lantic fleet at Tampico, Mexico, was the boat and released. ordered by Secretary of the Navy Daniels after a cabinet meeting in which President Wilson laid before the cabinet the necessity for backing up the demand of Rear Admiral Mayo that the American flag be saluted by the dent. Huerta commander there.

The Atlantic fleet is under command of Rear Admiral Badger and comprises the second strongest fleet in the

In addition to the fleet the 1300 marines at New Orleans, 800 of whom were on their way to Philadelphia, when stopped, have been ordered to Tampico at once.

Naval experts in Washington stated that a single broadside from the fleet would blow all the Tampico fortifications to pieces. It is not believed, however, that the fleet will do anything more at present than make a hostile demonstration. No shots will be fired unless congress authorizes a declaration of war.

The cabinet had discussed the situaconsensus of opinion was that the Washington government should insist on a salute. After the meeting there was a conspicuous silence on the part of all officers, and Secretary Daniels hurried to the navy department, where he prepared a memorandum of naval

This action followed an earlier announcement that further investigation of the arrest of the United States marines at Tampico had been decided

It was learned that Charge d'Affairs O'Shaughnessy had reported that the Huerta government actually had promised to fire a salute to the Dolphin, but conditioned it on a salute of Edward Wendel, a Newark, N. J., esponse. The American government, iron and steel merchant, was sentence public salute to the colors without conditions.

No time limit for the salute has said on high authority. President Wilare not disposed to regard time as essalute must be fired.

It became known that Senor Algara, charge of the Mexican embassy in Washington, called personally on Secretary Bryan last Saturday and transmitted the apology of President Huerta for the Tampico incident. Secretary Bryan reiterated to Senor Algara at that time that the United States would insist on the American flag being saluted at Tampico.

Officials said that while no ultimatum had been issued to the Huerta government, the mobilization of the fleet at Tampico was intended to put the United States in position to enforce one should the immediate developments make it necessary.

Club Stories.

Two stories are told of the time and work for the returning strikers. when the Athenaeum club, while its clubhouse was undergoing renovation, was hospitably taken in by the United Service club.

One was of a distinguished officer who, after a vain hunt for his umbrella, was heard to mutter, "That comes of letting those — bishops into the club!"

when an Athenaeum man, while his club was still the guest of the other, asked for the librarian, the answer was, "Please, sir, he is in the dining falls, but later it was recovered. No in the superior court in Savannah, Ga., room carving the roast beef!"-London

SIX HURT IN GUN FIGHT; TWO MAY DIE

Revolvers Used in Battle in Soaps Body and Slides Through Shamokin Restaurant.

Six persons were shot in a pistol battle in Simon Visnefskie's restourant in Shamokin, Pa.

Visnefskie and Paul Kolasis were probably fatally injured, and Joseph Linderman, Alex Golden, Joseph Yarseverely injured.

Dusing Visnefskie's absence a crowd entered his restaurant and started fighting. He appeared with a gun, which he fired. Several rushed to his assistance, while others began wrecking the interior.

A score of revolvers were brought into play and after Visnefskie became brother, Alexander, and friends drove the antagonists to the hills. The injured were removed to the hospital.

Ex-Convict Killed Man For Revenge. Found dying, with a bullet wound, self-inflicted, in his breast, in the va cant summer retreat of the Convent of Notre Dame, near Moylan, Pa., a negro known as Walter Smith and also as Richard Jones, of Media, and who had been paroled from the eost ern penitentiary on March 10, was arrested and placed in jail, suspected of murdering William H. McKniff in Media on Wednesday evening. A reward of $1500 has been offered for his

The police believe that the motive of the killing was revenge, as McKniff was the son of former Police Chief James E. McKniff, who arrested Smith the home of former United States Marshal John B. Robinson. The younger McKniff was shot in front of the Robinson home.

It was reported at the jail in Media that Smith had confessed this, and had said he had intended to "get" the father, who is seventy-nine years old. Failing in that, he shot the son.

Smith was found, weak from the loss of blood, and groaning in pain in a bed on the second floor of the convent by John L. Fox, of Media, a plumber, and three other men. He was in his underclothing. On the floor was found a revolver of 22-caliber bore, the same size as the weapon with which McKniff was shot. In a bathtub in a room nearby were scraps of his clothing which he and burned.

In the tub were found also pieces of letterheads which are believed to have been those of the Burdsall & Adams company, of Media, cigar manufacturers, by whom McKniff was employed. Papers of this kind were taken from McKniff after he had been shot

Its condition is pitiful and they were right who said it should be removed rather than permit it to exist in such a manner. However to remove it would naturally cause much regret on the part of every inhabitant as well as clearly showing the lack of civic duty. Moreover its removal would tend to encourage demolition among the youths rather than to instill in them the spirit of upbuilding and making beautiful. Some cities have revived the old Athenian oath and in forming clubs for boys, have made it a requirement for membership. The youth would do well to memorize this oath, for it tells how the ancient Athenian boy was taught to regard civic obligations. He was pledged to perform them faithfully and to transmit the city not less, but greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to him. If the town is beautified the impression made upon the youth will be of a favorable nature.

This then is the spirit to cultivate, if the young would become urbane. The work of the civic club has been a source of joy to many and if it continues in the direction it has thus far chosen the indorsement and cooperation of every citizen will be gladly given. A CITIZEN.

To The Editor of The Chronicle:

In your last issue of the CHRONICLE there were some inaccuracies in the article entitled:-"Wanted To See His Daughter." The real facts in the case are as follows-

Edward Lyter appeared on the premises and asked to see his daughter, which request was not granted, for he was not in proper condition. Considering that we had not only the legal but mor-It is quite a distirction for a cow to To guard against disappointment in al responsibility of the child, we told him we were not dealing with him but the Supt. of the Orphanage, and we told him to leave the premises.

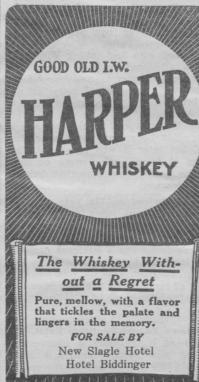

He acted in a rough manner refusing to go and using profane language. We had received a message that this man Lyter was in town in an intoxicated condition and had expressed his intention to come to our place. Knowing his character we asked that the constable come out.

We note further that the Squire dismissed the case because there was no direct charge when it was stated fully and clearly that this fellow was guilty of illegal trespass upon the premises. When he would not leave Constable Adelsberger was asked to arrest him for he had already annoyed us longer than was necessary. The Squire asked if Lyter would promise to leave would we be satisfied? We could not place any confidence in the promise of a man of Lyter's character, who was then under the influence of alcohol. We replied, "No." However, in the wise discretion of the Squire, with a clear case of illegal trespass before him, Lyter was dismissed. Happily the Constable realized the gravity of the charge and held Lyter for his appearance before Supt. Hartman of the Hoffman Orphanage of which the child was an inmate. We feel that your item has placed us in a false position (Lyter doing nothing) any confidence in the promise of a man in a false position (Lyter doing nothing) and we trust you will give the same publicity to this account as you did to the former statement

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn .- Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

OILING THE STREETS.

The result of last year's treatment of our streets and alleys was productive of so much genuine satisfaction that it is to be hoped that the Town Commissioners will soon make plans for a thorough oiling of our thoroughfares for the coming season. Every one profited by their sensible and beneficent move and as a consequence it is fair to assume that all will be anxious to contribute again, and liberally, to the fund necessary for this purpose. No funds, out of the present resources being available, this much desired boon to our townspeople can only be effected by means of private subscription. MATHIAS FOR COMMISSION.

Governor Goldsborough would make a popular move in appointing State Senator J. P. T. Mathias as member of the State Roads Commission. The Governor has the chance to appoint a Republican and at the same time honor Western Maryland. How could he more fittingly serve his party or this section of the State than by naming our friend and neighbor for a place on that commission? Regardless of politics, men everywhere in this and adjoining counties have indicated that the appointment of Senator shipped before the mast. Mathias would be most gratifying to them. The Senator not only knows the people but the needs of the people. In the event of his appointment—and it is conceded that it would be an excellent one-Mr. Goldsborough would have the satisfaction of knowing that the duties of his appointee would be discharged in a manner that would reflect credit on himself, on Frederick county and the State.

THE GETTYSBURG ROAD.

Ever since the first part of the late Governor Crother's term the question of Maryland improving the Gettysburg road from Emmitsburg to the Pennnsylvania line and Pennsylvania continuing field, has been agitated and discussed by the authorities of both States. Yet nothing has been done. The necessity for a complete rebuilding of this important and much used road has been apparent for years. Its condition in fair weather is in many places no better than a country mud lane. In bad weather its state is almost indescribable.

Next week, it is understood. representatives of the Good Roads commissions of Pennsylvania and Maryland will meet in Emmitsburg, presumably to arrive at some definite conclusion about their action will be satisfactorily final and that work will be commenced at as early date as practicable.

EASTER IN EMMITSBURG.

We have more than once taken pride in recording the fact that Emmitsburg is a church-going community. Nor has our statement ever been challenged. Every Church feast and fact is here solemnly observed and church duties religiously fulfilled. The restrictions incident to the past season of penitence, prayer and self abnegation were, as heretofore, faithfully and cheerfully Easter was indeed the "Queen of Festivals" to all those who prepared themselves for the true inward and spiritual enjoyment of hardest of all fur bearing animals to trap. He delights in digging up traps, springing them, eating the bait and otherwise disturbing the set without getting caught. His sense of smell is very acute. The best way to trap him is to build a bonfire over the set after the traps have been properly placed. Throw into the embers some bacon bones of sage hen or grouse. The coyote for stray bits of meat and is therefore less wary. The fire obliterates the traces of the set, eliminates the tracks and smell of a human being, and the odor of the burned meat will attract him from a long distance. He is more guised with the remnants of a campfire than any other unless you have a carcass literally surrounded with traps with a severe winter on and no other carcasses within miles.-W. F. Wilcox in Farm and Fireside.

Meeting Mrs. Spider. In "Insect Biographies With Pen and Camera" the author pictures the plight of the unlucky fly who has entered Mrs. Spider's parlor: terious manner has suddenly enveloped it when a creature of terrible aspect hastily rushes out upon it. Eight bead-like eyes glare wildly upon the terrified fly. A large, hairy and bristly finger-like palpus on each side of this appalling face waves and flourishes with angry menace in the air, apparently quivering with malignant glee. Then one of those combed and clawed feet is stretched toward the happrisoner, and the threads that hold the fly are suddenly tightened up as the monster pulls them together. Then the spinnerets eject a shower of silken strands over the fly, and it is spun round and round on the threads that hold it until at last it is securely enveloped, still alive, in silken bonds.

A curious effect of the wear and tear to which the earth's crust is con tinually being subjected is shown in the Devil's slide in Utah and other peculiar formations all over the west There exist on the South river, in the Wasatch mountains (a part of the Rockies, singularly capped pinnacles or slender pillars rising from 40 to 400 ders. adhered to and as a result this feet high and most of them crowned or capped by huge stones. ### The Regional Banks.

The City of Baltimore is entirely justified in the vigorous protest she is making because of the slight put upon her in the selection of the regional banks. Our big neighbor is one of the greatest financial centers in the country. The city is a great industrial hive, with It is struggling to escape from the enormous commercial and manufacturunexpected net which in some mys- ing interests. To pass Baltimore by and make the city a way station between Philadelphia and Richmond, dependent on the latter for any advantages that will accrue from the new banking system, would seem to justify the suspicion that the board charged the regional banks was dominated by other interests than simply a desire to best serve the public good. The selection of Richmond instead of either Baltimore or Washington, was most unhappy. It is an indignity upon both cities and in the opinion of The Herald the influences that swayed the board must be looked for higher up than any claims that were advanced by Richmond or its banker representative in that body. Richmond rates much lower than Baltimore in every respect and the attempt to divert the flow of money to artist Titiens "used to suffer from a the Virginia Capital will avail little. the matter. Historic Sense of Americans. The good American does not feel a stranger over here and we regard him as one of our own family. But why does he come? Not altogether because the call of a common heritage impels him, not entirely drawn by the attractions, commercial, artistic, social and natural, of London and England. He comes chiefly, perhaps, in obedience to the historic sense which is innate in good Americans. Wherever the historic sense may best be satisfied-in with the responsibility of distributing Rome, Athens, Paris, Madrid or Constantinople-there the American is found. He may win his satisfaction in a frenzied flurry with guidebooks and binoculars, only half digesting the glories that he scamps. That is the defect of his quality, the consequences of the habits of life which America has thrust upon its sons. But the historic sense is there and, even unconsciously, your good American is its obedient slave.—London Express.

At length it became necessary for Jean to to to the hospital for an operation. "I will make a bargain with you, Jean,' said her mother. Tonic of Outdoor Life.

Outdoor life, contact with the earth, the digging, the wheeling of a barrow, even the quiet contemplation of un folding animal and plant life, are better tonics and restorers than any man

There was one gardener who did wonders for himself at the very prosaic task of digging holes. Through a period of three years he dug 400 holes for trees and shrubs. He was three times as strong; he asserted, at the expiration of that time than ever be fore, and he weighed twenty pounds more. The improvement in his attitude toward life was too great to es-

Didn't Watch His Watch.

In a subway crowd not long ago a New York man was "touched" for his watch. The watch was not intrinsically valuable, but the New York man wanted it back for sentimental reasons and inserted divers advertisements in the papers offering $50 for the return of the watch and "no questions asked.'

The "dip" who had "lifted" the watch saw the advertisements and concluded to take the $50. He called. on the New York man, handed him the imepiece and demanded the reward.

The owner of the watch was only too happy to give it to him. After examining the watch he returned it to his pocket and handed over five tendollar bills. The "dip" pocketed the money and departed. There was little Restfulness of Flowers.

Flowers in the home divert the mind and rest the weary eyes of the housewife and mother.

A bouquet in the sickroom aids in keeping the mind off the disease and often starts the brain on a new channel of thought that puts the patient on the road to recovery

Flowers in the office or on the desk of the weary clerk or stenographer will produce such a telling effect that by actual comparison more work is accomplished by those whose eyes and brains are rested by the presence of those gifts from nature.

Artists visit the parks and gardens to study the flowers, and their orbs are wonderfully toned up by the refreshing glimpses of the colors in nature, and no artist has ever been successful who does not study colors in the beautiful flowers.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Bad Disease.

A well known railroad president once took occasion to visit a small southern town to enjoy the excellent fishing near by. He carefully concealed his identity and was consequently snubbed by a "leading citizen" with whom he attempted to strike up a conversation on the banks of the stream. When leaving he secured the services of an aged black to carry his things from the hotel to the depot. There the departing visitor caught sight of the man who had given him the cold shoulder. Poor Smith!" he said, smiling amus edly. "Suffering from an aggravated attack of egotism." "Dat so?" said Uncle Silas in surprise, following his gaze. ADDY," said Jack, "my very favorite hero is Abraham Lincoln, and I think it's splendid his birthday is celebrated every year, don't you?" "Yes," said daddy, "it is really only right that it should be kept, for he gave up his whole life to do good to the country and to all its

"Besides being such a good man and doing so much for his country he was very fond of studying, and as a little boy his great ambition was to make wonderful speeches.

"When Abraham Lincoln was a little boy he had a garden full of cabbages. It was his very own garden, for he planted the cabbage seeds himself, and he watched them grow with the greatest interest. When their little heads peeped up above the ground he was delighted and clapped his hands, saying, 'My cabbages are coming up, my cabbages are coming up." Then, where they were thickest, he took them up and with a little trowel he dug another row of holes into which he put them, just as he had seen his father do. And then he watched some more until the cabbages were full grown, and they all stood in rows as straight and stiff and erect as could be. And little Abraham Lincoln was so proud of them. He now was quite satisfied with his cabbages, and so he thought he'd no longer fuss about them as they couldn't be any nicer than they were. So he pretended they were real people and named them. The straightest and very best looking one he named General Strong, and another he named Captain Brave. One more he admired especially and thought it an exceptionally fine looking cabbage and called it Mr. President, which was and is, of course, the highest ambition of every little American boy. Lincoln would get a little stump and sit down and begin to make speeches to the rows of cabbages. He told them all his ideas on bravery and truth telling and kindness, and then he'd turn to the cabbage he'd named General Strong and say. 'Don't you agree with me, general?' or 'Don't you think that's right. Mr. Pres-

"One day little Abraham Lincoln's father was walking by this small cabbage garden when he saw his little son talking to the cabbages and telling them the fine things he hoped would come to pass one day.

"His father thought to himself: 'I wonder if my little boy will ever really be a great man. At least, he's a splendid little boy, and one person-his daddy -will always be proud of him!

"And that is a good thing to have one's daddy proud of one, and it shows that being a good little boy makes one turn out to be a fine man."

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Rudolph Van Vechten, a young man of leisure, is astonished to see a man enter No. 1313, a house across the street from the Powhatan club. The house has long been unoccupied and is spoken of as the House of Mystery.

CHAPTER II—Several persons at regular intervals enter No. 1813.

CHAPTER III—Van Vechten expresses concern to his friend, Tom Phinney, regarding the whereabouts of his cousin and finance, Paige Carew. A fashionably attired woman is seen to enter the House of Mystery. A man is forcibly ejected from the house. Van Vechten and Tom follow the man and find him dead in the street.

CHAPTER IV—Van Vechten is attracted by the face of a girl in the crowd of onlookers surrounding the body. Later he discovers the girl gazing at him with a look of scorn from the windows of the mysterious house.

CHAPTER VI—Tom Phinney goes alone on a yachting trip. He recognizes among some persons in a passing motor boat two men whom he had seen enter the House of Mystery. He sees one of them, a Mr. Callis, on shore later and follows him. Tom is seized, blindfolded and taken to a house. He hears a girl named Jessie, evidently the daughter of the man in authority, question his captors. A sweetvoiced girl later protests against the roughness of his captors.

Book II.

CHAPTER I—Van Vechten calls on his uncle, Theodore Van Vechten, big man in Wall street and known as the "Man of Iron," in search of information regarding the whereabouts of Paige Carew.

CHAPTER II—Detective Flint shows Van Vechten a gold mesh purse found in the House of Mystery. Van recognizes it as belonging to Paige Carew.

CHAPTER V.

Tom Phinney Returns.

During this ride it occurred to Van Vechten that he had seen nothing of Tom Phinney since he had sent him scratched list of names. One each of away brusquely the day before. He wondered not a little at his friend's prolonged absence, hoped that Tom was not huffy, and finally concluded that he had tired of waiting upon an uncertainty and had gone off upon following message, directed to each some jaunt of his own.

The Man of Iron harkened attentively to what Rudolph had to say, but if address. She will not write until she the narration prompted any misgivings he showed them not at all. He considered a moment, after the younger man had finished, then said:

"One woman might drop from sight in a number of ways, but it is too imnd Josephine could have been away with without a ripple reaching the shore. Both merit a stern rebuke, although I apprehend that nothing serious has happened."

And Theodore Van Vechten dismissed the subject, nor would he discuss it any further during Rudolph's

"Well," Van Vechten announced, "I am going to turn in now. And I want to be up by seven."

An hour later, satisfied that his master actually was in a sound slumber, Barnicle blinked at the bedroom door in a bewildered way, then at the cellarette. Next he produced a key,

"Where Is Paige Carew?"

"1 understand—some time tomorrow night. I was afraid for a while that I could not find an opportunity to call you tonight; his coming 'ome so early and unexpected like, don't y'know, and his being that concerned quite took me breath away."

Barnicle replaced the receiver as noiselessly as he had taken it down, and after switching off the lights stole away to regions best known to himself.

Next morning, bright and early, Rudolph Van Vechten was seated at his writing-table, while Barnicle, tall, white-haired, cadaverous of countenance, but extraordinarily efficient, moved quickly about his morning tasks, and so quietly that the young man was not aware of his presence.

Van Vechten was compiling a list of his friends and acquaintances in London, together with such names of Paige's friends as he could recall. Having completed this to his satisfaction. he next directed his attention to the composition of a cablegram which, he trusted, would elicit news of Paige or Mrs. Devereaux without occasioning too much comment on the part of the recipient.

It was well after ten o'clock when he finished his labors and departed. and Barnicle broke into activity again. Hastening over to the writing-table, he went deftly through a number of papers. Van Vechten had left several rough drafts of the cablegram and also one or two complete, but badly these Barnicle selected, carefully folded and placed in his pocket.

In the meantime a taxi cab conveyed Van Vechten to the nearest telegraph office, where he filed the person on his list:

"Have lost my Cousin Paige Carew's hears from me. Fear she is ill. Can you supply her present address?" He left instructions that all replies be delivered at the Powhatan, whither he betook himself to wait.

Barely had he made himself comfortprobable to believe that both Paige able in front of one of the windows made overlooking the street, when the hall that these people are the same who door again opened. He looked round and beheld Tom Phinney. Reserving his greeting until Tom drew nearer, he was about to turn away again, but something in Tom's appearance and bearing abruptly struck him as being a bit cold. He gave the truant a sharp

For one thing, Tom's noiseless entrance was in marked contrast to his customary boisterous arrival; a grave and thoughtful cast now sat upon his usually good-humored countenance, and he was contemplating Van Vechten with a preoccupied stare which plainly took no note of his surroundings.

Seeming all at once to become aware of the figure over by the window, Tom halted, uttered a faint "Hullo, Ruddy," then proceeded to a chair beside Van Vechten's into which he sank deliberately. He sat gazing dreamily into the street, as inert as protoplasm.

Van Vechten surveyed him from time to time, growing more and more puzzled, as the minutes passed without sound or movement from his com-

A grunt from Tom was the sole response. He didn't even trouble to look around. Then Van Vechten injected a note of cheerfulness into his next

A laugable ambition," commented his friend, still eyeing him curiously. "I never had a job myself, nor any desire for one; which, as has been pointed out to me more than once, is nothing whatever to my credit. What do you purpose doing, may I inquire?"

"I'm serious," returned Tom, scowltend to go to work. Think of all the years I've squandered in idleness-"

"She has the tenderest, most musical voice in the world," said Tom fervently.

"That's the genuine poetic touch," said his friend. "And her hair?—her eyes? Is she tall or short-Psyche, or Diana? Hebe, or Hippolyta?"

"I-I don't know," stammered Tom. "What!" Tom twisted and squirmed uneasily

The other's aspect grew grave enough now. It was plainly manifest that, since they had parted Sunday, Tom had undergone an experience of some kind, that had affected him profound-

"Suppose," said his friend sympathetically, "you tell me all about her." And Tom did. He began with his day upon the waters of the sound, concluding this stage of his adventure with an account of the motorboat and its occupants.

At mention of the white-haired servant, Van Vechten started violently, but managed to restrain the ejaculation that leaped to the tip of his tongue. His interest was now doubled, and he settled himself to harken to the narrative, which he followed thenceforward to the end with a conception that inspired Tom to genuine

Tom nodded. "Then listen to this," Van Vechten pursued. "During your absence, Paige's silence has assumed a really disquieting aspect; I am now deeply concerned about her-even now am awaiting replies to a dozen or more cablegrams I sent off this morning. Her gold purse was found yesterday in that

His friend stared at him blankly. "How the dickens did it get there?" he exclaimed.

"To be sure. And what has happened to my cousin? Those are two questions that I am extremely anxious to have answered as soon as possible; questions that must be answered, in fact. Do you not see how your promise to the unidentified young lady has tied our hands at a vital mo-

After much more consideration of the difficulties confronting them, Van Vechten offered the following pro-

"Ruddy, I can't stand for it," Tom quietly, but none the less firmly, objected.

"Look here, Tom." Van Vechten all at once grew very grave, and there was a new tone in his voice that caught Tom's attention. "I am as interested in one of those girls as you are in the other. Perhaps"—hesitantly-"we are both interested in the

This was the most astonishing disclosure that Tom had yet heard. "You?" he almost shouted his amazement.

Van Vechten nodded. "I saw her in again at a window across the street "Rocky Cove-h'-m. What's hap- while we were returning here. Whether she is the girl in the dark or Jessie, "Describe her," Tom eagerly inter-

But Tom was emphatically shaking his head. "That-except for the beautiful part of it-could not be the girl who came to me in the dark. I don't know why I know it, but I do. But go on with what you started to say."

"I was going to say that I am coning. "I mean just what I say. I in fident of this girl's innocence of any wrongdoing, or even a suspicion of wrongdoing. Such being the case, no harm can befall either of them from

"At any rate if that hulking bruiser knows anything about Paige, he must be made to tell it; Flint can do whatever he pleases with regard to the

Their talk wandered far into the realm of speculation, carrying them over the luncheon hour and back to their seats in the lounge. It was profitless, and the entry of a messenger with a sheaf of cablegrams for Van Vechten came as a welcome diversion, were participating in a miracle. He took them with trembling hands. The first proved to be from Bobby Massinger, who made it a point to propose to Paige every time he met her. "Why did you not tell me that Miss Carew was in England?" complained Bobby, regardless of the number of words. "Do not know her present address, but will find it without fail be-

If she was now or had been at any of the places I have in mind, some one of these persons," tapping the messages, "would be sure to haven't the least idea what she looks know it. I shall try a cable to her Paris address and see if it is forwarded. And I shall also instruct Mr. Flint to get busy. I believe he will want to take a run over to Rocky Cove.

What is it, Alexander?" The page had approached during the speaker's concluding words, holding ostentatiously in his hand a newspa-

"Beg pardon, Mr. Van Vechten," said Alexander, "but I saw you wasn't reading a paper this morning. Have you seen today's Sphere?"

The name startled him. "The Sphere? No. Let me have it." He flung the sheet open. And, there in glaring headlines extending clear across the front page, was a question that struck him like a blow between

Most readers of newspapers and many publishers are not familiar with the laws governing subscriptions. Here are the decisions of the United States court on the subject. They will be interesting to publishers and many will undoubtedly be glad of the opportunity to print them for the benefit of delinquent subscribers:

"Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to renew their subscriptions.

"If subscribers order a discontinuance of their publication the publisher may continue to send them until all dues are paid.

"If the subscriber refuses to take the periodical from the postoffice to which they are directed, he is responsible until he has settled his bill and ordered the paper discon-

"If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the papers are sent to the former address, the subscriber is held responsible.

"The courts have held that refusing to take periodicals from the postoffice, or removing and leaving them uncalled for is prima facie evidence of intention to defraud. "If subscribers pay in advance they are bound to give notice at the end of the time if they do not wish to continue taking it, otherwise the subscriber is responsible until express notice with payment of all arrearage is sent to the pub-
