called ephemerida. This name is taken from the Greek word ephemeros, which means lasting only for a day. To the scientists the sand fly is one of the most interesting and beautiful of insects. The fly lives but a day at most, but before it sees representative of the party and it not be of the people, by the the light it has lived from one to three years under the water in the form of what the scientists call a nymph. The nymph can both walk and swim. As it grows it molts, and after about the ninth molt tiny wings appear on its thorax. These grow larger until the insect comes forth from the water a sand fly. It then has but one duty-to lay its eggs. This done, the sand fly zigzags through the air until its brief life is ended.

The child looked keenly at the caller. "Nothing doing," he said. "Do you think I'm one of these fresh kids you read about in the funny papers? There ain't going to be no embarrassing answer this time." - Cleveland Plain

The Missionary a Puzzle.

To the untutored Chinamen the presence of the missionary is a puzzle. They simply cannot imagine human beings exiling themselves from their native land for the love of men on the other side of the globe. So they frame sundry theories to explain the thing to themselves. One theory is that the missionaries are secret political agents bent on gaining an influence over the Chinese and then swaying them to the advantage of their respective governments. Only of late have the natives come to realize that the strangers are not sent by their governments, but by religious groups. According to another theory, China is so excellent and renowned that the red haired barbarians come to live there for the mere pleasure of it. As for their self denying works of benevolence, these are supposed to be prompted by the desire to acquire merit.-Century.

Force Yourself to Be Well.

"Plant your feet firmly and squarely on the ground, throw back your shoulders, fold your arms and affirm in most emphatic terms that you are strong, healthy and well. Do this for a few minutes every evening, and, even if this is not how you actually feel, maintain by your physical and mental attitude that it is your condition, and you will soon find that it becomes so and that you are not really telling lies." This was the advice given by Dr. J. Stenson Hooker in a lecture on "Posturing and Posing For Health" at the simple life conference and exhibition in London. "It is wonderful to what extent our state of health can be altered in this way," Dr. Hooker added. "It stirs up the currents of feeling which act on the nerves. These act on the blood vessels, and thus the whole system is improved, and we become different beings."

A Terrifying Hat.

When the French artist Benjamin Constant was traveling in Morocco he was invited by the sultan to present himself at court at Fez. The painter's first thought was in regard to his cos-"Court" in Europe was one thing; in Morocco it was likely to prove something different. There was nothing to do, however, but to wear his ordinary evening clothes. He was ignorant of the fact that the Moors look upon black garments as very vulgar, and it was only after his arrival that he learned his mistake. The courtiers smiled openly; worst of all, they sneered. The painter was a man of hasty temper, and suddenly, nettled by their insolence, he closed his opera hat and sprang it open in the faces of the jeering crowd. They scattered, yelling with surprise and fear. The sultan heard the noise and demanded the cause. After he had seen and examined the wonderful hat he gave this oracular opinion:

"If I had lived a hundred years in your country and adopted all your other customs I could never have brought myself to set on my head so hideous a contrivance as that!"

Painfully Explicit.

The proprietor of a certain hotel in Europe has posted up the following warning to his clients:

"Gentlemen who come in this hotel not say anything about their meals they will be charged for, and if they should say beforehand that they are going out to breakfast or dinner, and if they say that they not have anything to eat they will be charged, or unless they bring it to the notice of the manager, and should they want not to say anything, they must order the manager for, and not any one else, and unless they not bring it to the notice of the manager, they will be charged for the least things not, according to hotel rate. And no fuss will be allowed afterward about it. and nothing will be allowed to deduct anything out of it.'

After this explicit information there surely could be no excuse for misunderstanding.-Boston Globe.

Surprising the Bullock. In times of crisis and worry a kind word has been known to have surprisingly good results. The unexpectedness of such a word is perhaps the secret of its force. A late book, "On the Wool Track," backs the moral with an anecdote. A team was working on the Broken Hill road, and a bullock-the Beelze bub of the team-had gone obstinate, and the coach was passing. The whip was swinging, and some apt remarks were just forming on the back of the teamster's tongue when he caught sight of a clerical hat on the front seat and just in time thought better

The Indian's Vision.

More or less wonderful accounts have from time to time been given of the powers of vision possessed by savage races. During a British anthropologi cal expedition to the Torres strait the visual faculty of the natives was carefully tested, and from these tests the conclusion was reached that the excellence of vision shown by the savages has a psychological origin-that is to say, it arises from knowing what to look for. When the civilized man acquires familiarity with the environment he can see as far as they can.

Thus the power of an Indian to tell the sex of a deer at such a distance that distinguishing features like antlers were invisible was found to rest upon his knowledge of the peculiar gait of the male deer.-Scientific American.

Wondrous Tact.

As an example of graciousness and tact Matthew White tells in Munsey's Magazine of a London clergyman who was called on to address an audience of actors. Alluding to the better social status of the players, the clergyman said that in former days it was sometimes customary to brand them as vagabonds and bore a hole in their ears with an awl, that the citizens might thus be forewarned. "And who knows," the clergyman added, "but that it is a survival of an endeavor to hide this mark of indignity that causes some of the actors even today to wear

American and German Firemen A Hamburg fireman of distinction who had occasion to visit the United States some years ago returned full of admiration for the splendid way in which American fire companies usually respond to alarms and was of the opinion that the American companies were ready for action more promptly than those in Germany, because the individual units subordinated everything else to the point of leaving quarters at the earliest possible instant, to do which the American fireman at night would slide down the pole partially clad and was indifferent as to his appearance in riding to the scene of the fire so long as he was on the spot to meet the emergency. How Cloves Are Cultivated. Cloves are now cultivated in many tropical rgeions. A clove tree begins to bear at the age of ten years and continues until it reaches the age of seventy-five years. There are two crops a year, one in June and another in December. The tree is an evergreen and grows from forty to fifty feet high, with large oblong leaves and crimson flowers at the end of small branches in clusters of from ten to twenty. The tree belongs to the same botanical order as the guava. The cloves, which are the undeveloped buds, are at first white, then light green and at the time of gathering bright red. Pieces of white cloth are spread under the trees at harvesting time, and the branches are beaten gently with bamboo sticks until the cloves drop. They are dried in the sun, being tossed about daily until they attain the rich dark color that proclaims them ready

An Escape

By SUSAN YOUNG PORTER

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Our family has occupied the same house in London for several centuries, and the upper stories are crowded with heirlooms and old papers. This continued residence is remarkable, for there has never been a political disturbance in the kingdom in which at least one of my race did not take part. In nosing over an old letter written by one of my quarrelsome ancestors to his mother I found the following

Heaven keep you, my dear mother, and may the joy of getting this letter and the news contained in it not be too much for you, seeing that your son is out of reach of harm in this pleasant land of France, a land that I shall always love, since its grapes or, rather, the wine made from their juice is at the bottom of my escape. Had it not been for an idea put in my head by the wine I had in the cellar of the Tower I would now be without a head, like the duke (of Monmouth) in whose stupid effort to take the throne from his uncle, King James, I was much

You know that, being a man of rank, yet not a leader in the rebellion, I was accorded the privileges usually granted to such persons, being lodged with the lieutenant of the Tower himself and as fine a fellow as ever served his sovereign. From the first I felt sure I would keep my head on my shoulders, and if I didn't I was bound to enjoy what little time was left me. The lieutenant and I were kindred spirits, and many were the cups of October ale we drank together, he always giving the toast, "May your head never roll into a basket, but may you meet the death of a nobleman, falling before a pike or a sword."

I had the wine you sent me down in the cellar under the Tower in which are the lieutenant's quarters, and one day while drinking with my jailer, we getting tired of ale, I told him that I had some fine French wine in the cellar and if he would let me send my man for it I would open a bottle. He gave the permission and the cellar key, and, calling Jacob, I gave him the key and told him to go for a bottle. I also tipped him a knowing look.

It was only a look, and I never dreamed that a look and a key would tell him what I wished to say to him, but couldn't speak for the presence of the lieutenant. But when a man is waiting to have his head lopped off he will cling to any straw of hope, and so did I. Jacob was gone a long while, but in time came to the door and instead of handing in a bottle The cord is much used to emphasize stood without, his clothes hanging on the high waist line. The empire styles his arm. I knew what this meant, are decidedly prominent in evening and quick as a flash I moved the key gowns. In many forms the empire line of the door from the inside to the outis suggested. Motifs, cords, straps, side and locked it, shutting in the lieu-

I began at once putting on Jacob's clothes, and he began putting on mine. While he was doing so he told me why he had been so long. He had told the man on guard that he had the key to the cellar where the wine was kept and if he would come with him he might have all he wished to drink When Jacob got the guard in the cellar he opened a bottle of the wine and told him to drink quick because I was waiting for him to come with wine and he couldn't be too long. The man drank two bottles as fast as he could pour their contents down, then fell on the floor. Jacob locked him in.

I was but a few minutes getting on Jacob's breeches and doublet and, putting on his hat, pulled it down over my face. Then, pretending to be drunk with liquor, I staggered out into the courtyard, and, passing over the spot where two of King Harry's wives were beheaded, I walked past the sentry at the postern, those I met laughing at me for a sot. I was obliged to pass over Tower hill, where stood a scaffold that had for weeks been used for beheading such rebels as I and, tottering down into the frequented streets, lost myself in the crowd. Luck helped me, for no one saw me to know me, though I saw some I knew. I thought of going home to hide, but knew I would be sought there and pushed on, moving by the outskirts till I reached the east side of the town, when I pushed off through the country toward the coast.

But I did not go directly east, for I wished to see my sweetheart at Linkborn manor and give her a kiss before putting the sea between her and me, besides relieving her mind as to the body together. It was evening when I came to the manor, and Margaret was walking among the flowers. She was languid and drooping, for she had been told that I would be brought to saw me coming in Jacob's clothes she The stiff plaited rosettes of ribbon me. THE CHRONICLE

A PERSONALS.

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fall to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

Cyclonic Wind Destroys Barn.

A heavy wind storm passed over Pewrecked a new barn, injuring four persons and killing five horses. The barn Evangelical Reformed Church. was finished about a week ago, excepting the stables. It was of new lumber throughout and was 45 by 85 feet. The framing was of white oak, regarded as the very best of wood for this purpose. Practically the whole barn has been rendered useless for rebuilding. The framing timbers are broken and split, and also the weatherboarding. Tangled in the mass of lumber is the unthreshed wheat, estimated to be about 1.500 bushels.

OLD FAVORITES.

THE LAST LEAF. SAW him once before, As he passed by the door, And again
The pavement stones resound As he totters o'er the ground

They say that in his prime,
Ere the pruning knife of time
Cut him down,
Not a better man was found
By the crier on his round Through the town.

But now he walks the streets, And he looks at all he meets So forlorn, And he shakes his feeble head That it seems as if he said, "They are gone."

The mossy marbles rest On the lips that he has pressed In their bloom, And the names he loved to hear On the tomb.

Poor old lady, she is dead Long ago!—
That he had a Roman nose And his cheek was like a rose In the snow.

But now his nose is thin, And it rests upon his chin Like a staff,
And a crook is in his back 'And a melancholy crack

I know it is a sin
For me to sit and grin At him here. But the old three cornered hat 'And the breeches and all that Are so queer!

And if I should live to be The last leaf upon the tree
In the spring
Let them smile as I do now
At the old forsaken bough
Where I cling. -Oliver Wendell Holmes.

THE HOUSE BEAUTIFUL. NAKED house, a naked moor, A shivering pool before the door,
A garden bare of flowers and fruit And poplars at the garden foot— Such is the place that I live in, Bleak without and bare within.

Yet shall your rugged moors receive

The incomparable pomp of eve And the cold glories of the dawn Behind your shivering trees be drawn. And when the wind from place to place Doth the unmoored cloud galleons ch Your garden blooms and gleams aga With leaping sun and glancing rain. With leaping sun and glancing rain. Here shall the wizard moon ascend The heavens in the crimson end Of day's declining splendor; here The army of the stars appear. The neighbor hollows, dry or wet, Spring shall with tender flowers beset. And oft the morning muser see Larks rising from the broomy lea And every fairy wheel and thread Of cobweb dew bediamonded. When daisies go shall winter time When daisies go shall winter time Silver the simple grass with rime, Autumnal frosts enchant the pool And make the cart ruts beautiful. And when snow bright the moor expands How shall your children clap their hands!

To make this earth our heritage,
A cheerful and a changeful page,
God's intricate and bright device
Of days and seasons doth suffice.
—Robert Louis Stevenson.

A VISION OF BEAUTY.

It was a beauty that I saw-So pure, so perfect, as the frame Of all the universe were lame To that one figure, could I draw Or give least line of it a law;
A skein of silk without a knot!
A fair march made without a halt! A curious form without a fault!
A printed book without a blot!
All beauty, and without a spot!

On thy cold gray stones. O sea!
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

OH, well for the fisherman's boy that he shouts with his sister at play. Oh, well for the sailor lad. That he sings in his boat on the bay!

A ND the stately ships go on To their haven under the hill; But, oh, for the touch of a vanished har.3 And the sound of a voice that is stil!

REAK, break, break At the foot of thy crags, O sea! But the tender grace of a day that is dead, Will never come back to me.

MANURE MEANS DOLLARS.

Manure is worth dollars. Why not save those dollars? Manure adds humus as well as plant food to the soil, and one is as valuable as the other. The soil may contain all the elements of plant feed, but if it has no hu mus these elements are not available and plants do not thrive. Humus aids in retaining moisture for the future use of the plant. Now is the time to save money by saving manure, and manure is best saved by being spread upon the field where will do the most good. Immediate value in crops as well as ultimate value in the farm results from the use of the manure spreader,

Baboon Daddy Braved Guns to Get His Baby

Monkey Risked His Life to Save His Little

OW would you like to hear tonight a story about a baboon daddy, children?" asked daddy.

"And he's always calling us little monkeys, Jack," whispered "That's another one for you, young lady," laughed daddy. "Next time you say to me, 'Ice cream soda, daddy,' you'll see what you'll get."

"I know," said Jack wisely. "What?" asked daddy.

"Ice cream soda," answered Jack.

"Oh, dear," sighed daddy; "there's no use my trying to do anything with you two. One laughs at me and the other says boldly that I'm afraid to carry out my threats. I'll just tell you the story quick and then go down to the porch to mother. She never makes fun of me. "Most monkeys are not very brave," he began, "but baboons are as fearless as anything that lives. They will fight lions or tigers or big snakes and even crocodiles, and only man with his rifle can make them afraid.

"But, as I will show you, they lose even fear of him when danger threatens their babies. One of the leaders of the great expeditions that go to Africa every year to get curiosities for menageries all over the world came one afternoon upon a whole colony of baboons resting in the shade of a group of trees at the bottom of a big hill. With him he had a pack of dogs who were used to capturing all sorts of animals, but they didn't scare the baboons.

"The father baboons came down on the ground and lined up just like soldiers in front of the dogs, and the mother baboons, with their little ones, scampered up the hill to safety. The hunters didn't want to shoot because dead animals are no good for menageries, and they were going away when they heard a funny squeak, and there was a poor little baboon that had been left behind.

"The hunters uttered a shout, for that was exactly what they wanted, and they urged on the dogs to frighten the fathers away, but none moved but one. He went to where the baby was and took it to its mother.

"And he was so grand in his manner and so fearless of any harm, although he must have been old enough and wise enough to know what a gun was, that not a man in the party had the heart to fire a shot, although a bal baboon is worth hundreds of dollars. And so the hunting party called in the dogs and went back to camp, and some baboon mother cuddled that baby in her arms all night."
