SIR W. ROBERTSON IS CHIEF OF STAFF

Has Been Highly Efficient British Quartermaster General.

PRaised BY GENERAL FRENCH

Won Distinction in Field in Several Previous Wars—Recent Duties Make Him Familiar With Needs of English Soldiers, and He Has Attended to the Great Task of Feeding the Army.

London.—Major General Sir William Robert Robertson, now serving as quartermaster general on the staff of Field Marshal Sir John French, with temporary rank of lieutenant general, has been promoted to be the chief of the imperial general staff to succeed Major General Sir Archibald James Murray.

No explanation was given why General Murray is to be succeeded by General Robertson. Twice in the present war General Murray has been mentioned in reports. In September General French spoke of him as having been one of those who had "worked day and night unceasingly, with the utmost skill, self sacrifice and devotion." In October General French again added him to his roll of honor.

Sir William Robertson's work as quartermaster general of the British army in the field was highly praised in a dispatch by Sir John French, who said that he "met what appeared to be almost insuperable difficulties with his characteristic energy, skill and determination."

While Sir John, for the most part, has to consider the ground in front of him, Sir William Robertson has had to keep in touch not only with the ground covered by the expeditionary force, but with the centers of supply at home. He must know the lay of the land, but he must know a great deal about Birmingham and Manchester as well.

His is the case of a man prepared. His line of business ever since he looked after the railway transport during the Miranzai and Black Mountain expeditions twenty-three years ago has had to do with the care of soldier men.

His first regiment was the Third Dragoon guards, which he entered in 1888. After doing useful transport work in the Black mountains he was promoted to staff captain and D. A. Q. M. G. of the intelligence branch at Simla. For four years he worked hard at the provisioning and quartering of men in India. He has worked at the same subjects in several parts of the world.

In 1895 he acted as intelligence officer to the headquarters staff of the Chitral relief force. Mentioned in dispatches and severely wounded, he got his D. S. O. at the end of the campaign and was wounded upon by the war office for its own service.

With his wife, whom he met in India, and who is the daughter of another distinguished soldier (the late Lieutenant General T. C. Pallen), he settled down for a short time to town life, but to a town life that was never for a moment oblivious to the interests of camp and field.

With the outbreak of hostilities in South Africa he was very soon called upon to take up his duties as an active overseer of the discipline of the British forces on active service.

After South Africa Sir William was booked for seven years by a war office very desirous of reform.

Afterward he went to Aldershot as assistant quartermaster general. Aldershot, of all places, was the right school for one who had to prepare for European complications.

Sir Archibald Murray, the retiring chief of the general staff, also has a long, honorable record as a soldier for nearly forty years. He entered the Twenty-seventh regiment in 1879, became a captain in the Royal Inniskilling fusiliers in 1887 and was steadily promoted until four years ago he was made major general.

HAVE FLOWN 1,116,000 MILES

French Air Men in 10,000 Reconnoissances Have Lost Heavily.

Paris.—An official statement giving statistics concerning the aerial flights of the French air men during the eight months of the war says:

"Approximately 10,000 aerial reconnoissances have been made, amounting to 18,000 hours in the air. The distance covered was 1,800,000 kilometers (over 1,116,000 miles).

"Unfortunately these results were not obtained without serious losses, which equal and sometimes even surpass other methods of warfare."

PARSON TELLS HOW HE WOULD ACT AS MAYOR

Preacher Candidate Plans No Anti-Liquor Movement.

Greenwich, Conn. — "This borough will be run like any business concern. All of the people will be like the stockholders of a big business house. The town will be managed for their benefit, without regard to politics, if I am chosen mayor."

So said the Rev. Charles F. Taylor, "the fighting parson," when he outlined the platform on which he will stand firmly when he runs for mayor of Greenwich. Dr. Taylor, pastor of the Second Congregational church, one of the wealthiest here, has accepted a nomination for mayor on an independent ticket. He is a muscular Christian, standing six feet two inches, and seemingly in good condition, spiritually and physically.

"The duty of the church and of all good citizens is service to the community," said he. "The best service of practical Christianity is to make all the community happier, healthier, better and freer. And the way to do that is not to begin by hounding so called evildoers. We are all evildoers, for that matter. I mean, the 'cleaning up the town' sort of thing. It isn't that sort of 'strong arm work' that accomplishes things. I know, because when I was a pastor in New York I went in for the vice crusade idea. I even used to go out and serve warrants.

"I shall not begin by trying to close the saloons. I shall not make it my business to seek out violations of the liquor law unless a strong public sentiment demands it, for a law is, after all, only a scrap of paper unless the public is behind it.

"I shall try only to make Greenwich a better place to live in, and I hope before we get through the community will have so many more useful and interesting things to offer that men will not care to spend their time in saloons.

"I do not mean that I shall not enforce the law if I am called upon to do it. I shall. But I mean that my program will be constructive, not merely chasing evils."

Dr. Taylor has preached daringly on civic questions to his wealthy and conservative congregation. So far from resenting his instructions his parishioners have followed them eagerly. The liquor dealers have expressed themselves as not opposed to the clergyman. They say they believe he will give them a "fair deal" as mayor.

20,000 ACRES TO COLLEGE.

And a Mountain Peak to the Government Left by J. A. Battell.

Middlebury, Vt.—A tract of more than 20,000 acres of forest land in this state is bequeathed to Middlebury college, to be preserved as a forest park forever, under the will of the late Joseph H. Battell.

Mr. Battell, who was publisher of the Middlebury Register, was greatly interested in forest preservation and had been acquiring virgin timber lands for more than forty years.

A mountain in Lincoln and Warren one of the highest peaks in the state is given to the United States government.

The town of Middlebury receives two large tracts of land for park purposes and a fund of $9,900 for park maintenance.

The lands bequeathed to the college lie along the crest of the Green mountains and extend into three counties and eight townships.

In addition the college will receive as a residuary bequest, at the expiration of a ten years' trust, the Battell block, a large business structure in the village; the Middlebury Register and a number of farms.

LIVED FOUR YEARS AS A MAN.

Death of Massachusetts Woman Reveals Her Long Masquerade.

Springfield, Mass.—The death of Miss Florestine Albertine Beaudoin, whose body was found in Williamsett, revealed that she had lived disguised as a man for four years. She lived with her sister as "Albert Beaudoin" and worked in the paper mills of Holyoke. The only motive suggested for her long masquerade is that she could earn more as a man for the support of herself and her sister, who is a widow. Her death was due to heart trouble.

After her day's work in Holyoke she was loading a wagon with furniture from the house which she occupied with her sister. A policeman found her leaning against the wagon and asked the supposed "Albert Beaudoin" if he needed any help. The woman replied that she would be all right in a little while. Later she was found lying by the wagon, and she died soon after a physician arrived.

4,200 CHARACTERS ON NEW TYPEWRITER

Chinese Machine Has Three Keys With 50,000 Combinations.

New York.—Stenographers may be interested to learn that there is a new sort of typewriter which has just been invented by a young student in the engineering department of New York university. The machine is different from the typewriters familiar to the average person in several respects. For instance, the "standard" keyboard has twenty-six letters and in most cases a dozen keys devoted to figures and punctuation marks, while the new machine has 4,200 characters in all and only three keys.

One of the three keys is a back spacer, another the space key and the third is the key with which the 4,200 characters are struck. It is possible, according to the inventor, to make more than 4,200 characters by combinations of "radicals," or base characters. About 50,000 combinations can be made by the machine, the inventor said.

That stenographers ambitious to operate the new typewriter will find at first their task a little difficult, at least, was indicated by the fact that it required two hours to write the first letter typed by the machine. This letter contained approximately 100 words, but the operator was unfamiliar with the 4,200 characters. Stenographers of this city who do not work in export or import houses dealing with China, however, are not apt to be called on to memorize the new keyboard for some time.

The machine is said to be the first Chinese typewriter ever invented. Heuen Chi, the student inventor, demonstrated the method by which the machine worked. He conceived the idea that a typewriter could be made to write Chinese while he was at his home in southern China three years ago, he said. He began a study of the Chinese dictionary at once to isolate the "radical" or base characters of the words. In most cases one character represents a whole word in Chinese, though, according to Heuen Chi, thousands of these characters are made up of simpler characters which alone represent words themselves. He continued studying the forms of the language during a year and a half he spent at London university and began work on his typewriter.

Heuen came to this country as a government student and on the prompting of Chinese officials who had become interested in his scheme took up the study of engineering at New York university and continued to work on the invention. He completed the model a short time ago and has patented it in this country, China and Japan, for it also writes Japanese, which, he said, is similar to Chinese.

TOO MANY PIGS IN GERMANY.

Total Is 25,500,000, and Government Orders Wholesale Slaughter.

London.—The London Times says the Prussian minister of the interior has issued a rescript insisting upon the slaughtering of pigs upon a large scale and threatening that if voluntary efforts do not have the required result, the government will use compulsion. The rescript says that a census taken on Dec. 2 showed that the stock of cattle in Germany was extraordinarily large, and that the number of pigs was about 25,500,000, a total which only once before had been reached. The agrarians are warned that the slaughtering of 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 pigs is quite insufficient and that instead of impeding they must now promote the arrangements for the buying up of pigs by municipalities.

According to the Frankfurter Zeitung, it has been decided that the government shall seize and regulate the distribution of oil cake and other manufactured fodder. It is said that prices have been forced up by speculators.

40,714 BILLS INTRODUCED.

Statistics Show That Out of This Number but 700 Were Enacted Into Law.

Washington, March 23.—During the last session of the Sixty-third congress, according to a statement prepared by James M. Baker, secretary of the United States senate, 40,714 bills introduced in congress were acted upon by both houses.

In the senate the total number of joint resolutions introduced were 7,996. House bills numbered 30,053, and laws enacted totaled 700. Two bills and joint resolutions were passed by both houses which failed of enactment and seven which passed both houses died in conference.

Four bills were vetoed by President Wilson. The total simple and concurrent resolutions introduced in both houses numbered 1,426.

I. C. C. CHAIRMAN SAFETY ADVOCATE

New Head of Body Personally Investigates Accidents.

LED IN NEW HAVEN PROBE.

Mr. McChord Was For Twelve Years an Active Member of the Kentucky State Railroad Commission—Described as Well Informed and Courageous Aided in the Regulation of Rates.

Washington.—Charles C. McChord who has just been elected chairman of the interstate commerce commission brings to his new office the knowledge of affairs gained from a wide field of personal and official experience. Previous to becoming a member of that body four years ago he had twelve years' active experience as railroad commissioner of Kentucky.

Soon after admission to the bar of Kentucky he was elected prosecuting attorney of Washington county and was twice re-elected. During his entire twelve years' service on the Kentucky railroad commission he was its chairman.

The associated railroad commissioners of the United States twice elected him president of that body.

He carried through to enactment his bill conferring upon the Kentucky commission authority and power to regulate the railroads of that state.

This was at a time when the unprecedented excitement and passion existed in Kentucky, which resulted in the assassination of Governor Goebel and forced the legislature to remove its sittings from Frankfort to Louisville.

Since he has been a member of the interstate commerce commission he has reorganized and systematized the safety work of the commission into what is now known as the division of safety, all of whose work has been under his supervision. Railroad accidents are now made the subject of thorough investigation, and Mr. McChord personally holds the hearings in the most important cases. Examination is made under his direction of new inventions covering the field of block signals, automatic train control and safety devices of like character. In fact, every factor which enters into the problem of making railroad travel more safe is given consideration and study by the division of safety.

He personally examines each instance of violation of the hours of service act and the safety appliance act which are reported each year by the inspectors of the commission and authorizes and supervises their prosecution. He prepared an analysis of the causes of delay to trains on all railroads of the United States so that any railroad manager could determine the subjects requiring attention in order to bring about efficiency in operation. As a result, in one year the reduction of train delays and excess service was nearly 50 per cent.

To him largely is due the fact that the attitude of leading railroad managers toward this branch of the work of the commission has changed in a marked degree.

Mr. McChord was selected by the commission to preside during the investigation into the financial wrecking of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company. In the report made to the senate on the subject Commissioner McChord called attention to the obligation resting upon the directors of railroads to keep themselves informed of the financial operations of the systems with which they are connected and insisted that the primary duty to regulate a railroad rests upon the directors.

Mr. McChord's part of the work of the commission in the regulation of rates has been generally recognized as strong, fair and impartial. He is the author of some of the most important opinions in the rate cases decided by the commission during the past four years.

SIXTY MILES OF BOOKS.

Harvard's Widener Memorial Library Now Nearing Completion.

Boston.—Sixty miles of shelves, capable of holding 2,500,000 volumes, have been put in place in the Harry Elkins Widener Memorial Library at Harvard. The work of finishing the interior of the new $2,000,000 structure is now in its last stages, and the dedication will probably take place during commencement week in June.

A large force of workmen is now engaged in putting the finishing touches on the main reading room. The ceiling decorations are nearly completed. The color of the ceiling, as well as the polished stone pillars and side columns, is a deep yellow.

SLIPPERS FOR HIS BURIAL.

Wanted Comfortable Footwear and Quilt in Coffin.

Los Angeles, Cal.—In case he was murdered $5,000 was to be taken from his estate to aid in hunting his slayers. This was the provision E. F. Kellner, Arizona banker and pioneer, who died in Venice, Cal., made in his will.

In giving minute directions as to the method of his burial Kellner directed that a coffin be secured of copper from Globe, Ariz., where he resided many years; that he be dressed in a gray suit and comfortable slippers and covered with a quilt without decoration.

FRANCE IMPROVES MATCHES

Had Long Been the Worst in the World, but No One Complained.

Paris.—For forty years France has endured the worst matches in the world uncomplainingly because the government took the monopoly, manufacturing cheap and selling dear, as one means of paying the German war debt.

Now, however, big, cheap wooden matches, easy to strike, have replaced the sulphur tipped splinters that nearly choked unwary smokers or obstinately refused to light.

The newspapers do not chronicle the reform or its reason.

"The Thinkers of the Country Are the Tobacco Chewers" said one of the greatest thinkers this country ever produced.

Says the Ball Player:

"There wouldn't be many double plays pulled off, if we players didn't think pretty straight and quick and right. We need snap judgment but it's got to be good judgment too.

"We can't afford to get up in the air except when the ball's up there.

"That's why we use PICNIC TWIST instead of a dark, heavy tobacco. PICNIC TWIST is mild and it's better than water for keeping you from getting dry."

Men everywhere are finding that there's all the tobacco satisfaction in a mild, sweet, long lasting chew of PICNIC TWIST without the "comeback" on the nerves, found in strong tobacco.

Try one of these soft twists of the mild, mellow part of the leaf and see for yourself.

BALTIMORE DECIDES TO PAY KEY WEEK SHORTAGE

Frederick City to Get $200 of $75,000 Appropriation to Make Up Deficit of Its Celebration.

The big hearted city of Baltimore, which could not allow Frederick county—Key's birthplace—a penny of the State's $75,000 appropriation for its Star Spangled Banner celebration last September "because it would create a precedent," not knowing just what to do with the surplus of $7,533 88 the Baltimore committee has on its hands, has voted to give the Frederick committee $200—the amount necessary to cover the latter's debt incurred in its local Key celebration. Originally the Frederick committee was promised $2,500; that was while the bill was pending in the legislature. However, after the Baltimore committee secured the money, Frederick's share was held forth coming, so its celebration was held by popular subscription at the same time the centennial was held in Baltimore.

One hundred more dollars of the Baltimore surplus will be used in erecting a tablet that will commemorate the construction of the Key Highway and it is likely that the remainder will go to establish a permanent memorial.

Trolley Proposed.

There are rumors for a trolley line connecting Hanover with Gettysburg and Chambersburg with Chambersburg. J. B. Cormichael, a civil engineer formerly in the employ of the Western Maryland railway company made a survey of the Chambersburg and York pikes last week. Finances are said to have been supplied by Philadelphia and Baltimore bankers who are reported to be back of the scheme to connect the world famous battlefield with York and Hagerstown.

Cumberland Mystery Unsolved.

The identity of the murderer of Margaret Mullan in Cumberland still baffles the police of that city. Le Ray Harlan, who was the last person seen with Miss Mullan, was held as a suspect, but was later released. John Greiler, a young carpenter, who lives not far from where the murder was committed, was also taken into custody, having attracted suspicion by his actions, but was released for want of evidence. Apparently not a clue of the real culprit exists.

In furtherance of the "safety first" principle, the Atchison, Topeka, & Santa Fe Railway Company has equipped its Safety Commissioner, Isaiah Hale, with a seven-passenger automobile so fitted with removable tires as to permit of the machine being run on the standard-gage track of the system.

The entire world produces a total of 1,000,000,000 tons of coal annually.

The Store That Sells Wooltex

To the woman who cannot afford to make a mistake

A mistake that may be corrected the next day is quickly forgotten. But a mistake that must stay with one for several months will not be forgotten for several more months.

When you choose your Spring coat or suit, why not select one of our Wooltex garments? You can feel sure that it will be in good style and look well for at least a whole season.

Every woman knows that conservative styles are the most lasting. You know how quickly fads and freakish fancies die, and how out of style you feel if you are still wearing one.

Wooltex garments all contain the best expression of the season's style tendencies, but they are refined and tempered to meet the practical ideas of the best dressed American women.

Wooltex tailored garments give longer and better service than ordinary garments for they are made from pure silk and pure wool materials, by skillful, painstaking tailors.

All materials are carefully shrunk before cutting. Seams are tailor-blasted before stitching. Special attention is given collars, lapels and edges—the places where ordinary garments show their lack of careful workmanship.

Every Wooltex garment is carefully inspected four times before it leaves the workrooms. Such materials and tailoring combined with skillful designing, make alterations unnecessary in nearly all Wooltex garments.

These are the ideal garments for you—correct in style; faultless in tailoring; serviceable; moderate in price

There is such genuine economy in buying Wooltex garments that every woman should get acquainted with them. Judged from every standpoint, they meet your requirements. Our saleswomen know the thirty points of excellence in Wooltex garments and will gladly show them to you.

Come in tomorrow and see the new Spring models. Try on a few, examine them closely. Their through and through goodness will prove you make no mistake when you buy Wooltex garments.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county. In the fertility and productiveness of its lands it ranks among the first in the Union, and especially in the production of wheat. The area of this great county is 633 square miles. The great body of the people are of German, English and Scotch-Irish descent, the progeny mostly of the early settlers. The land is mostly of fine limestone quality, and the greater part of the county is a valley of rolling lands lying between the Lingonore Hills and the Catocin Mountain. This splendid valley is drained by the Monocacy river, and is one of the best farmed and most highly improved and productive areas of the Union. The great crops are wheat and corn.—Maryland Manual issued by Board of Public Works.

EMMITSBURG.

In all Western Maryland—the beauty spot and the garden spot of the State—there is no town more attractive than Emmitsburg.

No people are more wide-awake, more knowable, more courteous to strangers than Emmitsburgians.

The location of Emmitsburg is ideal; the surrounding scenery is unmatched; the climate is notably healthful; its water—pure mountain spring water—cannot be surpassed. It is within easy access of Baltimore, Hagerstown, Frederick; eight miles from the National Battlefield at Gettysburg, near to the Mountain Resorts, and is surrounded by fertile farms and productive orchards.

Mount Saint Mary's College and Ecclesiastical Seminary—with an enviable reputation extending over 106 years—is located here; St. Joseph's College and Academy for young ladies—equally as noted during its 105 years of splendid achievement—is also here.

There are excellent Schools—Public and Parochial—in Emmitsburg; two sound Banks, five Churches, a live Newspaper, modern Hotel accommodations, adequate Fire Department, progressive merchants, splendid physicians, good liverys, auto garages, many fraternal organizations, good railroad accommodations. There are four or five mails a day, telegraph, express and telephone service connecting all points; electric light and power, oiled streets.

There is business to be had in Emmitsburg; there are Factory Sites available. If you contemplate changing your place of residence—come to Emmitsburg, Frederick County, Md.

THE GLORIOUS SEASON.

Good Friday, the last chapter in the story of our Lord's passion, the solemn anniversary of that day that beheld the greatest tragedy the world has ever known, but a precursor of another anniversary, that glorious first unfolding of man's real hope

—Easter, the "Queen of Festivals."

The forty days of Lent are past—solemn days of thought—association with Him who fasted in the wilderness; days of prayer, of service, of retirement from the world; days of self-denial, of charity in thought and in deed; days of physical abstemiousness and spiritual recuperation.

During this holy period, sanctioned by the church and craved by a soul-sick world, a Christian people have reverently dwelt upon the darkest period in the life of the Savior of mankind.

In spirit heightened by denial and sanctified by devout worship, they have followed Him through His betrayal, His trial, His crucifixion and His burial, and now, in joyous expectancy, it again looks forward, as it has done for twenty centuries, to the keeping of the feast of Him "who is risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept."

To all it should be a glad season, but especially to those who have kept the fast. To them it is full of significance. It is the crowning point of their preparation for another year of better and holier living and a constant looking beyond the dead past with all its mistakes, its sorrows and its trials, to a future fraught with good resolve, with buoyant hope and God's sure promise.

THE NINTH OF APRIL.

The Government at this time is taking special pains to interest every citizen in the United States in trees. Especially insistent on the inculcation of tree culture is this State of Maryland, and most wisely, for apart from the aesthetic side of the question, there is an absolute necessity for tree planting as "Maryland," according to correct statistics, "is consuming annually forty-two and a half million cubic feet more timber than we can produce."

This is a startling fact; a fact that should arouse deep and serious thinking and prompt and widespread action on the part of the people. The opportunity is at hand; Arbor Day, the ninth of April, is the time to take the first step.

The Governor appeals to the schools and to property owners everywhere to plant trees wherever they may be planted to advantage. And in making this appeal he is suggesting a plan whereby a valuable asset can be created. Trees mean beauty, shade and health; they mean dollars and cents to every owner of them.

Think what it would mean if on April 9th, every school in this county planted five trees, say two trees, and every farmer and property owner did the same. By this concerted action, this single act, thousands of trees would almost instantaneously beautify the landscape far and wide, enhance the value of property and add so many actual dollars to the assets of the people. Is it not worth while?

GETTING RID OF TRAMPS.

No one knows the law applicable to tramps better than do tramps themselves; therefore when a vagrant—a man without occupation, with no visible means of support, a nomad, a professional beggar—is arrested and dealt with according to law he is receiving only such punishment as he, by his own act, has brought upon himself.

A man out of work through no fault of his own has the sympathy of every right feeling person, but an able-bodied man who is unwilling to earn his living, who openly declares that he will not work as long as an easily-imposed-upon public will support him and supply the wherewithal to keep him in a maudlin state—that man deserves no sympathy whatever.

Emmitsburg has had its share in pensioning ne'er-do-wells; it has been overrun by tramps. The people of this town and of neighboring towns have been imposed upon, insulted and mulcted by these professional loafers until they more than welcome the efforts now being made by the authorities to rid the county of all these invaders.

If prompt and summary action is taken just at this time when the influx of this most undesirable class is beginning, it will not be long before the news spreads among the clans and they arrange their itineraries so as to exclude this part of the country.

BALTIMORE is really going to let Frederick have as much as $200 to make up the latter's deficit on the Star Spangled Banner celebration. Big liberal Baltimore. Two hundred out of a promise of $2,500 is sure generous, and Frederick ought to remember it. By the way why don't Baltimore buy Mayor Preston a set of five-carat diamond studs with the surplus left from the city celebration? That would be a "lasting memorial" all right.

"Be sure you are right, then go ahead"—But don't take up so much time in coming to a conclusion that you are on the point of croaking before making the start.

If mental attitude is largely a reflection of environment why not get to work on the surroundings so that the reflection will be a good one?

How They Fish for Sharks

A few days after I landed in Honolulu my friend Super asked, "Would you like to go shark hunting?" "Yes," I answered. "Then if you get the bait," he said, "I'll furnish the boat and we'll go tomorrow at ten."

I wondered what kind of bait I was to furnish. I supposed that it would consist of a chicken or a ham and near fell over when Super told me that in Hawaii they always hunted shark with dead horse.

I made a tour of the livery stables and at last found a man who seemed to keep shark bait in stock. "How much do you want for a dead horse?" I asked.

"Fifteen dollars," said the keeper, "for a good one. This one has lots of blood in him. Fifteen dollars is almost nothing for so much blood."

"I don't see what difference the blood makes," I came back.

"It makes the sharks come quick," explained the keeper.

I paid five dollars of earnest money and the next morning before I was hardly up my telephone bell buzzed.

"Your horse is down stairs," said the clerk.

I went down to clear up the mistake, and there was my liveryman with a wide smile. "I got him," he said, "with lots of blood. I guarantee my horses."

I looked out, and saw a poor, clothes-rack of a creature with its head between its knees being held by a kanaka with a monster rope.

"Fine horse," beamed the livery stable man. "We got him from a Jap truck gardener. He's worth two ordinary horses—with all his blood."

I couldn't exactly see where all his blood was, but paid the rest of the money while the dealer turned to go, after thrusting the end of the monster rope into my hand. I saw a vacant lot with a telephone post and led my trembling bait to it and moored him, until it was time to go hunting.

Promptly at ten I was at the wharf with my horse, its head just above its knees. "It's got lots of blood," I called out as Super came up.

"Why," gasped Super, throwing out a rope, "it's alive. Shark bait has to be dead."

"Dead?" I said thickly. "What shall we do about it?"
"You'll have to kill it," he said heartlessly.

"But I haven't any way," holding up my empty hand.

"Well, we can't go shark hunting, then," said Super.

There was nothing left to do but search up and down the water front until I found a fisherman who agreed to make our bait. He came out with a murderous looking weapon, and soon the bait was lying with one foot in the wash of the waves with a red streak down across the sand.

One of the crew flung a rope around the bait's neck and turned on the engine. The engine churned the water while the bait's neck seemed to stretch out until the bait got on the water, when the engine calmed down and away we went spluttering up the harbor and out to sea. At length the boat stopped and one of the crew leaned over the side of the boat and stabbed a long knife into the animal's ribs, the red running out like the slow opening of a fan. The engine began to cluck again and away we slipped, leaving the bait lapping with the tide.—Homer Croy, in Leslie's.

First Experience on a Steamer

With my two suit cases I went banging down the narrow aisles—gangways they call them on a ship—hunting my stateroom. Just as I found it a couple of boys came running to help me carry my stuff. The stateroom was about as big as a room you pay three dollars a week for in New York. After looking around I began to get worried, for I couldn't find any washstand; their furniture seemed to run to desks built into the wall, for there were two of them. It seemed strange that they would make desks without any wash basin, but when I went to examine one of the desks it opened out of the wall into a washstand. When through with it all a person had to do was to fold it up and it was out of the way. That was a new one on me—a washstand that could be folded up like an accordion and put in the wall.

The berths were on top of each other like berths in a pullman—and mine was on top. It had high mud guards and was reached by means of a ladder—the kind of ladder they use in shoe stores when the first two pairs don't fit. Climbing up it, I paused on the top shelf and with the rocking of the ship I began to feel that something was going to happen. I turned and looked down and began to know how Jacob felt when he made mental calculations concerning what his ladder rested against. I began to see that something was going to happen to somebody unless the trip was soon over with. Hooking my heels over the throwboard I started to give a heave, but the ladder lurched down the track, leaving me hanging on to my berth by my heels. Plunk went my free foot onto something solid when there was a commotion in the berth beneath me. I was standing on my traveling companion.

"Get off!" he yelled, while under me I felt a mighty heaving and tossing. Grabbing hold of the side boards on my bed I drew myself up, freed my foot and lowered myself.

"You've got to go to bed first," he said, tumbling out.

"You steady the ladder," I said; "and I'll make it."

Fearfully he seized the ladder and held it as I climbed up and flopped into my berth—to find that I was on top of the covers and that they were tucked so far under that I could not raise them until I had backed down the ladder and come up again.—Homer Croy, in Leslie's.

The Charm of a Low Voice

Everyone knows how disagreeable high-pitched, shrieking voices are and how charming low, sweet ones, and, considering this, one wonders that more attention is not given to the subject from an educational point of view.

Americans have often been accused of having disagreeable voices, and it can not but be admitted that sometimes the accusation seems true. The Yankee twang and the nasal drawl peculiar to many of our communities are certainly not the loveliest intonations. On the other hand, there are as beautiful voices to be found right here in America as in the Latin countries, where a soft accent is the rule, not the exception. But the trouble is there are not enough of these beautiful voices. There could be easily enough if only the American woman would take the time and the trouble to cultivate a pleasing quality in her speaking tones.

The other day three women were discussing a recent debutante, who, despite lack of great good looks, was carrying all before her in the world of society.

"What I like is her voice," said a man of the party; "it reminds me of a purring cat."

His simile was correct. Her voice was very low pitched and came from the back of her throat in a soft, husky sound, and its fascination was undeniable.

Take Sarah Bernhardt, for instance. The divine Sarah earned her title of the greatest living actress as much from the pure, silvery quality of her voice as from her histrionic powers. This star of the theatrical firmament possesses a speaking voice to dream about, full, sweet, liquid, and one feels one could never tire of listening to her golden words.

How great is the power of the human voice to displease as well as to please was discovered the other day by a girl who was suffering from a bad cold.

"I have just made the unpleasant discovery," she confided to a friend, "that at the present moment I am not wanted by any of the members of my family, and do you know why? Because I have a wretched cold that has turned my voice into a hoarse croak. It is not a sniffling cold, and they are not in the least afraid of catching it. It is simply my tones which annoy them. Within the last two days I have been asked quite politely if I would mind not talking, as my voice gets on their nerves, and quite impolitely to 'quit your croaking,' and by a mere male."

All who have studied elocution or gone in for a profession where the voice plays an important part learn the art of speaking at the right pitch and pronouncing their words correctly, and it would be an immense advantage if elocution lessons were made an important part of the education of every young girl.

La Rochefoucauld says: "There is more eloquence in the tones of the voice than in the choice of words." And, indeed, he proclaims an absolute truth.

A charming story of a speaking voice was told the other day—a voice that could not be bought for gold. It belonged to a hard-working little servant girl, a chambermaid in a great house, whose voice was so marvelously sweet as to provoke comment by all who heard her speak. Her mistress particularly admired the quality, and one day sent for the girl to come and speak to the teacher who was giving the daughters of the house lessons in elocution.

"There," she said, "I want you to teach my daughter to speak like that."

"Alas, madam," the teacher responded sadly, "that is impossible. No man can teach that. Those are neither chest nor throat notes; they come from the heart."

Voices that are naturally harsh, metallic or nasal can be greatly improved by private study. Speaking exercises at the piano are a wonderful help.

Not only is it difficult to speak properly, but it is even more difficult to whisper correctly. A whisper is often merely a husky croak or quite inaudible. The secret of a clear whisper is to drop the voice as low as possible and to speak with the lips, the lip movement helping to convey nearly as much as the actual sound.

The Strength of Shrapnel

Shrapnel, says the American Machinist, is really a flying cannon, which shoots its charge while in flight or explodes on contact. Its speed of 500,000 feet per second is produced by a pressure of from 30,000 to 35,000 lbs. per square inch from the powder that expels it from the gun. Its bursting charge exerts a pressure of from 20,000 to 25,000 pounds per square inch. The metal of its case has a tensile strength of 135,000 pounds to the square inch and an elastic limit of 110,000 pounds per square inch.

Color Fish with Chemicals

Striking results are said to have been obtained in coloring live fish artificially to suit the fancies of esthetic admirers of the piscatorial race. This follows the example of floriculturists, who, by means of chemicals, have caused roses, carnations and violets to take on many bizarre hues. The experiments with fish have been carried on in Sicily, carp being used for the most part. Fish chalk, iron and peat are introduced into the water where the fish are kept, and then they receive another chemical bath containing iron and tin.

Egbert—"What in the world is a rainbow kiss?"
Bacon—"One that follows a storm."

HOW PEANUTS ARE SALTED

Much Care Has to Be Taken in Their Preparation for Market

There are two distinct kinds of salted peanuts according to A. P. Grohens, an authority on that subject. The ordinary kinds are the ones prepared from Spanish shelled peanuts, unblanched, or, in other words, with the skins left on. The other class of salted peanuts is prepared from the Virginia varieties and blanched. The blanched salted peanuts are usually put up in small paraffined paper sacks to prevent early deterioration.

The Virginia goober differs from others in that it is blanched whole and is prepared from only the choicest or "Jumbo" Virginia shelled peanuts. On account of the great difficulty attending the blanching so that the nut meats will not fall apart or into halves, this variety of salted peanuts commands a fancy price, as compared with the plainer varieties.

The majority of manufacturers resort to the scalding process in blanching these nuts, for in that way the skin can be removed more readily and the nuts are not so apt to fall apart. The scalding process, however, injures the flavor and tends to toughen the nuts. The best plan is to roast the nuts in a regular roaster for ten to twelve minutes. This is sufficient time to loosen the skins, so that when the nuts are cooled they can be blanched by hand or by some mechanical device. The short time they have been in the roaster will not have changed the appearance or raw flavor to any extent. When blanched the nuts can be cooked in pure vegetable fat in the same manner as the unblanched varieties, and salted immediately after they are cooked and drained. Special care must be exercised in the handling, however, if it is desired to keep the nuts whole.

Foretelling Battleship Speed

In a long, low building, down near the river in Washington, there is a man who plays with toy ships on a toy ocean. And as a result of his play, he can foretell exactly how the big battleships of the United States navy will behave in a storm at sea, and he can predict to a nicety how much horsepower will be needed to drive the great transatlantic liners laden with their passengers and freight. He does this before even the keels of the ships have been laid down.

He is Lieutenant Commander D. W. Taylor, naval constructor in the United States navy, and the toy ocean on which he works is the United States experimental model basin. The sheet of water in the basin is five hundred maximum depth of fourteen feet. But, in this limited space, Commander Taylor, working with a wave maker, a dynamometer, a towing bridge, and other apparatus, can solve all the mechanical problems connected with the construction of a ship, its probable roll when struck by giant waves, and the horsepower needed in its tremendous engines to drive it through the water. He works with wooden models twenty feet long. Some of them weigh a thousand pounds, none of them more than two thousand. The other countries of the world use paraffine models, but he works entirely with the miniature ships of wood.

For this substitution there was a very good reason. In the summer time it is so hot in Washington that a model made out of even the best paraffine showed signs of melting. If it did not melt entirely, it changed its shape in an alarming degree.

One of the most important things in experimenting with the models is to be sure that in the beginning they have the exact lines and dimensions proportionately of the big ships, and that the lines and dimensions shall not change a hair's breadth.

The drawings and plans of the battleships to be built by Uncle Sam are turned over to Mr. Taylor by the navy department's bureau of construction and repair. In a little shop adjoining the building which covers the model basin the models are made and pointed. Bags of shot, each weighing 25 pounds, are kept on hand to bring the model up to the corresponding weight of the big ship. The final tests are made in the "toy ocean" near by.—The Popular Magazine.

Fine Butter Made from Trees

There are several trees that yield an oily substance much resembling butter and making a good substitute for it. Some of these grow in Europe, but the best known species are natives of Africa and South America.

The Bassia butyrosa, or the "shea butter" as it is commonly called, grows wild on the west coast of Africa. The butter obtained from this tree is derived by pounding and pressing the seeds, which are three inches long. When extracted, the oil assumes the consistency of butter and smells like chocolate. Not only is it an excellent article of food, but it is used extensively for the making of soap and candles.

The seeds of the crab tree of Brazil and Guiana are 70 per cent fat and the "crab wood tallow" derived from them is excellent for the manufacture of candles and soap. When boiled, the tallow turns out yellow butter which contains a small quantity of strychnine. The latter, however, is easily removed by prolonged boiling.

From the nutmeg a useful fat is obtained. The nutmegs which have been broken or damaged by insects are roasted, ground and pressed for the fat, which is used for cosmetic and medicinal purposes.

A tree abounding in the forests of Africa and called by Kaffirs "chignite," yields (from the fruit bark the exact source being unknown) a white butter-like substance which constitutes an important article of commerce on that continent.

A LILY FAIR FOR EASTER DAY

DANCING IN CHURCH.

Forms a Part of the Easter Services in the Cathedral of Seville.

This cathedral at Seville has the distinction of being the only church in Christendom where dancing forms any part of any ceremony or service. Here a dance called the "Dance of the Selves," is performed before the high altar during holy week. It is in imitation of the dance of the Israelites before the Ark of the Covenant, and even in Spain is of very ancient origin. Imagine the cathedral on such an occasion crowded with people, seated and standing. In front of all the others are several rows of priests and church dignitaries, all in gorgeous vestments, who inclose a fair sized open place before the high altar. A piece of carpet covers the marble floor, on either side of which stands a row of boys from eight to twelve years of age, dressed like Spanish gentlemen of the middle ages, with white stockings and a large plume in the hat. At a signal from a priest the soft music of violins breaks the profound silence of the church and the boys proceed to execute several pretty and graceful figures. Later they join in a gentle and harmonious song, which in the obscurity of the vast cathedral sounds like a choir of angels, and finally they accompany dance and song with their castanets.

Two centuries and over ago an archbishop of Seville desired to put an end to this ceremony, thinking it unbecoming the church and the Master in heaven. But the people of Seville thought otherwise and were determined not to give it up without a struggle. The case was finally appealed to Rome. The pope of that day, thinking to appease the people of Seville and at the same time put an end to the dancing, gave his permission for the ceremony to be continued on condition that the dance should be given up as soon as the suits, which the boys then had, were worn out. What resulted? The suits have never been worn out. From time to time they have been skillfully repaired with a piece here and a piece there, and now, after two centuries, the suits are still as good as new, and the dance is still given.

NATURE herself gives to humanity her choicest treasures when she clothes the world with grass and flowers at Easteride. This awakening brings a promise of beauty to last for many months. All mankind hails with joy the dawning of the Easter morn. New hopes arise in the deep, hidden springs of the heart, new joys lend brightness to the eye and color to the cheek, and new love radiates the entire being, working its wondrous miracles upon whomsoever it descends. The highest type of love is the unselfish, sacrificing variety, and to attain this unalloyed quality we must give.

Easter Influence in Greece.

The influence of the church is strongly felt by the common people of Greece. They keep its long fasts religiously and for fifty days before Easter eat neither meat, fish, butter nor eggs, but live on figs, olives, bread and wine. On the Friday before Easter funeral services are held for Christ in all the churches, and at the close of the services the congregations go out to bury him. Brass bands play slow music as at military funerals, and the procession carries black banners, crosses and other emblems of mourning, while great multitudes follow bearing candles.

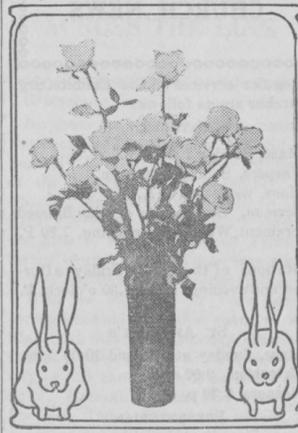

Why the Lily Means Easter.

The lily is typical of Easter because of its whiteness and personification of purity. In its natural state it blooms about Easter time in France, its native home.

Easter Day.

The brook has found its voice again. The lark has found the blue. The crocus bud has found the sun. The sun has found the dew. The butterfly has found the light. The grass the green of May. And Christians all find joyous life On holy Easter day.

FOR EASTER DAY

Easter.

Ring loud and clear your bells for Easter time,
Now quick, now slow;
From sea to sea catch up the happy chime;
Bring all the flowers that blow
For wreath and crown an offering pure and sweet
Christ's rising morn to greet.

Ring long and deep your bells for suffering borne
With patient grace;
Bring purple pansies, colors that are worn
Best with a sorrowing face,
And weave with pine and cypress and young moss
The emblematic cross.

Ring soft and slow your bells a tender knell
And softly weep;
Bring amaranth and stainless asphodel
In memory of that sleep
Which wrapped the world in three days' ashen gloom
While he was in the tomb.

Ring, ring your bells across the happy land
This Easter morn!
Christ sits in heaven at the Father's hand.
Bring blossoms to adorn
A conquered death, whose victim has arisen,
A grave which is no prison.
—Juliet Marsh Isham in New York Times.

THE EMPTY TOMB.

Its Story and Significance Told in Easter Sermon.

It is Friday afternoon. With "It is finished" his head drops upon his breast, and the hopes of his disciples are shattered. Pilate is glad to find some balm for his uneasy conscience by granting the request of the rich friend, Joseph of Arimathea, for the body. Nicodemus, scholarly, timid and shrinking, comes into the light again, joining in the embalming, because he cannot forget the evening's talk with the great Teacher. The tomb is sealed. He is alone, save for his watching enemies. The world's hopes are dead. In him they had flamed high; now they are ashes. They who loved him cherish the past, but have no future. The long sorrowful Sabbath day at last is waning; the first day is dawning.

Through the mists of the morning, hands laden with the treasures of the heart, while silver light of star and golden gleam of sun mingle, the Marys sadly seek the tomb, hoping to perform the last service of loving devotion. They approach with timidity, fear, awe, wonder.

Lo, the stone is rolled back! One sits upon it clothed in light. He has hastened from heaven to anticipate their coming and to change their sorrow into song by the announcement, "He is not here; he is risen." The women hasten to tell his disciples. Hope, the last spark of which had gone out, is kindled again in human hearts. Forty day he lingers on the earth until the most skeptical cries, "My Lord and my God!" Every disciple becomes a herald of his resurrection. They seal their testimony with their blood.

Only the fact of Christ's resurrection can explain the revived hopes of his despondent followers. Only a personality that lives can rule the world as Christ rules it today. Every believer may share this Easter morning the resurrection hope as it sends the sunlight of heaven into every darkened heart and into every open grave, revealing anew, "He is not here; he is risen."

Every tomb is now empty. May you who stand, in fact or in imagination, by the grave of loved ones today catch the vision and hear the voice, "He is not here; he is risen."

Death is not a wall, but a door into life. As evening promises morning, as winter spring, as the seed flowers, so death promises life.—Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, Pittsburg.

The Word Easter.

Easter to the French is known as Paques; to the Scotch, Pasch; the Danes, Pauske, and the Dutch, Paschen. St. Paul calls Christ "our Pasch." The English name is derived from that of the old German or Saxon goddess of spring, Ostera or Eastre, whose festival occurred about the same time of the year as the celebration of Easter. When the early missionaries went to Britain they found the people worshipping this goddess, to whom the month of April, which they called Easturmonath, was dedicated. The missionaries substituted the Christian feast for the old heathen one, but they allowed the people to give it the name of their goddess, and so the word Easter came to be used.

HOW PAINT. The first cost of a good job of paint—Devoe—is $50 (averaged size, of course.) The first cost of a second or third or fourth rate job, $55 to $100. The wear is likewise. The better you paint, of course, the longer it wears. And the more you pay for your job, the shorter it wears!

Devoe is one of a dozen good paints. There are hundreds of bad ones. As likely as not, Devoe is the only good one in this town.

DEVOE. J. THOS. GELWICKS sells it. The first English field marshal was created as long ago as 1786.

TWO FOREST FIRES IN COUNTY

Stubborn Blaze on Mountain Near Thurmont Threatened Much Damage.

Two forest fires raging in Frederick county last Sunday threatened dwelling houses and farm buildings and caused a monetary loss that has not yet been estimated. One was in the Catoctin Mountains, above Thurmont and the other on the place of Wilbur Koutzahn, near Reel's Mills.

The fire above Thurmont was by far the largest and most disastrous of the two, while the one near Reel's Mills did not cover nearly so large a space, and was soon extinguished.

The fire above Thurmont broke out at night and was confined principally to the property owned by St. Joseph's Seminary, of Baltimore, where a large dairy farm is conducted and general farming carried on under the management of Father McCarthy and Martin Kelley.

The fire started at the foot of the mountain, near the property of Kelbaugh, and rapidly ate its way upward, spreading in all directions and threatening to reach the area of the farm buildings. A large area was burned over before the fire was gotten under control. Deputy Forest Warden J. Howard Creager, of Thurmont, was on the scene in charge of the volunteers, who turned out to fight the fire, and section gangs of the Western Maryland Railroad were fighting to save the high bridges between Thurmont and Deerfield, and right in the path of the fire.

MOUNT SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

Terrace Talk

Well, we are off on our Easter vacation.

The first state team, St. John's, was disposed of favorably.

All monthly examinations for March have been completed.

About two-thirds of the student body will remain at the Mount during Easter holidays.

The last call for prize essays was sounded on Tuesday. The response was unanimous.

Mountaineers Take Opener.

Mount St. Mary's opened the baseball season last Saturday when it defeated St. John's College, of Annapolis, 11 to 6. The first two innings during which the Mountaineers annexed 7 tallies was sufficient to decide the contest. In the third the Cadets yanked Merriken and Matthews pitched well until the seventh, and last, when three runs were made off his delivery and the game was called on account of rain.

Wineke who essayed the mound work for the locals, did well at first, but made way for Higgins after being landed on in the third for five runs. Higgins was a little wobbly at first, but settled down as the game progressed. Only one run was made while he was performing.

The game was featured by the all-round playing of Mount St. Mary's team, especial mention being deserved by Higgins, Rice and Camino. The last-named knocked a ball over the bank for a home run in the second inning.

For St. John's the work of Captain Matthews, Heise and Noble stood out prominently. Chief McAtee was assisted in his umpiring by Nallin, the American League arbitrator. The line-up:

The Handball Association is one of the strongest athletic clubs at the Mount. This organization consists of five or six teams so allied as to form a league.

The number of students now enrolled on the college register was not reached last year until April 23. Mr. H. Corgan, of Luzerna, Pa., is the latest addition to that list.

Umpires McAtee and Nallin, after a three days visit at the Mount, returned on Monday. Scout McAtee is a well known arbitrator in Maryland, while Dick Nallin is on the staff of American League umpires.

Lose Second Disastrously.

Inability to keep the visitors from pounding the sphere all over the lot, and inability to accomplish this feat for themselves account for the Mountaineers loss on Monday to Holy Cross, 16 to 2. The tabulated score shows that the locals were given nine errors. These were invariably converted into runs by the fleet Northerners. The real demoralization of the game occurred in the fourth inning, when, with two men out, the visitors secured six runs, all of which were due to poor fielding of Mt. St. Mary's men. The game was called at the end of the seventh inning to allow the visitors to catch a train. The score:

The Prize Egg

An Easter Story

THE shops all along the main street were full of Easter suggestions. One confectioner's window was entirely filled with chocolate covered eggs of all sizes, and a large placard announced: "Each egg in this window contains a valuable and unique prize. All eggs are the same price, 25 cents. Each egg will open on Easter morning."

Passersby paused to look and read the notice, and not a few entered the shop to purchase.

Presently a winsome looking girl and a very tall young man paused in front of the window. He looked inquiringly at her, and she smiled; then they went in, coming out again in a few minutes carrying a small box.

That evening at the girl's home they opened the package and examined the egg.

"Shall we break it," she questioned, "or wait until Easter and see what happens?"

"Oh, let's wait!" he answered. "I don't suppose it will have anything worth while inside, and it may not even open, though of course that could be chemically arranged."

The egg was again put in its box and laid away where the girl promised it would remain until the arrival of the man on Easter morning.

Easter dawned fair and beautiful, and while it was quite early the man arrived to find the girl anxiously awaiting him.

They opened the box with care and gently laid the egg on the table. The surface of chocolate was as smooth as when purchased.

For half an hour they watched it closely and were about to give up when the girl noticed a faint crack across the top. Very slowly it spread—in fact, almost imperceptibly—until, quite without realizing how it happened or when, the two halves of the egg lay on the table and between them a small object wrapped in tissue paper.

Very gingerly she tore off the paper and cried in disgust when she saw only a dirty old silver dollar.

"Still," he exclaimed practically, "a dollar is a dollar, no matter how old it is." He took it from her and looked at it closely, feeling it all over, when the eagle opened, and the face of a woman smiled up at him.

"Oh!" Suddenly he raised it to his lips, kissing it passionately.

The girl's expression instantly changed from sweet winsomeness to a jealous fury, and she snatched the dollar from him.

"How dare you kiss that woman when you say you love me!" She fairly hissed the words, and her angry eyes devoured the lovely features of the almost faded picture.

He took it gently from her, holding it tenderly in his hand, while he put his arm around her, and there was wonder in his voice when he spoke.

"Strange and improbable as it seems, that is my mother's photograph."

"How curious!" she murmured from his shoulder.

"You see how thin and worn the dollar is," he continued. "That is because my father carried it for ten years, and then one day absentmindedly he spent it. He never knew where or how, but it was gone, and he was never able to find a trace of it, though I don't believe he has ever given up trying. * * * I think mother felt it until she saw how it worried father; then she made light of it by saying she wondered whose husband was carrying her picture now. * * * How glad they will be!" He raised the eagle to look once more into the beautiful tender eyes that, so the girl thought at the moment, were exactly like his.

"I thought I would be afraid of her," the girl said slowly, "but I won't be unless she has changed. Has she?"

"Only to become more beautiful. This was taken before I was born. * * * You will change that way some day, dear, and I shall watch you as my father watched her. You do love me. I know it now," he said with conviction, "for you were jealous when I kissed the picture, and you couldn't be unless you cared."

Once more she gazed upon the picture; then, closing the dollar, she slipped it into his vest pocket.

"Take it to her, dear,"—she hesitated—"and tell her it came out of a prize egg, but that a girl who hopes some day to be loved as much as she is sends it, and"

"Then," he interrupted, "you're going to say yes today?"

"I'm still in doubt about lots of things, but I do love you, and I want a beautiful mother to love me, and"

"You darling!" He lifted her off her feet for a second and crushed her to him.

As he put her down they both noticed the egg had closed, and only a faint crack showed where it had been split.

"Yes, it's a strange egg," he said in answer to her questioning, "but what I said about the action of chemicals accounts for the closing as well as the opening. But whatever it is it has served its purpose here in giving me the prize."

In the Garden.
"She, supposing him to be the gardener"—
Dead is our Christ and our hearts cry
"Where?"
We would be true to the loved and fair.
Still we peer in the tomb behind thee.
Ah! Not there!
as of old in the open air,
in the garden, Lord, we find thee.

Easter In Various Lands

IN nearly all Christian countries the recurrence of Easter has been celebrated with various ceremonies and popular sports and observances.

In the Netherlands, or Holland, a country famed for its flowers, especially tulips, blossoms play a large part in the day's celebration. For days before the holiday the Dutch canals bear on their placid surfaces many barges laden high with fragrant and showy masses of bloom.

Some of the Easter customs in the various countries are curious indeed. In the north of England you may still hear the old rime:

Tid, mid and misera,
Carling, palm and Pasch egg day.
The first line refers to Christmas, the Epiphany and Lent. Carlings are steeped peas fried in butter, with pepper and salt, and eaten on midlent or mothering Sunday, as the fourth Sunday in Lent is sometimes called. Palm Sunday immediately precedes Passion week and is so called from the branches of palm trees strewn in our Saviour's path at the time of his triumphal entry into Jerusalem.

Pasch eggs are Easter eggs boiled so hard that you can play at ball with them, dyed with various colors and often having inscriptions or landscapes traced upon them.

Easter eggs symbolize the resurrection. As one old writer says, "As the bird imprisoned within the shell comes to life and liberty at the appointed time, so did our Saviour on Easter morning burst the gates of the grave." The eggs were at first dyed scarlet, in memory of the blood of Christ shed upon the cross.

A LEGEND OF EASTER.

The story runs that when Adam felt death approach he called his son Seth to his side and bade him ask the archangel, the keeper of the garden, for a balsam that should save him from death.

"The time of pardon is not yet come," said the archangel. "Four thousand years must pass. But as a token that his future pardon is assured the wood whereon redemption shall be won shall grow from Adam's tomb."

He then gave three seeds to Seth and bade him place them in his father's mouth when he died. Adam died three days later. Seth obeyed the directions of the archangel, and the place of his father's sepulcher was Golgotha, where in course of time three trees grew from the seeds. One was a cedar, another a cypress and the third a pine. It was with a bough from one of these trees that Moses performed his miracles in Egypt, brought water out of the rock and healed those whom the serpents had bitten in the wilderness.

After a time the three trees incorporated themselves with each other and became a single tree, beneath which David sat when he bewailed his sins. In the days of Solomon the tree had become the finest of all trees, so was cut down to assist in the building of the temple. But magic seemed to have taken possession of the wood, for nothing which it was wanted to serve for would answer until at last Solomon cast the tree over Cedron so that all might trample on it as they crossed the brook.

There it was discovered by the queen of Sheba, and she, recognizing its virtue, had it raised. It was then buried, but the spot where it lay became the pool of Bethesda and healed all the sick who flocked to it. When the time of the crucifixion drew near the beam of wood rose to the surface and was brought out of the water, and when the executioners sought for a beam for the cross they discovered this and found that it fitted their purpose. So the prophecy was fulfilled.

DURING A LULL IN THE OPENING DAY CEREMONIES AT THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION

The Panama-Pacific International exposition was opened by a wireless spark, dispatched by President Woodrow Wilson at Washington, and caught on the tendrils of a wireless aerial on the lofty Tower of Jewels at the exposition. Instantly the power was released in the mighty Palace of Machinery and the portals of the exhibit palaces opened. The scene is on the grand stand after the ceremonies had ended, Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, Gov. Hiram Johnson of California, Mayor James Rolph, Jr., of San Francisco, President C. C. Moore of the exposition and a notable group of visiting dignitaries being seen in animated discussion of the epochal event. In the press box the correspondents are seen flashing to the world the news that the exposition had opened.
