NEW GOVERNOR TAKES OATH

CORDIALLY WELCOMED

Second Republican Executive Since Civil War

SALIENT POINTS OF ADDRESS

Impartial and Effective Administration Promised.-Commission for Reassessment, Better School Facilities and Economy Urged.

Maryland's second Republican Governor since the civil war, Phillips Lee Goldsborough, was inaugurated on Tuesday and took the oath of office as executive of the Commonwealth. Notwithstanding the cold thousands of persons viewed the ceremonies.

Mr. Goldsborough's speech preceding the taking of the oath touched on the following points:

Will give an impartial and effective administration.

Will make a strong effort to improve the election laws.

Recommends creation of a commission to reassess property throughout

Urges legislative enactment for compensation for workmen injured in industrial aecidents.

state and publicity in accounts. Urges legislation that will protect oyster beds and preserve industry. Wants a new charter for Baltimore.

Declares he will make strong fight for economy in state affairs.

Prior to the inauguration the House held a short session. To the surprise and possible delight of the members, each found on his desk a little box done in white containing a delicate flower and a pearl pin with the following billet-doux:

"Compliments of the Woman Suffragists of the State of Maryland with hearty wishes for a progressive adminthe people."

BALTIMORE CONVENTION

PLACE FOR DEMOCRATS

June 25 In Fifth Regiment Armory .-Unanimous Choice After Second Ballot. - Check Main Argument.

The Democratic National Convention will meet on June 25 in the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore. This action was taken after two ballots and the choice then was unanimous. St. Louis was from 29 to 22 votes behind on the first two votes cast.

The certified check for $100,000 which the Baltimore agents held for delivery was the big argument. St. Louis in the day rumor had it that the delegation from that city had secured $100,more was prepared to offer $125,000, sula. but that was not required.

Denver said: "We will pay all expenses and promise other financial aid." New York's aggregation said: 'We tional League baseball team. will pay all expenses, whatever they might be, and we have a certified check for $25,000 which we will give to you of revolting Moroccan tribesmen. now." That was not enough. The others were promises or pledges and that did not count.

"We have here," said Mr. Hershey, of Baltimore, "a certified check for $100,000 and if you give us the convention, we will give you the check and will not ask any questions,"

SPEAKING OF HATS

"Most persons," said the peevish girl, "can remember the time when a hat was merely a hat. Since it was just a covering for the head nobody paid much attention to it and the head itself was the main thing. That time has gone—gone forever, I fear.

"Nowadays-well, no one nas time nowadays to stop to consider anything because if one does not have to rush to catch a train one has to hurry to escape being late for a dinner party or to keep one's appointment at the dressmaker's. Still, if a person were laid up with a broken leg, say, or something calming of that sort and really dwelt upon the subject it readily could be realized that hats have become a far different matter.

"I. know a tiny hat store that is about as big as a minute," went on the peevish girl. "It looks entirely harmless and subdued. It is exclusive, certainly. Nobody wants to buy a hat anywhere but at an exclusive place. While on an exploring trip recently I found my way into this little hat shop. I had a defiant expression in my eye because I had resolved that if the usual languid and gorgeous person in black floated up and asked the usual $40 or $50 for a head covering worth almost $10 I should icily refuse to be robbed and walk out. Stil, I wanted to see what there was in the shop.

"I saw before me a small, three-cornered hat of black velvet, utterly unadorned save for a bunch of feathery aigrettes on one side. I glanced inquiringly at the gorgeous person who was surveying me as though at last she was gazing upon the murderer of her beloved grandmother.

"'That?' echoed the gorgeous person. 'That little chapeau is—let me see—it is $115.' She brushed a speck of dust from her shoulder as she fin-

"'But why?' I asked her when the room had stopped whirling around. I had not meant to betray surprise at anything in the hat shop, but human flesh and blood could not stand this sledge-hammer blow.

"The gorgeous person regarded me with extreme dislike. Those are aigrettes on it,' she murmured, indif-"'Oh, yes—aigrettes,' I repeated. 'To be sure. But excuse me—do you mean to say there are women in the world who actually hand over $100 or so for a thing that hasn't any more to show for it than that?'

"Then while the gorgeous person showed signs of apoplexy I made my escape. On the street I watched the hats. If I saw a particularly plain, unnoticeable one I knew it had cost enough to support a family for a month. All the faces beneath the hats were harassed and tense as the owners flew along. The owners either were on their way to buy more hats or had just escaped from the clutches of gorgeous persons in hat shops.

"You know," explained the peevish girl, "you are always buying hats nowadays because one for best and one for every day simply will not do at all. Neither ever is just the thing for the gown you want to wear and you end by buying a hat when you buy dress goods just as much as you order the hooks and eyes and trimmings.

"As for plumes—all the ostriches on earth must be going around these days in a terrifically decollete state, for there are enough feathers at large in Chicago alone at the present moment to clothe decently all the ostriches that were ever created. To see them in their full and impudent glory step into any fashionable cafe after the theater.

"'No, I'm not ill or anything,' I said to my escort the other night, 'but I haven't time to eat. I'm counting. Why, willow plumes, of course. There's a gray one back of you a yard long that never cost a cent under $75. And look at that white hat with three plumes-I suppose there is a girl concealed under it somewhere—and over there see those heliotrope ones. That heliotrope hat certainly set back father's bank account $150 at least. And there are bushels of black feathers March 18, Charles McCarren, one mile $50 apiece. Why, I can't see anything but a sea of willow plumes! It isn't a cafe—it's just a forest of hats with people lost in the shadows underneath paying checks for food they haven't time to eat because every living girl is looking to see if anyone has a willow plume handsomer than hers!'

"The reason the milliners ask and get about 500 per cent. on their investment is perfectly plain," declared the pevish girl. "It is all the fault of feminine creatures like one I saw in a store not long ago. While wandering around in the millinery department

"'Why,' she told the attending clerk, 'if I had looked for a week I never could have found anything so precisely what I wanted. It's exactly what I had in mind! It just finishes March 25, at 1 o'clock, John Ecker, on off my suit. Look how well they go together. How much is it?"

"'It's marked $12,' said the clerk. "The jubilant customer stared. March 26, at 1 o'clock, Frank Palmer, Palmer's Mill, South of Harney, Various Articles. Wm. T. Smith, Auct. 'Take it away!' she cried. 'Only $12! There must be something wrong with it! Everybody I know would say I was it! Everybody I know would say I was

COMMON SENSE BASIS GUY K. MOTTER OF GOOD ADVERTISING

By WM. C. FREEMAN.

Abe Martin says: "The man who business, but nobody else does." I always think there is something wrong with a business if it does not make itself known in some way. Common sense must be applied, however, as to how that business shall be made known. In New York, Chicago, Philadelphia and other large cities there are fifty times as many stores that do not advertise in newspapers as do advertise in them. The reason is that these stores are mere neighborhood stores-doing a small business-depending wholly on the custom of perhaps a couple of hundred families.

Obviously, such stores cannot afford to advertise in the big newspapers. How, then, are they to advertise? There are only a few ways for them to do, viz:

Sending well-written letters to all of the families in the neighborhood telling about the goods they have for sale—using posters and signs in their neighborhood wherever they can get the space for them-displaying their merchandise in their windows-but better than all of these is advertising in the weekly neighborhood paper, if one is issued.

There must be advertising of some kind done, and if it is effective the business will grow, and the small shopkeeper may be able to acquire stores in different neighborhoods. Then he can branch out with his advertising program and buy space in the big newspapers, like so many others have done before him.

This applies only to the very large communities; in the smaller communities, where everybody knows everybody else, the one medium to use all of the time is the daily home newspaper.

You must realize that good advertising, of whatever nature, must have a basis of old-fashioned common sense and must be done in accordance with a shopkeeper's ability to pay for it.

Immunituminimum Advertising is an original form of salesmanship that tends, in the long run, to make the cost of living more reasonable for the average human being.

Advertising enables the manufacturer to give a better quality of goods at a lower price than he could if his advertising had not lifted him out of the rut of ruinous competition and standardized his articles of merchandise. for the average human being.

Due to Lack of Advertising.

Thirty or forty years ago the Mammoth Cave shared h nors with Niagara as a point of interest for travelers. No American felt that he kenw his own country till he had visited the wonderful opening in the earth. No foreigner visiting the United States was expected to return to his own land without seeing and features of illustration in school geographies. It furnished a subject for

Now, we never hear of the Mammoth Cave. Public attention is called pointed. to the fact that the monster hole in the ground "is still there" by the announcement of change in ownership, the former proprietors finding that all profits on their investment had vanished. The fact is, the Mammoth Cave has not been advertised in recent years It is just as wonderful as it always was. But, somehow, practically all attempts in the way of advertising it have ceased. Just why this is, it may be impossible to say. But the fact remains.

Advertising "Our Town." Do you take a pride in your town?

In speaking of it and working for it. do you say "our town?" When you say "our town," the expression has a different meaning from what it does when you say "the town,"

"this town" or "your town."

Practice saying "our town" until you can give it a musical and attractive sound that is confidence inspiring and means the true loyalty of a citizen.

There is a big difference placed on the meaning of words by the tone in which they are expressed. Some people can say "come in" in a tone that means say out more than it does come in.

prosperity, welcome, and you will have a town that exhibits all these.-The Retail Merchant.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.-Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

GOVERNOR GOLDSBOROUGH.

Amid unusual pomp and ceremony Mr. Phillips Lee Goldsborough took the oath of office on Wednesday, and now for the body and his brother. As for first time in sixteen years Maryland has a Republican governor.

In his inaugural speech Governor Goldsborough appealed to occasion. Liberal Baltimore went the majority in both Houses to about it in the right way, the aid him in carrying out his plans for good government and with of the coveted prize is a feather feeling and sincerity reiterated in the cap of the citizenship of his promises to the people. THE PEACE DINNER.

There are all kinds of reports concerning the big Democratic "Peace Dinner" at Washington on Monday. Some represent it as a knock-down-and-drag-out affair; others as a billing and cooing fest; while others still imply that even if the feast did not completely harmonize all factions it did nothing to widen the vartor of much that the Democratic within. and Republican parties have adopted, and this will no doubt satisfy him.

All had a say--at least the big wigs did-and the principles of Jefferson and Jackson were revived, upheld and properly applauded along with the changes rung upon them by contemporary exponents of Democracy.

It was not to be hoped that any public question of import would be settled at this banquet. It was intended as a love feast and cratic pulse. Just what the diagnosis is it would be difficult to tell with any degree of certainty, but nevertheless the symptoms all right; Champ Clark is all of Wilsonism were much in evi- right and Underwood is all right;

AND BALTIMORE GOT IT.

The right thing has happened. Baltimore gets the convention and it only remains for the Monumental City to show the country a thing or two about the proper entertainment of big crowds. This she can do "to the queen's taste." The markets-and Baltimore has the best-will be in their prime, the city parks in full blossom. There will be amusement for all, accomodations for all, juleps for every guest and a welcome for everythe convention hall, nothing better could be found than the magnificent armory chosen for the practical way, and the landing

CURIOUS BITS OF HISTORY

PLENTY OF BEER BUT NO TOBACCO.

By A. W. MACY.

Beer and tobacco are supposed by some people to be on about the same footing, but a certain company in London 200 years ago did not seem to think so. It was the business of this company to look after the welfare of the emigrants who had gone out from the mother country to seek homes in the New World. In 1629 it sent over the good ship Talbot, loaded with provisions, clothing, etc., to the Massachusetts bay colony by the same ship the company sent a long list of instructions in regard to their conduct, telling them what they should and should not do. One of the things they were forbidden to do was to cultivate and use tobacco, "unless it be some small quantitie for mere necessitie, and for phisick for the preservation of their health, and that the same be taken privately by antient men and none other."

USE OF DRUGS DIMINISHING.

"No medicine will be given by and by, for people are going to eat the right things." Dr. W. A. Evans of the Chicago Board of Health quotes this statement of a widely traveled, experienced English nurse, speaking of the preparation of food for invalids. Dr. Wiley has been quoted to the same effect. The expense for drugs at the Massachusetts General hospital has been reduced 50 per cent. in ten years. In the same article, Dr. Evans says that "a cup of hot water is a good temporary stimulant in case of fainting or temporary exhaustion. It has its advantages over alcohol for this purpose. There will probably always be use for drugs, but natural means of course, and especially food are to be used

An extensive commerce in human hair was carried on, and after the cor quest of Gaul blond hair such as grew originally on the heads of Ger man girls along the Rhine became very fashionable in Rome. Caesar did no disdain to mix a little commercialism with his military enterprises and col lected a vast amount of hair from the vanquished Gauls, which he sent to market at Rome, and in the Roman provinces a cropped head was regarded as a badge of slavery or at least of subjection. The hairdressers of Rome were persons of real importance and charged exorbitant prices for forming the hair into fanciful devices, such as harps, wreaths and diadems. - New York Herald.

> The Prince's Majority. The famous "mad" king of Bavaria, Louis II., and Prince Otto, his brother, were brought up with great strictness and simplicity. Their father, Maximilian II., an excellent constitutional king. but in private life not particularly genial, allowed them no pocket money but what they earned by good marks at their lessons, on the modest scale of pfennig per mark, and he would fine them a thaler without compunction if they were reported idle. Their table was more frugal than that of the sons of most country gentlemen. When Louis attained his majority at eight een he was provided with an establish ment of his own and sat down on the first day of his emancipation to his usual dinner-one dish of meat and some cheese.

"Am I now my own master?" he asked with a smile of his servants. "Yes, sir," was the answer.

Suicides at $100 Each.

A gentleman who lived a number of years in the city of Amoy, in China, told me that he could secure any num ber among the common people of that town to commit suicide for $100 apiece As human nature is the same everywhere, he explained that as we may find many who will lay down their lives for their country and whom we highly honor on that account, so an ordinary Chinaman is willing thus to die for the benefit of his children in order that they may worship him afterward as an ancestor who died for their benefit. This explains also that noble reverence for their parents which the Chinese display, because their parents will soon be endowed with all the mysterious powers of the next world.-W. H. Thomson, M. D. LL.D., in "Life. Death and Immor

Pronunciation In Ireland.

Many persons seem to see, or to hear; rather, something to be amused at in the soft Irish brogue. As a matter of fact, most of the words of the Irish "dialect" are not Irish at all, but the purest of English-English a trifle antiquated, it is true, but nevertheless the real thing. The ears of Milton, Dryden, Spenser and Chaucer would not have been surprised to hear an Irishman speak of "a rough say" or "a clane shirt." At the court of good Queen Bess the cultured Englishman carefully garnished his conversation with "goolde" rings and brave "swoordes" and bored his friends with accounts of the smart sayings of the "childre" at "hoom." This was the English originally imported into Ireland by the cultured Irish, and the Irish have found it good enough to preserve.-Chicago Tribune.

The Chinese preserve their eggs indefinitely by drying them, the yolks and whites being first separated and then each reduced to powder by evaporation. In India butter is treated in much the same way, so that it never becomes stale and may be kept fresh for a hundred years The butter is boiled till all the water and curds are got rid of and nothing remains but clear oil. When the oil cools into a solid it is granulated and in this form will remain fresh indefinitely. This is what they call ghee, and ghee is noth ing more or less than dried butter. Chicago Journal.

Wasting Coffee,

A pleasing odor ascended to the guest room, and one of the visitors sniffed it daintily. "The coffee smells good," she said, hastening her preparations for breakfast. The other guest shook her attention. He said that in the congrehead sadly. "Yes," she replied, "it is good coffee, but it makes me sorrowful to have anybody make coffee so long before a meal is ready. So many persons do that. It shows at once the difference between an ordinary cook and a culinary artist. A careless cook often makes her coffee the first thing and puts it on the back of the range to op, "that the pure in heart shall see keep hot, thinking thereby to have it God, and is it not therefore possible ready for the table without further that a child perfectly pure could see trouble and well out of her way. It is things that an adult could not see?" a fatal mistake. All the rich, delicate aroma of the coffee is lost in that way. We are getting it up here now, as you perceive. It is, as you have said, very appetizing, but coffee is not intended especially for an appetizer, and you don't wish it while you are combing your hair. To be perfect, with all its aroma and strength preserved, coffee should be served piping hot, just as soon as it is made."-New York Press.

They Were "Ulys" and "Mrs. G." Mrs. Grant had no secretary to attend to her correspondence, the great bulk of which was referred to the office for action. She used to receive an enormous number of appeals for help, for charities, for assistance, in aid of almost every cause that could be imagined. Being a warm hearted, sympathetic woman, some of these appeals made a strong impression upon her. I can remember several instances when Mrs. Grant requested her husband to give this person or that a position that was asked for or to accede to some other request of like nature. She always called the president "Ulys," and, excepting upon the most formal occasions, he always addressed her as "Mrs. G." Both the president and his wife were plain people, simple in their tastes to an extent that would cause surprise today, when everything has so changed throughout the social fabric of the entire nation .- W. H. Cook in "Memories of the White House."

An Interesting Illusion. A curious and interesting effect may be produced in the following simple manner:

Take a sheet of paper or thin cardboard about five inches square and roll it into a tube, with one end just large enough to fit around the eye and the other end somewhat smaller. Hold the tube between the thumb and first finger of the right hand-do not grasp the tube with the whole hand-and place the larger end of the tube close against the right eye. With the left hand place a book against the side of the tube. If both eyes are now kept open there will appear to be a hole through the book, and it will appear that objects are seen through this hole and not through the tube. The effect is even more odd if the left hand instead of a book is held against the tube, when the hole will appear through the center of the hand. Many other strange effects are also apparent. -Detroit Free Press.

Metals In the Human Body. The human body contains, among other constituents, about two pounds of phosphorus, which is essential to the health of the bones and the vigor of the brain. This phosphorus, if extracted and put to another use, would make up about 4,000 packages of friction matches. Besides phosphorus, the body contains a few ounces of sodium and half an ounce of potassium. The quantity of the latter would be sufficient for many experiments in a class in chemistry. In addition to sodium and potassium there are a few grains of magnesium, enough to make the "silver rain" for a family's stock of rockets on a Fourth of July evening or to create a brilliant light visible at a considerable distance.—Harper's.

A Bishop's Stories.

Preaching at St. Paul's, Harringay, just outside London, one Sunday night, Dr. Ingram, the bishop of London, told two stories which attracted widespread gation at a confirmation service he once conducted in Westminster abbey was a girl of thirteen. During the service she said to her mother, "Do you see them, mother?" asked the mother, and the child replied, "Angels on each side of the bish "It is said," commented the bishop."

The bishop also told a story of five girls whose father, feeling ill, went to lie down. The youngest child was sent to bed, but ran from her room, calling "Come out. There are two angels walking up the staircase!" Later the child called out again, "The angels are walking down the staircase, and father's walking between them!" All five girls, said the bishop, saw the same thing, and, going into their father's room, they found him dead.

'Freak" schools were the subject recently of an article in a provincial paper, and we are confident that few of our readers will have heard of some of these very odd educational establishments. It appears that in Belgium before qualifying for a post as sexton one must pass an examination in a school of gravediggers, while in Paris there is a school for judges, where make believe trials are carried out in detail before lawyers of repute.

Russia has a school for policemen, which it is, we believe, the pet ambition of the young and aspiring burglar to join. In an adjoining museum "the pupils make themselves familiar with jimmies, drills, chisels and other tools used by professional thieves.'

Still more ambiguous are the merits of the course of instruction given in the casino at Monte Carlo. Here is evolved the professional croupier. Some six months' training is all that is needed to produce a finished specimen of these useful articles, which are turned out at the rate of nearly a hundred a year.-University Correspondent.

Work of the Heart.

The average human heart is a suction and force pump of remarkable capacity and durability. Each of its two chambers contains on an averge seventy-five cubic centimeters, or 4,575 cubic inches. The total contents of 150 centimeters, or 9.15 cubic inches, being discharged eighty-one times a minute, corresponding to a delivery of 12,150 cubic centimeters (12.15 liters), or 741 cubic inches per minute, 729 liters, or 25.73 cubic feet per hour. Expressed in the United States gallons, the average human heart pumps through it each hour 192.6 gallons; each day, 4,622.4 gallons; each year, 1,687,176 gallons, and in the adult life time of a man living to the age sung by the psalmist, 84,358,800 gallons. The pressure against which this fluid is pumped is equivalent to that of a water column two and a half meters, or, say, 8 feet 2.42 inches high; otherwise expressed, about 0.242 atmosphere or 3.55 pounds avoirdupois per square inch .-Schientific American.

Scallops.

How many people know anything about the toothsome scallop? The little round bits of white meat we see in the market are really the hearts of bivalves. In other words, the only edible part of a scallop is the muscular tissue that controls the opening and shutting of its shell. The name scallop is derived from the fluted shape of the creature's shell. These are very thin. In fact, the weight of the scallop is so near that of an equal volume of water that it floats by the very slight propulsive force given by the opening and closing of the shell; hence scallops have the reputation of a shellfish that swims. They are caught in scoop nets as they float along with the tide.-New York Tribune.

Perfectly Safe.

A tourist in a remote part of Ireland. having stayed the night at a wayside inn not usually frequented by visitors. informed the landlord in the morning that his boots, which had been placed outside his room door to be cleaned, had not been touched. "Ah, sure," said the landlord, "and you moight put your watch and chain outside your room door in this house and they wouldn't be touched."-London Mail.

The Thrifty French.

Every little while the French farmer or peasant sends a few francs as savings to his banker in Paris or some other city. The banker holds the fund till there is enough to buy a bond or some other security, when it is shipped to the farmer or peasant and goes into the family collection. The French savings bank is the stocking, and it is stuffed with securities from all over the world.

LETTERS TO HIS WIFE

individual rights and so far as reading his wife's correspondence was con-

Still, his wife being away from home, he wanted a list of books they had made out together, so he rummaged in her desk to find it. When he unfolded the paper he took to be the list he found it closely written over in a queer, jerky style, and it began: 'My Darling!" Now, in the first place, it was not Lampower's writing. In the second place, what right had any other man to call Louise his darling? Or she to let him? Lampower, with frowning brows and compressed lips, unbelievingly and grimly read through the amazing epistle. For it was amazing! Lampower had written a few love letters himself in the course of a tempestuous youthful existence, but he never remem- an "a." bered bursting into anything like this. it took his breath away.

"The idiot!" he said out loud as he

He found he was clutching the paper in both hands as though to tear it, so he smoothed it out carefully and refolded it. Then he found it had been merely the top letter on a pile of similar ones. They had lain in the far recess of the pigeonhole. Feeling that he might as well know the worst, he drew out all the letters and went through them. They were all in the same writing, but the form of address varied. Sometimes they began "Sweetheart," or "My Own," and once it was just "Dear One!"

Lampower gave vent to a groan that was mostly a growl. It made him sick to think of Louise losing her head over some long-haired chap with poetic tendencies. He knew the fellov who could write such rubbish must be the sort that a normal man would like to kick. And Louise had liked that sort of thing! That was evident from the pile of letters, which, by the way, were denuded of their envelopes. Clever of her! For a pile of folded sheets of paper would not look suspicious. Then, naturally, she did not expect Lampower to prowl through her desk.

They were rhapsodic bursts, almost impersonal in their ravings. Only occasionally was the beauty of Louise's eyes or hair mentioned. Mostly the letters were dizzy soarings in a sea of flubdub that made a man feel as though he had been eating too many marshmallows and had powdered sugar scattered over his face clear up to his ears. And these unspeakably nauseating effusions had been sent to his Louise?

What got Lampower the hardest was the discovery that she cared for such stuff. He had always been proud of her common sense. When he had written to her before they were married he had always been careful to prune his effusions and to be chary of unloading too much adoration on paper for fear of her disliking it. And now—she was cherishing these!

That was the most of his dismay, Lampower had a fair amount of conceit, so not for a minute did he worry about Louise's being in love with the jellyfish who had written these letters Of course, it hurt him to find that he did not fill her life as completely as he had thought, and she had forgotten her dignity sufficiently to be fascinated by these maunderings of an im-

His illusions went crashing all about his ears as he sat mechanically piling the letters up and then spreading them out at random. Each time his eyes caught a phrase or sentence he almost snorted. And yet, as he told himself, one does not snort with a broken heart, and assuredly his heart was not broken!

Then, just as white-hot needles of anguish began to sear him and the kitchen. blood began to rush to his face, he heard Louise come in. He got to his feet with the letters in his hand and stood before her. That she looked particularly carefree and pink and blooming was an added insult.

Lampower simply held the letters out to her. "What are these?" he inquired in a repressed voice. It was quite like a scene from a play and Louise behaved as he had expected she would when confronted by exposure. She made a dash toward the letters.

"Oh!" she cried, in a tremulous "I woldn't have you see those voice. for the world! They-you see-that class I belong to for the study of English makes us compose things, and Mrs. Sponson had to write a series of love letters in the romantic style and then I had to compose the answers! It's to make us fluent, you know! And you'd simply roar if you read 'em, because they're awful stuff, Jim!" as with a woman's clairvoyance she guessed a little of what had happened, "did you-have you read them? And you thought-oh, my goodness, you never thought that they were real-"

Lampower looked at his wife, who had sunk into a chair, choking with giggles. He felt himself shrinking.

"Certainly not!" he said, hastily. "I never thought any such thing!" And Mrs. Lampower was kind enough to let it go at that.

WHY SHE DIDN'T WIN.

They were at Monte Carlo, and, like other visitors to that insidious paradise, they considered the Casino a place which ought to be visited. They stood hesitating before one of the tables, and at last the temptation to join the players proved too strong for the lady.

"I must risk just one ten-dollar note," she said to her husband. "Give cerned he would have been as likely to me one, darling, and I will put it on listen at keyholes or steal candy from the number of my age. That is sure to be lucky."

> Hubby was inclined to be skeptical, but of course he might have spared himself the trouble of grumbling, and the ten-dollar note was duly deposited on No. 24.

Alas! No. 36 proved to be the winning numeral, and the lady gave a little gasp of despair.

"Serves you right," said her great brute of a husband. "If you'd told the truth you'd have won!"—Tid-Bits.

A PERSONALS.

It is the aim of THE CHRONICLE to publish as many personal and social items as possible, but it frequently happens that those who have guests visiting them, and those who entertain, fail to send a list of their friends, or an account of these events, to this office. Readers who live at a distance are always interested in what is going on "at home," and for that reason, if for no other, this column should be filled every week. It is of course understood that anonymous contributions will not be published. Names of persons furnishing items will be withheld.

ATHLETICS AT MT. ST. MARY'S

The holidays being over the Mt. St. Mary's basketball squad is again down to hard work for the remaining long list of games yet to be played. The games in New York during the holidays oooooooooooooooooooo did not plan out as well as expected. The boys fully felt that they would put up a much better showing but they did I not take into consideration the strong aggregations the big city was capable of turning out. While the locals were defeated by decisive scores there is really no reason for them to be discouraged as they were up against the best basketball talent in New York city and and men that have had many years experience at this indoor game. True, at times the boys had a great many opportunities that they let slip by due to the fact perhaps to nervousness which would have put their opponents on the Mr. E. S. Cable, of Chambersburg, defensive, but all in all the experience made a business trip here spending should hold them in good stead for the games the rest of the season. This being the first trip that Mt. St. Mary's has ever made to New York it proved not only beneficial from an athletic standpoint but also to bring the large number of alumni in the city in closer touch with the undergraduates. All the graduates living in the city either were present at the games or called around to the hotel to see the boys. One of the delightful pleasures enjoyed by the boys was the reception Mr. William Breichner attended the of Mr. John F. Cogan of the class of 1880. After the second game Mr. Cogan entertained the boys at dinner at his beautiful residence at Bayridge. After dinner Mr. Cogan took the entire squad to the Hippodrome where every one enjoyed the performance. It can not forget the trip to the big city.

To-day the boys will play the strong quintet from the Catholic University at the local Gym. The boys from Washington have a strong aggregation and of any previous year. At one of the many Xmas cantatas rendered during the serason, some special orchestral chorals with delicate trills and nimble runs of allegro-manon-troppo design, you know, were programmed. An expert cornet soloist and leader from a distant city promised his valued assistance and performance.

One day hastening down the Avenue toward the depot with his swell professional uniform on, and his silverytongued cornet under his arm, he met with a number of the "boys" who immediately inquired, "What? When?" Where ?" Then they insisted on him "going along in and having one on them." There were too many "ones" and he had to be taken home and put to

COLONY HOUSES PROVE BEST

Have Many Advantages Because They Can Be Moved From Place to Place With Little Trouble.

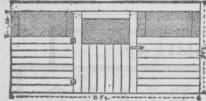

I like colony houses because they can be moved easily from place to place and thus insure clean surroundings for the chicks. They also enable one to take the broods from an undesirable place such as the dooryard or the garden and keep them in a field where there is plenty of insect food or scattered grain left by the binder or the reaper, writes W. J. Judson in the orange Judd Farmer. In such surroundings the chicks can save considerable outlay for food by converting into flesh what would otherwise go to waste. Young chickens can be removed from the house or the brooders when about six weeks old. If taken from hens, they should be dusted thoroughly for lice at that time and if not already marked should be marked with a poultry punch.

At first they should be confined to a temporary yard by wire netting not less than two feet high. A convenient size for this yard is one rod each way. Of course, the larger the inclosure, the more grass there will be for the chicks. It is best to keep them here for three or four days, or a week, depending upon their age and the distance they are removed from their former location. When they become accustomed to the place, the fence may be removed by using hoppers which contain one-half to one bushel of feed, but sonsiderable time may be saved in feeding, it being necessary to fill the hoppers only once or twice a week.

A very convenient sized house for 50 to 70 chicks is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is six by three and one-half feet on the ground, three feet high in front and two feet behind. Iron roofing or building paper may be used, both on the top and on the sides. For floors, one-inch matched stuff is best. The bottom may be made of rough boards, the upper side planed. In the summer the chicks need an opening about ten inches wide. running the entire length of the front. This may be covered on the inside with one-inch mesh poultry wire. Where the door is full high, three feet, It is much handier to have a screened opening on the top, ten inches in width, as shown in the drawing. Two men can carry such houses from place to place or one person can shift them by moving one end at a time. By using colony houses, I believe the farmer can produce healthier chicks with less expense and better than by the ordinary methods practiced on most farms.

MUSCOVY DUCK IS PECULIAR

They Are Very Tame and Easier to Raise Than Chickens-Make Excellent Fowl for the Table.

To appreciate the beauty of Muscovy ducks it is necessary to see them. There are two varieties, the colored and the white. The colored may pe either blue, black, green or fawn, but whichever shade they chance to be they are lustrous and shiny, and the dark coloring is relieved by underwings and sides of snowy white, says the Prairie Farmer. They have scarlet faces all around their eyes down to their bills; on their heads is a crescent of feathers that lays flat until the bird is excited or angry, then those short, soft feathers stand up straight, forming a cap. The hen duck is about the size of a Pekin, dainty and very beautiful. The drake is extremely large, weighing when matured between ten and twelve pounds. The white Muscovies are the same as the colored excepting that they are him too modest a sum.-Boston Tranentirely white. The peculiarities of script. the Muscovies are numerous and interesting. They never quack, but make a queer husky, hissing sound. Both ducks and drakes fly like pigeons, but the ducks being of lighter weight, can fly a greater distance. They will rise from the barnyard, circle a forty-acre field and finally alight in almost the same spot from which they started. They roost on barns and other high places. The ducks are splendid layers. They usually build their nests in lofts and in the high boxes in the henhouse.

As Flitcraft was hurrying across the bridge to catch the 5:08 train for home he saw Griggs just ahead of him with a black band on the sleeve of his light overcoat.

Though the two men had only a bowing acquaintance, Flitcraft knew that Griggs' wife had died recently, and a sudden realization came over him of what it must mean to a man to be deprived of long accustomed domestic companionship. It was a thing, he reflected, which might happen at any time to any married man. He wondered vaguely, as the light overcoat with the black band disappeared in the crowd, whether Griggs had been good to his wife. Then he affirmed to himself virtuously that a man ought to be habitually good to his wife, and then if anything should happen, there would be nothing to regret Just at this moment he happened to see an elderly man buying some flowers at the stand on the corner and at once his vaporous general resolve became solidified into a concrete form Flitcraft decided that he would take some roses home to his wife. He hadn't done such a thing during the eleven years since his marriage, but that was no reason, he assured himself, why he shouldn't do it now.

So, with some embarrassment, he selected a bunch of American beauties.

He was rather self-conscious when he found that no one manifested any curiosity as to the contents of his tissue paper package.

"Why, Harley Flitcraft!" exclaimed his wife as she tore off the wrappings. "Where'd you get such beautiful roses?

"Bought 'em, of course," responded Fliteraft, jocularly. "Can't I buy you some flowers once in a while? No oth er man is buying flowers for you just at present, is there?"

His wife blushed at the very thought of such a thing. Very steady in the domestic harness were both the Flitcrafts.

"Don't be ridiculous, Harley," she admonished him, as she hurried to fill a vase with water.

It was evident that Mrs. Flitcraft was delighted. A close observer might have detected that she was also puzzled. But Flitcraft was not in the habit of observing his wife closely, being convinced that he had found out all there was to know about her during the first year of their married life. So, elated by his success, he rushed on to his undoing.

His voluble praise of the peach shortcake at dinner, besides being unusual, appeared to his wife a work of supererogation, since he had eaten two large pieces with great relish.

A little later, to complete his wife's mystification, Flitcraft laid down the evening paper and proposed that they go to a concert. Mrs. Flitcraft was well aware that her husband didn't know Beethoven sky and was utterly indifferent to both. "Why, Harley," she protested, "it's going to be all classified music, and I'm sure you wouldn't enjoy it." "There's nothing I would enjoy more!" prevaricated Flitcraft.

His wife cast a penetrating glance toward the American beauties, as though to read there the secret of her lord's sudden transformation. Then she said, gently: "Harley, you don't feel well, do you?" "Never felt better in my life," re sponded Harley, promptly.

His wife disregarded these words. 'It must be," she insisted, "because you didn't put on your heavy underwear the first of the month." "Why, I tell you that I feel perfectly well," reiterated Flitcraft. "I don't need heavy underwear in such weather as this. "Then I'm afraid you haven't been roared Flitcraft, "that I never felt better-

"Oh, Harley, don't say that," pleaded his wife, with tears in her eyes "Of course, I don't want you to be ill, and yet I'd rather it was that. There's only one other way to explain your queer actions. It's remorse!"

"Remorse? For what?" demanded Flitcraft. "For having fallen in love with some other woman! You're trying to atone to me for it! And you're always been such a good husband until now!"

In honor of Aunt Ann's birthday, Uncle Jerry Pebbles had just bought a bunch of American Beauties.

"A rose by any other name might smell jes' as sweet," he said, as he opened his old leather wallet; "but I'll be dinged if it'd cost half as much!"

The Deadlock

"She seems so little to be sent to yearningly at her diminutive daughter, who was seated in a corner of the living room, disciplining, with great earnestness and sternness, her large family of dolls.

"I wouldn't send her, then," said Richmond, easily. "What difference do his work easily nor as satisfacdoes it make whether she goes this year or not?"

"Well, I don't want her to be behind the children of her own age," said Mrs. Richmond, hesitatingly. "But she's such a tiny thing! I feel as if it would be deliberately giving my baby over to the hands of the destroyer." "You might teach her at home," ventured Richmond. His wife's face brightened. might," she returned, "and I do believe I will." Then she looked dubious for a moment. "But I don't know what to teach her." "Teach her her letters," said Richmond. "That was good enough for you and me, and I've heard lots of people complain that their children didn't know the alphabet.' "I believe I'll try," said Mrs. Rich-

Accordingly the next morning she cornered her ewe lamb in the nursery.

"Now, Frances, darling," she said, with the carefully assumed veneer of buoyancy in which she had seen kindergartners and other guardians of the infant intelligence enwrap themselves as with a garment, "you and I are going to have a dear little school right here in the nursery.

"I would rather," remarked the pros pective pupil reflectively, "have a big apple and a piece of candy."

"Well, may be we'll have those, too," agreed the embryotic instructress "but not until after we've had our

"What's a lesson?" inquired the pupil.

"It's-let's see. It's to teach you your letters, so you can read lovely stories out of books." Frances pondered this for a moment. "But I'd rather have you read them to me," said said, after proper reflection. "But you can't always have me to do that, dear," said Mrs. Richmond firmly. She drew Frances into her lap and opened the book with which she had decided to begin the fray. "All the little girls learn to read and mother would be terribly ashamed if her little girl didn't. Now, look at this funny letter with the two legs and the piece across the middle like a queer little ladder. What do you think that letter is?"

"I never saw it before," said Frances, "so I guess I don't care about its name."

"Well, that letter is named A," said Mrs. Richmond. "Now, here's one with two funny little fat balloons stuck on a stick. The name of that "Is it?" Frances inquired with perfunctory politness. "I guess I don't like to read very well," she explained courteously, as she made a tentative effort to get down from her mother's

"But you'll have to learn, dearie," said Mrs. Richmond patiently. "Now, tell mother what this letter with the two legs is."

Frances put a fat forefinger on the letter.

"We'll call that B," she said sweet ly. "Now, can I go, muvver?" "No, lambkin," said her mother firmly. "That's A. See how funny it looks with the two slanting legs and the little piece between them. Now, what's its name?"

Mrs. Richmond set her small daughter down on the floor. "Now, Frances," she said, "tell me the name of that letter or I'll put you to bed.'

Frances looked up at the ceiling and crossed her fat hands on her little stomach. "We'll call it B," she said finally.

Half an hour later Mrs. Richmond went into Frances' little room. A sweetly smiling face looked up at her from the bed.

"Baby," she pleaded, "please do as mother wants you to. Mother hates to punish her baby. Tell me the right name of this letter,"

She drew out the book and laid her finger on the much discussed letter. There was a breathless pause. "Well, muvver," said a bored voice deliberately, "may it's an A for you, but I guess I'll call it B." "I think I'll have to send Frances to school after all," admitted Mrs. Richmond to Frances' father that evening after dinner. "I'm afraid my method

"Yes," said one of the three women who sat on the summer hotel porch, "I can hardly wait now to see Mr. Bascom. He's coming tonight to take me It pays to look after the welfare of the home. "Dear me, Mrs. Bascom, you shouldn't complain of your brief separation from Mr. Bascom," remarked the woman with a little girl in her lap. "You've been here only two weeks, and I've been away from home nearly all summer. I never would have done it if Mr. Collins hadn't just insisted that baby and I needed the country air. But, thank goodness, he's coming tonight,

"Edward's the most unselfish man that ever lived, I do believe. I know he's been absolutely desolate this summer. I really think the loneliness of our apartment has affected his health. He expected to take a vacation and come up in August, but he simply couldn't get away. He's a remarkable business man. No one in the office can take his place."

She hugged her little girl and turned to Miss Winters with a smile. "Isn't it wonderful how some men will work for their wives and children?" "It certainly is," responded Miss

"I do," agreed Mrs. Collins, before Miss Winters had come to frame an answer. "I say to Edward that he must decide everything for baby and me. He's the captain of our little family craft. Dear me, Miss Winters, it must be hard for you sometimes not to have a man to assume responsibilities. But, of course, girls-unmarried women-are quite independent nowadays," she added, with patronizing kindness. "Oh, I manage to rub along," returned Miss Winters, but she rose from her seat and strolled away. Although she knew herself to be a busy and happy woman, she could not help feeling solitary in the presence of such enthusiastic wives. A brisk tramp around the lake brought back her usual good spirits, and it was only with a mild envy that she saw, as she neared the hotel at dusk, one of her companions of an hour or two earlier hurrying down the driveway to meet the village buss. She paused in the shadow of a tree in order not to intrude upon what she felt would be a tender reunion between
