of the Kittens.

ACK and Evelyn were ready for bed-that is, they would be ready as soon as daddy had finished his story. "And the story is to be about Mollie," daddy began, "lovely Mollie, the pussy cat pet of a family that lives on Long Island. "The nice white house in which the family lives stands in a big green yard, and back of that is the barn and stable in a yard all by themselves. "In the barn are a cow and chickens and other interesting creatures. The horses live in the stables, and the dogs have cozy houses of their own. Yes, it "And Mollie lives all over the place. She is such a nice cat that even the cook doesn't mind letting her stay in the kitchen when she has to go out. Mollie never takes food unless it is given to her. "Mollie is such a fine mouse catcher that the cook is very fond of her and feeds her so much that Mollie is never hungry, so of course she has no reason to steal, as half fed cats nearly always will do. "But because of the many mice that live there Mollie likes the barn better than any other building about the place. She takes naps in the hay mow and in the hay filled boxes in which the hens lay their eggs. "There is one box in a dark corner near her favorite mouse hole that Mollie particularly likes. The box belongs to old Mrs. Biddy, and when one day the hen came back from a scratching trip to the barnyard and found four nice kittens there Mrs. Biddy's motherly old heart was filled with joy.

"'Well,' said she, 'it was very kind of Mollie to leave these little dears "Mrs. Biddy knew how little chicks should be cared for. She had had joining. enough families of her own to know. So she fluttered into the box and cuddled the kittens under her wings. Nice and warm as this feathered mother was, the kittens wanted their own furry one, and they soon began to meow. "Mollie on her way back from the house heard them and hurried. When she peeped into the box and saw that Mrs. Biddy was mothering her very own kittens Mollie was mad right through. With an angry yowl she lifted her paw and slapped Mrs. Biddy over the head. Mrs. Biddy was angry then, and she pecked crossly at Mollie. The two had a grand fight, and Mollie got the worst of it. She had to go to the house and by her cries get her mistress to follow her to the barn. Everybody laughed at the cat and the hen, who wanted to kidnap the kittens, but, of course, the pussy was given her young ones. They were put in a box in the stable, and Mollie was so careful that whenever a hen poked its beak into the stable she chased it away."

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.-Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

FOREIGN INFLUENCE.

Although England never literally recognized the Monroe Doctrine, she, on the other hand gave but half-hearted support to the efforts of the other monarchies in their opposition to it. Once upon a things of former years. Once upon a day pleasures and practices; we do a time a few men could select a ticket large amount of Sunday business, even and allow the people to confirm their action at the primaries, but the fact that all candidates now make active personal canvasses instead of trusting to others to pull them through, proves they all recognize that the people are in the saddle.

One feature of this activity is, however, fraught with danger: A degree of rivalry which runs into personal bitterness is often engendered, and a vo-

Maryland's Political Boss.

To a stranger unacquainted with political conditions which have long existed in this State two recent events would wonder why an Attorney General of the State of Maryland, famed "Some of you knights will win and lawyers, and especially noted for the and careful legal advisers get eral should give a formal legal opinion to the Governor of the State in regard to the matters of such great importance as the election of United States Senator, under new and untried methods, which manifestly shows upon its face that it was prepared without exhaustive care and thought. It is rea a large private corporation should give to its directors under similar circumstances an opinion so superficial he would speedily be called to account therefor.

In the second place such a stranger might wonder why Governor Goldsbor-ough so readily acceded to the advice of the Attorney General and such inti-mates as he consulted with, rendered in such an incomplete manner, to the detriment of his personal and political friend, Senator Jackson, and to the almost certain discredit of the State.

But while a stranger might wonder at these things we in Maryland readily understand them. We have a political boss, brow-beating, intimidating and terrorizing, not only every man who holds public offices in the State of Marylaid but every man who aspires to hold such office. A Jewel With a Temper.

Experts in such matters assure us that among jewels the opal alone defies the ingenuity of the imitator. This stone owes its charm not so much to its own intrinsic merits as to the splendor of the rays of light it reflects, It has been called "the chameleon of stones," and it has always been a great favorite with lovers of gems. Nearly 2,000 years ago Pliny remarked that it "displays at once the piercing fire of carbuncles, the purple brilliancy of amethysts and the sea green of emeralds, the whole blended together and refulgent with a brightness that is quite incredible."

The opal is a stone "with a temper." The diamond rises superior to climate, as does the ruby, the emerald and the sapphire, but the opal is of such delicate organization that when exposed to severe cold it loses color, and unbecomes dull. It is a curious fact, however, that the temperature of one's hand will cause it to resume its wontthe case when it is exposed to the direct rays of the sun.-Harper's.

A Case of Overreaching

By DOROTHEA HALE

Herman Gottz was a very old man. He had received no education in his youth; consequently he had been obliged to do very ordinary work, which had paid him very little. He had had children, but they had died, and he and his wife had no one to rely on in their old age, when they were unable to work. There seemed nothing for them to do but go to the poorhouse, and there is something so melancholy about it that many would rather die than resort to it.

One day Herman while walking along the street found a large pocketbook, one of that kind that will hold a bank bill without its being folded. Herman opened it and saw that it contained $270. He looked about him to see if any one was near who might have dropped it, but there was no one at all in sight. So he put it in his pocket and took it home to his wife, Maria, to consult with her as to what he should do with it.

Maria asked her neighbors how one could find the owner of a pocketbook lost on the street and was told to look in the newspapers, for the owner would doubtless advertise it and would offer a reward for its return. So the next morning Herman went to a reading room for poor persons and looked through all the morning papers, for he could read and write also, though very badly. In one of the papers he found the advertisement he was looking for. It stated that a pocketbook had been lost near where Herman had found it and if returned a third of the contents would be given the finder.

The habit of honesty was firmly fixed on the old man. Indeed, he had never in his life taken anything that did not belong to him, and it was too late for him to begin. If he should keep the money it would trouble him and it would not likely last him as long as he lived anyway. If he returned it he would get a third of it, which would keep him and Maria for several

He took the pocketbook to the owner. who at first praised him very highly for his honesty. Indeed, he was so loud in his praise that he forgot to count out the money for the reward. When Herman asked him for it he opened all the different compartments as though looking for something, then began to abuse the old man, saying that there had been much more money in the pocketbook than he now found der the influence of excessive moisture there. Herman denied having taken anything out of it. whereupon the man began to curse and to swear at Herman, calling him a thief, and, hused fire and brilliancy, as will also be tling him to the door, put him out, giving him a kick at the same time. It happened that a policeman was going by the house at the time and asked what was the matter. The owner of the pocketbook told his story. and Herman charged him with refus ing to pay the reward he had offered. besides assaulting him. The police-man took them to the station, where ed by Sir Hugh Gough, had shut up duct against both of them in order that

The next morning they were brought soon made evident to him that Herman was too old to work and that he and house. Honesty under such circum stances made a very favorable impression, while the conduct of the owner hensible.

"You say," said the judge to the latin the pocketbook than was returned?

"Yes, your honor." "How much more?"

"There were seven $1,000 and four $500 bills, in all $9,000.

"How did you happen to have so much money in such a place?"

"I have carried it there for several years. I don't put money in bank. don't like banks.' "Wasn't it rather an unsafe way to carry bills?" The prisoner saw that he was getting judge. "What reward did you offer for the return of your property?" The man did not reply, and the judge

Plan to do Your Fall Shopping at Baltimore's Best Store

Some time during September, you will want to outfit yourself and your family for the fall and winter. ¶It will pay you to come to Baltimore, to the Hochschild, Kohn & Co. Store, to do this. ¶ You can be sure of four things, when you buy at Baltimore's Best Store:

- 1st That every article represents the very best value that its price will purchase.
- 2nd That every garment or other article in which style is involved, is correct from the standpoint of fashion.
- 3rd That every statement made about any article, whether in our advertisements or by our salesforce, is absolutely truthful
- 4th That no sale is considered closed until the purchaser is completely satisfied--and that unsatisfactory purchases may be returned without question, for exchange or refund.

Autumn stocks are filling up rapidly. Day by day our showing of the new things for wear, for personal use and for the home, grows more and more attractive.

An Episode of the Balkans

By ALBERT KENYON

When the Balkan states had expelled the Turk and were anxious lest the powers should intervene and inflict their ancient enemies upon them the two powers most able to help or harm them were Germany and Russia.

At this time Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria sent a young man in his service to the emperor of Germany to offer certain inducements for him to restrain Austria. This person was Boris Meloff, a very determined young man. who, so far as strength and bravery were concerned, was well adapted to get the message through to Berlin. Austrian spies were on the watch to checkmate any move Prince Ferdinand might make, and Meloff was liable to be attacked and his dispatch taken from him.

On the day of his departure he went to his home and told his wife that he was to go on a journey and the object of it, directing her to get out his pistols and a couple of short knives, which he intended to take with him for defensive purposes

"Fighting is but half the defense" you will have to make," said Kristina, his wife. "You will be in greater danger of losing the dispatch by stratagem. Where will you carry your dis-

"Where would you suggest?" asked

"I will think it over and let you know later."

Boris gave her the dispatch that she might know its size, and before he left her she opened his valise, which she had packed for him, and showed him the dispatch, addressed to his imperial majesty the kaiser, on top of his other clothes, where every one could see it Boris was astonished at this and was about to take the package to put elsewhere when his wife stopped him.

"Boris," she said, "leave it where it is. No one will look for it in your valise. It will be sought for on your person. Keep your weapons on your person and the dispatch in your va-

The young husband concluded to humor his wife. He kissed her and the children goodby and sallied forth.

There is a railway running northwestward from Sofia, and Boris went by train, his route lying through Servia and Austria. There were traitors and spies everywhere, and he had not been long on the train before he knew that there were Austrians aboard who had been informed of his errand. He dare not go apart from the others lest he be attacked. So he kept his seat in the train. He had a letter in his pocket from his wife, which he was tempted to read to while away the time, but he dare not. Besides, she had distinctly charged him not to do so unless he should lose the dispatch. In that case he would find in it a suggestion.

On reaching Belgrade a man stepped up to him and whispered to him that his wife, Kristina, had sent him to say that after Boris had left her she had learned that an attempt would be made to relieve him of the dispatch in changing trains at that point. The handed Boris a note from wife, written in her well known hand, advising him to give the messenger the dispatch to take from the train, to be returned on the train leaving Belgrade for Budapest. Boris hesitated: but, having every confidence in his wife, he concluded to do so. Going with the man to a room in the station where they would not be observed. he opened his valise and gave the man the package. That was the last Boris saw of the man or the package. After leaving Belgrade he looked for him through the train and not finding him, was in agony at having been duped. His great wonder was how the fellow could have duped his wife. Remembering the letter he was to read from her containing a suggestion in case he lost the dispatch, he opened and read it.

Kristina said in the letter that she had no hope of his getting the dispatch through unless by stratagem. She had commissioned a friend to reveal to an Austrian that Boris was going to Berlin with an important dispatch, and the friend offered to get a letter from Boris' wife that would secure it for a money consideration. Kristina's object was to throw others who were after the plunder off the track. The Austrian paid the price for the note and boarded the same train as Boris.

"But," continued Kristina's letter, "if you give him the package in your valise you will not give him the dispatch. I opened the envelope, took out the prince's letter to the czar and replaced it with waste paper. The dispatch you will find sewed in the lining of your coat. If my stratagem is suc cessful you will proceed from Belgrade unmolested, for he who thinks he has the dispatch will doubtless send it unopened to Vienna.

Never was man more delighted at roceiving a letter from his wife than Boris Meloff. But he dare not give vent to his feelings lest he be watched by some of those who had followed him from Sofia. On second thoughts, however, he remembered that he was no longer shadowed, since his enemies believed that they had captured the dispatch. At any rate, he saw no further evidences of intended interference and on reaching Berlin took the dispatch from the place where Kristina had concealed it and delivered it to the foreign office.

Whether or no it had effect on the kaiser in inducing him to curb Austria is a state secret.
