The condition of the colonel has im proved during the voyage and he ex pects his recovery from the abscess on his leg will be complete by the time he arrives home.

Much annoyance was expressed by the members of Colonel Roosevelt's expedition in regard to the skepticism that it has been under consideration displayed in various quarters as to the discovery of a hitherto unknown and important river running into the Madeira. They declared the existence of the Rhine, the Elbe or the Hudson might just as well be questioned. The were surprised at the alleged unbelief of Sir Clements Markham, former president of the Royal Geographical society, of London.

Colonel Roosevelt is going to Madrid to attend the wedding of his son, Ker mit, with Miss Willard. He declined to say anything concerning the Mexican situation or politics in general until he arrived in New York.

Defends Roosevelt.

Another defender of Colonel Theo dore Roosevelt projected himself into the controversy which has followed the discovery claims of the colonel in the jungles of Brazil. The latest sup porter of the colonel is the famous French traveler, Paul Walle, of Paris who has put A. Henry Savage-Landon in the Ananias club for presuming to question the discoveries which the col onel claims to have made.

"In 1909 I traversed much of the Brazilian country that Mr. Savage Landor explored," said M. Walle, "and from what I know of my own persona experience I believe that many of Mr Savage-Landon's adventures were ob viously false. He grossly exaggerated his difficulties.

Savage-Landor did not do any more than the rubber hunters in those jun gles do daily and think nothing of it His famous sixteen days' fast, which he claims to have made, was impossi ble, as there is always an abundance of edible fish to be had, as well as nu tritious plants and wild honey."

M. Walle said that he had read with interest the adventures of the Roose velt party, but he did not comment upon the colonel's claim that he had discovered a new river, a thousand miles long.

Denies Roosevelt Was Paid.

A letter has just been received in Washington by Director General Bar rett, the head of the Pan-American Union, from Professor Max Fleuiss first secretary of the Brazilian Histori cal Institute, which has its headquar ters at Rio de Janeiro. Professor Fleuiss denies that Colonel Roosevell ever solicited money from the institute, and denies further that it ever paid him any sum of money for the address he delivered at the institute on Oct. 13, 1913, when he took posses sion of his chair as an honorary mem ber of the institute.

Miss Wilson Bride of McAdoo.

Eleanor Randolph Wilson, youngest daughter of the president, was mar ried on Thursday evening to Secretary of the Treasury William Gibbs Mc Adoo. The wedding makes the four teenth held in the White House.

The wedding ceermony, which was performed by Rev. Sylvanus W. Beach pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Princeton, N. J., who also married Mrs. Sayres, was simple in the extreme.

The company was the smallest ever assembled to witness a White House wedding. Only the members of the im mediate family of the president, a few Miss Eleanor's intimate friends three of Secretary McAdoo's six chil dren by his first wife, the members of the cabinet with their families, and military and naval officers, members of the president's personal staff, who served as ushers, were present.

For the ceremony Rev. Beach used the interrogations and responses both as to the betrothal and the words of union from the book of Common Pray er of the Protestant Episcopal church The word "obey" was included in the service.

Notwithstanding the earnest efforts of the president's family to restrict the size of the wedding company and to make the second White House wed ding exclusively private, the wedding gifts received by Secretary McAdoc and his bride were many and costly. Among the gifts, gems and jewelry for personal adornment predominate. The most imposing of all are the bridegroom's gifts, a superb string of pearls and a brooch for the wedding gift. Other especially notable presents were N. H., ordered that Harry K. Thaw be a heavy gold bracelet, studded with released. He immediately called him precious stones, from the United into court again and placed him in the States senate, and a massive silver tea custody of Sheriff Drew pending his service of seven pieces from the house appeal to the United States supreme of representatives.

VERA CRUZ DEAD

Thirty Hurt in Near-Panic al the Services.

MULTITUDE STANDS SILENT

A Million People See Bodies of Nava Heroes Borne on Flag Draped Cais sons Through New York Streets to Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Thirty women and children were hurt in a near-panic when the crowd of 50,000 persons assembled at the fu neral services in the Brooklyn navy yard for the men who died in the tak ing of Vera Cruz, pushed forward to get a closer view of the flag-draped caskets in which the bodies lay.

The crush began just as the last notes of the bugles, blowing "taps," died out, and the party on the speakers' stand, with President Wilson as the central figure, had started to leave the yard.

Until that time the great throng had stood motionless, silent and uncomplaining in the heat. As though at a signal, there was a general surging of the crowd and the line of guards was pushed inward. Persons near the speakers' stand were crushed helpless ly against it. Bluejackets, sensing the Sampel Gompers, president; John danger, rushed to the center of the lit tle cleared space in which the caskets lute circle around the dead.

Marines, sailors and the police then forced the crowd back. The injured were taken to the marine hospital, in the navy yard, where they were treat of Columbia against the labor leaders | ed for minor cuts and bruises. No one was seriously hurt.

The demonstration, which was one of the most remarkable ever held in the departure of the bodies of the he roes for their homes amid scenes re plete with drama, tragedy and comedy. Prior to that the city, state and the nation had paid an eloquent tribute to the fallen sailors and marines. For four miles, through the city streets, the funeral cortege passed There were seventeen caskets, mount ed on seventeen caissons.

Perhaps a million persons saw the caskets borne from the Battery, in lower Manhattan, to the navy yard in Brooklyn. The procession was nearly two hours in passing.

Mayor John Purroy Mitchel deliverprocession reached the city hall.

The religious ceremony at the navy yard was more impressive, if possible than was the sight of the slow moving cortege.

"I was never in a battle or under fire," said President Wilson in his brief address, "but I fancy it is just as hard to do your duty when men are sneering at you, for when they shoot at you they take your natural life, and when they sneer at you they wound your heart." "We have gone to Mexico," he said in another part of his address, "to serve mankind if we can find the way We don't want to fight the Mexicans: we want to serve them.

"A war of aggression is not a thing in which it is proud to die, but a war of service is a war in which it is a proud thing to die."

Throughout the procession mounted police closely surrounded the presi dent, in a hollow square, a sceret ser vice man rode on the box with a gray haired coachman, and others marched behind and beside the vehicle. Seate in the carriage with Mr. Wilson were his secretary. Joseph P. Tumulty, and his physician and naval aide, Dr. Ca rey T. Grayson. At the city ball, Mayor Mitchel stepped through the crowd, entered the president's carriage and rode with him to the navy yard.

The exercises at the navy yard were held on the parade ground. The si lence that overhung the parade ground was broken for the first time when the band began to play softly "Nearer, My God to Thee." Then the multitude stood reverently, with heads bowed while Chaplain William G. Cassard, of Annapolis, made the invocation.

The arrival of Professor Ernest Lagarde on the College campus last Wednesday was the cause of general rejoicing. The students gathered around the Mountain's "grand old man" and gave three lusty cheers. It was the Professor's return from his native Southland where he had spent several months following an attack of pneumonia contracted during the Christmas holidays. The Professor looks as hale as he did when he left the College, and says he feels "ready for work." He has resumed his classes in English and modern languages. The professor's recent absence was the first time that he has been away from the College during classes for nearly forty-two years.

FLEET HAS ORDERS

Three of the Fastest Flat Run Cruisers Will Depart Monday.

Private "rush" orders having been received at the flagship station of the Flat Run Fleet and their import being "On to Mexico" three of the fastest ships will be steaming out of the harbor not later than Monday.

The armored cruisers "Red Stuff," "Paprika," and "Hot Tomale" have had steam up for seventeen days. Eight hundred thousand rounds of ammunition have been taken aboard, together with provisions sufficient for three weeks. In addition to the regular armament the "Hot Tomale" has had added to her equipment four codfish ball rapid-fire guns and six soup howitzers. These were made under secret specifications at the Nick Keller steel works on Turkey Run.

A part of the war cargo of the "Paprika" consists of three thousand duplex auto-revolving triple edge knife scoops, operated by seventy electric motors, thirty-two 900 horsepower gasoline engines and one crank. This mechanism will be employed in cutting Mexico from the main land. As that country floats out to sea the main batteries of the fleet will open fire while the airship flotilla will rain tepid molasses on the natives and the submarine boats will spray the enemy with hot soup and dog biscuit loaded with ten penny nails.

All of this is dependent, of course, on the attitude of Huerta. Prior to opening hostilities Admiral Bill Snyder will go ashore under cover of a flag of truce, three steel plate umbrellas and a heavy shower of rain and will endeavor to make terms with the Mexican Chieftain. Upon the result of this parley the action of the Flat Run fleet will depend.

Unless further orders are received the personnel of the fleet's officers will be as follows: Commander-in-Chief, Rear Admiral Snyder, who will have on his staff Rear Admirals Bushman, Glass, Buckingham, Rager and Riley.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scoth-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Linganore Hills and the Catoctin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.-Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

Jones was telling what an excellent cook his wife was. Smith boasted that his wife was a splendid dressmaker. and Robinson proudly stated that his wife was an unusually clever artist.

Parisian Swashbucklers.

At one time the mousquetaire was a notable type, common on the boulevards of Paris, of the swaggering brag gart. These amiable Parisians were in evidence at the end of the empire After the war of 1870 they reappeared at Turtoni's. There upon the steps mous Alfonso de Almada, Ezpelata, G. de Borda, Chapron, Feuillant and Gasnow, though we may hold Vera ton Jollivet, who freely employed his valor and the wisdom of his wit in quenching the conflicts. A difficult task, for these altercations frequently were made out of nothing.

Babies Fear the Force of Gravity. The first experiment which a baby makes is connected with the force of gravity. It is born with an instinctive or ancestral dread of the unrestrained action of that force upon its own body, and it is said to be able to cling with tenacity to a stick or branch of a tree. Later on it takes pleasure in dropping miscellaneous objects to see them fall, perhaps to see if they all fall alike. And a very remarkable fact it is which is thus observed: The most familiar of all material facts and one of the least understood-least understood, that is, of all the simple physical facts which must surely be well within the limits of human comprehension. For if a philosopher is asked why all bodies tend to move toward the earth and why they all fall with steady, equal acceleration unless retarded or checked somehow he has to reply that he does not know.-Sir Oliver Lodge in Harper's Magazine.

Four Leafed Clover.

Since four leafed clover is said to be lucky it might be well to know how it happens that while most clover has only three leaves one is found now and then with four.

According to J. Perriraz, who discusses the question in the Archives des Sciences Physiques et Naturelles, clovers with more than three leaves are due to two causes, one hereditary, the other nutritive. After a moist season clover plants with four or even five, six or seven leaves are relatively common, and plants with only two leaves are also seen at such times, but these are very rare.

But some plants are abnormal by heredity and reproduce themselves with the same characteristics in successive years when their environment remains the same, external influences merely modifying the size of the leaves.

Rapid Stars.

Even astronomers are expressing astonishment at a speed record recently discovered among the stars. The Andromeda nebula has been found to be moving in the general direction of the earth at the rate of about 16,000,-000 miles a day, or nearly 200 miles a second. This is vastly faster than the look forward with pleasure to motion of the earth round the sun or of the sun in space. It will be some the first appearance of this ex- time before the nebula approaches very close to the earth, however. Observations of the nebula by telescope and photographs do not show the slightest measurable trace of movement toward the earth, which indicates that it is so far away that traveling 16,000,000 miles a day is too slow to be apparent. The discovery that it is coming at this rate was made by a study of the spectrum of its light.-Saturday Evening Post, Minuteness of Electrons.

Crookes, in his vacuum tubes around 1880, tore matter by means of very high potential electrical disruptive discharges into particles so inconceivably minute that he called them matter in the ultra gaseous, or fourth state.

In 1899 the modern master among minds proved these particles to be themselves electricity. Rutherford, Ramsay, Becquerel, Soddy, the Curies, Larmor and others confirmed the mighty discovery. Then came Robert Andrews Millikan, University of Chi cago, in 1911, and astonished every scientific man in the world by actually isolating and weighing one of these ex cessively minute entities.

This was at once conceded to be the greatest work of man since Newton discovered how to use infinitesimals. Of these particles, if they could be forced to lie side by side in contactimpossible by man-a row one inch long would contain 12,700,000,000,000. They are known to be pure electricity. They are called electrons, and nothing exists but electrons.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

A Revelation to Cricketers.

The technique of baseball is profoundly interesting to the student of the dynamics of games. Some years ago the bowling, or rather "pitching," was revolutionized. It was then made legal to throw the ball. Hence the wonderful armor which the catcher wears. But mere pace soon gave way to graduated pace and swerving. Never in the history of sport has the human hand shown such control over an implement as the hand of a pitcher over the flight of the ball. Much super stition has gathered round this and many fabulous performances, corkscrew swerves, swerves reversed, jumping balls, and so forth, are on the lips of crowds. Being allowed no run, as the bowler is at cricket, the pitcher has brought to a fine art the mechanism of position and delivery. The same is true of the batter, who has to deal with full pitches only, very different from bouncing balls. The attitudes of these men are a revelation to cricketers.-London Spectator.

To take a picture of your voice it is only necessary to tie a sheet of thin, strong paper over the wide end of a tin trumpet. Hold it with the sheet of paper upward, take a thin pinch of fine sand and place it in the center of the paper, hold the trumpet vertically above your face and sing a note into the lower end. Do not blow, but sing the note. Lower the trumpet carefully and look at the sand. You will find that the vibrations of your voice have scattered the pinch of sand into a beautiful sound picture. Every note in the musical scale will produce a different picture, so you may produce a great variety of them. Some of these pictures look like pansies, roses and other flowers: some look like snakes and others like flying birds. In fact, there is no limit to the variation.

Where the Hudson Flows.

Not so very long ago, in a geologic ense, the Hudson river flowed through a deep canyon or gorge at New York Soundings show that this gorge extends through the harbor and far out to sea. It is evident that the land surface has been lowered in this region, allowing the ocean to creep in on the land, fill the old river channel and in places wholly submerge it. The submergence of the land was greater at one time than it is now. In excavations for some of the New York skyscrapers remains of oysters and other salt water animals have been found. As a rule, the only available knowledge in regard to the former submergence of an area is derived from the marine shells and other animals found in deposits laid down by the sea.

Mrs. Ellis had been house hunting for several days and at last found a small suit which was somewhere near her modest ideal.

"The paper in the hall is just awful," said Mrs. Ellis, as she was telling her husband about the place that evening, change it.

"Never mind," said Mr. Ellis cheerfully, "we'll get an inexpensive new one and put it on right over the other." "Oh, Ben," cried the wife, "we can hardly get our furniture through the habit of blue faced with white and en entry now, it's so narrow!"-New York livened with gold lace. It was a reve

Theater Prices Long Ago.

Fortune brings in some boats that are not steered .- Shakespeare.

The French are probably the most patriotic people in the world. The average half educated Frenchman is firmly persuaded that his country is an oasis of civilization surrounded with illimitable stretches of barbarism. This is what he believes, but his courtesy prevents him from being offensive about it. In his estimation the rest of the world simply does not count. He knows that there are other parts of the world, but they are not worth his while to visit or to inquire That is why the Frenchman rarely travels and never emigrates. He will ask you with surprise why he should travel, seeing that he is already in France and that he has no taste for savages or wild beasts. And as for its government, it is notoriously the best in the world, with a future so glorious as to defy the imagination. He will say all this with a disarming charm. He pities you for being a foreigner, but he does not hate you on that account, for, of course, you cannot help it.-Argonaut.

Human Hair Traffic.

The trade in human hair is a big industry. Italians easily take the lead in this traffic, the main source of their supply being obtained from the peasant women of Italy, Dalmatia and Switzerland. Several times a year these human hair merchants send their agents around to collect supplies, which are usually immense, for hair growing is cultivated on a very large scale by these women and yields a good remuneration to the producer. Two crops of hair a year and looking none the worse for the loss is not extraordinary among the peasant women. Half the hair at the back of the head is shorn off, the remaining half being drawn over the exposed part and dressed in such a manner as only to be detected on very close scrutiny and by those experienced in the trade.

Why Naval Uniforms Are Blue. Naval uniforms all the world over pretty well are navy blue. The British fashion in this matter has been the rule with maritime people in general. That blue was ever selected for the king's naval service was a fortuitous happen but the landlord said he wouldn't ing. When in 1747 the question of uniform was being considered the color selected had very like to have been French gray laced with silver. While the king was still not quite decided he saw the Duchess of Bedford in a riding lation. Here, the king declared, was the uniform for his sea service officers. and no more was heard of French gray. The navy took to blue, and every other navy has taken to it since.-Pall Mall Gazette.

Punishment by Pillory.

In the year 1837 the British parliament passed an act that put an end to punishment by pillory. Previous to the conquest this particular instrument of correction was in use in England and went by the name of the "stretch neck." It consisted of a wooden frame erected on a stool in which were three holes for the head and arms. For days together offenders against the common law were thus exposed to public view. In 1685 Titus Oates was sentenced to be pilloried for five days in every year during the rest of his life. Another famous sufferer was Daniel Defoe, the author of "Robinson Crusoe." who stood for three days in the pillory in Cheapside. It happened on occasions that the offender died while undergoing his sentence. During the time of exposure the condemned man was not allowed to receive food of any sort or description. The last occasion on which a pillory sentence was passed was in 1814.-London Globe.

How Oil Calms the Waves.

An impression prevails that great quantities of oil are required to calm the sea, but Professor Ray Lankester of England suggests that a pint of oil an hour will secure a zone of calm water around a ship sufficient for the safe launching of small boats. According to this authority, nine pints of oil are sufficient to calm a square mile of water, and, incredible as it may appear, one drop will calm seven square feet! The oil spreads out over the surface of the sea in a film which has the almost unimaginable thickness of twomillionths of a millimeter, yet it holds in leash the mighty power of the ocean. When this film of oil spreads over the surface the heaping up action of the water, which results in the formation first of ripples and then of waves, cannot take place. The thinner the film the greater is its effect in pulling down the crests of the waves and making a lower wave line, free from break .-Harold Waters in Leslie's.

What the Tweed Divides.

The difference between English and Scotch inheritance law is very wide. For instance, supposing a man dies intestate and his only living relatives are his wife and mother. In England each would take equal shares of his personal estate, but in Scotland the wife gets one-half of the movable estate. the mother one-sixth, and two-sixths go to the crown. But supposing the mother alone is living. In England she would get the whole, but in Scotland she would only get one-third, while the other two-thirds would go to the crown. Then, again, if a man dies intestate and his father and several brothers and sisters are living, in England the father gets the lot, but in Scotland he only gets one-half, while the other half is divided equally among the brothers and sisters of the deceased. - Pearson's Weekly.

Wagner's Search For a Pawnshop.

Wagner's worst experience of poverty was during his sojourn in Paris in 1840, when he had to pawn all that he and his wife possessed of any value. "I looked up the French equivalent for a pawnshop," he relates in his autobiography, "as I was too shy to make inquiries. The only word I could find and executor of the spirit's decrees. in my little dictionary was 'lombard. On the map of Paris I found a very small thoroughfare called 'Rue des Lombards,' and thither I went only to find the expedition fruitless. Often on reading the inscription 'Mont de Piete' I felt curious to know its meaning. Eventually, to my great delight, I learned that this 'Berg der Froemmigkeit' was where I should find salvation, and there we now carried all we possessed in the way of silver."-Lon-

Admit They Are Great.

In an address to the Canadian club in Montreal, James Bryce said: "I do not think it would be advisable for me to say much, for I have the good fortune to be a Scotchman myself. Zaparta Loots Cuernavaca.

Peace delegates passing through Vera Cruz brought confirmation of Zapata's entry into Cuernavaca on Wednesday. They said Zapata entered unopposed by the Federal garrison, who evacuated without firing a shot.

Zapata, with 3000 well armed horse men, entered at nightfall and there followed immediately general looting and a riotous drunken orgy.

Telegraph wires and the railway were cut off by the evacuating rebels, but subsequently many refugees, among whom were twenty Spaniards and four Americans, fled on horse

It became known in Mexico City that Zapata's resumption of the aggressive advance was the result of the arrival at Cuautla, Zapata's stronghold, of two of Villa's emissaries, who advised against co-operation with Huerta against the United States, so Zapata hanged Huerta's newly arrived peace commissioners, concentrated his allied bandit forces and marched against Cuernavaca, which fell an easy

Baltimore's Best Store Offers Absolute Security With Every Purchase

Whatever you buy at Baltimore's Best Store is returnable, within reasonable time, for refund or exchange, if you are not entirely satisfied with it.

This is not new. It was part of our policy when this store opened, nearly seventeen years ago, and it has been carried into effect every business day ever since.

It is this which makes this store an especially pleasant place to deal with by mail. With the best intentions in the world, you may order something and find that it is not what you want, or we may send you something which, upon examination, you find is not fully satisfactory. It is good to know that you are dealing with a store that "money-backs" its goods without question or argument.

SYNOPSIS.

Book I.

CHAPTER I—Rudolph Van Vechten, a young man of leisure, is astonished to see a man enter No. 1313, a house across the street from the Powhatan club. The house has long been unoccupied and is spoken of as the House of Mystery.

CHAPTER III—Van Vechten expresses concern to his friend, Tom Phinney, regarding the whereabouts of his cousin and fiancee, Paige Carew. A fashionably attired woman is seen to enter the House of Mystery. A man is forcibly ejected from the house. Van Vechten and Tom follow the man and find him dead in the street.

CHAPTER IV—Van Vechten is attracted by the face of a girl in the crowd of onlookers surrounding the body. Later he discovers the girl gazing at him with a look of scorn from the windows of the mysterious house.

CHAPTER V-Detective Flint calls on Van Vechten to get his version of the tragedy.

CHAPTER VI—Tom Phinney goes alone on a yachting trip. He recognizes among some persons in a passing motor boat two men whom he had seen enter the House of Mystery. He sees one of them, a Mr. Callis, on shore later and follows him. Tom is seized, blindfolded and taken to a house. He hears a girl named Jessie, evidently the daughter of the man in authority, question his captors. A sweetvoiced girl later protests against the roughness of his captors.

Book II.

CHAPTER I—Van Vechten calls on his uncle, Theodore Van Vechten, big man in Wall street and known as the "Man of Iron," in search of information regarding the whereabouts of Paige Carew.

CHAPTER II—Detective Flint shows Van Vechten a gold mesh purse found in the House of Mystery. Van recognizes it as belonging to Paige Carew.

CHAPTER III—The sweet-voiced girl helps Tom Phinney escape, but refuses to disclose her identity. Tom declares he will meet her again.

CHAPTER IV—Detective Filmt tests van Vechten he has a theory that Paige has been kidnaped. Van goes to lay the case before his un-la CHAPTER V—Messages are sent to Europe in an effort to trace Paige. Tom tells Van Vechten he is in love and re-lates his adventure.

CHAPTER VI—A message from London reports that two ladies resembling Miss Carew and her companion, Mrs. Devereaux, sailed for New York sometime previously. A reward of $2,500 is offered.

ladies visited the English home of Tenple Bonner, owner of the Front Mystery. Flint has a theory that they are connected with the mystery of No. 1313. CHAPTER VIII—It is recalled that Temple Bonner was in love with a daughter of Compton Schuyler, who married Max Willard. The other daughter married a man named Devereaux. Bonner and Willard were intimate friends. A search is started for Willard.

Un Enfant Perdu.

Whether Mr. Flint attached any particular importance to anything in Tom Phinney's recital, Van Vechten was unable to determine, either from the detective's fixed expres sence of expression), or the few questions he asked when Tom had finished. These interrogations were aimed solely at aiding Tom to remember the motorboat's occupants; but excepting the suppositious servant and the sandycomplexioned man-now identified as John Callis-Tom's description was exceedingly vague.

Before leaving, Mr. Flint said to Van

"I am liable to be looking you up almost any minute of the day or night. I expect to be pretty busy, but it is impossible to foretell precisely in what way my efforts will be directed. May I count on you spending as much of your time here as you can?

The young man nodded. "If I am not here I shall leave word so you may know where to find me."

Tom, after the detective was gone, reverted to a topic which he had imagined sound, or to determine the broached earlier in the day.

And Mr. Tom Phinney departed to call on the wealthy diamond importer. Left thus to himself, Van Vechten took from his pocket the key which Mr. Flint had given him, and sat contemplating it for some minutes. By and by he returned it to his pocket, then pushing back his chair, rose and feli to pacing to and fro the width of the lounging-room. As he passed each of the big plate glass windows-they were screened, however, at this season—he would glance across the street at the silent house. At last he halted and, hands in pockets, stood staring at the dingy facade, his mien pensive.

"Why not?" his thoughts presently crystallized. "Now is as good as any time. It's too late in the day to undertake anything else; besides, there is nothing to do but wait. Lord-wait! It would be a relief to have the universe come tumbling around one's ears. After Flint's yarn, it will be interesting to have a squint inside. Queer, queer."

Now perhaps he forgot his promise to Flint to leave word respecting his movements, or else he did not consider a brief absence merely across the street of sufficient consequence to be mentioned; however that may be, he alone?" left the club without a word to any-

A minute or two later he stood in the indescribably littered and filthy backyard of Number 1313. In truth, the place was no more than a small brick-paved court. It was walled all about, and a short flight of stone steps leading downward to a basement door hore the only evidence of recent use. Here, patently, was the door to which the key belonged.

He unhesitatingly went down the stopped to insert the key in the lock received the initial surprise of his adventure.

Before he succeeded in getting the key into the keyhole, the door swung open at his touch. Besides being unlocked, the latch was not even caught. "Humph! Shouldn't think Flint would have been that careless," was his immediate conclusion. It did not occur to him that somebody already might be within, but contented himself with the belief that the detective had neglected to make fast the door after his visit Sunday afternoon.

Settling the incident thus to his own satisfaction, he entered and closed the door behind him.

He glimpsed into the kitchen, and promptly withdrew with a shudder. Off on one side a huge range stood, red with rust, and everywhere were cobwebs and layer upon layer of dirt. A sleek rat darted into the denser shadows, and the opening door disturbed hundreds of enormous cockroaches. Some scuttled away, but others remained motionless and watched him with malignant eyes that sparkled weirdly in the half-light.

He shook off his feeling and advanced toward the stairs, which loomed dimly before him. But thenceforward he moved with utmost circumspection, pausing frequently at some

"Go, go, go!" cried the feminine voice, shrill with exasperation and anger. "I tell you, I will not stand this annoyance. Whatever in the world possessed you to follow me I can't imagine. Go-get out of my sight. I don't want to hear a word you have to say!"

At the next words Van Vechten started so violently that, had the unseen couple been less absorbed in their quarrel, they must have heard him. The girl was still speaking.

"You have done many things to anger me that I have overlooked, John Callis; but your following me here is just a bit more than I can endure. Now I mean to tell father just how you have been harassing me, and, mark my words, he will put a stop to it. Why did you come after it was decided that I was to do the errand

"Damn it, I'll make you love me!" The words rattled harshly in his throat. "Do you think I have been working and waiting all these years from any sense of duty or loyalty to your father? Then the more fool you. It was for you-do you hear me? You! I meant at the first that you should be my wife; I have meant it all along; I mean it now more than ever. Andthis way! But his lifelong habit of repression checked any violent display of feeling on his part. The spell was broken when he composedly advanced a step farther into the room, not for an instant moving his steely regard from the man. All of a sudden his thin lips twisted in an odd little smile that was not at all pleasing to see.
