1956 Wheat Price Supports Discussed

Neither "cross-compliance" nor "aggregate compliance" will be required as a condition for price support for the 1956 wheat crop, George B. Reeves, chairman of the Maryland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee, reminds Maryland wheat growers. "Farmers who stay within their wheat acreage allotment on a specific farm," he said, "may be eligible for price support on the 1956 wheat crop for that farm."

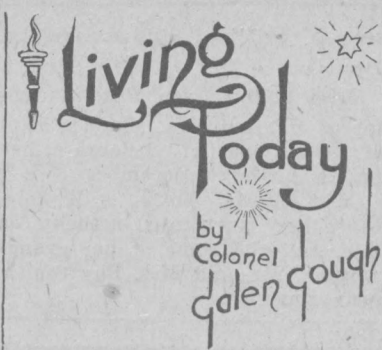

"Producers must comply with the wheat acreage allotment determined for that farm to be eligible for price support on wheat produced on their farm in 1956," Mr. Reeves said.

The producer with more than one farm in the county may exceed the allotment established for one or more of his farms without affecting his eligibility for price support on the farm or farms where he is in compliance, providing he stores, pays the penalty on, or donates the excess wheat to the Secretary of Agriculture.

"The 1956 program is essentially the same as the 1955 program after the aggregate compliance and cross-compliance features were eliminated," Mr. Reeves said. Another provision of the 1955 program which will be continued in 1956 is that compliance will be based on the harvested acreage rather than on the planted acreage.

Mr. Reeves added that producers, to be eligible for wheat price supports, will not be required to comply with any acreage allotment other than wheat assigned to his farm or other farms in which he has an interest.

LIFE: Living is a problem to many, but actually there is nothing to get all steamed up about.

Just about the time you think you are on top there comes a big blow and it is all over. Your soul is on the other side engulfed into eternity. So, after all, the most important thing about others and to brace one's shoulder for their tackles. If within the heart of man is the fortitude of good principles there will be no obstacle too great.

SUCCESS: Great wealth does not denote success. World possessions do not stand as a monument for accomplishment. One of the most successful men I know of died a pauper. He wanted none of this world or its possessions. Many like him have died in obscurity only to be recognized centuries after their demise. Accomplishment can not be based on what one is able to hoard in gold alone, but in the pearls they cast to the waters regardless of how it may lessen their own worldly possessions.

Yes, success is what you give to the world and not how much you take out of it. To do this one must first find himself through God's plan of living.

Vitamin C Deficiency Found In Men Over 50

If you're a man over 50, chances are that you need more foods rich in vitamin C. In fact, you need more than your wife does.

This conclusion was indicated by a University of California study of nutrition in which a survey was made of 577 men and women over 50 years of age in one county. Cooperating were the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, the U. S. Public Health Service and state and county health departments.

The men involved in the study had less vitamin C in their blood than had the women, even though they ate more heartily of foods generally, and thus had a higher vitamin C intake. Lack of vitamin C in the diet often is the cause of tender, bleeding gums and subsequent loss of teeth. Such troubles were found among a number of the persons in this study whose blood tested lowest in vitamin C.

A practical application of these findings for persons over 50, according to the report, would be to add more items rich in vitamin C—such as oranges, grapefruit, strawberries, tomatoes, salad greens, broccoli and raw cabbage, for example.

Other tests made during the survey indicated that more than likely both the man and the woman need more protein and iron, and less fat than most people get in their daily fare.

KNOW YOUR FEET

By DR. WM. M. SCHOLL, M.D.*

Many forms of foot trouble are directly traceable back to the care given the feet during childhood. When one thinks that during his life-time the average American walks a distance equivalent to two-and-one-half times around the earth, it readily can be seen how important proper attention to the feet is during the growing, formative years.

It must be realized that the bones in the feet are among the last in the body to stop developing. They remain soft and pliant until the individual reaches 20 or 21 years of age, and, thus, are particularly vulnerable to badly-fitting shoes which may cause misshaping or arrested development of the bone structure.

A recent medical survey by the National Foot Health Council showed that 65 per cent of boys and 80 per cent of girls of school age have foot disorders which, if neglected, may prove disabling in later life. The big cause of these disorders is shoes which do not fit or are worn out. A secondary cause is stockings that are too short and bind the feet.

Most common causes of foot defects among children are short, narrow shoes, shoes of improper style, shoes that are too stiff, and runover heels and broken down counters.

Attention must be paid to the child's shoe at all times. It must fit well, neither too large nor too small. Children's shoes should be broad across the toes to allow plenty of freedom of movement. And, where there are two or more children in the family, shoes should never be handed down from one child to the other.

As soon as the shoe shows definite signs of wear or when it begins to cramp the foot or restrict its natural movement, it should be discarded immediately.

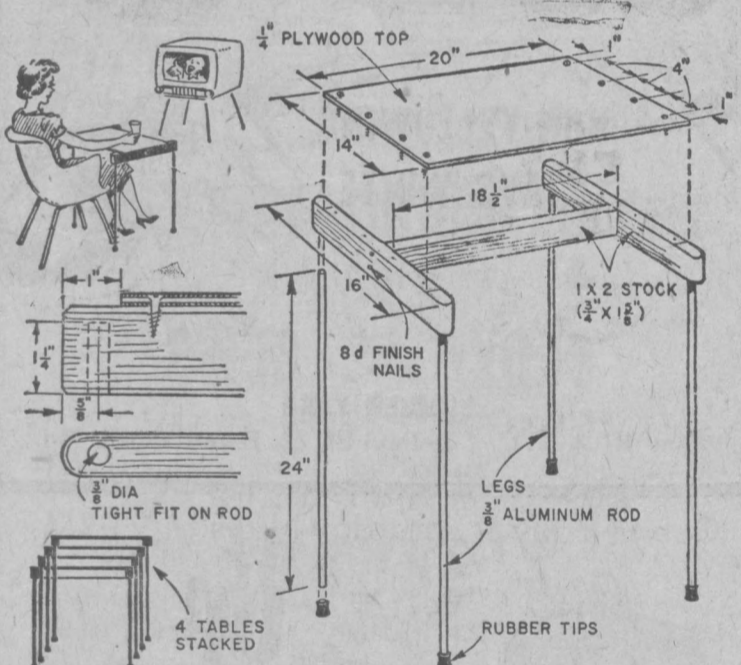

The table below shows approximately how often a growing child will need new shoes:

|----------------------|--|
| 2 to 6 years..... | shoe size changes every 4 to 8 weeks |
| 6 to 10 years..... | shoe size changes every 8 to 12 weeks |
| 10 to 12 years..... | shoe size changes every 12 to 16 weeks |
| 12 to 15 years..... | shoe size changes every 16 to 20 weeks |
| 15 years and over... | shoe size changes every 6 months to 20 years |

TV Snack Tables Designed For Stacking, Easy Building

Eating at least one or two meals each week while watching TV is becoming an American habit. Instead of using lap trays, it's easy to build a stacking set of individual tray-tables with Do-It-Yourself aluminum legs and a plywood or hardboard top.

Cut the three frame pieces from 1x2 screen stock or clear cabinet wood. Bore 3/8" holes in the underside of frame ends for aluminum rod legs. Assemble the wood H-frame with glue and 8-penny nails. For the top, cut 1/4" plywood to 14"x20" size. Use a hardwood veneer surface that can be finished naturally or fir plywood to be enameled. Screw the top to the H-frame, countersinking screws. Fill over screw heads with wood putty and sand smooth.

Finish the table top with enamel or varnish before adding the legs. Cement the 24" aluminum rod legs in the holes with quick-drying plastic cement. Slip rubber cane tips on leg ends.

Reynolds Do-It-Yourself aluminum is available at hardware stores and building supply dealers.

The dollar is important to most of us and some hang on to it until the eagle screams. This is a story about a fellow who was held up. The robber demanded, "Your money or your life, which do you want?" The victim stared at him intently for a moment and said, "Well, I don't know, give me time to think about it!" This is the average feeling everyone has regarding their money. It is to many more important than their lives. Even more valuable than their souls. They don't need time to think about it either.

SELF REALIZATION: Life's mission to many is accomplishment in monetary possessions. This is the goal post of most of us. We wish to show others we can do what we set out to do. This is a natural initiative and an important one for success. The more important objective, however, is in the performance of worldly deeds which might benefit others. It is written, "What matters if we gain the whole world and lose our own souls?"

DIET: That which God intended lies within all of us. We are put here for a mission in life and to overcome the evils of living. Within the basic existence of mankind lies a constant struggle against evil and the desire to overcome it. "We all have fallen short of the Glory of God" and within us we find personal distaste of the nature within us. We are only human and everyone makes mistakes, but he who finds repentance and seeks forgiveness finds peace. This is the reason God's plan for self-realization is set up within His Church and why in its deity of fellowship man can find himself. No man can live by himself alone.

GOAL POST: Basically everyone has a goalpost and seeks to reach it. To most of us we find it rough sailing and as in football we are tackled with the problems and obstacles of life. Many are downed and roughed up a bit, but a good runner bounces upon his feet and starts a new game. If defeated in one there is always a new field to play on and despite the odds the running may be harder and more difficult, but a good player never gives up.

TEAM PLAYS: A player finds that he running afoul of his teammates and he fails to reach the yard line. He realizes his short windedness and his lack of strength physically and spiritually. He realizes his shortcomings and inability to keep up the pace. He must, therefore, seek added assistance and looks to his team mates for support. And as it is in football, so it is also in the game of life. We need the help of others and especially our spiritual advisors, likewise the influence and atmosphere of our church. A player must find moral support and anyone living must find spiritual support or go down in defeat.

GREAT ODDS: Usually, it is for financial reasons. There is but one course to take if one finds the sailing rough and that is to accept the situation for what it is without complaint when others are skeptical. It is but human nature for one to be doubted. To be able to meet the conquest in one's fight in life, it is necessary to defy the opinions of

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30—The White House Conference on Education serves to highlight a problem more pressing than buildings or changes in school curriculums. We as a people need to face the reasons for teacher shortages all over the nation and to understand, also, that the problem of getting and holding good teachers will plague us for many years to come.

There are many reasons for the lack of teachers and particularly for the lack of young people preparing for the teaching profession. Among them are the sweeping changes in our national life resulting from the war years. We must bear in mind that demands for national defense have made great inroads into available teacher-material. Also, we must not overlook the fact that the depression years resulted in fewer young people graduating from our teacher training schools and colleges.

Changed conditions in the employment world have created greater opportunities for educated women in business and industry. Men in increasing numbers have entered professions other than teaching. We have not kept pace in providing those in the teaching profession with adequate opportunities for advancement.

Our primary job, it seems to me, must be to make the teaching profession attractive enough to draw capable young people to it. There is a selling job to be done in demonstrating to our youth that teaching is a profession vital to the welfare of this nation.

Good teachers are still the priceless ingredient in the educational process. Since I firmly believe that the heart of the American public school system lies in the local community, we as individual members of a locality must devote the time and energy necessary to improve facilities for the training of teachers and of the means of drawing more students to those facilities.

We are fortunate in the Sixth Maryland District in having the Frostburg State Teachers College in Allegany County.

Teacher pay scales should not be neglected. Local school boards ought to insist on adequate pay for their teachers. I think that we took a step in the right direction when the Congress enacted a bill worked out by myself and other members of the District Committee providing a pay increase for the teachers of the District of Columbia.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

Frostbite isn't as simple an ailment as you might think. Frostbite is an injury to tissues caused by exposure to temperatures below freezing. The damage happens because the blood vessels close down either partially or totally, cutting off nourishment to the tissues affected. This results in either partial or total death of the tissue. Severe frostbite cases become gangrenous and you lose a finger, toe or an ear.

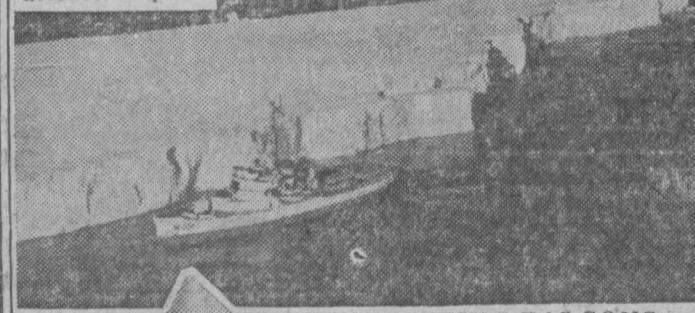

The first sign of frostbite is a grayish or whitish patch on the skin, a sort of blanching. This is usually numb, but not always. Proper clothing will prevent most frostbite. But clothing itself cannot generate warmth. Clothing keeps us warm by trapping body heat and preventing it from escaping. It's an insulator. You can take advantage of this in two ways: (1) wear clothes that have many small pockets of air in the weave or pile of the fabric, and (2) wear multiple layers of clothing so you'll get air spaces between layers.

Avoid overdressing. Too much clothing makes you sweat and wet clothes conduct heat away from the body. If you are sweating profusely, loosen your clothing or remove a damp inner garment.

If you do get frostbite here are the basic first aid measures as listed by Dr. A. Michaels for Sports Afeld readers:
(1) Get out of the cold and into warm shelter.
(2) Use body heat to warm the part. Never use external heat warmer than body heat. If the frostbite is on your face, ears or trunk, cover it with a warm, un-gloved hand. If your fingers are frostbitten, place them inside your shirt up against your body. If a foot is frostbitten, remove your shoe and sock and put the foot against the body of another person. Never rub snow or ice on frostbite. Never rub at all.
(3) If the skin is broken, cover the area with a sterile dress-

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

A problem of the times in mass communications is arriving at proper word and phrase definitions. For example, of late, there has been great publicity over "a businessman's administration."

This feeling is implanted way to run government with regard to business problems and viewpoints is to bring into high government office a few huge corporation officials.

Yet great doubt grows among many C. W. Harder thinkers on subject just how much of an actual businessman is head of a huge corporation.

Actually, there is a wide gulf between the independent businessman managing his own capital invested in his enterprise and who depends to a large degree on his own personal productivity, than in a highly placed executive who has reached his position by being adept at game of politics as practiced in larger corporations.

In fact, there is often more business sense in the head of the owner of a successful $100,000 business than in president of a billion dollar corporation.

Despite usual very handsome salary, head of a huge corporation is only a paid employee. Ownership of the enterprise is held by thousands of stockholders, but he has made himself acceptable to group who controls majority of the voting stock.

In addition he seldom, if ever, makes decisions based on his own judgement. Those decisions are reached by exhaustive meetings of management group, and often before acting, the attitude of the important stockholders is ascertained.

Even then, a mistake that results in losses is not reflected in his take home pay. Rather, thousands of stockholders suffer loss proportion to holdings.

In fact, writing of annual corporation reports to stockholders has become a major fine art often done by hired publicity specialists, with wonderful prose written to explain why phases of the moon, Molotov's indigestion, or some other reason, accounted for a decline of corporate earnings, rather than just plain bad judgement by management.

On the other hand, the independent businessman never feels it necessary to employ ghost writers to explain to himself why his mistake has pulled down his bank balance.

Thus, it might be said there are two broad classifications of businessmen. Responsible businessmen who risk their own capital and irresponsible businessmen who are risking somebody else's capital. There is a wide gulf between the two.

And this fact should be recognized in considering businessmen for high government posts. The independent businessman who has "rawhided" his venture to success should know much more about business than the tycoon whose progress upward in a corporate structure has been due, at least in part, to knowing with whom to play golf, with whom to play bridge.

This is a fundamental fact.

And it seems to be a fact of which more and more people are becoming aware. Growth of this awareness could have substantial repercussions.

BABSON

Writes . . .

By ROGER W. BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass., Dec. 1—Next to certain good chain store stocks, I believe that insurance stocks present the best opportunity to investors for a combination of security, growth, and income, provided the government does not foolishly interfere with the business.

Growth and Equity Provided

Fire and Casualty Insurance Stocks selling substantially below their estimated equity values should meet these three requirements. I do recognize that these stocks have gone up much during the past several years (along with the general run of good issues) because of their increased earnings, increased dividends and higher equity values. I also know of the unusual losses most of these companies have suffered as a result of hurricanes.

An examination of fire and casualty stocks, however, shows that, based upon the distribution of funds in their investment portfolios and that selected stocks in this group can now be bought at substantial discounts below their equity values, the risks are relatively small.

Different Insurance Stocks

As every reader of this column should have fire, casualty, and life insurance stock in some company, he should perhaps first buy the stock of the companies of which he holds a policy. Investors, however, who have surplus funds may like my ideas. Here are some suggestions:

Agricultural Ins., Fire Assn. of Phila., Firemen's (Newark), Great American Ins., Hanover Fire Ins., Home Insurance, Nat. Union Fire, New Amsterdam Cas., and Springfield Fire and Ma.

*I have invested my hard-earned savings in the Home Insurance Co., of which I was once a director. I have learned first-hand the high character of their officers and management.

Premium Rates and Earnings

The long, unbroken record of these stocks through periods of good times, depressions, wars, great fires, and other national disasters appeals to me. This certainly attests to the soundness of the insurance business as well as to the soundness of the individual companies. The growth of equity values in insurance stocks over the years is evidence of the need for ever-increasing amounts of insurance sold. The increase in population could offset the unfavorable effect of inflation.

Fire insurance rates are established by state regulatory bodies on the basis of a continuing five-year average of the loss experience. Rates are set so that the insurance industry as a whole is able to make a fair return on the business handled.

Investment Trusts

Insurance companies usually have the diversification and supervisory advantages of Investment Trusts or Mutual Funds; but in addition, have the insurance profits. The funds of insurance companies consist of two major portions. First, there is the reserve which is set up against unearned premiums. This reserve is usually in highly liquid high-grade assets which are quickly available on demand.

The second part of the insurance companies' portfolio consists of what may be described as 'the stockholders' equity, which serves as a kind of additional guarantee fund to protect policyholders and stockholders. How this fund is managed, as regards type of investment, depends somewhat upon the kind of insurance written. The longer the term of the contract and the greater the reliance upon the law of averages working out in a particular kind of insurance, the greater the term that the capital funds may be invested.

Other Reasons Why I Like These Stocks

Most insurance stocks actually have more money working for them than the market prices of the issues show. Over and above this inherent element of strength—protection against a sudden turnaround in the long bull market for common stocks—the above nine companies have been selected because of the excess of admitted-asset book values over current market values of the company shares, even though they must pay 20 per cent tax on the income from their investments.

Further reasons are (1) in addition to investment earnings retained by the companies, net earnings on underwritings are usually plowed back into the business, (2) good insurance stocks deserve to sell at a time-earnings ratio somewhat higher than is usual for other types of companies, and (3) the lag in premium rate raises, insurance stocks are a logical form of post-inflation investment.

Use of Non-Flammable Materials

Great progress has been made in preventing loss of life and property since Mrs. O'Leary's cow kicked over the lantern and burned Chicago to the ground! The first step was the inventing of a Fire Alarm System by John N. Gamewell of Newton, Mass. He was burned out of Chicago. Returning East, he interested Boston in the fire alarm idea. After getting these municipal fire alarm systems in the country's leading cities, the fire chiefs turned their attention to Sprinkler Systems under the leadership of George I. Rockwood of Worcester, Mass., of which company Wm. J. Carroll is now president.

As statistics were beginning to show that almost as many were being killed by automobiles (with corresponding losses to Insurance Companies) as by fires, the Gamewell laboratories worked upon traffic lights. With factories at Moline, Ill., they, under the leadership of Matthew Porosky, are spending millions to reduce life and accident losses from automobile accidents. Now the whole army of Fire Chiefs are urging the increased use of non-flammable furniture and textiles with the hope of preventing or stopping fires at their source.

Notwithstanding the marvelous work that General Manager Vincent of the National Board of Fire Underwriters is doing to lessen fire losses, these losses continue to climb. The official statistics show that over 26 per cent of the fires reported from known causes are believed to be due to smoking and matches. This Board has a tremendous uphill task to compete with the cigarette advertising.

Without interfering with this advertising, the Fire Insurance Companies should supply the Board an equal amount of money to spend on newspaper advertising to PREVENT FIRES, as the tobacco people spend on advertising. When the insurance companies provide such funds, you will see the fire losses per home begin to decline. The above hope is another reason for the long pull, although these stocks may decline with the general market. Finally, the Insurance Business is basically a Christian co-operative enterprise where the fortunate people club together to help the unfortunate in case of fire, accident, or death.

SENATE CLOAKROOM

By J. GLENN BEALL

Several off-beat items which arrived at my desk this week might be of interest to those of you who, like myself, get a certain curious kick out of browsing through other people's communications. From my secretary, for instance, I got a note saying that a "ham" radio operator in Washington County had contacted our office by broadcasting to the Pentagon and asking that his dispatch be relayed to us by telephone.

Another message — this one from Southern Maryland — came to me in the form of a 1200-foot tape recording prepared by a man whose business card said he does "free-lance warfare research."

WANTS TAXES

A third man informed me of his sentiments in a mimeographed sheet headed "Down with the Government!"

And a lawyer, who indicated that his income is in the higher brackets, wrote an unusual letter asking for a change in revenue laws so that he and others in his financial class "might pay more taxes."

Such communications are obviously out of the ordinary, but even the unusual contacts I have with my constituents are extremely important in helping me do my job.

MINORITY VIEWS

If we in this nation are to preserve our government "of the people," all groups—even the smallest minorities—must consider it a duty to make their views known.

How To Winterize Your Car Radiator

It's a wise motorist who doesn't forget or postpone winterizing his car radiator. Modern high compression engines put a heavy load on cooling systems which must be rust and sludge-free to function properly. First, get rid of sediment by using a good radiator cleaner. There is a new "fast flush" radiator cleaner available that works in only ten minutes. Simply empty the can in the radiator, run motor and drain. Put in anti-freeze when refilling radiator. Finally, Du Pont automotive authorities advise adding a sealer to protect against leakage and loss of anti-freeze.

It is important to select radiator protection materials designed especially for today's high compression engines. (Du Pont No. "7" Service)

INSPECT HERD

Carroll County Aberdeen-Angus herds were visited Nov. 21 and 22 by C. A. Morrow, district chairman and president of the Maryland Angus Assn. The tour of 35 breeding farms was to understand methods of handling and management. Mr. L. C. Burns, Carroll County Agent, was present for the Nov. 22 session of the new County Agricultural Center.

It then becomes the solemn duty of those of us in public life to give careful consideration to the various opinions.

MANY BOSSES

The obligations of lawmakers to give serious thought to all reasonable proposals arises from the basic fact that in a democracy the citizens are the rulers.

Following that principle one step further, we arrive at an interesting idea which I have always found to be all-important in trying to preserve my sense of values. It is this:

In the business of government, a man acquires, rather than loses, more "bosses" as he is advanced in his field.

The new "bosses," of course, are the additional constituents he is chosen to represent.

Non - Readers Learn to Read

Dr. Earl A. Taylor, Director of the Reading and Study Skills Center, Inc., 15 Washington Place, New York City, observes ocular activity of non-reader on the Junior Metronoscope.

Dr. Earl A. Taylor, Director of the Reading and Study Skills Center, Inc., New York City, states that "Almost all non-readers found in the schools now can learn to read and those who read poorly usually can improve to the extent that their reading performance is satisfactory for their grade placement." He states further that "These results usually can be obtained irrespective of the pupil's I.Q., as determined by any of the group or 29 individual tests used with children who enter the regular school situation at the age of 6 years."

He supports these statements with the results obtained at the New York Center (formerly Washington Square Reading Center) and at Amackassin, in Blarstown, New Jersey, where both day and boarding students are enrolled. Over a period of thirteen years, all non-readers (children and adults) who have received training have learned to read, and all poor readers have either reached grade level or have improved to a marked degree. These results are made possible by a unique type of educational program in which the individual first is made functionally ready as a unit to receive instruction before any attempt is made to teach him. Dr. Taylor states that the educator is often helpless, when working alone, in solving many of the more difficult school problems and vision specialists, physicians and others frequently participate in the over-all program designed to improve the individual's efficiency.

An outline of this program is contained in a recent book published by the Center, Functional Readiness and School Adjustment. It also contains a Functional Readiness Questionnaire for use in school surveys, as well as concrete suggestions for improving reading programs in any school.

LOOKING AHEAD
By Dr. George S. Roberts
DIRECTOR - NATIONAL EDUCATION PROGRAM
New York, Adams

Education's Great Responsibility

American education, as an institution, is confronted with a great immediate challenge. It can be the means of carrying forward Christian civilization and human welfare, or through its failure it can be charged with turning the world backward to another dismal era such as The Dark Ages. Will it rise to the challenge, or will it fail as have the institutions of education in 20 preceding civilizations now dead? This question commands the attention of not only every educator and public official but every citizen.

The primary problem in American education today is that of public support — or, rather, the lack of it. It cannot meet the challenge; it cannot resolve its first obligation to the nation unless it has widespread public support. The press of the nation, going back for at least a generation, indicates the chronic nature of the problem: The most persistent news stories over this period have been those concerned with the plight of education. No Agreement

Why hasn't the citizenry of America provided adequate financial resources and widespread, active support for education? The basic reason is that there has been no universal understanding and agreement, among educators and the public generally, as to the purpose, the basic objective of the institution of American education. There are many ideas regarding the objective and some are in sharp conflict. This conflict should be settled. Undoubtedly it is being agitated by forces working secretly to undermine our nation.

The No. 1 purpose or objective of American education today—in the midst of a world crisis — must be: To prepare people for citizenship in our own American Republic. There are, of course, a number of secondary purposes and objectives; but until this basic one is achieved, with the awareness and support of the entire citizenry, the great challenge to American education has not been met and the structure of human freedom will continue to be in jeopardy.

Long Range Stake
The broader and loftier quest of education—for knowledge; for truth—is at stake, too, in the fulfillment of the immediate great challenge. If American freedom were to be destroyed, because of a generation's failure to understand freedom and the elements which safeguard it, mankind's quest for knowledge would be smothered for perhaps centuries. President Eisenhower has expressed apprehension because of (as the New York Times reported) "the meager education given our people as to what their obligation is to a free form of government, what it means to support it and what it takes to keep it and pass it on."

Without question the United States today is the foremost nation in the world. But are we likely to continue to hold this leadership? On the basis of history—No. Throughout recorded history no nation has remained on top long. Moral, political and economic decay has always set in to undermine the strength and bring about the fall of every nation or civilization that has reached the pinnacle. Moral, economic and political decay are conditions governed by intellect and character — the products of citizenship education.

Awakening Now
The institution of American education has begun to awaken to the realities of the immediate challenge. Many Americans have been slow in recognizing the true nature of Communism and its false-face twin, Socialism; and this was a factor in the unpreparedness of education when the Red menace created a world crisis nearly 10 years ago. It probably will require another 20 years for adequate citizenship textbooks, materials and techniques to reach all the schools and colleges.

Meantime the fundamentals of citizenship education can be emphasized. These are: an awareness of God as revealed through Christ; development of such virtues as honesty, humility, courage, economic self-reliance, patriotism, and a sense of civic responsibility. Equipped with these elements of character, and aware of the great political and economic advantages of the American way of life, the new generation can accept its great heritage of freedom and deal with any crisis threatening it. And this is education's responsibility. The American public will, think, agree.

NO COMMENT
By WALTER CHAMBLIN, Jr.

WASHINGTON — You remember the story of the taxpayer who wandered into one of the offices of the Internal Revenue Service and explained that the purpose of his visit was "just to meet the people I work for."

His quip, of course, referred to the money he paid the government for taxes. But it is often forgotten that many people work a substantial amount of time for the government in other ways.

Consider the cost in money and time of preparing the vast volume of reports and other types of paperwork required by Uncle Sam.

Believe it or not, more than four million small businessmen have to spend five to 25 per cent of their time on paperwork for the government.

The demands on larger businesses also are terrific, requiring the assignment of a substantial amount of personnel to prepare the desired reports and records.

Naturally, all of this activity by industry diverts considerable manpower from the primary job of producing a product. Such diversion was particularly noticeable during World War II and the Korean hostilities when maximum production was urgent.

The paperwork also is expensive. And don't forget that such expenses have to be added to the price of the product paid by the purchaser. Even if the government buys the product the cost is collected from you in taxes.

Of course, some of the reports are essential. But even these might be simplified to reduce the burden on businessmen. Then there are others that are pure waste and should be eliminated entirely.

The problem is to determine what reports should be eliminated and what to simplify. This is being tackled by the Bureau of the Budget as the result of suggestions by the Hoover Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government.

Considerable progress already has been made, but much more is desired. Business people are being urged to send in their suggestions based on practical experience with the paperwork requirements.

The Hoover Commission found that there were some 4700 different forms or questionnaires imposed upon private citizens or business concerns and that the cost for clerical help, accounting, legal and other expenses ran into hundreds of millions of dollars annually—not to mention the cost to the government of handling the documents.

Confirming popular opinion, the Hoover Commission study revealed that:

(1) A large number of reports were required of industry by a government agency when the information was already available in another nearby agency.

(2) Great quantities of records were required from industry which were not used.

(3) Last year 938,000 persons (income taxpayers) were required to file a formal report saying they had nothing to report. (Their salary was unchanged from the estimate).

Not to be overlooked is the fact that their reports are only a part of the 25 billion pieces of paper created and handled by the Federal government each year. Laid end to end they would reach from the earth to the moon 13 times.

This paperwork requires 750,000 full-time employees—it costs $4 billion annually (nearly $100 for each family of four)—and the records on hand would fill seven buildings the size of the Pentagon.

You will be interested in knowing that something is being done about this also—at the suggestion of the Hoover Commission.

MARYLAND FARM FRONT

U. S. farmers have put 40 per cent less wheat under price supports this year over last year, according to George B. Reeves, chairman of the Maryland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee. Through Oct. 15, 1955, U. S. farmers had put 180 million bushels under price supports compared to more than 300,000 bushels last year. Maryland wheat under the 1955 price support through Nov. 15

And whatever saving is accomplished means that you eventually will have to pay that much less in taxes.

Stop! Don't throw that empty cigarette package out your car window. What gets thrown down must be picked up—picking it up totalled 1.8 million bushels compared to 2.1 million bushels at the same time last year.

Among the major wheat producing states, Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas had more than 100 million bushels less wheat under price support than the year before. Despite the decline Kansas still led the states with more than 32 million bushels under price support. Washington was second with nearly 26 million bushels. Other states with more than 10 million bushels under support were Nebraska, 14.3 million bushels, and Montana, 11.1 million bushels.

Of the national total placed under price support this year 119.9 million bushels were stored in warehouses, 58.4 million bushels were stored on farms, and 1.3 million bushels were under purchase agreement. Of the total placed under loan less than 500,000 bushels had been redeemed by the growers by Oct. 15.
