A GENTLE PRODDING

I'd kinda like to hint to the local folks that better patronage attendance at the local ball games would sure as heck be appreciated by both members of the team and directors of the club itself.

After all, the baseball association has spent a lot of money making improvements to the grounds, the grandstands and everything else in general. Then too, you've got a crackerjack team of fellows playing now... One that any town would be proud of... They play a darned good brand of ball and after a few nasty losses and bad breaks in the beginning, are now riding high with the best of their competitors, so gee whiz folks, whatta want—blood?

Seriously though, how about attending the games for the rest of the season... It'll boost the morale of everyone who has helped make the ball club what it is today—a mighty fine organization—in addition to which I might add, it'll help defray some of the expense involved in running a club and ball team like the swell one we have.

And while we're on the subject, for those of you who are making remarks to the effect that Bernie Boyle is making a "nice commission" on the refreshment concession at the ball field, let me set you straight. That refreshment counter is owned by the baseball association itself and any and all money and profits made from the sale of refreshments goes to the club and no one else... When you see Bernie or any of his relatives working in there, it's purely a kindly gesture on his part in behalf of the baseball club... I've heard quite a few remarks about the stand and all of them were very unkind and untrue so I'm refuting those remarks made by people who either didn't know what they were talking about or did know and maliciously kept on saying them... Perhaps if more persons offered to help out at the refreshment stand, we wouldn't have to be there so much of the time and folks wouldn't get the wrong interpretation of things. The truth of the matter is that many people are unaware that Bernie is one of the hardest workers for the organization and has given freely and unselfishly of his time and money to the organization.

STORK DATE

The J. Earl Elders have dated the stork for the fourth time, had you heard? This will be the Elder's fourth... October is the time.

YIPPEE, LET'S GO!

At long last the old traditional Firemen's Carnival is back with us, after an absence of quite a few years... What has always been regarded as the biggest and most important event of the year by kiddies and grownups alike ever since I was knee high to a grasshopper has become a reality again and will be held from July 11th to July 16 inclusive... Ain't it wonderful? The annual carnival was discontinued after the outbreak of the war will furnish entertainment and fun for thousands of fun-loving people... As per the usual custom, there will be a mammoth parade on Friday, the 15th; various rides for kiddies and adults; games of every description including our beloved bingo... music will be furnished every night either by a band or a string orchestra... Popcorn, peanuts, hotdogs and all the other conglomerations that go with a carnival will aid and abet our having a powerful stomach ache—but who cares?

MT. ST. MARY'S EXPECTS RECORD ENROLLMENT

Over 800 Expected
To Enroll At Local College This Fall

Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, may have its largest enrollment in history when it begins classes next September, according to the records of the registrar, John M. Roddy, Jr.

As of last week, 650 students have enrolled for courses next year, Mr. Roddy said. If 20 more enroll during the summer, the student enrollment will equal last year's high. Judging by enrollment in previous years, far more than 20 will apply during the summer months, Mr. Roddy said.

Most of the new students at the school are 18-year-old high school graduates, Mr. Roddy pointed out, with the number of World War II veterans dropping to a small percentage in the lower classes. This year should mark the almost complete revision of the student body in regards to veteran enrollment. At the end of the war nearly all of the students were veterans, and only a few high school graduates could secure enrollment in the school. Now most of the veterans are completing their education and the enrollment ages are returning to pre-World War II standards.

This year so far 146 have signed for the freshman class while the senior class will number about 200, the largest in the history of the institution.

Freshmen will report Sept. 13.

Miss Topper Bride Of William Rodgers At Pretty Wedding

In a pretty wedding solemnized at St. Joseph's Catholic Church Thursday morning at eight o'clock, Miss Faine Topper, daughter of Mrs. Stella Topper and the late Ray Topper, of Town, became the bride of William Rodgers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Rodgers of N. Seton Ave. Fr. O'Brien officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride wore a white gabardine suit and wore a corsage of pink rosebuds.

Miss Topper chose as her maid of honor, Mrs. Louis Gunn of Riverside, N. J., sister of the bride. Mr. Eugene Rodgers, brother of the bridegroom, acted as best man.

During the nuptial mass, Miss F. Rotering played appropriate wedding hymns with Mrs. Marie Rosensteel singing several vocal selections.

Following the ceremony, the wedding party had breakfast at the White House Inn.

The bride, currently employed at the Potomac Edison office in Taneytown, graduated from St. Joseph's High School. The bridegroom served three years in the Navy, most of which was overseas and is presently associated with his father in business.

After returning from their honeymoon, Mr. and Mrs. Rodgers will take up residence in the Mrs. Emma Myers' apartment on N. Seton Ave.

Library Grants Special Privilege

During the months of July and August there will be a free library service for children in the Emmitsburg Public Library, it was announced by Miss Louise Sebold today.

Books have been loaned to the library by the Maryland State Department of Education Division of Library Extension and are adapted for all ages of children ranging from the primary grades through high school.

This library service will be available every Tuesday morning from 10 to 11 o'clock during July and August, Miss Sebold said.

Each child may take two books with the privilege of keeping them for two weeks. If retained longer, a fine of five cents a book a week will be charged.

High Road Officials Plan Highway Vigil Over Holiday

Col. Beverly Ober, Baltimore Police Commissioner, Col. Carey Jarman, superintendent of the Maryland State Police, Robert M. Reindollar, chairman State Roads Commission, and William H. Bishop Jr., director of the Maryland Traffic Safety Commission, plan a special safety vigil for the long July 4th holiday.

Having established one of the finest safety records in the U. S. during the 1948 July 4th week-end, Maryland's guardians of highway safety will be out in full force.

All leaves, furloughs and vacations for all traffic enforcement officers on Maryland highways are cancelled to put the full weight of traffic assistance at disposal of motorists who will be traveling Maryland highways over the long week-end.

According to Maryland's Bureau of Traffic Statistics, pedestrian casualties still head the list. Special caution and warning is directed to pedestrians who cross roads where there is no intersection or no traffic signal.

Crossing against the signal, walking in roadways, stepping from behind parked cars or lying the roadway while making tire repairs also stand high on the list of accident causes.

According to Maryland's State Police traffic collision statistical bureau, last July 2 through 5 Frederick County showed a remarkable low in total accidents. Throughout the four-day period, five accidents were reported, two during the day and three at night.

The report revealed four persons were injured in day driving and there were three involved in property damage accidents at night.

Carroll County had only one accident, that a property damage accident occurring at night.

What's Your Name?

By JULES CHRISTIAN

Editor's note—Beginning today it has been decided to number these articles each week for the convenience of referring to any special name discussed in any particular column. Today's column is No. 20.

A few weeks ago, in answer to a request, the family name of Weaver was considered together with the female cloth worker called Webster. That suggests the many popular family names derived from the cloth-making craft in the early days.

WEAVING NAMES

Thus John the wool dealer becomes John Laner. John who sheared the sheep for the wool became John Shearer or John Shearman or John Sharrer. John who combed the wool became John Comber or John Kempster or John Carder. Or if the cloth was made from flax instead of wool, John who beat the flax became John Swinger. John who dressed the hemp became John Heckler, sometimes spelled Keckler or Keck for short.

In the process of making the cloth, John who fashioned the yarn or flax into thread, became John Spindler or John Wheeler. And John who operated the shuttle became John Shulte.

In weaving the thread into cloth, John who cut the cloth became John Sherman (to be distinguished from Shearman, the shearer of the sheep). John who sealed the raw ends of the cloth became John Tucker. John who pressed the new cloth became John Fuller. John who tramped the new cloth became John Walker. John who bleached the new cloth became John Blaxter. John who dyed the new cloth became John Dexter, sometimes called John Dye or Dyster. John who teased the new cloth became John Tokar (in the Slavic languages John who made the dye with which to color the cloth became John Wadman).

TAYLORING NAMES

Closely related to the making of cloth were the crafts that fashioned the cloth into garments. Family names came from this source. Thus John who made men's clothing became known as John Taylor or John Seaman. In Germany he was called John Schneider, in America shortened into John Snyder.

John who made fur coats became John Pilcher. John who made hosiery became John Chaucer. John who made gloves became John Glover.

LEATHER CRAFT NAMES

One of the oldest crafts from which family names have been derived is the worker in hides and skins of animals. Remains exists of tanned leather 1000 years B. C. in Egypt. The tanning of hides and preparation of skins has been closely associated with the development of civilization. In this regard man lived for untold millenniums in the leather age in which he fashioned the useful implements of life from leather. Only recently has the great Plastic Age begun to supplant the Leather Age by means of the synthetics. Thus, in former days, numerous people, working in the leather crafts, derived their family names therefrom.

Taking a few examples, John the dealer in hides became John Peltman. John the worker in leather took such names as John Leatherman or Currier or Whittier. In France he took such family names as Cardner or Corser. John the harness-maker became John Bateman, sometimes shortened into Bates. And John who made pocket books became John Poucher or John Purser. Added to these, of course, are the names derived from saddle-making mentioned in last week's column.

SHOEMAKER

One of the most important of the leather craft was the making of shoes. Family names of distinction have come from this

SALES TAX BOARD ORDERS CHECK ON DELINQUENTS

Roving Inspectors
To Audit Books;
Fines To Be Levied

Shopkeepers, tavernkeepers and all other retail merchants who have been licensed by the State of Maryland for the collection of sales taxes were warned this week by James J. Lacy, State Comptroller, that the probationary period is over and that all who are delinquent turning in to the State taxes collected will be prosecuted under either, or both, civil and criminal laws.

"Of course," Lacy continued, "the Comptroller's office is aware of the many difficulties facing most businessmen at this time and there is no thought of personal harassment intended in this drive for enforcement of the Sales Tax. But, by far, the greater majority of the retail trade in the State is cooperating wholeheartedly in the program and there is no reason why the remaining few should be delinquent in making their returns. My office is merely performing its sworn duty of enforcing a law passed by the legislature. And if everyone carries out his part under this law the entire tax burden will be materially lightened. This not only applies to the Sales Tax but to the Income Tax as well."

Now that the Sales Tax law has been in force for two years, Mr. Lacy added, the Sales Tax Division of his office is able to tell exactly which of the 67,000 licensees has failed to file and pay their current monthly Sales Tax return. But, before court action is instituted, Mr. Lacy said, every effort is made to notify the delinquent licensee by mail that the taxes collected, and due the State, have not been paid. This notice is usually sufficient warning, continued Mr. Lacy, for most of the tardy licensees. However, there still remains the recalcitrant few who must again be warned that they now not only owe the State the taxes due but face a penalty up to 100 per cent plus interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month.

If this warning is ignored, the enforcement department takes over. Inspectors are sent to the establishment and the books are audited. The delinquent licensee is often shown the findings and if he still demurs, either civil or criminal, or both, actions are then instituted and the matter is brought before the courts.

However, Mr. Lacy pointed out, it is not mandatory under the sales tax law that the delinquent be notified through the mails before any legal action may be started by the enforcement division.

Until now, Mr. Lacy emphasized, a concentrated effort to collect the delinquent taxes due the State has been confined to Baltimore City, due to lack of manpower in the enforcement department but in the past seven months in that area the number of delinquent accounts have been cut more than sixty per cent. For the month of August, last year, 4,702 licensees failed to file and pay their monthly returns, but by March of this year, the number had been reduced to 1,870.

Several hundred of these cases have been processed in the past three weeks and resulted in the collection of taxes, penalties and interest of more than forty thousand dollars. Since the inception of the Sales Tax law over $626,000 has been collected as the result of investigative activity.

And in the cases brought before the courts by the enforcement division, 17 convictions were obtained in Baltimore City and 20 in the counties. In addition to collecting the taxes due, the state was enriched by a total $10,072 from fines imposed. Also two delinquents served 30 day jail sentences and 16 sentences were suspended.

Pleased with the success of the

NO SEIZURE CAESAR

There are proposals before the Congress that the Federal Government be granted authority to seize plants, facilities, and mines in labor disputes. Such proposals are contrary to all principles of a free economy. They violate every concept of fair play. Government seizure does not solve labor problems, as a matter of fact, it further complicates it; it leads to more seizure—more government in business and ultimately to complete socialization. Definitely this is not "The American Way."

All freedom-loving Americans have reason to be gravely disturbed by these proposals which would confer upon the executive branch of the Federal Government authority to seize and operate industrial plants or mines whenever the President sees fit to certify that a labor dispute and cessation of work are jeopardizing the public health and public welfare.

The Founding Fathers, in drafting the Constitution for this nation, wisely set up safeguards against the granting of such unbridled power to any individual, whether he comes from Missouri or any other State. They intended this nation to be a Republic, not a totalitarian dictatorship.

Innocent though these proposals may sound, they are a potential danger to our American way of life, in that they would lead to the destruction of private enterprise, which has contributed so much to the strength, prosperity, and growth of our country.

The very suggestion of government seizure as a device of resolving labor disputes is an admission of weakness. At best it would be a temporary expedient. Under our Constitutional form of government there is certainly a better way of terminating or averting work stoppages than by the arbitrary seizure of the private property of a non-offending party.

The owners and operators of the nation's bituminous coal mines know from bitter experience the fallacy and unfairness of government seizure. Under war powers, their properties were seized five times by the Government. On all five occasions the mine owners were forced to make concessions to the Union on all the essential points at issue that were uneconomic and contained the seed of future trouble, as the price for having their mines returned to them.

In other words, these seizures were made for one purpose—to have the government take over and grant the Union demands—which the owners and employers had refused to grant.

Union workers and Union Labor leaders should be in the vanguard of those opposing proposals for peace-time government seizure. Under government seizure, workers become government employees, thereby forfeiting the freedom of action which prevails in a free economy.

Government seizure of plants or mines is temporary nationalization of industry—just one step short of permanent nationalization. Nationalization, as has happened in every country that has embarked on such a program, would lead to lowered production, less efficient distribution, abolition of competition, higher costs, expansion of bureaucracy, lowered standard of living, loss of personal freedom for both worker and employer, and ultimate destruction of representative government.

We cannot afford and do not want policies fraught with such unhappy consequences. If you agree, by all means write your Congressman and your two United States Senators. Let them know that this nation can solve its labor problems without the so-called cure of "seizure" which is bound to prove worse than any disease it is supposed to correct.

This nation requires no seizure Caesar.

Fair Settlement

UP IN Minnesota Mr. Olsen had a cow killed by a railroad train. In due season the claim agent for the railroad called.

"We understand, of course, that the deceased was a very docile and valuable animal," said the claim agent in his most persuasive manner, "and we sympathize with you and your family in your loss. But, Mr. Olsen, you must remember this: Your cow had no business being upon our tracks. Those tracks are our private property and when she invaded them, she became a trespasser. Technically speaking, you, as her owner, became a trespasser also. But we have no desire to carry the issue into court and possibly give you trouble. Now then, what would you regard as a fair settlement between you and the railroad company?"

"Vall," said Mr. Olsen slowly. "Ay bene poor Swede farmer, but Ay shall give you two dollars."

SLIP OF TONGUE

Boss — does your wife know you're bringing me to dinner?

Clerk — does she know! Way, it's taken me six months to talk her into it.

Artful Dodger

At the breakfast table a young broker was relating an incident which had occurred the night before at his lodge meeting. The president, he said, had offered a silk hat to any member who would soberly declare that during his married life he had never kissed any woman but his own wife.

"Dear," he marveled, "do you know, not a single man stood up."

"Why didn't you?" the wife demanded.

"Oh, darling," rejoined the wily one, "you know I look terrible in a silk hat."

MARCHE MILITAIRE

A little piano pupil who had learned her music lesson very well was told she could choose her next piece.

"Oh, please, may I learn 'Marshmallow Tear'?" she asked.

"I don't believe I know that," answered the teacher. "Could you hum a few measures of it for me?"

The child began to sing, and presently the teacher recognized the melody of Schubert's "Marche Militaire."

Small Fry

The youngster having found a cute little brown mouse in the flat his family occupied, was all for taking it to school with him. His mother tried to talk him out of the idea.

"It's all right, Mother," said the youngster. "We got lots of mice in school."

"Yes, but those are white mice," the mother argued.

The kid looked at her in disgust.

"Aha," he said: "Race prejudice, huh?"

PASS THE MUSTARD

"Yes," said the cheerful one, telling of a harrowing experience, "we had reached the place where we had eaten the last dog."

"It must have been terrible!" exclaimed the fair listener.

"It was," he said; "they didn't even have mustard to put on it, and it was at least 20 miles to the next stand."

The Judge Knew

"You are charged," said the judge, "with throwing your mother-in-law out of the window. Have you anything to say?"

"Yes, your honor, I did it without thinking."

"I realize that, my good man, but don't you see how dangerous it was for anyone who might have been passing at the time?"

Misunderstanding

Asylum inmate (to man driving by with a load of fertilizer)—What are you going to do with that?

Driver—Put it on my strawberries.

Raise in Salary

Under the community-property law a husband is entitled to half his income, which is a big increase for most married men.

Originally, the word "cattle" meant wealth or property.

Thurmont Citizens Oppose Water Hike

A hearing has been set before the Public Service Commission July 14 at 10 a. m. on the complaint of the Citizens Committee of Thurmont and the Commissioners of Thurmont against the Mechanicstown Water Co., of the same town.

A Thurmont Town official said last week he understood the complaint was directed at a recent increase in water rates ordered by the company, which is a privately-owned organization. He said he understood this increase amounted to around 25 per cent.

This official was unable to identify the "Citizens Committee of Thurmont" but assumed that the group was composed of water rent-paying residents of the town who desired to protest the increase in rates, published some time ago. The rate increase was to take effect around June 1, it was reported.

He said that actually the commissioners of Thurmont have taken no official action on the subject. The Town buys water only for the fire hydrants from the Mechanicstown Co.

The company bills its consumers in a manner similar to that used by Frederick City, with flat rates for domestic consumers and meters for industrial users of water. It is reported that the new rate was to take effect for the six-month period which will conclude around the end of the year.

CONFINED TO HOME

Mr. Herbert Roger of Roger Liquor Store, has been confined to his home on S. Seton Ave. with a leg ailment since Sunday.

The United States has eight great rivers — the Mississippi, Hudson, Delaware, Potomac, Ohio, Missouri, Columbia and Colorado. The state name of Colorado is a Spanish word for red.

Luncheon Scoops

by Wendy Warren

Child stars, whether they act on the radio or for movies, are apt to feel their importance, and a few of them are downright obnoxious.

But from all I'd heard about little Joan Lazer, I wasn't at all worried about our luncheon interview. As modest as she is capable, Joan has endeared herself to directors and other actors alike. She finished her stint as "Jessie" in the CBS daytime serial, "Rosemary," at noon, and then came to watch my broadcast of "Wendy Warren and the News," which follows "Rosemary" on CBS.

Since Joan had never eaten there, we lunched at the sumptuous Mayan Restaurant at Rockefeller Center. We both succumbed to the description of the specialty of the day, "Bouillabaisse a la Marseillaise," and found it a delicious dish.

Only twelve years old, Joan Lazer is already a triple-crown star. She's appeared on Broadway, has a good part in the current movie, "The Undercover Man," and besides her steady role on "Rosemary," she is featured on several other network shows.

Sitting across the luncheon table from this mighty mite, I found it hard indeed to realize that she is an experienced actress. She has a perky little face with a turned-up, freckled nose, and is as naturally poised as any child I have ever known.

My first question was whether Joan's busy radio schedule has interfered with her schooling. "I don't think so," said Joan. "I go to the Lodge Professional School, and I'm in the tenth grade already." That puts her two years ahead of the average child her age! Joan says her favorite subject is French ... and she's also taking a course in Commercial Law!

As we nibbled our French pastries, I asked Joan where all this was leading her. "Well, of course," she said seriously, "I want to be a first-rate actress. But I'm also interested in writing, and I've tried my hand at several radio scripts." Then, just to complete my amazement, she added—"And I'm a singer, too. I've recorded several songs for albums ... some Gus Edwards songs, and regular children's records." This little girl isn't just going places ... she's arrived!

Utah, first in gold mining, was probably the last area in the continental United States to be explored.

Five Arrested For Disorderly Conduct

Five Emmitsburg youths were apprehended this week on a disorderly conduct charge. The young men were arrested by Police Chief H. C. Woodring and are to be tried Tuesday morning before Magistrate Jacob Baker at nine o'clock.

Each of the accused posted collateral of $12.45.

The men are accused, by George F. Hickman, of creating a disturbance early Sunday morning in Toss' Doghouse. Mr. Hickman is employed at that establishment and was on duty at the time of the disturbance. The charges were filed by Mr. Hickman.

Plan Softball Team For Local Juniors

On Thursday and Sunday evenings, the Community Field looks as if it is the place for a running of a soap box derby anymore.

More than 40 boys are trying out for the Junior baseball team, sponsored by the Legion Post.

Manager Jack Rosensteel feels that some of the small boys, between 9 and 12 are a little on the short side, because of the long throw from first to third.

To meet this small maladjustment plans are now being made for the young juniors to play softball, which will teach them the rudiments of baseball. The local Lions Club has donated a sizeable share financially to defray the expenses incurred.

Boys between 9 and 12 of Emmitsburg and vicinity desirous of playing softball are urged to be present Tuesday evening at 6:45 when the first practice session will be held.

HANOVER SHOE BEATS FAIRFIELD BALL TEAM

The Hanover Shoe Co. of Emmitsburg bested the Fairfield Shoe Co. baseball team at the Community Field Tuesday night to the tune of 6-3. The local team is coached by Mr. Detheridge.

HOMEMAKERS' CORNER

When is the best time to begin canning operations? When your garden is at its peak in one product. When you notice in the newspaper that a certain fruit or vegetable is falling in price. That's the time to can, for then, you will save money if you are buying the vegetable and prevent waste if it comes from your garden.

Miss Margaret McPheeters, extension nutrition specialist, suggests that you make a canning schedule. Write down the number of quarts of food you can expect to can and how much of each kind of food you would like to have. This way, you will not use up all your equipment on only a few varieties of fruits or vegetables.

"Keep it where you use it to get full use out of it and the most from your investment." That's what home management specialist Helen Irene Smith says about electric mixers, roasters and sewing machines. She has observed in many homes that these items, although portable, are large or heavy enough that housewives frequently don't bother to use them, when it involves lifting them in and out of cupboards, or carrying them to a working space.

Recognizing this, manufacturers of electric roasters now make cabinets to hold them.

Before buying an electric mixer, plan a permanent place for it, the specialist suggests. Is there at least a square foot of room for it on the kitchen mixing counter? And about 16 inches of space between counter and wall cupboard so that it fits under. Is an electric outlet conveniently near?

Some sewing machines are small and light enough to carry easily. But, any sewing machine is handier if given a permanent stand or table where it is ready to use the moment it's needed.

Proper Care of Roses Produces New Bloom

Once roses pass their first full bloom, special treatment can control continued blossoming and flower development, according to horticulturist experts.

Many hybrid tea roses produce several buds on one stem. For more perfect cut flowers, side buds should be removed, leaving the strong center bud, they explain. Dis-budding is not necessary if only a mass of bloom is wanted for general garden display. Long stems can be developed by removing small side branches. When cutting, the horticulturists advise, leave at least two leaves on the plant at the base of the stem. This means two buds and two more flowers. The roses can be expected to bloom about five weeks after the cutting.

Rose gardeners must also watch carefully for any "sucker shoots" which may come from budded or grafted plants. If not traced back to their roots and destroyed, these thorny shoots may crowd out the best portions of the plant.

State To Stock Streams and Lakes With Small Mouth Black Bass

Fish spawn and young fry were unquestionably destroyed in the flood that struck the Potomac River basin last week-end, Albert M. Powell, Lewistown State fish culturist, said this week.

"In only one year out of five can fish be expected to survive in any appreciable numbers in natural stream conditions," Mr. Powell said in explaining that soil erosion, pollution and natural enemies are taking an ever increasing toll of fresh water aquatic life.

Program for Stocking Set
In an attempt to combat the depletion of game fish in the State's fresh water streams and lakes, Mr. Powell said a program is now in progress to propagate and stock small mouth black bass fingerlings.

The fish culturist said he recently returned from Ohio where he inspected the facilities in that area, which has ranked among the leaders in the propagation and stocking of game fish. The same methods will be adopted here, Mr. Powell explained.

The small mouths will be reared at the Lewistown hatchery and will be released in all fresh water bodies adaptable to bass. The fish will average between two and a half and three inches in length when freed. At that size they are able to fend for themselves, Mr. Powell explained.

Powell explained.

Some of the bass are now being propagated and the program will be expanded as funds and facilities become available.

Fish Are Washed Out

Regional Game Warden Benjamin F. Phebus reported this week that some fish washed into the old Chesapeake and Ohio Canal in last week's flood. He said attempts to gig trapped carp in the canal at Brunswick were broken up. Men were using pitchforks, the warden said. At Point of Rocks it was reported that men with rifles were shooting carp.

Some game fish such as bass and crappie are probably in the canal and will be retrieved if located by the wardens, but there is no intention of seining for them. Phebus said the condition of the canal is such that it would be impossible to seine it.

Quail Released

A total of 313 bob-white quail has been released in the county in recent weeks, Phebus reported. One hundred and four of the birds were turned out last week by Warden Phebus.

SHORT STORY

Special Announcement

By
M. F. CHRISTOPHER

SHE gazed at the high falls a short distance away, fascinated by the myriad, white streaks the hot sun painted through in bold, up-and-down strokes. The soft thundering sound as the water spilled down, forming a base of leaping crystal-whiteness, like frosting, mixed nicely with the orchestral music that played behind her.

"You look like little Alice might have when she walked into Wonderland," Gib Rawlings said at her elbow. "Amazed, and almost a little scared, too."

"Scared?" She turned to the tall, dark young man beside her, whose broad chest tapered down to the black trunks he was wearing. A thin smile curved her lips, and she hoped it would hide the sense of guilt within her, the feeling of emptiness that had come upon her since the never-to-be-forgotten ruff with Buzz. "Scared?" she repeated. "Why should I be scared, Gib?"

He shrugged tan shoulders. "That's it. You shouldn't." She lifted his left hand, and with her right hand rubbed it. She smiled. "In we go!"

"Anything you say!" Gib yelled, and she dove in, he after her.

The clean water, at first freshly cool, plunged over her.

SHE swung out her arm, and in long, easy strokes, swam toward the narrow, wooden bridge to the left. She passed someone who spoke her name, and she answered, "Hello!" smiling. She did not look back, but kept going, smoothly, with professional dignity—for she was swimming champion of the world.

Marjorie Lansing, riding to fame on her laurel chariot as swimming champ to become one of Hollywood's most glamorous starlets. Marjorie Lansing, linked with the name of the great executive-director, Gib Rawlings.

And then she saw his face appearing in front of the green bush at the left side of the bridge. She was 15 feet from him, but she could see the dull sparkle in his dark eyes, and his black hair matted in curls alongside his head. He didn't smile. But he did speak.

He said, "Hello, Marjorie? Good luck." That was all. A gentle word to comfort her in her new venture.

She reached the dam formation and climbed upon the narrow catwalk on top.

Gib was clambering up beside her, a big smile on his face.

She grinned, tossing a sun-kissed tan shoulder. "Gib," she said, and

She nodded. "Yes, get it over with, so that we—both can go home."

her voice was tired, weary. "Gib, let's—let's get it over with, now."

He walked along behind her. He said, low, "Over with? You mean you're tired? You want to go home?"

She looked at him curiously. "I'll see Jimmie Conn right away," Gib said.

She stood aside as he spoke to the tall, black-haired orchestra leader. Suddenly the music stopped, all eyes lifted to the man standing on the platform in front of the musicians. Jimmie Conn was smiling. She saw him, and the dreadful moment was now at hand.

And then, in his soft, articulate voice, he said, "Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Gib Rawlings has invited you here for the special announcement he promised he'd have for you, and I thank him for giving me the privilege of making it. I take pride in announcing the engagement of your friends and my friends, and the world's friends... Miss Marjorie Lansing and Mr. Buzz Hatley."

She stared, wide-eyed and mystified, and felt a cold hand on her elbow.

She looked up into Gib's face, and felt tears well in her eyes. Warm tears of happiness.

"I didn't realize until I saw your face, and his face, there under the bridge," Gib said. "Funny isn't it, how little things like that sometimes can change everything?"

"Yes," she said. "Yes..."

MARYLAND HOME FRONT

"Unless the 1949 wheat production prospect drops 81,000,000 bushels below the June first forecast, the Secretary of Agriculture will be required by law to announce that acreage allotments and marketing quotas will be in effect on the crop to be seeded this fall. There is no indication that such a drop will take place."

This statement was made this week by Joseph H. Blandford, chairman of the Maryland PMA State Committee, who continued with the following explanation.

Under an Act of Congress passed in 1936 and since amended, the Secretary of Agriculture is required to announce allotments and quotas whenever the total supply of a basic farm commodity is in excess of domestic needs plus prospective exports, and a safe percentage of carry-over. This is the first step in the government's price support program for basic farm commodities. The next step is a referendum on whether marketing quotas shall be in operation on the crop. A marketing quota is a device which permits a grower to market a quantity of a commodity, wheat in this case, equal to the production from his allotted acreage. Marketing quotas cannot be used unless two thirds of the growers voting in a referendum favor them. However, should the vote be against marketing quotas, there will be no price support program.

Acreage allotments on wheat would have the effect of dividing the production of the nation's total wheat needs among all growers, giving each his fair share. Marketing quotas would permit every grower, who planted within his allotment to market his wheat under the government's price support program. Wheat from acreage in excess of the allotment would be either held in storage or deducted from next year's production. No wheat may be sold from a farm on which an excess occurs until a penalty on such excess wheat has been paid.

These measures are aimed at keeping production in line with market demand. It is obvious, of course, that farmers individually would be unable to do this. Each state and county will be given an allotment of acreage based upon the past 10 years' production, adjusted for trends. The total will be equal to a national acreage allotment, based upon total needs in bushels divided by an average per acre production of 16.1 bushels per acre. Individual farm allotments will be based mainly upon past wheat history, and adaptability of the soil for growing wheat. A percentage of each county allotment will be reserved for new farms.

Farm Mortgage Debt Going Up

The farm-mortgage debt on Jan. 1, 1949 is estimated by the BAE to be $5,108 million, an increase of more than $226 million, or 4.6 per cent, over that of a year earlier. This increase is more than double that of 1947 when it was about $104 million. Since Jan. 1, 1946, when the debt reached a 34-year low, it has risen more than $425 million, or 9.1 per cent.

ACP—Symbol of Better Living

Emphasizing the close relationship between how well farmers are able to farm and how well people are able to eat, Mr. Blandford, quoted part of a recent address by Alvin V. McCormick, conservation director of the Production and Marketing Administration, to the farmer-elected committeemen in Maryland.

"We can't have more people eating more food if a third of the farmers go broke every few years. We live better when farmers are producing abundantly. And farmers produce abundantly when their land and prices are protected from depletion and depression."

He pointed out that the Agricultural Conservation Program is not limited to soil and water conservation alone but to conservation of the farmer as well as the farm.

"Our problem is one of producing enough food and fiber for the 148 million people in this country and wheat we can export—and to keep on doing it. To produce enough now and at the same time take care of our land so that it will produce enough when there are 170 or 180 million people in this country."

"Under the conservation phase of ACP, the country cooperates with farmers and shares the cost of carrying out conservation practices which maintain and improve the productivity of the land. Under the price support phase of the farm program, the country shares with the farmer the risk of abundance. The price supports give the farmer the assurance that he won't go broke producing too much and allotments and marketing quotas protect the country against support-

"Who Said That?"

By Robert Trout

How good is your memory? How many of the news stories you hear and read can you remember? Here are some of the questions asked the panel of "experts" on a recent NBC "Who Said That?" television quiz. Of this group of seven remarks by prominent figures, the panel (Bennet Cerf, Ilka Chase, Herbert Bayard Swope, and John C. A. Meron Swayze) identified six. Not bad. Can you do as well?

Robert Trout

1. Who said... "They look like four squabs... I don't even know the color of their hair... I was too busy counting them"...

2. Who said... "Italy is a beautiful country but it is too full of fantasies"...

3. Who said this to George Bernard Shaw... "Mr. Shaw, I can see now why you have a certain disrespect for actors... there are none so good as you... you should have been an actor instead of an author"...

ing the prices on too much."

"The whole program works out to a better living for people—not just the farmers but for the people in town. It means more food and more other farm commodities—for more people."

It is when farm prices get out of balance with non-farm prices—way below parity—that the land goes to pieces, he pointed out. Then farmers haven't the money to buy fertilizers, even with government assistance. They have to mine the soil to squeeze every penny out of it to meet taxes and minimum operating expenses.

4. Who said... "I am quite amazed by your question about the weather aboard the Queen Mary... I thought now that the Atlantic Pact has been signed, you and the Americans had everything on the Atlantic under control... even the weather"...

5. Who said... "I have a price on my head... I have murdered the man who ran the Mother's Day ad saying—'For this Mother's Day Give her the only razor ever created to make legs more beautiful'"...

6. Who said... "Is Evita Peron as good looking as her photographs make her out to be? Well, let's put this way... she has an interesting profile all the way down to the ground and I'd give her a job as a showgirl"...

7. Who said... "The public never had any musical taste... only an appetite... they'll listen to anything, just as they'll eat anything, however badly cooked"...

MARYLAND FEED & GRAIN MARKETS

GRAIN

Summary for Maryland

Baltimore grain markets were unsettled during the week ended June 24. Wide spreads were noted in quotations on all grain. New crop wheat is beginning to come in from Virginia. Condition is reported as very good. Corn markets were firm, following the national trend. Soybeans weakened somewhat on the Baltimore market during the past week.

National Summary

Grain futures markets made moderate gains during the week ended June 24. The market strength was attributed to reports of less favorable prospects for wheat and the Government's forecast of a material increase in the pig crop this season. Cash prices, however, did not follow the advance in futures for some grains. Increased marketings of new wheat and barley caused rather sharp declines in cash prices of these grains at Kansas City and in the Southwest markets. The arrival of new crop grain sorghums in Texas markets brought about a drop of 10 to 15 cents per hundred in the price of that grain. A good demand from feed manufacturers together with rather light offerings held corn markets firm despite generally favorable crop prospects. Rye closed slightly higher than a week ago. Oats held about unchanged but soybeans advanced about 8 cents per bushel. At the close of the week crushers were offering $2.29 per bushel on track, County Points, and $2.39 per bushel at Chicago.

FEED

Summary for Maryland

Baltimore feed markets weakened further during the week ended June 24. Supplies are plentiful; demand, about normal. Distillers' dried grains advanced over 2¢—an increase of $2.00 per ton more than last week. Standard middlings showed an increase of over 3¢—$2.30 per ton more. Soybean oil meal strengthened materially with an increase of $4.37 per ton more than the average price on June 17. Feeds showing a decrease of 3 to 4¢ on the Baltimore market are brewers' dried grains ($2.12 per ton less than a week ago), 17% dehydrated alfalfa meal ($2.28 per ton less), and 16% dairy feed ($2.45 per ton less). Meat scrap showed the most weakness with a drop of almost 3¢—$3.73 per ton less.

The broiler-feed ratio for Maryland producers declined further for the week ended June 23. Broiler prices dropped about 2.4 cents per pound lowering the average to 20.4 cents per pound. Twenty per cent broiler mash on Lower Eastern Shore declined about $1.42 per ton during the past week and now averages about $93.32 per ton. On this basis one pound live weight of broilers would buy 4.4 pounds of feed.

National Summary

Feedstuff markets strengthened materially during the week ended June 21. A seasonal decline in the production of oil seedmeals and an active demand for poultry mashes and hog feeds, which brought mixed feed manufacturers into the market for ingredients, were the principal strengthening influences. Wheat millfeeds advanced $2.00-6.00 per ton, with the greatest gains in the heavier of fall. Corn feeds were unchanged to about $1.50 per ton higher. Oilseed meals made sharp gains, led by soybean meal, which was up $7.00-8.00 per ton in leading markets. Linseed meal averaged about $1.00 higher and cottonseed meal advanced $2.00-4.00 per ton.

The production of feedstuffs still exceeds that of a year ago, with the October-April output placed at about 9,151,000 tons this year compared with 8,988,000 tons for the same months last season. April production, however, fell short of last season and totaled 1,096,000 tons compared to 1,119,000 tons in April, 1948. The production of grain byproduct feeds in April dropped to 518,000 tons, reflecting principally the smaller output of wheat millfeeds. The output of oilseed meals was seasonally lower in April but totaled about 578,000 tons against about 499,000 tons in April, 1948. The May output of grain byproduct feeds totaled nearly 60,000 tons over the April production.

The importance of commercial mixed feeds in the feed situation is indicated by a preliminary report recently released by the Bureau of the Census which placed the production of poultry and livestock feeds in the calendar year of 1947 at 22,300,000 tons valued at $1,982,000,000. The production of this quantity of feed utilized nearly 343,000,000 bushels of grain, 3,889,000 tons of oilseed meals and animal proteins and nearly 6,000,000 tons of grain byproduct feeds and alfalfa meal.

Brother Sigismund Saffer of Elizabeth, N. J., is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Baker and with Mr. and Mrs. Clem Redding of Gettysburg and also with Mr. and Mrs. John Saffer. Mrs. Lucy Galt was admitted to the Gettysburg Hospital this week.

Prof. and Mrs. Dominic Greco and family returned this week after having spent 10 days in New York State.

Official Map of State Set for Distribution

Maryland's Official 1949 Highway Map made its first appearance last week.

Prepared by the State Roads Commission, the map provides the usual inventory of highways throughout Maryland, showing major routes in red, secondary roads by solid black lines, with other designations for less heavily traveled arteries. Distances between principal points are shown in red figures.

A feature of the 1948 map which appealed to motorists—an accordion fold, which permits study of any section of the map without unfolding it to its full length—has been retained in the 1949 edition.

The location and telephone numbers of the various State Police Substations have been added to the data on the 1949 map.

The entire map is divided into numbered squares, permitting the quick location of any city, town or village by reference to a key list printed at the edge of the map.

A section devoted to Maryland's traffic laws includes an illustration of the new official signal for a right turn—the driver's arm being extended upward.

As in previous years, the maps will be distributed through the State Police, Chambers of Commerce in the several cities, the State Department of Information at Annapolis, the State Roads Commission's six District Engineers' offices and various motorists' organizations.

HEALTH COLUMN

With the first days of summer here, hikes and picnics are very much in order. It's fine to get out in the fresh air and indulge in some healthful exercise, but a hike or a picnic isn't always an unmixed blessing. There are sometimes blistered feet, aching muscles, ants in the picnic baskets—and poison ivy.

Poison ivy is a pretty but vicious plant or vine, and it always seems to nestle around the pleasantest hiking paths or most comfortable picnic grounds. But the plant produces a poisonous, oily resin that irritates the areas of skin with which it comes in contact. Shortly after exposure, the portion of the skin which it has touched begins to itch and burn and a blister-like rash breaks out. The skin irritation that results from poison ivy is always extremely uncomfortable.

If a person gets a case of poison ivy, he should see his doctor immediately. The doctor will give him medical treatment to bring relief from the itchy inflammation.

If the case is mild, the infected area should be washed with soap to remove the oily resins that cause the irritation. Creams and ointments can do harm because many of them contain ingredients that can further irritate and spread the rash.

A mild case of poison ivy usually lasts about 10 days. More severe cases may last as long as three weeks.

Wise parents caution their children against poison ivy, especially around this time of year, and teach them to identify it by description and pictures. Poison ivy is fairly easy to recognize with its green leaves which have a smooth, glossy surface and grow in groups of three.

The same irritating oil produced by poison ivy is found in poison sumac, a shrub or small tree, whose leaves run in a series of four to six. Poison sumac is less well-known and more difficult to detect than poison ivy, and its effects may be more severe. The treatment is the same as for poison ivy because they are similar types of skin irritations.

Food Price Decrease Costly To Farmers

Farmers had to take the biggest part of the July-to-February drop in retail food prices, says Dr. S. H. DeVault, head of the Department of Agricultural Economics and Marketing at the University of Maryland.

A family "market basket" of farm food products, for which consumers paid an annual rate of $708 at retail last July, cost consumers $70 less in February. Most of this saving to consumers was due to the lower prices farmers received for their food products. Farmers took more than four-fifths of the drop, or $57. Reduction in marketing costs accounted for only $13 of the $70 saved to consumers. This sort of thing is not unusual, Dr. DeVault said, explaining that marketing changes change more slowly than prices of farm products.

According to Dr. DeVault, the marketing cost of the annual market basket of the average family of three in February was $317—about the same as the entire retail cost of the market basket had been in 1940. "In other words," he says, "even if farmers had given their products away in February, marketing charges being the same, the market basket would have cost consumers as much as just before the war."

Touching on the relatively small drop in marketing costs, it was pointed out that freight rates have risen about a third in the last two years. Wages, the chief item in marketing costs, are more than double prewar. There is little hope for large reductions in these items soon, he pointed out.

Roses and Ruffles for the Pigtail Crowd

Even the youngest guest will be charmed into model behavior by a table setting where roses bloom on fine Lenox china and riot behind a white picket fence. Junior flatware and footed tumblers assist party manners.

WHAT small child, or grown-up for that matter, could fail to thrill at this dainty party setting? The airy grace of a white wrought iron glass top garden table is the background for novel place mats—pretty ruffles of pale blue organza, just large enough to frame the flower-decorated Lenox Rose plates. For centerpiece, a plateau of Sweetheart roses surrounded by a wee picket fence is a child's dream garden come true. Mistress Mary figurines smile enchantingly on the garden and each little girl's place card is held by an adorable pigtailed Lenox figurine that might be a replica of her own self. Appropriate for the setting and adding comfort to the festivities are the short junior sized flatware and footed tumblers.

A prettily arranged table setting

such as this will take the old familiar dread out of giving a child's party, for influenced by ruffles and roses, gleaming silver and fine translucent china, the most mischievous imp miraculously becomes a demure and proper little miss. Junior size flatware is a compliment small company will be quick to appreciate, while footed tumblers slim enough for little fingers to grasp firmly will prevent mishaps.

Don't tremble at the possible fate of your fine Lenox china on the children's party table, because actually fine china, with its superior materials and long firings, will take more knocks and hard wear than less costly dishes. Children, too, are wonderfully responsive to beauty, and more easily beguiled than beaten into good manners.

Vaccination To Beat Newcastle

Newcastle disease has become the most widespread, most talked-about epidemic disease in the poultry-raising world. It is a highly contagious virus infection that causes heavy mortality in young chicks and a severe loss in egg production of older birds. Every poultry-raiser seeks to avoid an outbreak of Newcastle disease.

Vaccination has proven of great benefit in the prevention of this disease. Two general types of vaccines have been used for this purpose—live virus and killed virus. The latter is injected like a poultry bacterin, while the former is stabbed into the skin (the membranous "web" of the wing).

Vaccinate Young Chicks

The killed Newcastle virus is being used more to vaccinate birds that are in production, while the live-virus vaccine is used to inoculate young chicks, usually at about four to six weeks. Early vaccination is advised, since there is no advantage in waiting. Once vaccinated, the bird is immune indefinitely—probably for life.

Vaccination with a Newcastle live-virus vaccine is just as simple and easy as fowl-pox vaccination, which is ordinarily done in the same manner. The bird is held, the wing web is punctured with a double-pronged vaccinating needle laden with diluted vaccine, and the "take" is looked for about three or five days later.

Cannot Cause Disease

In vaccinating young chicks against Newcastle disease, use of a virulent live-virus vaccine is advised, since this type of vaccine cannot cause the disease itself in healthy birds. It gives lasting immunity with safety.

Since Newcastle has become so widespread and is such a costly and deadly disease, poultry-raisers in every region are finding it advisable to vaccinate their young birds and thus protect them against this killer. Also, if the raiser is marketing hatching eggs, he can develop a Newcastle-immune breeding flock in this way.

Cane molasses which has recently become one of the cheapest sources of nutrients among concentrate feeds can be used to advantage by dairymen.

GETTYSBURG MAN CHARGED WITH HITTING-RUNNING

Nevin C. Bauerline, 30, Gettysburg, Monday morning entered a plea of guilty before Justice of the Peace Robert P. Snyder, Gettysburg, to a charge of failing to stop and reveal his identity at the scene of an accident. The charge was laid by state police of the Gettysburg Station. Bauerline posted $500 bail for August court.

Bauerline was allegedly the driver of an automobile which side-swiped a car driven by Albert Gavitt, West Hazelton on Saturday morning on the Emmitsburg road just south of Gettysburg. Police estimated damage to the Gavitt machine at $200 and to the Bauerline car at $150.

Water left from cooking vegetables may be used as part of the liquid in a vegetable gelatin salad or it may be used as the liquid in bouillon.

Health Head Issues Safety Warning

"Accidents will probably claim an appalling toll of life and limb during the long Fourth of July week-end," in the words of a reminder which Dr. R. H. Riley, director of the State Department of Health, has just issued to holiday-making Marylanders. "Every year the records show numerous accidents occurring on holidays, especially when a three-day week-end lures countless thousands onto the highways and waterways.

"A change from regular working routine is highly desirable for everybody, but precautions should be taken to prevent a disastrous conclusion to the gaily anticipated week-end. Grim though the thought may be, death and serious injury are all too frequently the sequels of holiday fun.

"Automobile accidents lead as a cause of injuries and fatalities. Safety should be given priority over speed on crowded highways. For their own well-being, drivers should co-operate with a campaign to reduce the highway traffic death rate in the United States by 40% in the next three years, the goal set by the President's Highway Safety Conference, of which I am a member, when it met in Washington on June 1, 2 and 3 with Governor W. Preston Lane as vice chairman. The rate has been reduced from 12 deaths per 100,000,000 vehicle miles traveled in 1941 to 8.1 deaths in 1948. All state, municipal and non-official agencies were asked to co-operate in an effort to reduce the national highway death rate to an average of 5 persons for every 100,000,000 vehicle miles.

"Those who visit watering places should be on the alert to avoid swimming and boating accidents. Swimmers and divers should know the depth, current and other characteristics of swimming beaches. Non-swimmers should be especially sure of the depth and bottom formation before leaving shore. Boating accidents can be prevented by obeying the letter and the spirit of laws limiting passengers to the number of life preservers and requiring fire extinguishers to be available in case of emergency. Rough play that may capsize rowboats or canoes is always unwise and should certainly be forbidden if all passengers are not good swimmers.

"A warning concerning fireworks imported from other states or concocted here by amateur chemists is in order, even though factory-made fireworks are legally bought in Maryland. Such explosives are always a menace to life and safety, especially when placed in young or inexperienced hands."

Although Colorado began its settlement with the gold rush, it has been predominantly an agricultural state for many years.

THE STORY OF TEN LITTLE FREE WORKERS

THESE ARE THE WORKERS

REDDY DOCTOR RAILROADER MINER STEELWORKER FARMER LAWYER GROCER SALESLERK REPORTER

Ten little free workers in this country fine and fair.
But if you cherish your freedom—worker have a care!
Ten little free workers—Reddy was doing fine
Until the socialists got him—then there were nine.

Nine little free workers laughed at Reddy's fate
Along came federal medicine—then there were eight.

Eight little free workers thought this country heaven
But the government took over the railroads, then there were seven.

Seven little free workers—'till the miners got in a fix.
Uncle said coal's essential and took over leaving six.

Six little free workers 'till the day did arrive
The steel mills too were federalized—then there were five.

Five little free workers—but the farmers are free no more
The farms have been collectivized—that leaves only four.

Four little free workers till the government did decree
All must have free legal advice—then there were three.

Three little free workers—the number is getting few,
But with government groceries selling food—then there were two.

Two little free workers—our story's almost done,
With clerks at work in federal stores—that leaves only one.

One little free worker—the reporter son-of-a-gun
Mustn't criticize government—so now there are none.

Ten little workers—but they are no longer free
They work when and where ordered, and at a fixed rate you see,
And it all could have been prevented if they'd only seen fit to agree
And work together instead of saying "it never can happen to me!"

was shortened into Shuman or

ABIGAIL

It only comes once a year, and do we love it? Yea man! What's a little stomach ache between friends, sez I, as long as you had fun getting it!

And to top it off there will be a ball game between Emmitsburg and York Springs during the Carnival. The Emmitsburg Baseball Association has very generously agreed to donate the entire proceeds from the contest to the Vigilant Hose Company.

CHISELERS

It was very disgusting to watch the cheap skates trying to crash the gate at last Thursday night's baseball contest... Not one, but many tried to maneuver past the ticket sellers and many had the audacity to wait until the game was half over in an effort to evade the admission price. The local baseball club went to heavy expense in promoting the game and as it turned out lost quite a bit of money on the affair.
