VOTE IN OTHER STATES

HARMON MAKES GAINS

New York Changes Complexion of Legislature

DEMOCRATS LOSE NEW JERSEY

Republican Candidate for Mayor Loses in Philadelphia While the Democrats Carry Some of the Chief Cities of Ohio.

The Democrats on Tuesday held their own in most of the elections, but there were no landslides except in New York and New Jersey.

In the former State the people, who in 1910 gave the Democrats a victory unprecedented since 1891, turned squarely around and elected an Assembly which will have a Republican majority of 38 over the 50 Democrats and one Socialist. The splendid Democratic vote of 1910 has gone glimmering. Murphy has lost control of the legislature, which will have a Democratic Senate and Republican Assembly.

New Jersey has elected a Republican Legislature, and Gov. Woodrow Wilson's chances for the Presidency, to say the least, have not been improved.

On the other hand, the friends of Gov. Harmon of Ohio deduce a big increase in his boom from the result in Ohio. In that State there were only city elections, but interest centered on the election for Mayor of Cincinnati, the home of both Harmon and President Taft.

Mr. Taft, who in 1905 bolted the Republican ticket nominated by boss Cox, endorsed it this year, but the influence of the President of the United States had apparently little effect on the Cincinnati voters, for the Democratic ticket was triumphantly elected. And Columbus went Democratic.

There is a recrudescence of Tom Johnsonism in Cleveland, where Johnson's spirit lives after him. His man Baker is elected Mayor by such a sweeping majority as to suggest that his city is ready to return to his doctrines.

Brand Whitlock, the Socialist Mayor of Toledo, is re-elected by his usual majority.

Gov. Foss is re-elected in Massachusetts by a majority of 7,000. Last year he got 35,000.

There was no fight to speak of in Rhode Island, and Gov. Pothier (Rep.) is re-elected.

Philadelphia has apparently repudiated the Penrose machine by a close vote. George H. Earle, the organization candidate for Mayor seems to have been defeated by the reformer Rudolph Blankenburg, but the result was in doubt for some time.

The following States elected Governors Tuesday: Rhode Island, (which went Republican,) Massachusetts, (Dem.,) Maryland, (Rep.,) Kentucky, (Dem.,) Mississippi, (Dem.,) and New Mexico, ( ).

Allie M. James, the stentorian orator from Kentucky, will succeed Senator Paynter in the Senate. The Legislature has gone Democratic in both branches. Ex-Senator McCreary, (Democrat), was elected Governor by 20,000 to 40,000.

New Mexico held its first election as State Tuesday. Both parties are claiming victory.

BALTIMORE GRAIN BROKER OWES $238,000 AND FLED

Detectives Searched Leading Eastern Cities for Pembroke Pitt of Pitt Brothers and Company.

Detectives searched in Philadelphia and New York for Pembroke Pitt, head of the grain firm of Pitt Brothers & Co., Baltimore, who is under indictment for forging grain bills of lading. Revised estimates of the amount the firm owes, much if not quite all of which is believed to be on bogus paper, give the aggregate as $238,000. Blanchard Randall has qualified as receiver. Search of the firm's books and papers has been begun.

Not only has Pitt, but his wife also has gone, and their elegant home in fashionable Roland Park is closed and barred.

The banks have one comfort. That is, that among the bills of lading there are some good ones, and among the liabilities there are some elevator receipts.

Atlantic-Pacific Air Trip Finished.

Aviator Calbraith P. Rodgers successfully completed on Sunday his trip from the Atlantic to the Pacific in an aeroplane. He landed at Pasadena in the afternoon and 20,000 persons were out to greet him. The start was made from New York on September 17 and it took 49 days to make the trip.

PROHIBITION VICTORY MAINE STAYS DRY

Official Returns Show The Liquor Interests Were Defeated In The Special September Elections.

Maine stays dry. Gov. Frederick W. Plaisted and his council decided to accept the corrections in the vote of four towns, cast in the special election in September, again reversing the result.

The attempt of the liquor interests to have stricken from the constitution Article V., which prohibits the sale of intoxicants in the State, resulted in one of the most bitter and hard fought elections known here. The result as first announced, was that the "wets" had won by a small margin. Then as the count came in and figures were verified the Prohibitionists were sure of victory. It last appeared that the foes of drink had been defeated, but the Governor's decision now keeps Maine in the list of prohibition States.

The no license adherents made a strong fight from one end of the State to the other. Sunday school children paraded the streets to the eve of election carrying banners inscribed "Vote No for God, Home, and the State." Young Peoples' Clubs were organized, and the State was flooded with literature.

Governor Plaisted at the conclusion of the meeting said that at an early date he will call a special session of the Legislature to "submit an amendment to the Constitution which will permit the enactment of laws concerning the liquor traffic which are capable of honest enforcement because sustained by the sentiment of the several communities to which they will be applied."

WU TING FANG CHINESE STATESMAN IN REVOLUTION

Appointed Minister of Foreign Affairs, But Says He Was Not Consulted in the Matter.

The most interesting development in the Chinese rebellion was the completion of the organization of a local cabinet by the revolutionaries.

Wu Ting-Fang, formerly Minister at Washington, has been appointed head of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Wang Yi-Ting, Minister of Trade and Commerce; Shen Wan-Yung, Minister of Finance; Li Ping-Hau, Civil Administrator, and Les-Hsieh, Military Administrator.

The appointments, however, are not taken seriously, the appointees denying knowledge of the action of the revolutionaries, except in the case of the Civil Administrator, who has been acting in that official capacity throughout. Wu Ting-Fang, while declining to acknowledge any participation in the revolutionary administration of Shanghai, openly sympathizes with it, although criticizing some of the methods. He is bitterly opposed to the Manchu clique in Peking. Dr. Wu says that if the revolution hopes to win it must scrupulously regard the rights of foreign nations and individuals. This, as time progresses, will be found difficult, because of the conflicting views held in different Provinces.

COLLEGE MEN FOR SUMMER SOLDIERS NOW ADVOCATED

Col. S. M. Foote Outlines a Plan For Three Months' Enlistment In The Regular Army During Vacation.

Col. Stephen M. Foote, Coast Artillery Corps, U. S. A., in the November issue of The Journal of the Military Service Institution of the United States which was issued a few days ago on Governors Island, suggests a plan for the college student of moderate means to make his vacations not only remunerative to a certain extent, but also instructive and beneficial, both morally and physically.

"Nearly every man," Col. Foote says, "asks himself as June approaches: 'What shall I do this Summer?' And his parents are asking themselves, 'What shall we do with our boy this summer?'"

"The Government might afford a solution of this problem by offering annually a three months' enlistment in the regular army for the period of July August, and September, the enlistment to be spent in camp. The requirement for enlistment would be American citizenship, good moral character, and ability to pass a rigid physical examination. Allowances and pay would be board, clothing, medical attendance, if necessary, and $15 per month. Institution for two months would cover recruit drill, and the last month a special course in target practice and field work."

"At the expiration of the term of enlistment each man would be regularly discharged, the discharge certificate to show his character and the degree of proficiency he has attained in the various military exercises."

REPUBLICAN GOVERNOR WINS

THE OTHER STATE OFFICIALS ARE DEMOCRATS

Senator John P. T. Mathias Was Relected But by a Greatly Reduced Majority

S. A. LEWIS DEFEATS GEORGE R. DENNIS FOR STATE'S ATTORNEY

Emmitsburg Loyal to Local Names on Ticket.—Mr. Annan Returned as Commissioner.—Heavy Vote Polled in Both Precincts.—Democrats Elated Over Their Victory in the County Where They Elected a Sheriff, Treasurer, County Commissioner and State's Attorney.

A very large vote was polled on Tuesday in Emmitsburg. Of the seven hundred and some voters 632 asserted their citizenship. The voting, notwithstanding the great interest taken in the contest, was very quiet. Precinct workers were busy and the local names on the ticket meant many split tickets. It was not until four o'clock in the morning that the counting was finished.

In Precinct 2 four Montgomery county tickets got out, two of which were caught before they were voted. The total vote of this district was as follows:

Premier Asquith announced in the House of Commons Tuesday afternoon that the Government intended to introduce a Manhood Suffrage bill at the next session of Parliament.

Manhood Suffrage means one vote for every adult male, with the exception of aliens, the insane, and such persons as are usually disqualified by law. Under the present system, men maintaining several residences have the right to vote in each place.

MOTION PICTURES AID RED CROSS SEALS SALE

Interesting Drama Tells Realistic Story of City Life.—Ready For Exhibition December 5th.

Motion pictures will again be used in the Red Cross Seal Anti-Tuberculosis Campaign. A picture prepared by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., entitled "The Awakening of John Bond," will be ready for exhibition about December 5th, according to an announcement made to-day by the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

The film is the fifth health film, and the second dealing with tuberculosis and the Red Cross Seal movement which has been issued by Edison. It is about 1,000 feet long, and tells an interesting story of everyday life in New York City.

The leading characters in the story are Bond, a political boss, his wife, Grace, and Nellie O'Brien, aged 18, living on the lower East Side of New York. The O'Briens, a large family, live in a miserably kept tenement owned by Bond, who refuses to do anything to clean up his building for fear of losing money. Bond is married and sails with his wife on a cruise for a wedding trip, taking with him as a deckhand, George O'Brien, Nellie's brother, who has consumption. On the cruise George fails rapidly and finally dies; Bond's wife having nursed him during his sickness and being with him at the last so takes his death bed messages. As a result of this close communication with George, Mrs. Bond contracts tuberculosis from him, and is brought back to New York for treatment. On her arrival home, she sends for Nellie to give her George's dying messages, and there Nellie sees and denounces Bond as the murderer of her brother, because he refused to clean up the tenement in which they lived, or to help secure a hospital where consumptives might receive free treatment.

Meanwhile, Bond has been trying to find a sanatorium where he may place his wife, but to his horror, finds every private sanatorium full, and no room for more patients. He then proceeds to the Tuberculosis Society and finds that there is no public place, because he voted against it. He tries to bribe the secretary to make a place for his wife, but the official takes his money and gives him a package of Red Cross Seals. Bond is at first angry, but when he learns what the Red Cross Seal means, he writes out a check for $150,000 for the campaign and agrees to support the hospital bill. The secretary then shows Bond a tuberculosis exhibit and an open air school, and arranges for the placing of his wife and the O'Brien children, who also have tuberculosis, in a sanatorium. The last scene shows Bond's wife and the O'Brien children recovered, playing in Bond's parlor, and a committee waiting on Bond, showing how his candidate is being supported because he believes in the tuberculosis hospital.

The film will be shown in thousands of moving picture theatres during December, and will be used by tuberculosis societies all the year round. The picture is produced under the supervision of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the New York Committee on the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Paris' Way to Reduce High Cost of Living
French Cabinet Now Proposes to Reduce Cost of Living by Starting Competitive Stores.

The critical conditions created throughout Europe by the increased cost of living are pressing Governments to action.

In England the example set by the United States is to be followed, and the Government will appoint a Board of Trade commission to inquire into the whole subject. In Austria the work of a Parliamentary commission already engaged in this way is to be hurried, and in Germany the recent debate in the Reichstag will, it is expected, have a sequel which will force the imperial administration in some measure to modify its "non possumus" attitude.

The French Cabinet has introduced a bill which will place the municipal authorities in a position to exercise effective control upon the price of the necessities of life.

The plan is to start municipal or co-operative butchers and bakers' shops. The Government began by rejecting the idea of authorizing municipalities to fix the prices of certain necessities of life, in accordance with the spirit of the existing Revolutionary law of July, 1791, which is still enforced in certain communes, for fixing the price of bread. It preferred the plan of encouraging co-operation.

Mr. Gompers advocated the periodic payment of damages rather than payment by a lump sum. He said that the desirable thing was to protect the injured workman during his incompetency, and not to afford him capital to set himself up in business.

Mr. Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, was the principal witness before the Employers' Liability and Workmen's Compensation Commission Tuesday in Washington. He gave a general endorsement to the commission's plan for compensating employes of inter-State railroads for injuries.

Taking the position that there would be a larger percentage of accidents on the poorly equipped roads than on those properly supplied with safety appliances, he argued that if all the roads should be required to contribute to a common fund for insurance against accidents the tendency would be toward a better general equipment, and therefore toward greater protection of employes. The better roads, he thought, in time would force the poorer roads to improve conditions.

MANCHUS WILL SOON FALL

CHINESE REBELS WIN

End of Dynasty Presumed to be Imminent

SUICIDES RATHER THAN OBEY

Peking Government Ordered Him Not to Resist Rebels at Nanking.—Was a Tartar General.—Manchus Murder General Wu.

The Chinese, overcome several hundred years ago by their northern and western neighbors, have at last, it seems, decided to shake off the yoke of foreign rule and come again into their own. The rebellion has assumed such proportions that the foreign legations in Peking consider that the end of the Manchu dynasty is imminent. There seems to be no hope of saving even a nominal throne.

The provinces north of the Yang-tse are now declaring for a republic. The only force of Manchu troops large enough to cope with the local situation is in Peking, but there are indications that the capital will be surrounded before many days by Chinese soldiers.

Where the Court will take refuge is a question. There are evidences that the Court intended to proceed to Chang-kia-Kau, (Kalgan.) Troops guarding the route to that town, which is in the Province of Pe-chi-Li, 125 miles northwest of Peking, were expected to dynamite a tunnel after the passage of the train bearing the Emperor and his household. Reports, however, have now been received that Chang-kia-Kau is unsafe.

Dr. Wu Ting-Fang, who has been chosen as Director of Foreign Affairs in the reform Government established by the revolutionists in the province of Kiang-Su, gave a long statement to The Associated Press, in which he announced his adherence to the movement designed to establish a republican form of government in China.

Dr. Wu, who has twice occupied the office of Minister to the United States, is the most important figure that has appeared on the revolutionary stage in the last few days. Rumors that he had espoused the rebel cause were received with incredulity. When the revolutionists proclaimed a provisional Government at Shanghai he was made head of the Foreign Bureau, but the appointment was not taken seriously, and as late as Monday he declined to acknowledge any participation in the revolutionary administration. His attitude, as formally announced will, it is expected, have a far-reaching influence.

The Viceroy of Nanking committed suicide on Tuesday night. He received instructions from Peking not to resist the revolutionists by force but to peacefully surrender. He answered this order by taking his own life. He was a Tartar General.

Gen. Wu Lu-Cheng, a brilliant young military officer, who was recently appointed Governor of Shan-Si Province, was assassinated at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning. He was asleep in his tent at the military encampment at Shikia-Chunag, when forty Manchu soldiers rushed in past the guard and shot and then beheaded him. When officers of the General's Staff arrested the Manchus, the latter stated that Wu had gone over to the revolutionaries and was secretly betraying the Manchus.

GOMPERS WANTS RAILROADS TO HELP ACCIDENT FUND

He Thinks That These Companies Should be Required by Law to Contribute to Employees Relief.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, was the principal witness before the Employers' Liability and Workmen's Compensation Commission Tuesday in Washington. He gave a general endorsement to the commission's plan for compensating employes of inter-State railroads for injuries.

Taking the position that there would be a larger percentage of accidents on the poorly equipped roads than on those properly supplied with safety appliances, he argued that if all the roads should be required to contribute to a common fund for insurance against accidents the tendency would be toward a better general equipment, and therefore toward greater protection of employes. The better roads, he thought, in time would force the poorer roads to improve conditions.

Mr. Gompers advocated the periodic payment of damages rather than payment by a lump sum. He said that the desirable thing was to protect the injured workman during his incompetency, and not to afford him capital to set himself up in business.

A SERIOUS BLUNDER

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Edgar Ainsworth was editor of the Literary Review. One day he criticised a novel published under the name of Rosamond Stanford as follows:

"Her Mistake," by Rosamond Stanford (Jones Bros.), is a mistake all through. In the first place, it was a mistake for Miss Stanford to try to write a novel at all. Her hero, Milton Truesdale, is a prig. Her heroine, Alice Van Zant, would very well for the leading lady of a child's play. The scenes are like a London fog, the characters as stiff as the figurehead of a sailing ship of the nineteenth century."

It was Saturday night when Ainsworth consigned the poor authoress's labor to oblivion, and the foreman of the composing room was calling for copy for the Literary Digest. The editor called a boy and sent up criticisms of six novels, all of which he had read that afternoon, to fill up the column unprovided for. Then he went home, put a hot water bag on his stomach, another on his cheek and after a few hours' more suffering went to sleep.

He awoke at 10 o'clock in the morning refreshed. After a bath and a breakfast he lounged, and if he saw a newspaper lying about he took it up and put it in the stove. He dined at 2, slept from 3 till 6, took tea and proceeded to make his usual Sunday evening call on his fiancée, Marion Schoefield.

Miss Schoefield, who had been used to his calls for several years, waiting while her lover condemned enough books to enable him to marry her, was, as usual, watching for her lover on Sunday evening at the parlor window. Mr. Ainsworth was disappointed at not seeing her at the accustomed place. Fearing something serious had happened, he hurried into the house. Meeting her sister in the hall, he asked anxiously:

"Where is Molly?"
"No answer."
"Great heavens! Is she ill?"
"No answer."
"Do tell me!"
"Molly is well enough. She'll be down presently."
Ainsworth walked the parlor floor for half an hour, when, looking up, he saw his love standing mute before him. She had entered so silently that she had not heard him. She looked as if she had been buried and exhumed.

"Rose—sweetheart!" he exclaimed. "What has happened?"
"A good deal has happened," was the reply.
"Tell me. I'm dying with suspense."
"Perhaps you will not think it a matter of importance. The truth has simply been spoken."

"The truth!"
"Yes. It is no fault of yours."
"Whose fault is it?"
"No one's. I have simply made a mistake."
"What mistake?"
"In trying to write a novel."
"You write a novel?"
"Yes. I have been engaged for more than a year on one."
"Well?"
"I have been advised by one near and dear to me—that's the worst of it—tremulously—that I made a mistake in trying to write."

"Who told you that nonsense?"
"Besides, I've discovered that the man I took for a model for my hero is a prig."
"Who did you take?"
"One I love."
"Good gracious! You didn't take me?"
"Yes, I did," with a sob.
"Well, well, sweetheart, who told you all this? Have you been getting some addeledated fool's opinion on your manuscript?"
"The novel has been published."
"By whom?"
"Jones Bros."
Mr. Ainsworth began to see through a millstone.

"Has it been criticised?"
"Yes. A criticism appeared this morning."
"In what paper?"
"The Literary Digest."
Ainsworth saw that without a coup all was lost. "I wrote all the criticisms in today's issue. I wrote none on a book by you."
"My own name wasn't on the title page. It was Rosamond Stanford."
"What was the name of the story?"
"Her Mistake."
"Her Mistake? My gracious, Molly, how could you have tried to write a story of British society without ever having visited England?"

"I didn't."
"And the scene between the duke and Lady Tatterton—it is ridiculous."
"There is no such scene in my novel."
"I shall stand by my guns. Your hero Auchincloss is a prig. I'll never give in on that."
"Auchincloss? He isn't my hero. My hero is Roy Courtenay. I drew him from you."
"There's no such man in 'His Mistake.'"
"Her Mistake."
"I'm talking of 'His Mistake.'"
"My story was 'Her Mistake.'"
"I begin to see it all. You are barking up one tree, I another. Isn't it funny that this muddle should make a pun? We've both made a mistake. Kiss me, darling. I'll get at your book on Monday. But I warn you that if you've made me your hero you've struck a snag."
"I haven't any such thing. I've got a noble, good, true"
He stopped the rest with kisses.

RAIN ON THE ROOF.

WHEN the humid shadows hover
Over all the shaggy spheres
And the melancholy darkness
Gently weeps in rainy tears
What a bliss to press the pillow
Of a cottage chambered bed
And to listen to the patter
Of the soft rain overhead!

Every tinkle on the shingles
Has an echo in the heart,
And a thousand dreamy fancies
Into busy being start,
And a thousand recollections
Weave their air threads into woe
As I listen to the patter
Of the rain upon the roof.

Now in memory comes my mother,
As she used in years ago,
To regard the darling dreamers
Ere she left them till the dawn.
So I see her leaning o'er me
As I list to this refrain
Which is played upon the shingles
By the patter of the rain.

Then my little seraph sister
With the wings and waving hair
And her star-eyed cherub brother—
A serene, angelic pair—
Glide around my wakeful pillow,
With their pulse or mild reproof,
As I listen to the murmur
Of the soft rain on the roof.

And another comes to thrill me
With her eyes' delicious blue,
And I mind not, musing on her,
That her heart was all untrue.
I remember but to love her
With a passion kin to pain,
And my heart's quick pulses vibrate
To the patter of the rain.

Art hath naught of tone or cadence
That can work with such a spell
In the soul's mysterious fountains,
Whence the tears of rapture well,
As that melody of nature,
That subdued, subdued strain
Which is played upon the shingles
By the patter of the rain.
—Coates Kinney

CARVING A NAME.

I WROTE my name upon the sand
And trusted it would stand for aye,
But soon, alas, the recedent sea
Had washed my feeble lines away!

I CARVED my name upon the wood
And after years returned again,
I missed the shadow of the tree
That stretched of old upon the plain.

TO solid marble next my name
I gave as a perpetual trust,
An earthquake rent it to its base,
And now it lays o'erlaid with dust.

ALL these have failed. In wiser mood
I turn and ask myself, "What then?"
If I would have my name endure
I'll write it on the hearts of men.

IN characters of living light,
Of kindly deeds and actions wrought,
And these, beyond the touch of time,
Shall live immortal as my thought.
—Horatio Alger.

HYMN TO FORCE.

Down through the ether I hurl constellations,
Up through their earth bed I wake the carnations,
I laugh in the flame as I kindle and fan it,
I crawl in the worm, I leap in the planet,
Forth from its cradle I pilot the river,
In lightning and earthquake I flash and I quiver,
I am the monarch uniting all matter,
The atoms I gather; the atoms I scatter,
I always am present, yet nothing can bind me,
Like thought evanescent, they lose me who find me.
—Pushkin.

CONSCIOUSNESS.

THOU whose face hath felt the winter's wind,
Whose eye has seen the snow clouds hung in mist
And the black elm tops 'mong the freezing stars,
To thee the spring will be in harvest time!
O thou whose only book has been the light
Of supreme darkness which thou feddest on
Night after night when Phoebus was away,
To thee the spring shall be a triple morn!
Oh, fret not after knowledge! I have none,
And yet my song comes native with the warmth
Oh, fret not after knowledge! I have none,
And yet the evening listens. He who sardens
At thought of idleness cannot be idle,
And he's awake who thinks himself asleep.
—John Keats.

TELEPATHY.

AND how could you dream of meeting
—ing?
Nay, how can you ask me, sweet?
All day my pulse has been beating
The time of your coming feet.

AND as nearer and ever nearer
I felt the throbs of your tread
To be in the world grew dearer,
And my blood ran rosier red.

LOVE called, and I could not linger,
But sought the forbidden tryst,
As music follows the singer
Of the dreaming lutanist.

AND, though you had said it and said it—
"We must not be happy today!"
—Was I not wiser to credit
The fire in my feet than your nay?
—James Russell Lowell.

THE OBATION.

Ask nothing more of me, sweet,
All I can give you I give.
Heart of my heart, were it more
More should be laid at your feet,
Love that should help you to live,
Song that should spur you to soar.

All things were nothing to give
Once to have sense of you more,
Touch you and taste of you,
Sweet,
Think you and breathe you and live,
Swept of your wings as they soar,
Trod by the chance of your feet.

I that have love and no more
Give you but love of you, sweet,
He that hath more, let him give.
He that hath wings, let him soar.
Mine is the heart at your feet,
Here, that must love you to live.
—Algeron Charles Swinburne.

French Whiskers.

The full and sumptuous beard which was once the pride and joy of every well oiled Parisian is fast disappearing. Not so long ago the streets of Paris teemed with rotund figures carrying black portfolios under their arms and screened by a curtain of curly hair which whisked gayly in the breeze. Red bronze was the favorite color, either natural or bottled, as the case might be. In moments of agitation or perplexity the beard offered great possibilities to its harassed owner, who seemed to derive inspiration from its constant manipulation.

I remember once, when I was living with a French family on the other side of the Seine, I was attacked by influenza. Madame insisted upon my calling in her doctor. He was a very small man with a very large beard. After listening to the story of my life he proceeded to examine my lungs. I was about a foot taller than he was, so he was obliged to stand on tiptoe to perform the rite. As he glued his ear to my chest his beard seemed to annoy him, for he suddenly gathered it up in one hand and flung it over my shoulder. The action so astonished me that I entirely forgot to wheeze, thereby depriving him of one of my most interesting symptoms.—Exchange.

The Last Hope.

When Lemuel Gregg died a cousin from a distant town appeared, saying he had come to settle the estate and take the residue as Lemuel's only kinsman. He had a jaunty air at first, but at the end of a week he had acquired a watchful and anxious expression. When he stepped into the office of Lawyer Mears on Saturday afternoon he seemed to be extremely nervous.

"Well, how are you coming out?" asked the lawyer. "I suppose it's all clear sailing, isn't it?"

"Clear sailing!" echoed the executor. "Do you suppose I'd be here with a fee to pay if 'twas clear sailing? I'm desperate, I tell you!"

"Isn't that a thing left of Cousin Lem's estate except a two dollar bill and three pewter plates. I want to know if there's any way that I can oblige the town to accept those plates for the tax bill it sprung up on me after I thought I'd got everything paid? If there is I'll give you a dollar and use the other half of that two dollar bill to get back where I came from this very night."—Youth's Companion.

Spruce Trees Nursed by Pines.

A singular fact with regard to the relations of different species of trees has been brought out by the reforestation of the peninsula of Jutland, Denmark. It was observed that when planted alone spruce trees did not prosper, but that if a spruce was planted near a mountain pine it grew up vigorously. Further experiment has shown that if the pines are placed near the spruces at the beginning and after being allowed to grow together with them for a few years are cut down the benefit to the spruce continues. The phenomenon is not understood, says Professor J. W. Harshberger, but it is supposed that the roots of the mountain pine are inhabited by some mycorrhiza which produces the nitrogen needed by the trees and that this organism is transferred to the roots of the surrounding spruce. Once the infection has taken place the presence of the pine is no longer necessary.

Old Time London Sundays.

Now and then one hears Londoners complaining that their Sunday is too dull. They want more amusements, attractions, life. But had they lived in the seventeenth century they would have found a vast difference. At that period a Sunday in London was a day of trials. One had only to fetch or carry to break the Sabbath. Men were fined for carrying such things as a bunch of venison and a pair of shoes, while another individual had to pay up for swearing on a Sunday. A duke and a knight were fined again and again for riding in their carriages on the first day of the week, and one unfortunate pedestrian had to pay a sovereign because he was caught in the act of strolling from Bristol to Bath on a Sunday.—Pearson's Weekly.

Waterfalls in Japan.

Waterfalls in Japan are almost countless. There is one at every turn, and where there was not one in the beginning the Japs have made one, for it is their passion. Every little garden has a fall or two or it would not be considered a garden. There are many very beautiful ones in various parts of the country, and they are all of them shrines visited by thousands of pilgrims every year.

The Best You Have.

Always give of the best that is in you. Feel responsibility toward yourself and your work. Never be content with a compromise with work. Give an employer the best that you have in you to give.—Belvedere Brooks.

Mean Reply.

"Talk about man!" exclaimed the sufragist. "What has man ever done for woman?"
"He's furnished her with a model she's trying darned hard to imitate," came a voice from the rear of the hall.—Boston Transcript.

Remorse.

A chemist had made a mistake in his weights and poisoned a customer. When the fatal findings were brought to him he exclaimed, "Wretch that I am—and my best customer too!"
It is the rule of rules and the general law of all laws that every person should observe those of the place where he is.—Montaigne.

WASTE IN APPLE POMACE.

Hand Presses in Ordinary Use Don't Get Out Half the Sugar.

"Johnny, come along. You've been so bad I'm going to lock you up in the cellar."

"Why, ma, you wouldn't have any bad apples down cellar, would you?"
"Certainly not."
"Only good apples go down cellar, don't they?"
"Of course."

"Is it the good apples or the good cellar that makes the bad boy good?"

Here ma's patience became exhausted and Johnny was not only hustled down to darkness, but he got something that kept him warm down there for a long time.

All of which leads up to the point that an apple cellar should be the tidiest and sweetest corner of the house.

Nothing else should ever be stored in it. Its walls should at least be twenty inches thick, and it should have abundant windows to be kept open all summer to draft of air and kept entirely free of any decay. There should be no moldy boards nor any smell of mildew; in other words, the air should be fit to breathe.

When the apples are stored the draft should be stopped, and when steady cold sets in you should shut the cellar tight, and let it stay closed until May. You can place such a cellar as this conveniently under part of your barn, possibly, or under your carriage house, only there should be no stable adjacent. The floor overhead should be covered with autumn leaves, spread thickly.

The thermometer all winter should stand at about 33—just above freezing. Put your apples in shallow bins; ce ment to the floor to keep out rats, and if barrels are used set them up some what from the floor.

Of course every apple grown on the farm will not be worth putting down cellar, but the lower qualities are worth going into cider if they could be so thoroughly pressed as to extract all the sugar instead of leaving a big proportion of it in the pomace.

"Three pounds of sugar to a bushel of apples is a high result with the ordinary hand mills. But with an eighty ton hydraulic press I have been able to recover four gallons of juice from fifty pounds of fruit, double the quantity I could recover with the hand mills, and yet I left in the pulp about 12 per cent of the juice," says Professor W. B. Alwood of the United States department of agriculture.

"Practically 25 per cent of the total weight of apples went out in pomace, or from 4 to 8 per cent of the sugar. With the best power mills under a most efficient working system it is certain that practically 5 per cent of sugar is thrown out in the pomace.

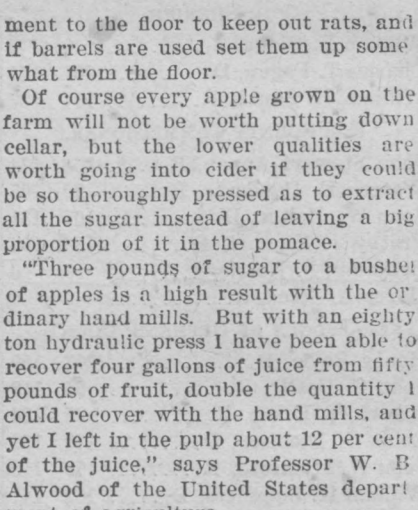

"There are something like 5,000,000 bushels of apples worked up every crop year in New York state alone for byproducts. If we assume that 25 per cent of this fruit will be left as pomace we will have about 60,000,000 pounds of pomace, which will contain 3,000,000 pounds of sugar, or 1,500 tons. Data collected for 1909 indicate that this quantity of pomace is produced and that 5 per cent of this pomace is sugar.

"I am not able to tell how much of this pomace is wholly or partially lost, nor can I tell precisely how to recover all the sugar it contains, as this investigation has just been begun, but I want to emphasize this idea, that this 1,500 tons of sugar, if recovered, would make 3,000,000 gallons of vinegar, which would go a long way toward paying the expense of managing the orchard. One of the largest manufacturers of vinegar in the state told me recently that he expected pure cider vinegar to go to 30 cents wholesale in the next two years.

"In regard to the large amount of sugar that goes out in the pomace as waste, I have never yet seen a manufacturer or a farmer who handled the pomace so as to recover nearly all the sugar left in it. Thousands of tons of pomace are thrown out without the slightest attempt being made to recover the sugar. Some people put it back on the soil, but it ought not to be put on the soil at all until well rotted.

"It has been well established that it can be successfully used for cattle food. In France and England it is fed very successfully. Vermont and Massachusetts experiment stations have also experimented with it and for several years have been feeding it successfully to milk cows."

IMPROVE THE STATE FAIR.

Scope Can Be Enlarged and Great Influences Increased.
State fair entrances are the wide open doors of splendid opportunity. Beyond these magnetic thresholds under roof and sky is assembled a bewildering maze of useful things grown and manufactured by the conquering hand of man. And thousands of expectant folk enter therein, shorn of the worries and troubles of everyday life at home, says the Breeders' Gazette.
With a sharpened curiosity, a fickle mood of alternating levity and gravity, an unstudied resolve to learn and enjoy, an instinctive exercise of all the senses, they talk, listen, wonder and tarry. This is the fine work of effective rest, a renewal of emotions, the birth of ideas, the seeding of thought.
Much depends on the quality and condition of the seed bed which the visitant exposes to the broadcasting sower. State fairs, with all their facilities for scattering, fertilizing and covering, cannot bring forth a crop where there is no hospitable soil. Water runs off the oily sheen of a duck's back; a dull mind never cuts into the milk of the coconut.
A thousand valuable gifts are showered upon him, but if his mind is not studded with upturned hooks all slip off.
Some eager, vital people go home from a fair pleasantly burdened with the gist of its message; others return without even a lasting impression. Such unfortunates remind one of the dusty old professor whose depth of penetration had charmed one of his students and disgusted another. Said the first: "He can go down deeper into the wells of philosophy and"—here the second interrupted, saying, "and come up drier than any man I have ever known." At state fairs everybody fairly tumbles into the clear, fresh wells of opportunity, but only a small percentage emerge with a thorough saturation.
We are compelled to deal with things as we find them, but we have no right to leave them unimproved. Our good old forefathers have vouchsafed to us various useful and beautiful works. Many are well grown and strong; others are young, wobbly and weak, depending on us for their development into a larger and nobler stature. Among our prized inheritances are state fairs. Of these some are well advanced toward a maturity that accords with the spirit and temper of these wondrous times; others have been underfed, until they are dwarfed in parts and overgrown in others.

Criticism is of value even when it amounts to monotonous flay picking, but it is far more acceptable when accompanied by a constructive program containing practical ideas and workable suggestions. All man made institutions are more or less imperfect. Granted that our state fairs are not what thoughtful men would have them be, what are their proposals for improvement? How may their scope be enlarged and their influence vitalized? What is the most important business of a state fair? What is or should be the demand of the farmer upon it? Are not many of the recent economic developments in agriculture ignored or at the best only meagerly recognized by the fairs? Are there not many opportunities for distinctive educational services to which little or no attention is given? Is it not time to brush away the trash and chaff which weaken or cover up the useful, nutritious grain that lies in the primary object of a state fair and to concentrate its energies in a steady, persistent effort to make it irresistibly and comprehensively instructive to farmers and breeders? Henceforth why should not an agricultural state fair be strictly agricultural, true to name and technical object, dignified in its conduct, devoid of spectacular honeycombs and the rubbish of contaminating concessionaires, standing solidly upon the rock of our basal industry, its hammer striking the one red hot iron of educational purpose?

Water Your Plants Well.
Keep potted plants well watered. Many persons will pour a little water on a plant, enough to soak an inch or two, and wonder that the plants do not grow. The trouble is that the growing part of the plant receives no nourishment. Plants should be watered every day, and in such a way that the roots get plenty of moisture. The soil should be rich.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county.

THE lively interest in things political evidenced by the people of this district in Tuesday's election when 88 per cent. of the registered vote was cast, is significant of the fact that the citizens of Emmitsburg realize the importance of their suffrage privilege.

The affairs of Frederick county, on account of this watchfulness on the part of the people, will be conducted in a manner to meet with their approval and not to please any one man.

THERE is at the Naval Academy at least one man who looks like he might make a creditable officer. His roommate, a physically slight man, was hazed by an older student.

TO THE GOOD PEOPLE OF EMMITSBURG DISTRICT.

To you, my loyal friends of both parties, permit me to express my sincere and heartfelt appreciation of the magnificent majority you gave me on Election Day.

To hold the respect and the regard of those with whom one mingles day by day is indeed something to cherish. I regard it as more than a passing compliment; I accept it most gratefully as a gracious token of your esteem.

For the support given me by each one of you I extend my warmest thanks, and for you all, let me say, that there shall ever remain in my heart a very tender feeling.

Most cordially and appreciatively yours,

Handwritten signature: Sterling Galt

TO THE VOTERS OF FREDERICK COUNTY WHO SUPPORTED ME.

A public and personal acknowledgment of the splendid support given me during the recent campaign and at the polls on Tuesday is due to each and every one of you.

To very many of you—to the majority of you, in fact—I was unknown when the campaign began. Now I am honored in having the privilege of calling you friends.

The victory is yours and I am proud to have fought shoulder to shoulder with you. But prouder and happier by far am I that I can look you in the face with the feeling that you are confident that I fought hard and in the open for a principle in which we together stood on common ground.

Accept, then, these meagre expressions of gratitude and believe me,

Very sincerely,

SENATOR LEE.

State Senator Blair Lee is unquestionably the biggest political factor in Maryland to-day. He is a power to be reckoned with—a power for good that will be felt not only in the Legislature, but when, four years hence, he is governor of this commonwealth.

As a fighter Senator Lee has no peer for manliness and bravery, and no loser has ever shown a better spirit or set a better example than this clean, straightforward, broad-minded man from Montgomery.

With all the energy and sincerity of purpose that was his, when vanquished by a margin of one vote, rallied to the support of him who received the nomination and plead the cause of the victor to the very last.

He, himself, has emerged from both contests unscathed, and in the eyes of the people of the State he has served so well the name of Senator Lee looms large upon the screen which veils the future of Maryland's political destiny.

CONGRATULATIONS, Mr. Goldsborough! The people evidently wanted you, else they would have withheld their votes. The responsibilities that rest upon you, Mr. Goldsborough, are great. May you be able to shoulder them and may Maryland under your administration still be prosperous and progressive.

Paltering With the Eternal Verities.

The uncle from the west took his little Boston nephew on his knee. "Wadsworth," he said, "once there was a man."

Love and a Ring.

The story of one woman's pride and devotion comes out of a jeweler's shop. A young man bought an engagement ring. Apparently he was an impetuous young man. At any rate, he ordered an imperfect diamond.

Stammering.

Stammering is due to a peculiarly nervous temperament, and only very sympathetic treatment can effect a cure. Stammering in a child should receive immediate attention.

The Popular Ten Spot.

Perhaps the average reader would find it difficult if not impossible to state offhand the denomination of the notes which represent a larger proportion of our currency circulation than any other.

A Heat Phenomenon.

A workman in the observatory at Toulouse has invited attention to a singular phenomenon. A bar of iron is taken by one end and the other end is plunged into a fire, heating it highly, but not so much that the hand cannot retain its hold.

Management.

"I don't see, Ella, how you manage with your housekeeping money. If I give you a lot you spend a lot, but if I don't give you so much you seem to get along with it."

Women on the Stage.

The earliest mention of actresses was in 1611, when Coryat in his "Crudities" gave this description of a production at the Theater of Venice, Italy:

The Horizon.

"How clear the horizon is!" remarked a young lady.

There is a restlessness in inactivity: we must find occupation for kings.

Changes in Word Meanings.

Many common words have once had a meaning very different from the one we now give them. "Silly" once meant blessed. "Thou silly babe," the poet writes. "Fond" meant foolish.

The Three Pigs.

There were three pigs in a poke. The overcrowding was scandalous. Each accounted for the evil in a different manner.

Dueling.

It is generally agreed that dueling took its rise from the judicial combats of the Celtic nations. The first formal duel in England was that between William Count of Eu and Godfrey Baynard about the year 1096.

An Aged Iceberg.

"When I was in the arctic," once said General A. W. Greely, "I found an aged floe berg in which the yearly stratifications of growth could be traced with great accuracy."

A Berlin Rough House.

There is, or was, in Berlin a certain cafe where rudeness is the keynote of the waiting staff. Every patron who enters the restaurant is hustled roughly into a seat, abruptly interrogated as to his wants and finally has to submit to seeing his food thrust before him with as little ceremony as one might show to a stray dog.

The Cause of It.

"What's all this fuss about?" asked the policeman, stepping between the two young men.

Had a Return Ticket Perhaps.

"Been abroad, have you, Ruggles?" "Yep; six months."

Two Ambitions.

"My ambition is to earn $5,000 a year."

Ready to Do Her Part.

Mother—May, that young man of yours is too forward. He must be sat upon. May—Leave that to me, mother. I'll see that he is.

As much of heaven is visible as we have eyes to see.—William Winter.

A Theory and a Fact.

The late Senator Frye attributed his robust health to correct habits and fondness for sport and the world outdoors. Two months each year he enjoyed at his camp by the Rangeley lakes the keen delights of the rod and gun.

A Great Spectacle.

"In the Andes, half a thousand feet higher than Pike's peak, is to be found the Peruvian Garden of the Gods, admired by every traveler fortunate enough to visit it," writes William V. Alford, F. R. G. S., in the Century.

New York's Famous Library.

The New York Public Library is the most complete institution of the kind in the world. Besides the usual circulating library and children's library there are: Lecture room and classroom of the library school, exhibition room, eighty feet square, for the display of bibliographical treasures.

Capitals We Have Had.

It is asserted sometimes that the United States has had five capitals, but the statement is not correct. The United States has had but three capitals—New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

Shocked the Parisian.

"We came through with flying colors," boasted the middle aged man who had returned from his first visit to Europe. "About the only serious mistake of the trip was made by my wife. She drove the clerk in a Paris shop to indignation and despair by inadvertently asking if the dress trimmings she was looking at were imported. The girl nearly took her head off. 'Imported?' she said. 'Where from?'"

Knew His Business.

Willie—Say, pa, you ought to see the men across the street raise a building on jacks. Pa (absently)—Impossible. Willie, you can open on jacks, but a man is a fool to try to raise on them—I mean it must have been quite a sight.—Puck.

Not Always.

"They say that a girl who acts three times as a bridesmaid will never be a bride."

Going Down.

Jones (as the launch capsizes)—I—I wish I had been a better man. Brown (with a gurgle)—I wish I had been a better swimmer.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Success.

"What is the key to success?" "The ability to make people pay." "Pay for what they get?" "No; pay for what you tell them they are getting."

SNAPSHOTS OF LA MODE.

The Modish Waist Measure—Charming Brocade Ribbons.

According to feminine statistics, the waist measure is more normal at the present day than at any time since women have worn corsets. When one quotes a waist measure of twenty-six or twenty-eight inches the lissom corsetiere no longer raises her brows in that cultivated sort of covert dismay that she was prone to assume, and when the general improvement in the health and comfort of the "weaker" sex is taken into consideration it is to be wondered at that the corsetieres have not sooner come to the conclusion that the women of today do not want thirteen inch Catherine de' Medici suicidal waists.

Imported ribbons in satin and velvet brocades are to be seen on many of the smart autumn hats.

Silks, and especially silk velvets, are in the highest favor, and three silk frocks are seen now where before two were shirt waists and suit skirts.

The close fitting petticoat of moderate width is a necessity beneath the fashionable gown. This one can be made perfectly plain, without any fullness over the hips, or with gathers and inverted plaits at the back, as liked. The petticoat is in five gores. When the yoke is used the gores are cut off and joined to its lower edge.

FRIBBLES OF FASHION.

Vagaries of the Separate Blouse—The Modish Elastic Belt.

The separate blouse appears in many forms, combining chiffon, silk and lace, but quite the newest is the blouse of tucked white marquisette, with side revers and cuffs of royal blue velvet.

It is a matter of choice whether the modish girl selects a belt of beaded elastic or plaited silk of a cord girdle to finish her new separate blouse, but the hand bag must match in color.

Plaited silk belts covered with chiffon in all the colors on the modish card represent a fall fancy.

The ostrich feather collaret makes its appearance this season with tasseled ends of chenille in matching tone. In dull gray and Alice blue these scarfs are exceedingly pretty.

An effective color scheme appears in a blouse or bronze green chiffon over brown satin, the chiffon being em-

Good Elderberry Wine

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.

One summer's day in the long ago, when you could meet a lightning rod outfit at every five miles on the highway, one of the craft drove into the town of Plainfield. In showing off his fine horses he ran over a hog, and the hog limped squealing away. It was nothing to make a fuss over, and none would have been made if the hog hadn't belonged to Elder Carpenter.

The elder was a solemn, severe man. He happened to be passing at the time the animal was run over, and he caught a laugh and an oath from the lips of the man of lightning. What does he do but go before a justice and swear out a warrant for malicious injury to a hog. An arrest and trial followed. Of course the lightning rod man testified on his own behalf that no malice existed. He and the elder's hog had never met before. He was driving up to the hotel in a fancy way to show off before the loafers sitting on the veranda, and the hog was unseen until too late.

At the conclusion of the trial the lightning rod man told the elder and about forty others what he thought of them, their town and their fathers and mothers before them, and there was a fight, in which he got badly banged up and driven out of town. Of course he wanted to get even. You must know that there is a fellow feeling between men who are skinning the public, and it was quite natural that the elder's victim should select a tin peddler as his instrument for carrying out his plan.

A shallow river runs through Plainfield. At that time its banks were lined for a mile up and down with elderberry bushes. Toward the last of August the clusters of berries were a sight to see. One could gather a wagonload in half a day. One day a tin peddler stopped to gather a couple of bushels. In answer to inquiries he stated that he was going to make elderberry wine after a recipe brought from China by a missionary. Your mother, if she lived in the country, used to make wine of these berries, but only in limited quantity. It isn't the beverage to make one enthuse. There was considerable talk about the tin peddler and his Chinese recipe, and an excitement followed. He returned to Plainfield with a twenty gallon keg of new wine, and wanted to form a syndicate for gathering the berries and making the wine. He had with him a letter purporting to come from a large wine house and offering him $8 a gallon for all the elderberry wine he could ship.

Six hundred dollars was the cash capital wanted for a press and building and to pay for the gathering. The dividends for the season would be 100 per cent. There was no hayseed in the hair of the population of Plainfield. The peddler's talk sounded all right, but the people said he must show them before they invested. That was why that twenty gallon keg was placed on the tavern veranda, and the public asked to help themselves. Elder Carpenter was a temperance man right down to refusing ginger beer, but he saw no hurt in manufacturing a good brand of elderberry wine and selling it for medicinal purposes.

It was three hours before the keg was empty, and by that time it was the universal verdict that the peddler was a "goo' fer'r" and that the town stood ready to invest not $600, but $600,000,000 in his enterprise. They would buy 6,000 presses. They would gather 60,000 loads of berries. It was in the midst of the greatest good feeling and general hilarity that the town blacksmith said that Elder Carpenter was a hog himself for making the lightning rod man trouble over the other hog. The elder promptly replied that the smith was a born liar and started the row. The peddler made for the tavern bar and hid away, but his example was not followed. Every man got the idea that it was his duty to wade into some other man, and for an hour there was fighting up and down the streets. Fathers whanged away at sons, and brother punched brother. The three local ministers butted in as peacemakers and were early left stranded in the dust.

There were a few men in the town who did not get black eyes and bloody noses and lumpy heads, but they were the old men who had had their fun in other days and were now willing to let the younger generation go in and whoop'er up. It was these old men who assisted the women when it came to poultices and bandages and to wheeling home those who could not walk.

Only two men knew what was in that keg, and they never told. It may have been Chinese elderberry wine according to missionary recipe, or it may have been a mixture of whisky, brandy, gin, wine and drugs. At any rate, the "feeling" lasted two whole days, and there were fights almost daily for the next fortnight. It was a month later that the lightning rod man came driving up to the tavern again. This time he ran over two hogs instead of one. Elder Carpenter was passing again, but he did not stop or turn. He simply uttered an "um" and held his way. There was the usual crowd on the veranda, but they crossed their legs, spat their tobacco juice over the railing and were numb. The town had been struck by lightning and didn't want any more of it. It didn't even want the empty keg the peddler had left behind him in his flight.

Forest Patrol for Frederick County.

The State Forester, in cooperation with the United States Forest Service, has established a forest patrol in Allegany, Frederick, Garrett and Washington Counties.

In Frederick County the Forest Patrolman, Mr. F. H. The Forest Patrolman will be mounted and constantly on the move over his district, during the dry season and on the lookout for forest fires and violations of the Forest Laws. He has been instructed to cooperate with landowners throughout his district who desire to have their woodlands protected from fire, and who are in sympathy with a strict enforcement of the Forest Laws. All woodland owners should keep in close touch with the Forest Patrolman and the local forest Wardens to secure prompt assistance in case of fire.

Many Cattle Quarantined.

The prevalence of Texas fever among the cattle in the Southern States caused Secretary Wilson to issue an order quarantining cattle in fourteen States in a strip stretching from North Carolina to California. The fever has been spreading East ever since early Summer, and the Department of Agriculture has decided that strong measures must be taken to stop it.

From the States named cattle can be shipped only for immediate slaughter after a certificate of health has been issued in each case. The fourteen States are California, Oklahoma, Texas, Missouri, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

Former Emmitsburgian whose Head Was Turned by Inherited Money Dies of Overdose of Morphine.

Armour Employes To Get Pensions.

Armour and Co., the big packing concern of Chicago, has followed the example set by a number of this country's railroad and other big corporations in the last ten years, and has started a pension plan for the benefit of 55,000 employes.

The company itself has set aside $1,000,000 to start the pension fund. The 55,000 employes will pay 3 per cent. of their salaries annually into the fund, and will receive 2 per cent. of their salaries at the time of their retirement for each year they have served. Employees, for example, who have served the company twenty-five years will receive an annual income equal to 50 per cent. of their salary at the time of their retirement. Employees who have served the company for twenty years will receive an annual income of 40 per cent. of their salary at the time of retirement.

The Worm Turned At Last.

An upper classman was badly beaten Monday night by a freshman in the Naval Academy because he had hazed the latter's roommate, a much smaller man. The incident occurred in Bancroft Hall. It is not certain that the authorities have details, but there is every reason to believe they have, as the upper classmen was so badly whipped he had to go to the dispensary to be patched up. The hazing corroborates the stories of a revival of hazing in the academy, which have been plentiful lately. Midshipmen say the long-continued physical exercises which formed the chief portion of hazing some years ago are again in full force. Up to this time investigations by the authorities have disclosed only light hazing, known as "running."

GRAND JURY READY TO LOOK INTO PRESTON'S ELECTION

Judge Duffy Signs Order For Light on Mayorality Election in Baltimore in Tainted Precincts.

With the signing by Judge Duffy of the Baltimore Criminal court yesterday of an order granting the Grand Jury permission to examine the contents of certain boxes used in the municipal primary and general elections held last Spring, Mayor Preston's election came under the spot light of the Grand Jury.

Mayor Preston's official majority as finally determined by the canvass of the returns made by the Election Supervisors on May 5 was 699 votes over Ex-Mayor E. Clay Timanus. Under the Grand Jury's recount of the votes cast in the last primary the majority of J. Albert Hughes for Sheriff was reduced by about 700 votes.

The discrepancies in the Hughes figures were found almost entirely in the boxes used in the same precincts of which the boxes used in the Mayorality election will be examined under the order passed yesterday by Judge Duffy.

NEGRO WHO KILED MILLER GUILTY IN FIRST DEGREE

Former Proprietor of Hotel in Gettysburg Murdered in Harrisburg.—Case Occupied a Week in Trial.

Leonidas W. Gilbert, the Negro waiter indicted for the murder of his employer, Daniel K. Miller, proprietor of the Hotel Dauphin, Harrisburg, on June 27, 1911, was placed on trial last week, before Judge McCarrell and the trial of the case occupied the greater part of the week before a verdict was reached. Harry Miller, brother of the murdered man, was in court all the time seated near the district attorney.

The jury was out four hours and took eight ballots, several jurors holding out for second degree murder, but all finally voting for guilty of murder in the first degree.

Women Ready in Los Angeles.

It is conservatively estimated there are 62,000 women registered in the city of Los Angeles. Returns broke all records when 12,819 affidavits were taken to the county Courthouse.

A large proportion of the women voters in their declaration of party affiliations have announced themselves Socialists; the Socialists, in fact, are claiming that their male vote at the primary would be matched vote for vote by the new members of the party.

The fact that the Socialists and their allies are registering their women by the hundreds has led to steps being taken by the leaders of the opposition to register women in the fashionable residential districts, but so far that move has not been productive of results. The fashionable women either refuse to register, or if they register, openly state they will not vote.

Ex-Congressman in Fraud Charge.

Ex-Congressman Harry M. Coudrey of St. Louis, was arrested Saturday in New York by Agents Pignuolo and Pullin of the Department of Justice on the charge of having used the mails to defraud. He has been for some weeks in the city, and instructions came from Washington to look out for him. He was staying at the Hotel Pierpont, and, according to the Federal officials, had been interesting himself in some get-rich-quick schemes there. The agents were on their way to their office when they recognized the ex-Congressman from the description supplied them, outside a cafe at Beekman Street and Broadway. When he was arrested he agreed to proceed immediately to St. Louis without waiting for extradition proceedings or even arraignment.

THE DEAD SOLDIER

A Pathetic Incident of the Battle of Antietam.

On Wednesday, Sept. 17, 1862, when the famous charge was made at Burnside Bridge, on the afternoon of that memorable day, a Union soldier received a sabre cut across the forehead whilst standing under a large oak tree in what is now Mr. Osceola Burtner's field, just below Burnside's Bridge, along the road leading to the mountain.

At the root of a monstrous riven oak, Pallid and mute, alone he lay, Wounded by a shell or sabre cut— He had the strength to crawl away.

A wealth of auburn hair was curled Around that mother's snowy brow Like golden sunset's glories furled, Or beams that brighten o'er him now; And with a smile so rare and sweet, So touching in its artless grace, We lingered long with weary feet, For angels seemed to guard the place.

With gentle touch we raised his head, Still ruddy with his clotted gore, And laid him in his narrow bed, A shallow grave—we could do no more; All bruised and bleeding from the strife Whose smoky pall still hung above, And all our hearts with sadness rife, And tender dreams of home and love.

Just as we found him, so he lies, The picture in his cold dead hand, His face upturned toward the skies, With stars and stripes of our dear land; For that flag's sake, he laid him down. In the bright spring of manhood's prime, Gone up to reap the eternal crown, And blessings through all coming time.

Unmarked his grave, we know him not, No line by which his name to tell; A private—all too soon forgot, Who for his country battled well; Perhaps a mother's fondest pride, Her only hope in years to come, And we can say, he nobly died, To those with anguish stricken dumb.

Along Antietam's winding stream, There fell the bravest of the brave, Near Burnside Bridge, its waters gleam This honored soldier found his grave, He fell as he would wish to fall, Where foeman's fiercest slogans rung The battle smoke his only pall, With Victory on his silent tongue, —Sharpsburg, Md., October 2nd, 1911.

Suggestions For Local Organization of Women's Suffrage Clubs.

Organization for women's suffrage along the lines of the wards of a city, or the congressional districts of a state, —in other words, the utilization of the same machinery which works in politics and under which we live,—seems the most practical method to interest women in the conditions immediately around them, and to familiarize them, as future citizens, with local politics.

No elaborate scheme of organization should be forced during this formative period. It is enough for women to get together, to feel their responsibilities, their potential influence and their present helplessness, and, when their connection with the body politic becomes organic, there will be time to think of further organization, although a flexible connection with the parent club has a practical value.

HERE'S A RACING ROOSTER.

Little Driver's Father, L. O. Bonham, Says Light Brahmas Are Best. "This picture will show you the kind of chickens we raise in Texas. Note the comparative size of the team and the driver, Joshua Bonham, and Peet, the rooster."

That is what F. O. Bonham of Johnson county, Tex., wrote when he sent the picture shown here to the Rural New Yorker. The bird is nearly as large as the baby. Many farmers shake their heads at Light Brahmas because they think such great fowls eat too much for what they give back. Mr. Bonham was asked to say why he thinks the Brahmas are best, and this is his answer:

How many study the surrounding conditions when selecting a breed of chickens? We have been growing the Light Brahmas for the past eleven years, and this is the reason why. Our chickens have the range of the orchard, berry patch, garden and vineyard, and to control them it is only necessary to have a portable two foot wire net fence, to move from place to place as necessary, and while they are good hustlers they are not wild rangers. Some say they are too large, but when we go to market and one of them will bring as much as two of many other breeds you cannot object to that. If you put the eggs on the scales you will find that they laid as many pounds of eggs as the best, and they do most of their laying in the winter and spring, when eggs are a good price. They are the hardest chickens we have ever had, and they are just as fine at the table as any. They are the first friers at the market in the spring; that is, if you have an incubator or some other hen to do the hatching, as they will not set until late in the spring, but will continue laying, and after all when you go to the show you will hear more comments of the Brahmas than any other breed; that is, from people that are not interested in special breeds.

CIDER NEEDS NO CHEMICALS

Careful Heating, Sterilizing and Corking All Is Necessary.

The keeping sweet of cider and other fruit juices without resorting to the use of chemicals is a simple process, and can be done by any one who understands canning fruit.

The cider is heated as soon as extracted to a temperature of about 200 degrees, or until it begins to simmer, but does not boil. It may be put into bottles or jars and sealed at once, but a much better way is to allow it to stand for twenty-four hours and pour off and filter through a flannel cloth, then reheat to the same temperature and seal.

When the juice or cider is put into the bottles which should be sterilized by rinsing out with boiling water, the corks should be put in and the stopper sealed with sealing wax or paraffin. It will keep indefinitely, and may be put to a great variety of uses.

Blood Meal Not Popular. Few dairymen feed dried blood to their milk cows. Sensitive persons revolt against the idea of feeding blood meal. And yet it contains nearly twice as much protein as cottonseed meal or oil meal and is just about as effective as a milk producer.

It has been more customary to use blood meal as a hog feed than as a feed for cattle. It comes as a by-product from the packing house and when fed to hogs is mixed with corn. It has been shown by station tests that cottonseed meal is somewhat cheaper as a milk producer than blood meal.

SOFT SNAPS NOT NUMEROUS.

There are no soft snaps about farm life or any other kind of life if a man wants to win. And the man who sets out to find any such thing will come out worse than he went in and make a miserable failure of living. Business is business on the farm as well as elsewhere. And why should it not be?

Use Various Lubricants.

Where the pressure is heavy the lubricant should be thick in order to resist being squeezed out under the load. For light pressures oil should be used. Thus for a wagon heavy grease is best, while for a cream separator of high speed a thin oil is necessary in order that its viscosity will not add to the friction. Solid substances in a finely divided state such as graphite are often used to reduce friction.

TIME TO AID WOUNDED TREES

Use Cement Bandages and Preserve the Glorious Old Green Pyramids.

Late August is the time to watch your valuable old shade and fruit trees. Watch for the hollow trunk, the broken limb or the exposed wound where fungi may enter and ruin the stately old friend.

From any wound remove all the decayed wood, with a chisel and adz, to the sound, hard wood, and smooth off the edges of the cavity to allow the free growth of the inner bark.

After the cavity has been thoroughly cleaned out, disinfect it with corrosive sublimate, creosote or even paint. Creosote is better, as it penetrates farther into the wood. The cavity should now be filled with concrete, one part portland cement to two parts sand. Make it thin, so that it can be poured in at the top of the opening. When the cavity is large it is necessary to re-enforce the concrete by placing iron bars across the inside. It is also best to drive large nails part way in around the inside, and this enables the concrete to adhere better to the trunk.

As the filling shrinks considerably in large cavities the walls should be first coated with a thick layer of tar. This expands and fills the shrinkage crack, making the cavity air tight. There is now no chance for any disease to enter and get in its work.

After the filling has set a little the surface should be smoothed off even with the inner bark. In a few years the cambrium will completely cover the filling, making a good looking tree.

LITTLE TEXAN FARMERS.

School Children in Taft Work Like Bees and Grow Money Making Crops.

Here is a picture showing how in Texas they teach the young idea not how to shoot, but how to plant. In the town of Taft the school children have two acres of farm land divided into individual plots, one of which becomes for the season the absolute property of its little worker.

The children are furnished with a variety of seeds and the necessary hoe, rake and shovel and are instructed as to the best way to prepare the ground and plant the crop getters.

Then they are left to their own devices concerning watering, weeding and the other details of farm work, and the results so far have been astonishing.

LITTLE FARMERS NATION'S WEAALTH

There are prizes given for the finest vegetable specimens and for the orderly keep-up of the beds, and the children are allowed to take home or sell all the results of their industry.

Most of the prizes are in medals, but any child so wishing may have a cash equivalent. One boy cleared up $11 on his plot, but a girl beat him by $1.02.

There were 200 children in the first contest and nearly double that number this year, and Professor Moon, principal of the public schools of Taft, who started the plan, expects to have 1,000 happy, earnest little agriculturists at work next year.

This Explains It. Lady—What! Thirty-eight cents a dozen for eggs! Why, that's more than 3 cents for one egg. Grocer—Well, mum, you must remember that one egg is a whole day's work for one hen.—Exchange.

Poultry Pickings.

Poultry should be kept free from feather and skin vermin. These are most injurious to chickens and increase with amazing rapidity in summer.

Cut down the quantity of all heating foods, like corn and buckwheat. Nitrogenous foods, like wheat and oats, should be more generally fed, together with a daily supply of green food.

Avoid overcrowding your chicken coops. When too many fowls roost together they crowd, and the animal heat will cause them to sweat. This in itself has been the cause of more summer sickness than anything else we know of.

Many people hesitate to breed pure bred fowls because they are afraid that they cannot find a market for breeding stock. Those who advertise their birds find no difficulty in finding a market for good stock. Buyers are readers, and sellers must be advertisers.

Here is a cheap and simple remedy to paralyze chicken lice and mites. Make a strong brine and apply it hot. Put on the roosts and on the nest boxes and all over. Get the cheap grade of salt. Be sure to have the brine strong and hot and to get it into every crack about the henhouse.

BABIES.

BABIES short And babies tall, Don't you somehow Love them all? Babies fat And babies thin, Babies with A toothless grin, Babies with Wee teeth and white, Babies dark And babies light, Babies with Glad glistening eyes, Babies sad And full of sighs, Babies with dark Or yellow hair, Babies with their Wee polls all bare, Babies that all Beribboned go, Babies garbed In calico, Babies strong And babies weak, Babies bold And babies meek, Babies well And babies ill, Babies loud And babies still, Babies with Straight limbs and strong, Babies with limps, Somehow gone wrong—Crippled babies— Bless your soul, I have fallen In a hole: Nothing hurts One's heart so much As a baby With a crutch! Anyhow, Short babies or tall, Well or ill, I love them all —J. M. Lewis in Houston Post.

OFFICIALLY FAMOUS.

One Edgar Allan Poe— You may have heard the name— Is now allowed to go Into the Hall of Fame. For years ignored was he, But lifted is the ban, And he officially Is now a famous man. So bear in mind the same. The news is strictly so. No doubt about the fame Of Edgar Allan Poe. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

BE FAIR.

MAKE this your motto for the year: Be fair. No matter what reports you hear, Be fair. It doesn't help you up the hill To make some other's pathway hard. You can't expect by speaking ill Of men to win the world's regard. Be fair.

YOU have a chance to help along. No man is absolutely wrong. Be fair. You don't increase your merit when You cast slurs on another's worth. Why turn against your fellow men Or place one sorrow more on earth? Be fair. —Chicago Record-Herald.

LOVE A TERRIBLE THING.

I WENT out to the farthest meadow, I lay down in the deepest shadow, And I said unto the earth, "Hold me," And unto the night, "Oh, in fold me!" And I begged the little leaves to lean Low and together for a safe screen. Then to the stars I told my tale— "That is my home light there in the vale, But let me be first mid the unfeeling fern. "And, oh, I know that I shall return! But let me be first mid the unfeeling fern. "For there is a flame that has blown too near, And there is a name that has grown too dear, And there is a fear." —Chicago Record-Herald.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

When Little Girls Go Fishing

The Little Girl Comes to the Rescue

"FRANKIE GREEN'S big brother is going a-fishing tomorrow. Can't I go, too?" asked Jack as he pattered upstairs to bed.

"And can't I go along?" added Evelyn. "We don't want girls," Jack objected. "Girls can't fish anyway." "Some girls can," replied daddy. "And girls are sometimes of real use on fishing trips. For instance, there was one that I will tell you about because the little girl caught something a great deal better than fish. She caught four little boys whose boat upset and who otherwise would have been drowned.

"It was this way. Mr. Barrett, a young man not quite nineteen years of age, was going out fishing in his dory up at Winthrop, Mass. There was plenty of room, and so when several of his little friends wished to go with him he was quite willing to take them. One of the party was Muriel James, a little girl of ten.

"As they rowed out into the water they noticed a rickety skiff, in which were four little boys. The boys were eleven, ten, eight and six years of age. The skiff in which were the four boys suddenly sank, and they were thrown into the water.

"Young Mr. Barrett jumped out of his dory and swam to save the boys. He caught one little fellow and swam with him to his boat. Then he went back for the three others, but they seized him by the head so he could not swim. Mr. Barrett sank with them, but when he came up he shouted to little Muriel to row the skiff over to him. The little girl paddled over to where the young man, weighted down by the three boys, was struggling, but he sank before she could reach him. Luckily he came up quite near the boat, and, loosening the hold of the three lads, he climbed in the boat and one by one drew the boys after him. People on the beach cheered wildly, and when the boat reached the shore maybe they just didn't make a fuss over Mr. Barrett and little Muriel, who had been able to keep her head when other folks lost theirs.

"So you see what came of taking a girl fishing in that case. If Muriel hadn't been along probably five persons would have been drowned."

"There, you see, I ought to go to take care of you," said Evelyn to Jack.

"Can you row a boat?" asked daddy.

"No-o-o," said Evelyn.

"Very well. I think until you can both swim a little better and both row a boat you would better wait to go fishing with me."

And to the still hills and cool earth and far sky I made moan: "The heart in my bosom is not my own! Oh, would I were free as the wind on the wing! Love is a terrible thing!" —Century Magazine.

OPPORTUNITY.

I KNOW not what the future holds, But this I know: Youth is a guest, who on his way Too soon will go.

ONCE gone we call to deafened ears, All prayers are vain. For tears of blood he will not come Back once again.

THEN spread the board of life, with wine And roses drest. Drink deep and long, greet Joy and Love While Youth is guest. —Arthur Ketchum.

AN IRISH TUNE.

WILL you listen to the laugh of it Gushing from the fiddle? More's the fun in half of it Than 't'en an Irish riddle. Sure it's not a fiddler's bow That's making sport so merry. It's just the fairies laughing so. I heard them oft in Kerry.

WILL you listen to the step of it? Faith, that tune's a daisy. Just the very leap of it Would make the feet unaisy. Hold your tongues, ye noisy rogues, And stop your giddy prancing! It's me can hear the weeheehe rogues Of Irish fairies dancing.

WILL you listen to the tune of it, Sweeter than the honey? I'd rather hear the croon of it Than get a miser's money. Sure, my son, it makes me cry, But don't play any other May God be with the days gone by I danced it with your mother! —Hugh F. Blunt.

FOUR THINGS.

FOUR things a man must learn to do If he would make his record true— To think without confusion clearly, To love his fellow men sincerely, To act from honest motives purely, To trust in God and heaven securely. —Henry van Dyke.

He Won.

"Before you kiss me, Horace, let me tell you that Fred has given Kitty a diamond ring. You have never given me one."

"Dearest, it is only girls who are not precious in themselves who require the aid of precious stones."

"Oh, you may kiss me twice, Horace."

Pen and Sword.

"Do you believe the pen is mightier than the sword?" "Of course it is. Who ever had to pay $25,000 damages in a breach of promise case on account of the sword he carried?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Rule of Life.

We should meet each morning as from foreign countries and, spending the day together, should depart at night as into foreign countries. In all things I would have the island of a man inviolate.—Emerson.

Disappointed.

"So you advise me not to sue?" said the client. "I do," said the lawyer. "Well," returned the disappointed client, "it seems strange that when a man pays for advice he can't get the kind he wants."—Chicago Post.

Willie's Question.

"Pa," "Yes, Willie." "Pa how is it that my hair has grown longer than yours when yours has grown longer than mine?"

Her Dear Friend.

"Jack is blindly in love with you." "How do you know?" "He told me he didn't think you looked a day over twenty-nine."— Toledo Blade.
