ENOUGH SUGAR COMING

NEW SOURCE SUPPLY

The Present Situation Only Temporary

LICENSING SYSTEM BEGINS SOON

Retail Prices Not Regulated by Government—Dealers Predict Nine Cents Per Pound, Partly Due to Freight.

It is merely a temporary disarrangement that has disturbed the sugar market. There is not enough sugar to go around to all if some consumers begin to hoard the product, but hoarding is ill advised and unnecessary. Before the end of this month there will be new sugar in the market and by December 1, the supply should be plentiful and the prices will be lower than they are today.

There are several reasons for believing that the sugar market will be normal again in the near future. In the first place the beet crop is now being harvested and converted and beet sugar of the 1917 crop will begin to come at the end of two or three weeks. Secondly, the dealers cannot manipulate the stock in hand so as to raise prices materially without prejudicing their chances of getting a Government license to sell after Nov. 1. To do business in sugar after that date they must have a license from the licensing division of the United States Food Administration in Washington. Consequently the dealer who jumps the price to an abnormally high figure this month may have difficulty in securing a license to handle sugar after Nov. 1. Of course the licensing is only for wholesalers, jobbers and brokers, but their prices will regulate the retailers.

About 1,000,000 tons of beet sugar are being produced in this country and New England will be getting her share of this as soon as the immediate wants of the Western beet belt have been supplied. There is a new cane crop of some 700,000 tons of Hawaiian sugar which will begin to arrive soon. The total sugar crop of the world for the 1916-17 season is estimated at 16,685,013 tons, which is 142,115 tons more than a year ago, and the new crop of sugar must be sold to wholesalers at 7.25 cents per pound, and the wholesaler must not charge the retailer more than 7.50 cents per pound for it. These two prices are obligatory under the Government regulations, to become operative on November 1, and while the retail price to the consumer is not regulated by Government stipulations, it is not likely to be much above 8 cents a pound. Some dealers predict that it may be 9 cents, due partly to freight charges.

THE KAISER AND ACCOMPLICES IGNORE LOGIC OF RIGHT AND WRONG

Under Pressure Germany May Consent To Restore A Nominal Independence To Belgium.

The Kaiser ignores the question of right and wrong; it is with him merely a question of strength. This is the whole German position. There is nothing to debate about Alsace-Lorraine, to his mind, and there is nothing to debate about Belgium, except the question of the relative physical power of Germany and the Allies to take and hold them. If it can be shown to the Kaiser and his accomplices that he cannot hold Alsace, or Belgium, or Istria, or Serbia, then he can see the logic of giving them up; but to tell him that he must give them up because he has no right to them is to waste words the meaning of which he does not understand.

The peace terms of Germany are: "We shall hold what we have got unless you can take it away from us." The mask could not be lifted that was supposed to conceal the German terms, because there are no German terms but German victory. Germany means to hold on to what she has got, by whatever means she got it, unless it is proved to her that she cannot. Under pressure, she might consent to restore a nominal independence to Belgium and some of the other stolen territories, but this independence would be only nominal; she would not part with her rule over them unless it was forced out of her hand. The Allies are willing to meet Germany on this ground. They have from the first shown a clear comprehension of the fact that if they wish to release the stolen peoples they will be obliged, as the Kaiser says, to come and take them. That is their intention.

A $50 Liberty Bond is better than a $50 bill. The bond bears four per cent interest—the bill does not.

AN APPEAL TO WOMEN OF MARYLAND TO SAVE WHEAT AND SUGAR

Campaign To Begin October 28th.—Herbert C. Hoover Will Review Enrollment Of Housewives.

It is in order that these facts may be brought home to every housewife of the United States that the Department of Food Administration of the Federal Government is planning a nation-wide campaign during the last week in October. This campaign aims at a house-to-house canvass and the securing of a pledge from every housewife to cooperate in this food conservation campaign.

If every household in the State of Maryland is to be visited and the matter clearly explained to the housewife, and her signature to the pledged card obtained, there must be engaged in this work during the week of October 21st to 27th, a large number of women who will give their time as officers of the Government to making the explanations and securing the signatures. Every woman in Maryland is thereby urged to do two things; first, to sign the pledge card for herself and her family; and secondly, to volunteer to assist in the canvass during the final week of October. Every woman who will volunteer her services is urgently requested to send her name and address to the Maryland Food Conservation Campaign Headquarters, 518 North Charles Street, Baltimore, Md. She will then be assigned a definite territory to cover in her own neighborhood, and will be issued the proper credentials and the proper badge for her work.

Herbert C. Hoover himself will review the housewives enrolled in Maryland's Food Conservation Army at the Lyric, in Baltimore, at a great meeting on October 27, preliminary to the opening of the pledge-card signing campaign beginning October 28. The meeting will begin at 3 o'clock and promises to be of nation-wide interest owing to the fact that this is the only occasion in connection with the National Food Conservation Campaign at which the National Food Administrator will speak. It is hoped that by the eve of the campaign week in Maryland, nearly 4000 women will be enrolled as captains, lieutenants, and recruiting officers in Maryland Conservation Army.

Most Maryland housewives are in-

FROM THE COUNTY.

Rev. William Lee Smith, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church died at his residence in Brunswick, on Saturday. Mr. Lee was aged 51 years.

George Thomas Phebus, a prominent resident and well-known junk dealer of Frederick died Friday morning. He was aged 62 years.

Following an illness from paralysis of about three years duration, John D. Cramer, of Walkersville, died at his home at that place Friday morning, aged 71 years.

Frederick people Saturday night experienced the coldest October weather since the establishment of the local weather bureau by the United States government some years ago. Continually falling from the time the sun set the mercury receded in the official tube until it got as low as 25 degrees, which was seven below freezing. In various parts of the county there was a third of an inch of ice on Sunday morning.

William Augustus Simmons, a well known retired jeweler, died at his home in Frederick late Tuesday afternoon of a complication of diseases. He was aged 77 years.

Fifty-seven negro draftees, 17 from Frederick, and 26 from the county, have been notified to appear before the different exemption boards prior to leaving Monday morning for Camp Meade, Admiral, Md. From the hour they report the draftees will be in the military service of the United States, and subject to the military law. Failure or unpunctuality in reporting are serious military offenses. Wilful failure to report with intention to evade military service, constitutes desertion, which is a capital offense in time of war.

Dr. Joseph H. Apple, president of Hood College, Frederick announced Tuesday that a domestic science practice home, to be known as the David H. Strawn Home, will be added to the college buildings. Dr. Strawn, the donor, who is a resident of Jacksonville Ill., has deposited in a Frederick bank the money necessary to cover the cost of erecting the new building. The only restriction is that one room be set aside for the use of the donor on his visits to this city.

Guns and shells save lives. Liberty Bonds provide the guns and shells. Is there anywhere in this great, young nation a man, woman or child with heart so cold as to hesitate?

According to announcements by the War Department on Friday the American army transport Antilles, homeward bound under convoy, was torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine Wednesday. About 70 men are missing and probably lost. All the army and navy officers aboard and the ship's master were among the 167 survivors. The missing are members of the crew, three civilian engineers, some enlisted men of the navy and 16 of 33 soldiers returning home for various reasons. Neither the submarine nor the torpedo was seen, and the transport, hit squarely amidships, sank in five minutes. The tragedy of the sea, the first in which an American ship engaged in war duty has been lost, is the first of its magnitude to bring home to the people of the United States the rigors of the war in which they have engaged against Germany. It carries the largest casualty list of the war, of American lives, and marks the first success of German submarine attacks on American transports.

The Treasury Department on Friday announced a loan of $20,000,000 to France. This makes the total advanced to France $770,000,000 and the grand total to all the Allies $2,731,400,000.

Germany is pouring vast amounts of money into neutral countries for propaganda designed to sway public opinion. According to authoritative information, her expenditures for this work will total more than $80,000,000. Much of the money is spent in subsidizing and influencing newspapers. In a number of cases Germans have bought newspapers outright and managed them secretly. Large amounts are also being paid agents to keep peace agitation going.

In the presence of many distinguished officials and others, Secretary Baker on Friday accepted, on behalf of the War Department, the first two heavy-duty war trucks to be completed under designs prepared by the Quartermaster's Department.

Eleven hundred Pennsylvania National Army men from Camp Meade, Md., arrived at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., Saturday to fill up the units of the Eighty-second National Army division.

Secretary Baker after a conference on Saturday, with a Boston delegation, headed by Mayor Curley, decided to name Boston as one of the five ports where army depots are to be established.

A sweeping change in the machinery of the selective draft, based on division of the 9,000,000 remaining registrants into five classes in order of their eligibility for military service, was announced Saturday by Provost Marshal-General Crowder. Details of the plan, which has been approved by President Wilson, are not disclosed. It is calculated, however, to do away with virtually all the complicated machinery of the first draft and to make the operations of the local boards hereafter little more than rubber stamp proceedings.

Secretary of War Baker issued a formal statement Monday which is interpreted in Washington as meaning that the bulk of the American expeditionary forces now in France will soon go into action in the trenches.

Coolness and quick maneuvering by Commander Walter H. Vernon probably saved the American destroyer Cassin from destruction with a German submarine in the war zone on October 16 the Navy Department was advised Monday by Vice Admirals Sims.

That Turkey, as well as Bulgaria, has thrown out hints of willingness to accept separate peace "on favorable terms" with the Entente was admitted in diplomatic circle Monday.

Every American soldier who is wounded in the war against Germany will be decorated with a red, white and blue ribbon, the War Department announced Tuesday. General orders were sent to all divisions commanders describing how the wound ribbons are to be bestowed. The regulations provide that every officer and enlisted man wounded in action since April 6, 1917 the day President Wilson declared war, will be entitled to wear a ribbon for any wound or wounds received, the decoration to be worn on the right breast.

BIG ATHLETIC TOURNAMENT CALLED OFF

WHOLE CAMP AT GETTYSBURG ORDERED SOUTH TO CANTONMENT AT CAMP GREEN.

The monster military athletic tournament which was to have been held on Echo Field, Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, next Wednesday, October 31, was called off at the last moment due to orders from Washington to Gettysburg to break camp, all regiments at Gettysburg going to Camp Green, South Carolina.

This tournament was to have been the biggest military athletic event of the year. One entire regiment was to have "hiked" it from Gettysburg to Emmitsburg, there were to have been three regimental bands, over 100 contestants, football and baseball games, track events and a regimental drill—all proceeds going to the Gettysburg Camp Athletic fund.

Preparations on an elaborate scale were being made for this big event and an enormous crowd was expected. The disappointment at the unavoidable upsetting of the plans—disappointment to the officers and men in Gettysburg and to the people here—is keenly felt. But as these are war times and a change of orders may be looked for any moment everybody accepts the situation philosophically.

Another Way to Save Food.

The Treasury instructed all collectors of customs to discontinue the practice of destroying food products abandoned to the government because of nonpayment of duty or other reasons. Collectors are instructed to save food which can be used in whole or in part for human or animal consumption.

Less than twenty years ago the Filipinos were fighting the United States, yet they subscribed to more than their quota of the first Liberty Loan, and they may beat that record even in subscribing to the second.

PRESIDENT PROCLAIMS OCT. 28TH DAY OF PRAYER FOR U. S. ARMS

Country To Join In Invoking Divine Aid For The Success Of The Allied Nations.

President Wilson, by proclamation Saturday declared Sunday, October 28th as a day of prayer for the success of the American arms in the war, in accordance with the recent resolution of Congress.

The proclamation is as follows:

Whereas the Congress of the United States, by a concurrent resolution, adopted on the fourth day of the present month of October, in view of the entrance of our nation into the vast and awful war which now afflicts the greater part of the world, has requested me to set apart, by official proclamation, a day upon which our people should be called upon to offer concerted prayer to Almighty God for His divine aid in the successes of our arms;

And whereas it behooves a great people nurtured as we have been in the eternal principles of justice and of right, a nation which has sought from the earliest days of its existence to be obedient to the divine teachings which have inspired it in the exercise of its liberties, to turn always to the Supreme Master and cast themselves in faith at His feet, praying for His aid and succor in every hour of trial, to the end that the great aims to which our fathers dedicated our power as a people may not perish among men, but be always asserted and defended with fresh ardor and devotion and, through the divine blessing, set at last upon enduring foundations for the benefit of all the free peoples of the earth;

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, gladly responding to the wish expressed by the Congress, do appoint October 28, being the last Sunday of the present month, as a day of supplication and prayer for all the people of the nation, honestly exhorting all my countrymen to observe the appointed day, according to their several faiths, in solemn prayer that God's blessings may rest upon the high task which is laid upon us, to the end that the cause for which we give our lives and treasure may triumph and our efforts be blessed with high achievement.

STATE CONDENSED.

John D. Harp, 64 years old, farmer and pioneer breeder of Holstein cattle and Clydesdale horses died Friday at his home near Benevola.

On Friday robbers forced their way into the store of Herman Darly, at Oak Grove and stole a quantity of groceries, cigars, etc. The postoffice is located in the same building and $20 in money and a lock mail pouch key were missing.

Roused by flames bursting in the front windows of her room, Mrs. Milton Snowden, Jr., succeeded in leaving her home at Ridgewood shortly before 3 o'clock Saturday morning after carrying out her two children and wakening the three servants before the fire cut off their escape. The house was burned to the ground, with a loss estimated at $12,000.

The body of William Whittington, 22 years old, Eastport, who was a member of Company M, One Hundred and Fifteen Regiment, was sent home Sunday. Whittington died Saturday morning at Camp McClellan Base Hospital. The report of the medical officer states that spinal meningitis caused his death. He had been sick for five days.

Charles F. Peace, bailiff in the Circuit Court and well-known to a generation of lawyers of Baltimore city and the Court of Appeals of Maryland died suddenly Monday morning at his home in Baltimore.

Mrs. Walter B. Brooks, Jr., of Baltimore has given her city home for the use of the sailors and soldiers during the war. The home will be converted into the United Service Club of Baltimore, patterned after the Service Club of Philadelphia.

Forty-fourth session of the Potomac Synod of the Reformed Church convened in Hagerstown in Zion Reformed Church. The synod will remain in session until Friday. About 200 lay and clerical delegates are in attendance.

St. Peter's Church, in Baltimore, celebrated its diamond jubilee on Sunday. Many notable clergy attended the opening services.

Money for Corn Deposited.

The Mexican Government has deposited 1,000,000 pesos ($500,000) in a New York bank to cover the purchase of 3,000,000 bushels of American corn to be used in relieving the food situation in Mexico. The corn will be delivered at Laredo at the rate of 200,000 bushels every twenty days.

THOUSANDS OF MILES

GUNNERY IS IMPROVED

Every Destroyer Has Met One U-Boat

LAURELS FOR RESCUING MEN

Qualities of Seamanship Put to Severe Test During Tempestuous Weather.—Hazardous Work Done Single-Handed.

Fight hundred and seventy-five thousand miles is the distance covered by American destroyers in the five months of active service. This is more by several times the distance cruised in two whole years of peace.

They have been engaged in the business of combatting the submarines, conveying troop ships and merchantmen, patrolling the shipping routes and rescuing survivors from torpedoed ships. The addition of their units to the Allies' forces, patrolling as they do an area as large as that bounded roughly by the great V formed by New York, Detroit, and Knoxville, was certain to make life less comfortable for the U-boats. Next the Americans applied all the tactics of the long experienced British, and in some instances improved on them.

Their gunnery, too, has greatly improved. One gun crew saw the spar of a sunken ship the other day which they at first thought was a periscope and shattered it at 2000 yards. New ideas also have been and are constantly being worked out with a view to rendering the work of the submarine increasingly difficult.

Every destroyer has to its credit at least one encounter with a submarine, while some of the more fortunate have stalked two or three underwater craft. At no time, however, have the submarines shown fight. They always avoid a meeting.

The wide cruising radius of the American boats also has helped to produce unmistakable signs of a weakening in the morale of the U-boat crews. They have made the U-boat spend more time under water than they used to do. When patrolling the shipping lanes the destroyers have been conveying food and supply ships and transports.

The destroyers also have taken laurels in the humanitarian task of rescuing survivors of torpedoed ships. The Americans began snatching torpedoed crews from watery graves the day of their arrival and for a long time not a week passed without several destroyers accounting for survivors.

This rescue work is more often than not done in mine-infested areas and places where U-boats are known to be lurking, and always attended by grave danger to the rescuer. Frequently while one destroyer is picking up survivors another will run protecting circles around the scene. More often, however, the hazardous work is done single-handed, the destroyer guns booming into space as a warning to submarines not to attempt to interfere. In tempestuous weather this work puts the men's qualities of seamanship to severe test.

AMERICAN ENEMIES TRY TO DISCOURAGE FOOD CONSERVATION

Unscrupulous Persons Endeavoring to Inoculate the Germs of Discontent Into Homes Here.

Another demonstration of the insidious way in which America's enemies are secretly trying to undermine this country is to be seen in the following telegram received Saturday at the Food Conservation headquarters, 518 North Charles Street, Baltimore, from the United States Food Administration in Washington:

"We have been advised from two or three sections of the country that apparently an organized effort is being made to discourage the enrollment of the families of the United States by the pledge card campaign proposed for the fourth week in October, also that the Food Administration buttons have been used for individuals to enter homes and arouse antagonism against the government by false statements to the effect that the request on the part of the government to can as many fruits and vegetables as possible, simply meant that the government was going to confiscate half of whatever was put up in the home. These and similar statements should be watched for assiduously and promptly followed to their source that the authors of these rumors may be severely dealt with. It may be wis for you to issue a carefully prepared statement in your own name to the effect that these rumors are absolutely without foundation and warning the

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE TURTLES.

"Mr and Mrs. Turtle," said Daddy, "were taking a walk."

"How about paying a call on our cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Snapping Turtle?" asked Mrs. Turtle.

"Yes, let's go," said Mr. Turtle. "In fact, we might make a round of calls. We could see all our cousins and our friends and at each place they could ask us for tea. We could go around like this for a number of days and not have to do any marketing at all."

"A very bright idea," said Mrs. Turtle. "It is an excellent time to do such a thing, too, for everyone is talking about the high prices the grocers and bakers and butchers and all the rest are asking for their meats and breads and fruits."

"To be sure," said Mr. Turtle, "we don't have to pay high prices for our goodies, for we get them ourselves and thus far there have been no grocers or butchers in the turtle world."

"There may be soon," said Mrs. Turtle. "Everyone is talking as though the prices would go so high no one could pay for things after a time."

"How high do they expect them to go?" asked Mr. Turtle. "To the sky?"

"Perhaps," said Mrs. Turtle. "We couldn't reach them even if they went into the trees."

"Well," said Mr. Turtle, "we needn't worry as yet, for there are no creatures in the turtle world who ask us for turtle money."

"As a matter of fact, there is not any turtle money," said Mrs. Turtle.

"Correct my love; you are always right."

"And then they both grinned, for they had been talking and worrying about prices and expensive living when it didn't really bother them in the least."

"It shows," said Mr. Turtle, "how much we copy others. We hear people say they are poor and then we say we are, and we really make ourselves quite miserable about it."

"Just the same," said Mrs. Turtle, "I would enjoy a round of visits."

"So would I," said Mr. Turtle. "And we'll tell every creature upon whom we call that we will be at home in Turtle-Grove Pond after next week and we hope to have the pleasure of seeing them. So, it will not be greedy of us to have tea with them."

"Where is Turtle-Grove Pond?" asked Mrs. Turtle.

"Our home, my love," said Mr. Turtle.

"Have we moved?"

"Oh, no, but when we go calling we must have a name for our place so it can be put on the corner of our cards. That is the correct thing to do," said Mr. Turtle.

"Have you the cards ready?" asked Mrs. Turtle.

"And to Mrs. Turtle's surprise and delight she saw a great many leaves Mr. Turtle had gathered near his pond. In the corner was the name Turtle-Grove-Pond which no one could have understood unless Mr. Turtle explained. But he was quite willing to do that."

"For the leaves had been marked by a family of bugs who like to do that work and who had made the little holes Mr. Turtle said meant the name of his home."

"And in the meantime, while Mr. and Mrs. Turtle went calling, the little turtles came out themselves. Their mother had buried the eggs in the sand and had left them as turtle mothers do. They had hatched out all alone and were just as happy as could be."

"When Mr. and Mrs. Turtle came back they greeted the little turtles as if they were strangers. They liked them but they did not make any fuss over them. For, of course, how could they be sure that the little turtles were their own when they had left them to come out into the world by themselves?"

"But that is the way in Turtleland and the little ones got along by themselves and seemed to be perfectly happy."

"And though it seems very queer to us as long as the turtles are happy it is all right, for they are the rulers of Turtleland, anyway!"

Something Overlooked.

The little four-year-old daughter of a minister was visiting and at dinner the carving was about to begin without the customary grace. Calling out "Wait a minute," she folded her hands and repeated, "Now I lay me," etc., all the way through. This done, she raised her head and, waving her hand to the carver, said: "Now, you can let her go."

WAISTCOAT OF FUR

This Is One of the Successful Novelties of the Season.

Can Be Worn With Most Severely Plain Tailored Suit and is Both Attractive and Comfortable.

The cozy little fur waistcoat is one of this season's successful novelties. Waistcoats of this kind are being made of all sorts of different furs, astrakhan, musquash, squirrel, beaver and dyed rabbit. Such waistcoats can be worn with the most severely plain tailored suit and they not only look attractive, but they are so warm that the coat can be thrown open in the manner now considered so supremely "correct."

The winter suit which is shown in the sketch was created by Worth. It is simplicity itself, but so beautifully cut and so admirably well chosen, so far as materials are concerned, that it might be worn on the most elaborate and ceremonious occasion. The material of both coat and skirt was currant-red duvetyn and the trimming was musquash in a dark brown shade, writes Idalia de Villiers, a Paris correspondent.

Worth is making many winter suits of this order and he is using quantities of soft duvetine and corded gaberdine. I noted many different shades of rich red in his showrooms, but the bright currant shade seems a special favorite. This red has a touch of purple in it and it is particularly attractive in diagonal serge, duvetine and gaberdine.

Worth is not making any walking skirts shorter than "ankle length," and nearly all his new model skirts are plain and fitted at the waist. Large slip-pockets are introduced at the sides and the skirts fall in perfectly straight lines from waist to hem without giving any idea of the ugly "hobble" outline. Please take special note of the large turn-over collar shown in this sketch.

This style of collar appears on all the new winter coats made at the best houses and they are exceedingly cozy and warm. Chez Worth and also chez Paquin and Doucet I heard that a great deal of silk is to be used this winter and coming spring to spare the woolen materials as much as possible. I have seen effective tailored suits made of dark blue and black broadcloth, which had panels of felle and whole bodies of the same silk.

CORDUROY USED AS LINING

Ribbed Velvet Gives Substance to Coats Whose Outer Fabric is of Light Weight Material.

Among the new ideals for the coming season are long coats and wraps lined with corduroy instead of the usual satin brocade or fur.

The lining of ribbed-velvet will give substance to coats whose outer fabric is of light weight material. The interior color may be of white, putty or any of the pastel colors, according to that of the coat material.

It is yet to be seen just how the new idea will take. Two or three seasons ago a prominent French couturiere advanced the lining of linen for the jackets of silk. The sheer novelty of the thing attracted attention, but beyond that the vogue was not advanced. It is thought that something of the same sort may happen to the transposition for corduroy from the fabric of outer construction to that of the lining.

people against seditious propaganda and the enemies of the government. We bespeak your earnest efforts in this direction throughout the state."
While it seems preposterous on the face of it that anyone would use these methods in an endeavor to apparently undermine the food conservation of this country, in this time of stress, nevertheless the fact remains that certain unscrupulous persons, either for their own benefit, or as secret agents of the enemies of this country, have been endeavoring to inoculate the germ of discontent into the minds of the housewife.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy The Most Reliable.

After many years' experience in the use of it and other cough medicines, there are many who prefer Chamberlain's to any other. Mrs. A. C. Kirstein, Greenville, Ill., writes, "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has been used in my mother's home and mine for years, and we always found it a quick cure for colds and bronchial troubles. We find it to be the most reliable cough medicine we have used." Oct 5-1-mo.

County Game Law Showing Changes.

With the approach of the hunting season it may be well for sportsmen, not familiar with the fish and game laws of this county, to inform themselves as to violations and penalties prescribed.

It is unlawful to trap, shoot, snare or in any manner catch or kill any pheasant, ruffed grouse, ring necked pheasant, wild turkey or rabbit, in this county between December 24 and November 10; nor any gray or fox squirrel between December 24 and August 25; or on Sunday or election day, or when the ground is sufficiently covered with snow to track birds, rabbits or squirrels or to kill or capture any snipe between May 1 and September 1 or any woodcock from December 24 to August 1.

It is unlawful at any time to snare, loop or set snares for any partridge, pheasant or rabbit or to offer for sale or to ship out of the county any partridge, pheasant, squirrel, woodcock or snipe. It is unlawful to set steel traps or other devices for catching any muskrat, skunk, fox, raccoon, mink or opossum between March 1 and November 15. The penalty for this violation is a fine not less than $10 and not exceeding $100.

Mrs. John M. Miller, III, Richmond, Virginia, was hostess at an Auction Bridge, Wednesday October seventeenth, given in honor of Miss Ruth L. Pattison, '17, New Orleans, La., and Miss Mary Ward, Lynchburg, Va. Miss Pattison returned home Friday.

"The lack of knowledge of cooking is as much a deficiency in a woman's education as the inability of a man to write." Ten girls have added domestic science to their curriculum. The "extra menu" is undoubtedly an attraction for some; the wisecrack considering the dire effects of an inexperienced cook, refuse to indulge in food prepared by the diligent workers.

The center of interest for the artists is Sister Julianna's Court Yard now under the care of the Art Room. Many new designs in the flower beds enhance the beauty of this spot so familiar to the alumnae. The rose bushes have been transplanted and increased; the rose petals will be utilized in making rosaries.

Preparations are under way for the Halloween celebration to be held next Wednesday evening. The entire student body will appear in costume; the collegiates, as famous women of history or Drama; the academics, as characters in Fiction or Poetry; the preparatories, as personages in Fairy Tales or Nursery Rhymes.

"Imitation is the highest form of admiration," said the seniors, when the Freshmen went to the Frederick Fair; for the Class of '18 attended a like amusement in Hagerstown just one week ago. The "Freshies" had a fine time in following the example of the exemplary seniors:—

We should write our lives in rhyme;
And departing leave behind us
Memories of a good old time.

An Appeal to the Women of Maryland to Save Wheat and Sugar.

formed as to what it aims to accomplish. The United States Government has appealed to the women of the Nation to meet the food shortage emergency. They are asked to conserve the food supply of the nation, especially by substituting for the staple foods—wheat, meats, dairy products and sugar—other articles of diet which are abundant. Every housewife who signs the little Hoover pledge card, promising to cooperate with the Government in the conservation of food "insofar as her circumstances permit" is doing a vital service for the Nation.

The situation is serious. Unless this plan of conservation is carried out by the women and men of the United States both our soldier abroad and our families at home will find themselves without an adequate supply of these important articles of diet before the next twelve months have elapsed. The Government has chosen this method of securing food conservation, and calls upon every loyal woman to join in the work just as it has called upon every man of proper age for service in the field. The war cannot be won without soldiers, and soldiers cannot win without food. The women are asked to help make and keep this country and the world "safe against the devastating wastefulness of war."

Mrs. Smith Recommends Chamberlain's Tablets

"I have had more or less stomach trouble for eight or ten years," writes Mrs. G. H. Smith, Brewerton, N. Y. "When suffering from attacks of indigestion and heaviness after eating, one or two of Chamberlain's Tablets have always relieved me. I have also found them a pleasant laxative." These tablets tone up the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. If you are troubled with indigestion give them a trial, get well and stay well. Advertisement. Oct. 5-1 mo

LIVE STOCK ON THE FUNNYSIDE

Well-Trained Collie Is Unfailing Source of Help and Satisfaction—Teach Him to Mind.

Upon farms where stock is kept, a well-broke collie dog is an unfailing source of help and satisfaction, while an unbroken, untrained dog is a continual nuisance. In handling stock with a dog, it is important that the dog be well trained, and that great care be exercised while the animals are getting used to being managed by him. When these two conditions are fulfilled it is surprising how easily and economically stock can be taken care of. The first essential in breaking a dog for any purpose is to teach him to mind. Dogs are intelligent and affectionate animals and are usually gratified to do the will of their master. If possible, an animal should be broken to mind without fear of punishment. In breaking dogs to handle stock it is a great advantage to have stock that is used to being driven by a dog, upon which to break the puppy. Stock that is not used to a dog is often easily frightened, or it may fight the dog. It is an excellent plan to have an older and well-broke dog to assist in the training, as dogs are imitative. The puppy quickly learns what is wanted by association with the older dog. In training dogs avoid shouting. It is as easy to teach them to mind a single word or a whistle, and much more satisfactory, and remember that much more can be accomplished by kindness than harshness.

Superior Type of Collie.

RIGHT WAY TO CATCH SHEEP
Take Animal Either by Hind Leg or Put Hand Under Jaw—Never Grab it by Its Wool.
An experienced sheep breeder and flock master says never catch a sheep by the wool. This causes the animal unnecessary pain. But this is not all. When you catch the sheep by the wool you are likely to pull out the wool, thus leaving a bruised place in the flesh of the animal. If the sheep is to be sold for mutton the flesh will show this bruised condition.
The proper way to catch a sheep is to take it either by the hind leg just above the gambrel point or by putting the hand underneath the lower jaw or neck. In using a crook it is important that the sheep are not caught below the gambrel joint, as injury to the leg is liable to result from this.

UTILIZE STRAW FOR CATTLE
Strict Economy Should Be Observed and Valuable Use Made of This Neglected Product.
On many farms where strict economy is observed valuable use is made of straw of all kinds. Frequently the straw is chopped up and mixed with other foods such as beets, mangels and silage, so as to make the food more palatable. Some farmers are so careful to get the fullest value out of straw that after it has been used for bedding, and later distributed over their fields, it is raked up again and used for bedding, after lying on the ground until it becomes clean.

POLL EVIL CAN BE AVOIDED
Hard and Badly-Fitting Straps and Low Ceilings and Doorways, Are Cause of Trouble.
Poll evil, an inflamed condition of the horse's poll, very liable to the formation of deep-seated abscesses, may be in many instances prevented, since the principal causes of this complaint are hard and badly-fitting head straps, and horses hitting their heads against the beams of low ceilings and doorways.

GOOD OF COMMUNITY SHOWS
Advertise District in Such Way That Buyers Soon Place It on Their Map—Value of Sire.
Considering the small cost, it is doubtful whether any one thing has proved so great an incentive to more constructive breeding of good draft horses as community colt shows. They advertise a community in such a way that buyers soon place it on their map, and at the same time the shows are a good measure of the value of a sire.

Nearly Done.
Jimmie was going out with his mother one afternoon and had been sent upstairs to get ready. After a long wait the mother called up the stairs: "Hurry down, Jimmie, we're late now. Have you got your shoes on yet?"
"Yes," replied the boy; "all but two."

Scientifically Considered.
"I think a man derives his mentality and character from his mother," remarked the student of heredity.
"Then," commented Miss Cayenne, "the mother of a slacker must have been one of those girls who manicure their nails and eat chocolates while mother does the housework."

Seems Fair Enough.
"Would you die for your country?"
"Yes, I would," answered the patriotic citizen, "and if I'm ever called on to make such a sacrifice I hope the fact that I don't know a single stanza of the national anthem will not be held against me."

Excusable.
"Remember," said the floor walker, sternly. "The customer is always right."
"But, sir," expostulated the clerk, "in this case I was exercising a privilege to which I am entitled."
"What do you mean?"
"The lady I was arguing with is my wife."

What a Worm Did

By F. A. MITCHELL

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

"If you Americans want to get possession of Mexico, you don't need to raise a big army for the purpose. All you have to do is to enlist all the professional gamblers, in the United States, furnish them with ample funds, and send them down there to win the country for you."

The words were spoken by a man who had lived most of his life in Mexico, and had traveled much in Central and South America.
"The people of those regions are all gamblers," the speaker continued, "and if a sufficient force of sharpers were sent among them every foot of ground, and every article on it would soon be in their possession. Thus the gamblers, or those they represented, could meet in convention, vote annexation to the United States, and the trick would be done."

"I spent a winter in Brazil and every evening as soon as the day's work was finished, the set to which I belonged adjourned to the back yard of an old fellow named Papiado, who had a roulette wheel he had made himself, and spent the time far into the night gambling. The roulette wheel was made of wood, and there was a cover for it, which was put on while the ball was still spinning so that the betting could be carried on indefinitely.

"Some of the gamblers played for the enjoyment they got out of the game, and some played to earn the money on which they lived. None of them was very scrupulous, and would have cheated if they could. I taught them the American game of poker, but there was so much opportunity for dishonesty in it that it was not fitted for them. Every player was bent on cheating, and the game soon broke up in a row.

"There was among them a young Brazilian who had a very pretty wife. He had a small patrimony, which he was gradually eating up. He won about as much as he lost, but he had to live. It was really a case of eating his little fortune. His wife usually sat beside him, sometimes sewing, and when their baby was wakeful she would hold him in her arms. The man's name was Josi Gomez, and his wife Maria, for the Virgin.

"If Gomez won a hundred pesos one evening, lost a hundred the next, and was ahead in the game twenty-five at the end of the week, he considered that he was twenty-five pesos to the good; though he had spent a hundred. His wife took the same view of the matter.

"At the time I joined the circle the little fortune of the young couple had been nearly eaten up and it had become apparent to them that that was so. They were looking anxious. Josi was betting fitfully. Papiado bet like the others, and won or lost like they did. He charged nothing for the use of the wheel, seeming to play for amusement only. But one night he began to show a gambler's greed. He won a good pile on red five; and after that it was noticed that whenever he bet largely it was on red five.

"There is a worm down in that climate that gets into furniture, and bores and bores and bores till nothing but a shell is left. One may sit down on a chair that looks perfectly strong, but at the first touch it collapses. This statement thrust in here seems to have nothing to do with my story; the truth is, the story hangs upon it.

"Papiado continued occasionally to bet of red five, taking care not to attract the attention of the others to the fact that it was a winner. When he won on it he invariably bet the next time on some other number. He said that he didn't believe in lightning striking the same place twice. Sometimes he would not bet once on it till the wheel had been spun many times. I was not playing myself, and had an opportunity to watch the others. I noticed that whenever Papiado bet on red five, just when the ball was heard to drop, his countenance assumed a very pleased and covetous expression.

"I took an interest in Josi Gomez, his little wife and innocent babe, and one day confided to him my suspicion that Papiado had some way of knowing when the ball dropped into red five. Josi said nothing to me in reply, but it was evident that he was doing a good deal of thinking.

"The next evening came the crisis. Papiado did not bet on red five till eleven o'clock, when he laid a hundred pesos on it. Josi immediately laid a hundred pesos on another number, black nine. Papiado laid five hundred more on red five. Josi laid one thousand of black nine. The others dropped out. I was astonished to see the two who remained bring out so much money. They bet on and on till many thousand pesos were on the table. When their funds were exhausted, the cover was lifted. Black nine had won.

"Gomez gave me the explanation. A worm had bored under red five, thus causing the ball to make a hollow sound when the ball dropped into the compartment. When Papiado heard the sound he bet. Upon my confiding my suspicion to Josi he examined the wheel when alone, and learning the secret, bored another hole which let the ball through red five into black nine.

"If either was to win unfairly, I preferred it should be Josi. He regained his patrimony."

NEITHER SIDE ABLE TO SCORE

Mount St. Mary's and Washington College Play In A Downpour.

Last Friday Mount St. Mary's College opened its football team for 1917 by playing a scoreless game with Washington College. The contest, which was a stubborn one from start to finish, was played in a perfect down pour of rain, the water in Echo Field in some places being several inches deep.

It was almost impossible to judge the relative merits of either team, as there was very little chance for open play. The game resolved itself into a line plunging affair. End runs were tried frequently, but resulted in little or no gain. Although the Mountaineers, with Daniels and Mellen carrying the ball, got loose a few times it looked as if the boys from the mountains would cross the line.

The ball for the most part was in Washington's territory. Once, when the Mountaineer's kicked the ball was dropped, but was recovered by one of the Eastern Shore backs on the one-yard line. Washington immediately kicked out of danger.

The forward pass was very little indulged in, the boys from Mount Saint Mary's making three trials that were unsuccessful. Washington did not take a chance at this style of play depending mostly on a shift.

The defensive work of both teams was fine; that of the Mountaineer's exceptional in view of the fact that this year's eleven was an entirely new team. Referee—Porter, Washington College Empire—Lieutenant Mahoney, West Point. Head linesman—Dr. Rowe, University of Maryland. Field judge—Lieutenant Rust, West Point.

Using Discarded Wood for Fuel.

The Boston & Maine Railroad Company, the press dispatches say, is gathering all the loose wood along its lines and yards and is using it to heat its stations, freight houses and shops and in every other place where wood can be used to take the place of coal. It reckons that, in this way, thousands of tons of coal can be saved and enormous quantities of useless wood can be disposed of at little cost outside that of collecting it. Gangs of men have been busy for some time in gathering this wood, collecting it, and preparing it for the fire boxes of heating plants all along the lines of the corporation. In this way the road expects to secure enough fuel to heat all its larger stations throughout the winter without the use of coal.

Only 16,000 in German Colleges.

In this Summer's session there were 10,000 male and 6,000 female students at the various German universities. Most of the 10,000 are either wounded and disabled or soldiers on special leave. In pre-war days there were over 90,000 students where now there are but 16,000.

FREDERICK COUNTY.

Frederick is next to the largest of the counties of Maryland. In population and wealth it ranks next to Baltimore county.

EMMITSBURG.

In all Western Maryland—the beauty spot and the garden spot of the State—there is no town more attractive than Emmitsburg.

No people are more wide-awake, more knowable, more courteous to strangers than Emmitsburgians.

The location of Emmitsburg is ideal; the surrounding scenery is unmatched; the climate is notably healthful; its water—pure mountain spring water—cannot be surpassed.

Mount Saint Mary's College and Ecclesiastical Seminary—with an enviable reputation extending over 106 years—is located here; St. Joseph's College and Academy for young ladies—equally as noted during its 107 years of splendid achievement—is also here.

There are excellent Schools—Public and Parochial—in Emmitsburg; two sound Banks, five Churches, a live Newspaper, modern Hotel accommodations, adequate Fire Department, progressive merchants, splendid physicians, good liveries, auto garages, many fraternal organizations, good railroad accommodations. There are four or five mails a day, telegraph, express and telephone service connecting all points; electric light and power, oiled streets.

There is business to be had in Emmitsburg; there are Factory Sites available. If you contemplate changing your place of residence—come to Emmitsburg, Frederick County, Md.

AN ELEVENTH HOUR CHANCE. Tomorrow, Saturday the 27th, the Liberty Bond campaign closes and it may be that many who cannot get to town in time to subscribe in person their chance will be forfeited.

Not so. The banks are open at night on Saturday, and even if it is impossible to come in person orders by telephone will be honored.

How easy the banks have made these payments! They will accept all cash at time of application, part cash and the remainder at certain intervals, or a small deposit and small weekly payments.

There are 1,500,000 men being prepared to render the highest possible service to their nation. They have left their homes, given up their vocations and have put themselves under the command of the military arm of our government.

But while their responsibility for certain things has ceased, it remains for them to be fed and clothed and kept in health. This responsibility is handed over to those who can and do work at their daily toil and who receive remuneration for that work.

It costs $156.71 to equip an infantryman for service in France. It will take 20,000 cars to transport these armies. It will take $525,000 worth of food to feed these men one day, and that only allows 35 cents a day per man.

Now add these items up: For equipment, $23,406,500,000; for food, $105,000,000; total $23,511,500,000.

This does not include transportation, but goodness knows it is high enough without that and many other items that could be noted.

Where will this money come from? It does not grow on the trees back of the Treasury.

You will have to help to foot this bill one way or another.

If you lend the money to Uncle Sam he will pay you 4 per cent. interest on it. If he has to squeeze it out of you by extra taxation you'll feel the full weight of the burden. Don't let him have to resort to the latter.

Buy a Liberty Bond; buy as many as you can, and do it today or to-morrow, Saturday. Call up your bank by phone.

Do it from the patriotic standpoint—that's the best; but whether from patriotism or individual, selfish profit, do it—BUY A BOND.

AGAINST PRUSSIANISM.

The failure of Americans to respond to the Liberty Loan appeal would be a greater help to Prussianism than a successful defense of its captured French and Belgian territory.

The Land of Heart's Desire for Germany is the United States; a United States ignorant of or apathetic to the real facts of the international struggle. Germany realizes that the United States is her deadliest peril, if the United States be in earnest.

Germany's mind is therefore centered upon what is happening in this country. To make us minimize the size of the work we have undertaken, to encourage our dreaming of idle dreams, to prevent us from becoming thoroughly aroused is her aim.

A not infrequent request that public speakers "explain why we are at war" mirrors the opiated minds of thousands of Americans. Germany's insidious peace propaganda, the divisions that she seeks to create among us, the financial fears and weaknesses she strives to cause, are the means she is employing to blind us to the truth.

Let the enthusiasm of a cheering crowd prove itself; let us put out our money where every American heart ought to be—behind our flesh and blood in the trenches.

"NOVELTIES in short jumper blouses are a very practical fashion."—Especially near military camps, for the boys who want a little "red eye."

Avoiding the Obvious. More and more does one meet with the tendency that people have of avoiding the obvious. It becomes little short of criminal to be simple and direct.

Test of Will Power. The supreme test of will power is to be roused out of bed at 3 o'clock in the morning by the telephone bell only to be informed that it is the wrong number and then refrain from cursing.

Management the Key to Success. Alexander J. Hemphill is chairman of the board of directors of the largest trust company in the world. He believes that the most important point that should be taken into account before investing funds in the securities of any company, particularly a new company, is the ability of its management.

Eleven Acres of Land. The earth has a trifle less than 197,000,000 square miles of total surface. A little over a fourth of this surface is land, 55,000,000 square miles of it. And of this 28,000,000 square miles, or a scant fraction over a half, is soil that can be used for food production.

Eubbling Cups and Germs. A professor in a western university has discovered, says Popular Science Monthly, that small organisms lodge in a great many kinds of bubbling cup drinking fountains and for a curious reason based on an ancient physical principle.

Consumption and Genius. The following are some of the great men and women of letters who have died from tuberculosis: John Milton, John Locke, Alexander Pope, Sir Walter Scott, Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Goethe, Robert Louis Stevenson, Sidney Lanier, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Voltaire, John Ruskin, Charles Kingsley, Immanuel Kant, Rousseau, E. P. Roe and Paul Laurence Dunbar.

Fame, Anyway. Scribbler—Did you hear the story about poor Streeter, the poet? Wrote—No. What was it? Scribbler—He wrote a poem, "Joys of a Dog," and the police came around the day it was printed and made him take out a dog license, which came to more than he got for the poem.—New York Globe.

Got Something You Want to Sell?

Most people have a piece of furniture, a farm implement, or something else which they have discarded and which they no longer want.

These things are put in the attic, or stored away in the barn, or left lying about, getting of less and less value each year.

WHY NOT SELL THEM?

Somebody wants those very things which have become of no use to you. Why not try to find that somebody by putting a want advertisement in THIS NEWSPAPER?

The KITCHEN CABINET

Thou shalt not wait for something to turn up but thou shalt pull off thy coat and go to work, that thou mayest prosper in thy affairs.

SOME SUMMER SALADS.

While the delicious summer and autumn vegetables are with us there are new ways of combining them which will occur to the housewife who is tired of the same dishes.

Bean and Tomato Salad.—Take freshly cooked but cold baked beans, arrange them in the center of a chop plate, and about the edge place overlapping slices of ripe tomato, garnished with sprigs of water cress or heart leaves of lettuce. Serve very tart mayonnaise dressing, passing it in a separate dish.

Tomato and Cream Cheese Salad.—Peel chilled tomatoes and slice very thick, cover each slice with well-seasoned cream cheese that has been mixed with chopped green pepper. Serve with French dressing. Each salad is placed on a bed of lettuce or water cress.

White grapes peeled and seeded, placed in nests of lettuce and covered with ricéd cream cheese, served with French or mayonnaise dressing, make a most dainty salad and one not common.

Date and Cheese Salad.—Wash fine large dates, wipe dry and cut open carefully to remove the stone. Stuff with cream cheese, lay on lettuce leaves and serve with mayonnaise dressing. Place a small spoonful of cream on each bit of mayonnaise when serving.

Chicken and Brazil Nut Salad.—Remove the meats from the nuts in as large pieces as possible, rub off the brown skin and mix with chicken or turkey breast cut in good-sized pieces, with two or three hard-cooked eggs. Serve on lettuce with mayonnaise.

Tomato Salad.—Peel small, even-sized, ripe red tomatoes, and cut them in quarters like a flower, not separating the sections; fill the center with chopped onion and dot with ricéd yolk of egg. Serve with French dressing.

Cream Cheese and Jelly Salad.—Make small balls of well-seasoned cream cheese, and place in nests of lettuce; make a small depression in each ball and put in a small spoonful of currant jelly, or bar le duc if you have it. Serve well-chilled with nicely seasoned French dressing.

RUFFED GROUSE
 (Bonasa umbellus)

Length, seventeen inches. The broad black band near tip of tail distinguishes this from other grouse.

Range: Resident in the northern two-thirds of the United States and in the forested parts of Canada.

Habits and economic status: The ruffed grouse, the famed drummer and finest game bird of the northern woods, is usually wild and wary and under reasonable protection well withstands the attacks of hunters. Moreover, when reduced in numbers, it responds to protection in a gratifying manner and has proved to be well adapted to propagation under artificial conditions. Wild fruits, mast, and browse make up the bulk of the vegetable food of this species. It is very fond of hazelnuts, beechnuts, chestnuts, and acorns, and it eats practically all kinds of wild berries and other fruits. Nearly 60 kinds of fruits have been identified from the stomach contents examined. Various weed seeds also are consumed. Slightly more than 10 per cent of the food consists of insects, about half beetles. The most important pests devoured are the potato beetle, clover-root weevil, the pale-striped flea beetle, grapevine leaf-beetle, May beetles, grasshoppers, cotton worms, army worms, cutworms, the red-humped apple worm, and sawfly larvae. While the economic record of the ruffed grouse is fairly commendable, it does not call for more stringent protection than is necessary to maintain the species in reasonable numbers.

This is the cheapest, simplest, most durable and effective dryer for domestic use that has ever been invented. It requires very little space and is used on top of a range or stove when not used for cooking, and when it is removed from the range to make room for cooking it still continues to dry on account of the hot water, which requires some time to cool.

This dryer is especially adapted to drying sweet corn and with very little attention can be dried off twice in one day. There is absolutely no burning or scorching which is one of the essential features of a dryer. It has a dry surface of 18 by 26 in. and weighs six pounds. PRICE $2.50.

In addition to this number 30 persons from Frederick, Emmitsburg, Gettysburg, Westminster, Martinsburg, Hagerstown and Hanover, who had previously received the first and second degrees of the order were given the third and final degree.

A large number of members of the order from other cities and towns were present. The candidates and those assisting in the organization of the new council attended Mass in a body, Rev. James O'Connell, pastor of St. Francis' Church was the celebrant. The new council starts out with excellent prospects of an increased membership very soon. During the day members from other places held informal reunions and the occasion proved an interesting event.

This was District Deputy Burkhardt's second institution in less than one year's time and the local Council #20 show its appreciation to the Wonder Worker of District No 2, gave its quota. Eight candidates received the Three Degrees of Knighthood while ten others received the Major Degree. Brute' Council's class of eighteen for the Third, certainly is proof positive that this Council is alive and thriving. The membership shows a fifty per-cent increase since the Council's Institution on December 10th, 1916.

The newly initiated brothers: Corporal Joseph M. Topper, Camp Meade, Md., Vincent Leroy Hartdagen, of Gettysburg, Pa., J. Mark Harting, Roy D. Oden, Charles H. Baker, Bernard F. Peters, J. Albert Bowling, and Vincent A. Riley, all of Emmitsburg. Besides these the following Second Degree men received the Third Degree: James A. Baker, C. Felix Adams, Robert L. Topper, Edward J. Adams, E. CHARLES G. WALTER STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS DROWNS

Magistrate Decides An Inquest Unnecessary, Died After Falling Into Creek.

On Monday while crossing a creek on his farm near Emmitsburg, Charles G. Walter, a prominent farmer was stricken with paralysis, dropped helplessly into the water and was drowned. Half an hour after the accident occurred the dead body was dragged from the stream by his son, William Walter, and one of the men employed on the farm.

Magistrate Robert G. Cadow, of Thurmont, was summoned but decided that an inquest was unnecessary. A physician testified that the man had first been stricken with paralysis and had died while in the water. Mr. Walter was drowned within 100 yards from his home.

Besides his widow, and one son, the following brothers and one sister survive: Robert W. Walter, George M. Walter, and Bernard Walter, and Mrs. Ellen Reñner.

The funeral services were held in St. Anthony's Church Thursday morning, Rev. George Traggesser officiating. Interment was made in Mountain cemetery.

Hog Profits—Six Shoats Bring $208.

The possibilities of the old orchard have been brought to light recently in a report to the Extension Service of the Maryland State College of Agriculture concerning a farm in the Western part of the State, and which shows very conclusively that many small fields or irregular spaces about the farm can be turned to profit. A year ago, the farmer in this case, sowed his two-acre orchard in rye. At that time he had no idea of what use would be made of the crop other than allowing it to stand for the protection of the clover and grass seeded in it during the early spring. However, six shoats solved the problem for him and solved it in a very profitable way. The shoats were of early spring farrow and had the run of a clover pasture until July first. At this time they were turned into the rye, which, in addition to the clover, constituted their feed for two months. On September first they were taken from the orchard and placed on corn for two weeks, at which time they went on the market averaging 200 pounds, and selling for $208, or approximately 18 cents per pound. An eight month's old shoat should be capable of more than 200 pounds but they were "finished" for only two weeks. The cost of fattening in this case is chargeable only to the corn eaten and the rye used for seeding, meaning that this method of producing marketable hogs seems to have solved in a very satisfactory manner the problem of feeding at a profit through the production of cheap feed. There are doubtless many small tracts of land in the State that will grow rye as well as weeds, and with old fields, feed lots and orchards put to such use, fattening costs may be materially reduced.

A Pursuing Shadow

By ELLIOTT FOSTER

"Captain," said the general, "here is a dispatch of importance which I wish you to deliver at once to General Taylor. I do not think there are any Mexicans in the region between our two separate forces, but there may be. You can either take an escort or scout your way alone."

Captain Allen Duane paled. His general looked at his aid-de-camp curiously, wondering, for he knew him to be a brave man, then asked, "Which course will you adopt?"

"I shall scout through alone." As if the captain had chased away a disagreeable suspicion as to his courage, the general turned complacently to other matters.

What was it that caused the color momentarily to leave the cheek of the young officer at being ordered upon an ordinary duty? He did not know himself. He knew only that some vague message had come to him to tell him that this would be to him a night of what? He did not know. More in fear of cowardice than danger, he shook off the disagreeable impression, which melted before his resolution like mist before the sun.

Riding to the outposts, he left his horse and moved away into the debatable land held by neither American nor Mexican. A young moon shone down on his shoulder, casting a faint shadow to his left and to his rear. It annoyed him. Turning to glance at it, he could not refrain from a fancy that a figure was following him. Looking straight ahead, he fixed his gaze on the plain, over which here and there grew scattered clumps of tropical trees.

It was lonely out there on that desolate plain where the poorest Mexican disdained to build even an adobe hut. The yepers with which the country abounds had crawled into their holes.

Despite his efforts to drive away the impression that his shadow was some one following him, this impression grew stronger. Turning again, he cast a quick glance behind. There was the shadow as before. Raising his eyes to the sky, he shuddered. The moon was behind a cloud.

It was now clear to Captain Duane that the mysterious follower was not his shadow. What was it? If a human enemy, it would have long before this shot or knifed him in the back. If a friend, why did it not declare itself? And why did he not hear its tread? He listened, but by the closest attention he could not detect a footstep. And why, he asked himself, did he, a soldier who had been twice brevetted for bravery, shrink from turning and confronting this mystical intensity of shade? It was the silence, a dread of something more than the dangers he had faced during the din of battle, that kept his eyes fixed to the front.

By an effort he gathered strength to turn his head for one more glance. There was the figure, more distinct than before, yet not continuously so. It seemed to Captain Duane that his eyesight was not capable of holding the image long enough to see exactly what it was. Now, for an instant, the head and shoulders would keep their form—the face bony, with deep sunken eyes—a broad, prominent mouth. Then the legs, long thin ones, would be tramping with one uninterrupted, unchanged gait, the whole covered by a long flowing mantle which fluttered in the wind, yet there was no wind.

Desperate, the officer halted and faced about. "Who comes there?" he cried. The words broke the stillness like a clap of thunder from a serene sky. There was in them a singular distress, as if they had been for ages asking a question to which there had come no reply. The figure stopped when the speaker stopped, standing, waiting, as though neither impatient nor tired, confident that the object of its attention would move on and it would again follow.

The young captain did move on. Though his physical strength was unimpaired, it seemed to him that his soul was lagging; that it was slowly but surely slipping away from him. He was as ready to meet an accustomed enemy and fight as bravely as ever. As Captain Allen Duane he was still independent; as a human soul he was losing himself.

And now there in the distance is something white. He shades his eyes from every ray of moonlight and discovers white tents. He is nearing the end of his mission. A few more miles and he will be within the picket line of a friendly army. Will this shadowy trampler remain behind?

Captain Duane pushed on. The inequalities of the road were no obstacles. He took no thought of running upon some roving band of Mexicans. The mysterious figure was closing upon him. At last it came so close that he could almost feel its breath, like the moldy chill from a tomb.

"Who comes there?" called the picket.

Why did not Captain Duane reply. "Friend with the countersign?" Was he dazed? Did he not hear? At that moment the shadowy follower towering above him bent and touched him on the shoulder. There was the crack of a rifle. The speaker opened his arms, and the soldier as he fell was caught in the folded mantle. The follower was dead.

In the morning a body was seen lying without General Taylor's picket line. The officer of the picket went out and found an aid-de-camp on whose person was an important message. The picket had shot a friend.

SIMPLE WINTER GOWN

Though it is simple, and of necessity war times will make for simplicity in winter gowns and winter functions, this creation for both formal and informal wear is adorable. It is of peach georgette gracefully draped and richly trimmed with bands of silver fox. A distinctive feature is the use of long sleeves with low decollete. A dainty ciel blue ribbon encircles the waist and a nosegay combining all the colors of the gown is placed on one shoulder.

EMBROIDERY TO BE REVIVED

France Determined to Re-Establish Industry in Order to Give Her Women Employment.

Paris is quite determined, that is certain, on the vast re-establishment of her business in embroidery. Her women are needleworkers of importance. None is so good on this planet, possibly, unless isolated exceptions in the Indian and Persian countries be taken into account.

Her gentewomen are trained, as all gentewomen used to be trained in olden days, before the sewing machine and ready-to-wear garments, in the art of holding a needle filled with fine thread and accomplishing wonders with it.

Money has been scarce among the people in aristocratic segments of French life, and the war has brought about the same kind of situation which existed during the Revolution; those who are too proud to work for their living in other epochs will now do so under the national strain.

Also, there are thousands of Belgian refugees and French women in other classes of life and society who must be supported. France does not believe in the nonproducing consumer. And so these women and men, too old even to serve in that territory service of bearing the wounded from the trenches of the hills, which has been given to those who do not bear arms and who are sure of their footing and their nerves, are given the gentler service of embroidery for the world's clothes. So every woman who buys a gown that is embroidered in France is helping France.

BROWN SHOES ARE POPULAR

Particular Women Have Refused to Accept the Cloth Top as a Means of Saving Leather.

All the talk about leather conservation, and women signing the pledge against $15 shoes has not interfered one bit with women buying shoes of all leather, and at prices higher than ever before.

Particular women have not accepted the cloth top as a means of saving leather. Fewer freak shoes and colors are shown, but even a conservative model of plain leather is high priced.

Every once in so often common-sense low-heeled English walking boots become the fashion. The "once" comes again this fall, and they are exceptionally good in plain tan, laced. They are not like the gay sport shoe of summer.

There is a craze just now for brown and dark gray boots for dress. Plain leathers with buck tops will be much worn later, in such color combinations as gray and mole color, and brown with beige uppers.

Spat pumps of black patent leather will be much used with white spats, or spats in the color of the suit. Evening slippers are of both black and white satin on many of which appear rhinestone buckles.

Handbag Is Held by Its Weight.

A handbag that holds itself to its wearer's wrist by means of its own weight has been invented by a New York man. The leather handle is fitted with two metal slides on one end of which is a roller. These slides are fitted to the handle straps and are connected by a short piece of leather of the same width as the handle.

When the handle is slipped over the arm the metal slides are pulled up by the weight of the bag so that the handle fits close around the wrist and it is then impossible for the handle to slide over the hand.

LIVE STOCK

RATIONS FOR ORPHAN COLTS

Bottle and Nipple Will Be Found Cheapest and Most Satisfactory Means of Giving Milk.

Raising orphan colts is a hard task which requires time and patience. Cow's milk is the usual substitute for mare's milk. Allowance must be made for the fact that cow's milk is lower in per cent of protein, fat, and ash than mare's milk, while the latter is lower in per cent of water and milk sugar.

At first a bottle and nipple probably will be found the cheapest and most satisfactory means of inducing the colt to take the milk. The milk should always be warmed to body temperature before feeding.

Add enough warm water to a tablespoonful of sugar to dissolve it, then add from three to five tablespoonfuls of lime water and enough milk to make a pint. Feed one-fourth of this mixture every hour for a few days, gradually lengthening the intervals and increasing the amount given at a feed as the colt grows older.

When the colt is three or four weeks old the sugar in the milk may be discontinued. At three months the colt should be put on a ration of all the sweet milk it will drink three times a day.

If the colt scours, cut down on the amount of milk and give two to four ounces of a mixture of two parts castor oil to one part sweet oil.

WORKING HORSE IN SUMMER

Large Number of Animals Lost Each Year Through Lack of Care and From Excessive Heat.

It no doubt would be one of the greatest surprises that we have had for some time, were we to realize the large number of horses that are lost each year from the lack of care and from the heat; the time is here again when we must watch our horses carefully so that they may work safely and to the best advantage for us during the long hot days of summer.

The horse that will stand the hot weather well is the one that has been well groomed and cared for, you must feed your horses well if you want them to work well and if you want to get the most from your feed you must keep them clean and comfortable. The horse that is working hard during the hot weather should be watered at least four or five times each day, and every hour or hour and a half would be still better.

RACK FOR STOCK OPERATIONS

Sometimes Difficult and Lengthy Because of Lack of Secure Place to Hold Animals.

Performing needed operations on live stock oftentimes is rendered a difficult and lengthy job because of the lack of a rack in which the animal can be securely held. Here is one which looks rather complex but which will keep the animal where he can't get away to save himself, hard as he may try. The animal is driven into the rack. Behind him one door swings to, preventing him from backing out. In front another door swings to against the left side of the neck and another slides in against the right side. The lever is locked there and the stock is in the stocks, for all the world like an evildoer in ancient times. Once you've got the animal in that position you are at liberty to do your worst. He can't do anything to stop you.—Farming Business.

SORE MOUTH IN YOUNG PIGS

Where Disease Has Advanced to Any Great Extent, Animal Should Be Destroyed—Burn Carcass.

(By I. E. NEWSOM, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colo.)

Watch the little pigs for sore mouth. If ulcers are found isolate the litter and treat the affected pigs. Tincture of iodine on a cotton swab used daily will be valuable. If the disease is far advanced the pig should be destroyed and the carcass burned.

MANAGEMENT OF YOUNG COLT

Teach It to Eat Grain and Alfalfa or Clover Soon as Possible—Allow Access to Grass.

As soon as possible teach the young colt to eat grain and alfalfa or clover, and allow it access to grass. Crushed oats and a little bran make the best grain feed, but if these are not available substitute crushed corn and bran in equal parts by bulk with a little linseed meal.
