CONGRESSIONAL UNION PLANS FOR COMING YEAR

Will Endeavor To Secure The Passage Of Suffrage Bill, And a Lobby Will Be Organized To Keep Constant Watch.

The Congressional Union (Washington, D. C.,) has decided on plans for the years in Congress, has been engaged to coming year as follows:-

1. Energy will be concentrated parpassage of the suffrage bill. A highly specialized lobby will be organized to keep constant watch over the bill.

2. A great deal of attention will also be given during the coming year to organization work in order that Congressional Districts of the country may be dresses in this State. thoroughly organized before the 1914 elections.

3. A constant series of indoor and demonstrations will be organized at the frage sentiment in the country.

search departments will be developed to derful way. much greater strength than in the past. 5. A fund of $50,000 will be raised in ed. The public is cordially invited. order to finance the campaign.

A study of the public school system in the 48 States, made by the Russel Sage Foundation, in general all-around efficiency, places Washington, where women have full suffrage, first among the states of the Union. Maryland's rank among the 48 States in per cent. of children in schools is 41, and in general efficiency 36.

At the seventh annual meeting of the American Bison Society, held in New York, Professor Franklin W. Hooper, president of the society, declared that with the continued activity of the organization and a renewed interest among the people of the United States and Canada in the buffalo, the animal's future is assured. Census statistics presented showed there were 3453 bufflo in the United States in 1913, an increase of 19 per cent over 1912. There were 549 buffalo calves born last year. The society during 1914 plans to add fifteen buffaloes to the Wind Cave National Game Preserve in South Dakota and establish herds in a national park in North Dakota and in either Highland Park or the Adirondacks in New York. Bolgiano's "Greater Baltimore" Tomato Better Than Stone Ever Was Just doubles the yield of many of the best Can-ning Tomatoes you have ever grown. Brilliant Red Color—One of the Handsomest Tomatoes you have ever seen for Canning Purposes. Ripens Evenly To The Stem—Is Free From Ridges, Cracks and Blight.

Extracts from Bulletin No. 165, Vol. XVI, April, 1913.

"The average calculated yields for three years of eleven varieties tested shows 'Greater Baltimore' ranking First with a yield of 16.25 tons per acreagainst Stone 13.38 tons per acre.
"Considering Yield and Quality the eleven varieties tested will rank as follows as a field crop for canning:—First 'Greater Baltimore.'
"Picking season from July 25th to October 1st, the 'Greater Baltimore' yielded nearly 22 Tons Per Acre

"Picking season from July 25th to October 1st, the 'Greater Baltimore' yielded nearly 22 Tons Per Acre.

"The 'Greater Baltimore,' which has been gaining in popularity with the Canning Trade during the past two years, begins bearing 12 to 16 days earlier than the Stone, when both are sown and handled in a similar manner throughout the season.

"It will also be seen that 'Greater Baltimore' is searly a bearer as Chalk's Early Jewel, which is generally considered an early sort.

"It is largely the Earliness and the Uniformity with which the plants bear a Large Number of Large Smooth Fruit throughout the ripening season that makes the 'Greater Baltimore' superior to the Stone, which has been the standard canning variety for many years.

"The average date of first ripening for the 'Greater Baltimore' was 120 days from the sowing of the seed in the hot beds and 65 days from the time the young plants were set in the field."

Ever since originating this now famous Tomato, we have year after year by carefully eleminating and selecting—built up what has been proven by Agricultural Experiment Stations to be the Best Main Crop and Canning Tomato In The World. SCRIPTIONS. Few readers of newspapers fully and clearly understand the laws governing subscriptions. Following are the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States on the subject:

Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to renew their subscriptions.

If subscribers order a discontinuance of their periodicals the publisher may continue to send them until all dues are paid.

If the subscriber refuses to take the periodical from the postoffice to which they are directed, he is responsible until he has settled his bill and ordered the paper discontinued.

If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the papers are sent to the former address, the subscriber is held responsible.

The courts have held that refusing to take periodicals from the postoffice, or removing and leaving them uncalled for is primafacie evidence of intention to defraud.

If subscribers pay in advance they are bound to give notice at the end of the time if they do not wish to continue taking it, otherwise the publisher is authorized to send it and the subscriber will be responsible until express notice with payment of all arrearages is sent to the publisher.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farme most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.-Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

THE MAN WHO IS HUMAN.

A man who never made a mistake and whose judgment never erred has no right to be living on this earth. His place is in the front row in heaven, seat one, on the aisle. He is not human.

Real flesh and blood admires the human, the man who errs in judgment and who upon being convinced acknowledges his error and makes amends, who unwittingly does an injury but makes full reparation for it, the man who are sane, let us hope. stumbles and even falls, but who gets on his feet again and faces the world with a manly bravery that is born of good impulses and a good heart. The world loves him just "as all the world loves a lover."

Sanctified selfishness and piety-coated hardness of heart under a "I-am-holier-than-thou" countenance is not legal tender among true men and is counterfeit the sight of God.

ORIGIN OF CANDIES.

The making of confectionery origipoor to permit of its being eaten for its own sake alone and as a mere luxury.

Admiral George Dewey is seventy-six.

When a man is standing still his weight acts vertically downward, but on moving he exerts a side thrust greater than his weight. Consequently a crowd moving rapidly on a structure like a pier exerts a tremendous sidewise pressure which tends to throw the pier over. If a man stands on a plank bridge it bends slightly, but if he walks across it sways violently up and down. A regiment of soldiers marching in step across a trestle or other light bridge would cause such a tremendous swaying motion that it. would give way, and so soldiers always "break step" in crossing such a bridge.

On a certain swing footbridge across a glen in the north of Scotland is a notice forbidding Newfoundland dogs to be taken across. These dogs trot in such perfect rhythm as to cause a dangerous "sway" in a small bridge.

A man rising to a standing from a sitting posture exerts on the ground a force equal to twice his weight. Thus when a crowd suddenly springs to its feet at a football match or theater the strain on the supporting stands is enormous and has to be allowed for by the engineers.-Pearson's Weekly.

Cards For Juliet.

A charming custom among tourists at Verona is that of leaving their visiting cards at the reputed tomb of Juliet. This act, however, must be taken as a pretty compliment to the immortal love story rather than as an offering in memoriam, for it is unlike ly that travelers have not learned that the tomb is in reality one of those pious fictions so dear to the sentimental and that even Shakespeare's tragedy itself is generally held to have no historical basis. A writer in the Graphic of London says, "The so called tomb, of red Veronese marble, in the gardens of the Orphanage, was forwriter is no less severe. "There is plenty to see in Verona," he says, "the cities of northern Italy, without wasting time, money and emotion in looking at frauds." But the custom remains and will remain as long as there are tourists

Neglect of the Scalp.

Inheritance has something to do with baldness. Men in a family usually have a disposition to get bald at about the same age. Certain scalp diseases cause baldness, but the largest factor in baldness is neglect. The scalp is exceedingly dirty in the average run of men and boys. If any other six inches of skin were kept as dirty as the scalp it would be considered a disgrace. There is no reason why boys should not be taught to wash the hair with soap and water every day, then dry and brush it well: As soon as the boy gets old enough to wash his ears and to keep his face clean down to the collar line he should also keep his scalp clean. If the hair after wash ing is too dry a little grease can be used. Following this plan there should be no premature baldness. Generally the horse is out before the stable door is locked.-Chicago Tribune.

Nice Distinction.

he earth pyramids of Ussigne are situated high up in the Val d'Herens which runs south to Evolena from Sion in the Rhone valley. They are the remains of the lateral moraine formed by the great glacier which once occupied the bed of the Val d'Heremence, which here enters the Val d'Herens on the left. The perched boulders have protected the underlying conglomerate from the corroding action of the rain, and as a result we have the so-called rain or earth pillars of the geologist. At one part they are tunnelled to admit the passage of the post road from Sion to Evolena.

Caught by His White Hair

By MARTHA EVERSHAM

When I was a girl of seventeen I was far older than my years. Young tion plain woo! material is used, but fellows of my own age seemed to me what they really were-beardless boys. They were full of sports and nonsense, whereas I was philosophically inclined. I loved to talk with men who knew a great deal more than I did-men who could talk learnedly on a variety of subjects. Thus I was thrown in with those who were usually double my age.

But my intimacy with such persons was entirely intellectual. Nothing akin to love was excited by any of them. Indeed, many of them had passed middle age and were incapable of sympathizing with a girl in her teens. While it was true that I had intellectual cravings, it was also true that I was still a young girl. There were times when I wished for companionship with young persons. But I was rather inclined to be young with them than that they-I refer to the men-should be young with me. What I mean is that there is a certain dignity in a young man that a girl looks for in one whom she would consider seriously as a possible life companion.

When I was nineteen my father decided that I should finish my education by a trip abroad. We sailed one February morning for Naples, intending to work our way northward with the opening spring, spending the hot summer months in Switzerland. On reaching Naples, when we were going ashore in the ship's tender, I noticed a young man whose hair had evidently turned prematurely gray. Never have I seen so striking a contrast between a young face and white hair. He appeared to be recovering from an illness. He sat opposite me in the boat, and for the life of me I could not keep my eyes off his contrasting features. He knew that I was looking at him, and this fixed his attention upon me.

We drove from the custom house to the hotel, our party of three in an open cab loaded down with hand baggage On the way we passed another cab containing the white haired young man. Again we exchanged glances as he drove by us, and when we brought up at the hotel entrance he was get ting out of his cab to enter the house I confess I was secretly pleased that we would be at the same abiding place of my father introduced the young man to us as George Caruthers, telling us that he had been ill and was traveling for his health. The introduced would be grateful for any attention we might show his friend. Mother sympathized with Mr. Caruthers, a stranger in a strange land and not strong. She made quite a pet of him, and before we left Naples, he having no definite plans, she invited him to travel with us. A party traveling for pleasure becomes intimate at once. In these days of form the only way of making new old friends. if I may be allowed the expression, is travel in company with others. I was during a sojourn in the principal Italian cities from Naples to Milan and on the railways connecting them a constant companion of George Caruthers. It seemed to me that there was as great a contrast in his disposition as there was in his outward features. He had the quiet dignity, the depth of understanding of a man and the freshness of youth. These accorded admirably with his appearance. He had, too, a way of falling in with my moods. When I wished him serious he was serious; when I preferred that he should be youthful he was youthful.

These persons with young faces and white hair are very deceptive as to their age. I angled with Mr. Caruthers to draw from him his age. I elicited certain bits of information from him with the intention of putting them together and thus deducing how old he was. But he soon divined my intention and gave his answer in a way to defeat my purpose. Then he would laugh at me for my failure.

We reached northern Italy in a counle of months, and by this time my newly made friend had quite recovered his strength. His complexion was naturally florid, and the contrast between his face and his hair under his improved condition was the greater. He was always close shaven, but could see that his beard did not partake of the color of his hair. But even this was difficult to determine, for his beard was evidently meager and of

It is well nigh impossible for a young man to travel in company with a young girl without an affair of the heart, and our case was no exception George Caruthers proposed to me or Lake Leman just before we reached Geneva. In reply I told him that had but one objection to him - that which was now an attraction would one day be a detriment. When he began to grow old he would look far older than he was on account of his white hair. He took off his hat with one hand and with the other pulled off his scalp and an overlay of white hair. displaying a head of short, thick blond hair beneath.

"A wig!" I exclaimed.

"A wig." he replied. "After leaving America, in consequence of fever, my hair began to come out, and before reaching Naples it was nearly all gone The only wig I could get on the ship was this one, and since knowing you and being with you constantly I have not liked to change it."

Singular that I zhould have been taught by a wig. isn't it?

A Liar or Lunatic

By F. A. MITCHEL

A party of young men were sitting around a table in the cafe of a New York club. The subject turned on the marvelous feats that are said to be performed by the fakirs of India. A number of these feats were described, each one more wonderful than the last. require seven yards of material twen when Ned Garland told the following:

"You've hit on a subject that comes very near home to me," he said, "for one of my family was operated on by one of these Indians many years ago with a result that has recently made my hair curl.

"During the last war with Englandin 1814 or thereabouts-my ancestors lived on the family estate or farm, for that's all it was, not half a mile from where we are now sitting. One day my great-grandfather, Timothy Garland, a young bridegroom, had a quarrel with his wife and told her he wished he might not see her again in a hundred years. Then he left the house with a bang of the door and, mounting a horse, rode down to Fraunces' tavern, where he proceeded to get gloriously

"The next day, when he was sober, he was beside himself with remorse and rode back home to beg his wife's pardon. He found her lying in a comatose condition, from which it was impossible to arouse her. She had left with the servants a paper for him on which was written:

"You have wished you might not see me again in a hundred years. You won't see me as I was till that time has passed.

"The upshot of it was that when he had gone down to the tavern one of these Indian heathens came along, offering to tell my great-grandmother's fortune and do many wonderful things. She was full of anger at the time and told him she would give him all the gold she had in a stocking if he would put her to sleep for a hundred years. The rascal took her at her word and performed the trick.

"Her husband kept watching for her to come to herself. He said nothing about her condition, not caring to have it known that it was through his harshness that she had come into it. But she remained as she was, and after awhile he locked her up in a room, and since he made no mention of her she was at last forgotten.

"When the farm was sold the family vault was retained and the ground underneath which it was excavated descended to me. When I came of age of it with other property I concluded to inspect it. I found a grewsome place full of coffins, some of which had partly rotted away. One that had been made of marble interested me. From a crack in the lid protruded a paper. I pulled it out and found that it had been written in a language I knew nothing about.

"I took the thing to a professor of unknown tongues in Columbia college, and he told me it was written in one of the languages of India and I had to get an Indian of that province to

"I was told by the translator that only an Indian fakir could do the job, but luckily one had just arrived from Bombay, and I was informed where he was to be found. He read the paper and said he would try to bring my great-grandmother to life if I would pay him $100 in case he succeeded. I agreed to the terms, had the sarcophagus removed to the top floor of a building I owned, paid in advance,

"He wouldn't permit me to be pres ent during his manipulations, but called me in after six hours. On a lounge was a woman about twenty-three years of age. She seemed only half alive, but was sufficiently resuscitated to speak feebly.

"'Jim,' she said, 'how could you?" "'I'm not Jim,' I said. 'I'm Ned.' "'Oh, dear! What's the matter with you, or is anything the matter with me? I feel so weak

"She had evidently taken me for her husband, my great-grandfather, who was just my age in 1813.

"I looked about for the Indian, and he had gone. It struck me that I'd better have some one about, and I said to my great-grandmother:

"'Please excuse me a moment. You are not well and need attention. I am going to summon assistance.'

"Do you know that while I was looking at her, even during this short time, she seemed to have grown older. Without waiting for her consent I ran downstairs, but as I went it occurred to me that I had better not be in a hurry about the matter; there were many dangers connected with it. I paused, pondered and went back to the room. I suppose I had been gone twenty minutes. And yet while I had been absent the resuscitated bride of twenty-three had grown to be an old woman of 123. And as I looked she gave a gasp and within a minute had become a shriveled mummy." There was a brief silence, which was broken by one of the party, who said: "Ned Garland, you are the biggest Har that ever entered this club or ever will enter it. "That's why I didn't summon assistance. I knew I'd be put down ei ther for a liar or a lunatic. Waiter take the orders!"
