Local interested parties will make an eleventh hour stand to thwart the plan of the State Roads Commission to bypass Emmitsburg. A large number of local businessmen and club representatives is expected to meet with State Roads officials here Tuesday night to present their complaint. They feel the bypass would be detrimental to local business interests. And while on the subject of the new road, its apparent things will be happening here sooner than we had anticipated. From reports I have gathered it is not impossible that bids on the project, or parts of it, might easily be let out this summer or fall. If that is so, work could commence late this year or early next spring. Representatives of the State Roads Commission have been busy recently obtaining rights-of-way for the road, which according to present plans, would bypass Emmitsburg to the east. As far as I can ascertain the new highway will be of a non-commercial nature. This would mean that no business places would be permitted to locate along the highway, but any establishments now operating in the area, would be permitted to continue operations. As I have been told, this plan was incorporated into the Commission's plans, to protect those towns which were bypassed. In other words, if a motorist wants gas or repairs, or is tired and wants lodging for the night, he must turn off at the town of his choice as there will be no accommodations on the new road. This would insure local merchants of getting their continued share of the tourist, or transient business. Anyway, most of these questions will be answered at this particular meeting Tuesday evening in the Fire Hall.

Another animal rescue feat: A small puppy belonging to the Maurice Michaels, had the misfortune last week, to get its head caught between a radiator and a return pipe. A quick call for assistance brought Fire Chief John S. Hollinger and Assistant Chief Sterling White to the rescue. In nothing flat the Chief had the animal freed, and the assistant, who was a trifle late in arriving on the scene, could only be credited with a moral assist.

It's becoming more and more apparent that the biggest deterrent to local building of homes is lack of adequate sewerage. And to be able to obtain this necessary sewerage it is apparent that the Corporation must expand and take in more surrounding suburban properties to raise enough tax money to pay for it. As it stands now, a lot of suburban homes need better sewerage facilities and the town needs revenue and has to expand in order to get it. There are very few building lots left in the town proper that have sewerage. In fact I believe you could count them on your fingers, so you can readily see that expansion by annexation is a coming thing if we are to encourage more of our local people to make their homes here. Granted, a large number of local residents are forced to look elsewhere for their livelihood, but most of them would rather live right here in Emmitsburg. They are content to work in neighboring towns if necessary, but when the day's work is completed they like to return to Emmitsburg because they really like it here. I venture to say that if the town limits were extended and additional sewer lines laid, a great many more local people wouldn't hesitate to build homes here and help make the town grow and prosper.

The child had a severe laceration of the scalp and Mrs. Hobbs sustained a laceration of the left knee. They were removed to the Warner Hospital, Gettysburg, by passing motorists.

Father Heary Addresses Children Of Mary Group

The following is a sermon given by Rev. Vincent G. Heary, C.M., assistant pastor of St. Joseph Church, to the Children of Mary reception May 22:

"This is the 20th Century—the age of television, the jet plane, and the hydrogen bomb—an era in which we find woman fighting desperately and successfully for equality with man. And yet, in the attainment of her quest, she has lost something—something of a superior nature that she already had. And the status of the woman of today — and more so of the whole world of tomorrow—is a challenge to the young girls of today.

"When Christ and His Blessed Mother came into the world and from the pages of history, we learn that Christ reached down into that pit of degradation and released woman from her shackles. He restored that pedestal that had been broken and cast away for centuries. He made it a bigger one and a larger one and on that pedestal, He placed His mother—He placed YOU and that is your place—one of dignity, as intended from the creative hand of God; one of esteem, one of splendor and one of love. If that dignity is to be preserved, if that pedestal is to remain standing, if that splendor of yours is to continue to glow, you must do your part to preserve it! Unfortunately, today, that pedestal once again is threatening to collapse and this time, chiefly and primarily because of woman herself.

Look back again in the pages of history and you will find in the rise and fall of any of the nations of the world that it has been either strong or weak according to the courage and morals of the women of that time. We know that poets and composers and musicians have paid honor and glory in their poems and sonnets and tell of the woman's gentle nature, of her cheerful smile, her tender heart. Man has within himself an image of his mother, a model of perfection. The unity and harmony of the home has been kept under a mother's careful eye. She was always there when needed. She always knew what to say. She understood.

"But this is the 20th Century. Modern woman has been made equal to man. Has it made her happy? What has she gained or lost in her imitation of man? What modern poet has been inspired by the vision of a woman sitting at a bar with her glass of beer clasped in her hand? Where are the musicians who sing of the loud, and the bold and the vulgar? Man has lost sight of his leader. He has looked up to that pinnacle to find that his guide has descended to his own level. His beacon of life has become a glare in a cruel and lawless world. You can claim equality or you can climb up on that pedestal where God placed you and where man himself waned you to be. You can give so much to the world that a man can't give—advice—understanding—and love—the love fostered by true devotion in time of crisis. The world of tomorrow and the future great men of tomorrow will need great women, whose courage and moral support will direct and change the world—a world made better because you realize the dignity of woman. Your model, Mary the Supreme Woman, will help you to be better today to make a better tomorrow. Stay close to her. Be real Children of Mary and you'll never hang your head in shame."

David Hemler, Harve de Grace, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hemler.

Large Crowd Enjoys Glee Club Concert

A capacity crowd filled Flynn Hall, Mt. St. Mary's College, last Thursday evening, for the final concert presented this season by the Glee Club, under the direction of Rev. Fr. David W. Shaum, who according to Msgr. John L. Sheridan, college president, gave his "best performance since its reorganization eight years ago."

Featuring selections from Rodgers-Hammerstein, the male voices were supplemented by the guest artist, Miss Nyla Wright, Baltimore soprano and graduate of the Peabody Conservatory of Music. Guest accompanist was Mrs. Charlotte Reed, Baltimore.

Father Shaum, in opening the program, remarked: "I am dedicating tonight's performance to Rev. Fr. Peter A. Coad, that 'grand old man of the Mountain' who has inspired, encouraged and helped me through the eight years I have worked with the Glee Club. It was Father Coad who encouraged us to carry on for these years."

Msgr. Sheridan said, "Father Coad deserves the part he is playing tonight in this concert, and for making the glee club a success. In my mind, as a college president, this is one of the finest groups of its kind in any college. I give special thanks to Father Shaum, who has worked with these boys night after night." Father Coad, who has been at the "Mount" since the Johnstown Flood, was warmly applauded.

A recent survey conducted by the rubber company showed that more than 70 types of farm equipment now use rubber tires.

SLOW DOWN AND LIVE

Maryland Traffic Safety Commission says "Don't let this happen to your family".

When the 1956 Slow Down and Live highway safety campaign opens Tuesday evening, May 29, 1956, at 6 o'clock, it will be almost a last ditch stand against the most terrible year of traffic deaths in the history of the motor vehicle.

The second nationwide campaign extends from the eve of Memorial Day through Labor Day at midnight. "The records of the states show that highway deaths in open country driving reach the highest level of the year during July and August. This is the vacation season when our highways should have their safest and most pleasurable use. We haven't been able to stop the rocketing death trend in the early months of 1956. By stepped-up enforcement, promotion and public cooperation, perhaps we can stop the trend this summer," said Mr. Paul E. Burke, Executive Director, Maryland Traffic Safety Commission.

The Slow Down and Live campaign concentrates on the traffic violations associated with speed—those acts of the driver grouped as a "complex" for being "in a hurry". The sponsors of the program point out that the effort is not aimed at speed alone but at improper passing, following too closely, failing to yield right-of-way, excessive speed and speed too fast for conditions. The program has been endorsed by the Governors of the 48 states and the Territories in a Joint Declaration signed by all Chief Executives.

Lutherans Meet In Gettysburg

The 137th annual convention of the Maryland Synod of the United Lutheran Church in America was held at the Gettysburg Lutheran Theological Seminary, Gettysburg, Pa., Monday to Thursday. Pastors and lay delegates from 149 congregations in Maryland and Washington, D. C., attended the sessions. They represented 104,526 Lutherans in this area.

The convention opened Monday evening with the celebration of Holy Communion in the Church of the Abiding Presence, the Gettysburg Seminary Chapel. The officers of Synod officiated, and the Rev. Dr. J. Frank Fife, president, delivered the sermon.

Three pastors were received into the Synod: the Rev. Stanley B. Jennings, who is pastor of Trinity Church, Taketown, from the Ministerium of Pennsylvania; the Rev. L. Crosby Deaton, who is the assistant pastor of Christ Church, Baltimore, also from the Ministerium of Pennsylvania, and the Rev. John Yost Jr., who is the pastor of All Saints Church, Baltimore, from the Central Pennsylvania Synod.

Several young men were ordained to the ministry in a special service Wednesday. They were the Rev. Henry K. Brown, who will be the pastor of the Woodbine Parish; the Rev. Herbert W. Jones, who will be the pastor of the Sharpsburg Parish; the Rev. Eugene A. Gardner, who will be the assistant pastor of the Lutheran Church of Waynesboro, Pa., and the Rev. Carl J. Frederick, who will be the assistant pastor of St. John's Church, Hagerstown.

Attending the convention as the official United Lutheran Church Representative to the Maryland Synod, was the Rev. Dr. Franklin Clark Fry, president of the United Lutheran Church in America. Dr. Fry told the Synodical Convention about the world-wide work of the United Lutheran Church, with particular emphasis on the Lutheran Evangelism Mission, which is being carried on by the United Lutheran Church in America during 1956 and 1957 across the United States and Canada.

As President of the United Lutheran Church, Dr. Fry heads the largest Lutheran body in the U. S., with a membership of more than 2 million persons. He is the second man to hold this office. Dr. Fry was elected in October, 1944, to succeed the late Dr. Frederick H. Knobel, who had served as president for 26 years following the organization of the United Lutheran Church in America in 1918.

State Veterans Receive Cash Grants

The Veterans Administration distributed $57.7 million in cash and services to Maryland veterans and their families during fiscal year 1955, William L. Limburg, manager of the Maryland Regional VA office, announced recently.

Compensation for service-connected disabilities and pensions for total and permanent non-service connected disabilities were paid to 33,841 living Maryland veterans in the amount of $25 million.

Death compensation and pension payments to the dependents of 11,860 deceased Maryland veterans totaled $9.7 million.

Certain GI insurance and indemnity payments totaling $5 million were made to veterans or their beneficiaries.

An average of 175 disabled veterans of World War II and the Korean conflict were trained during the year under the vocational rehabilitation act to overcome the handicap of their disabilities, receiving a total of $184,773 in subsistence, tuition, supplies and equipment.

Under the World War II GI Bill, an average of 2019 veterans trained during the year and received a total of $599,523 in subsistence, tuition, supplies and

Did you ever try stalking a bunch of crows as they foraged in a field? If you can do it, you are a master stalker indeed. You may put a rise between you and the crows and approach with the greatest caution—but you won't surprise them. Their lookout will spot you every time. If you don't equipment.

Under the Korean GI Bill, an average of 5462 veterans trained during the year and received $3.8 million in education and training allowances.

The remainder of the cash benefits and services distributed to Maryland veterans and their families totaled $12.5 million. These included hospitalization, medical care, dental care, prosthetic appliances, automobiles for the disabled and wheel-chair homes for the seriously disabled.

VA explained that certain expenditures cannot be broken down on a state basis because of the nature of the benefits or services. These include GI insurance payments and certain administrative expenditures.

Thus, the total of $57.7 million spent in Maryland during fiscal year 1955 was the minimum amount of cash benefits and services distributed in the state, VA manager Limburg reports.

have a gun he allows you just so much distance before he signals a warning to the brethren.

If you have a gun, the watchbird invariably sees it and doubles his caution.

Getting close enough under these conditions to shoot them with a shotgun is next to impossible. A .22 rimfire sometimes works, if you know your trajectory and have a lot of elevation in your sights. You'll be lucky to get within 150 yards of the birds, and that's a long shot with a rimfire. Pete Brown, arms and ammunition expert of Sports Afield magazine, thinks one of the high-powered centerfires is the best medicine. If a flock of crows hasn't witnessed the effects of high-powered rifles too often, a shooter can sometimes get field shots at 200 yards and frequently between 200 and 300 yards. This type of shooting calls for telescope sights.

Hunting crows with a shotgun is a completely different type of hunting from start to finish. In the first place, it is wing shooting. When shotgunning the crow, it is largely a question of maneuvering the crow himself, and this requires some knowledge of crow psychology and crow language. You must make the crow a victim of his own devices. Where shooting crows with a rifle demands skill, mainly in rifle marksmanship, shotgunning them requires even greater skill in crow lore. Until one has mastered this, ability with the shotgun is of little consequence. Once crows are in range, however, they provide a tricky and usually long wing shot.

The shotgunner must excite the crow's curiosity and natural love of a fracas in order to lure him away from his feeding. A good call, and knowledge of how to use it, together with an owl decoy, sets the perfect stage.

If you are good with the call, the owl isn't essential but it may help. Regardless of this, callers must have a properly pitched call and know how to use it. One way to learn crow talk is to listen to a good caller in action, and carefully observe his technique. If no accomplished caller is available, then listen to the crows under various situations. Then make your call and see if you can talk the same language.

Wheat Growers Will Ballot

On July 20

The nation's wheat growers will go to the polls July 20 to vote in a referendum for or against marketing quotas for the 1957 crop of wheat. In making this announcement Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson also established the national acreage allotment for the 1957 crop at 55 million acres, the level specified by law under present conditions of excessive supply.

At least two-thirds of the nation's wheat farmers voting in the referendum must favor marketing quotas before they are put into effect. If the vote is passed, it will be the fourth consecutive year that quotas on wheat have been in effect. Last year the quota was passed by a favorable vote of 77.5 per cent. In Maryland last year, voters were 57 per cent in favor, according to Chester S. Bradley, chairman of the Maryland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

There are over 16,000 wheat farmers in Maryland, that have established allotments. Of these, Bradley said about 5000 are eligible to vote. To be eligible to vote a farmer must produce more than 15 acres of wheat for harvest as grain in 1957. Last year only 19 per cent of the eligible Maryland voters participated in the referendum.

If quotas are approved, producers in commercial wheat states who stay within the acreage allotted for their farms will be eligible for the full level of price support. Producers in commercial states who do not comply with their allotments will not be eligible for price support and will be subject to marketing penalties on their excess wheat, if they have more than 15 acres for harvest.

If quotas are not approved by wheat growers in the July 20 referendum, the law provides for a wheat price-support level at 50 per cent of parity for producers who stay within their acreage allotments. If quotas are voted out, farmers may exceed allotments without being subject to quota penalties, but they will not be eligible to receive any price support.

Regardless of how Maryland farmers vote, the final outcome will depend on the entire nation, Mr. Bradley said.

Sunburn Hints

You can burn on "dull" days, too

Summer sun is healthful—but don't get too much of it. There is no surer way of spoiling a beautiful week-end or vacation than by letting yourself in for a dose of painful joy-killing sunburn.

Actress Mamie Van Doren gets double sun protection with this combination of Sun 'n' Surf Shap-on, attractive 1955-styled sunbonnet, and ultraviolet-repelling Sun 'n' Surf suntan spray. Miss Van Doren is starring in Universal - International's new picture "Ain't Misbehavin'".

Not everyone is aware that the sun's rays can play dangerous pranks on them if they aren't careful. Scientists at E. R. Squibb & Sons caution against some of these solar booby traps.

Don't be thrown off guard, they warn, just because the sun isn't beating down hot and bright. Sunburn is caused by ultraviolet rays, which you can't see or feel—at least not until it is too late. Often in midsummer, light clouds or haze will dull the sun's visible rays, sometimes almost to the point of overcast, but have relatively little effect on the ultraviolet radiation coming through. Many a bad burn has been acquired when "the day really didn't seem bright."

Beware, too, say the scientists, of reflected rays. Sand and water especially rippling water, make excellent ultraviolet reflectors, multiplying the intensity of the rays and increasing the danger of burning.

And if it's a good tan you're after, you may not know that burning is one of the best ways of slowing down the tanning process. An average brunette can normally acquire a tan within a week that will tolerate almost any amount of sun. If a severe burn is suffered first, however, the same tan will take longer.

The Squibb scientists offer two rules for sun care of the skin that will usually eliminate risk of a dangerous burn:

1. Take your sun in small doses, less than half hour the first day
2. Use a good screening agent, one that filters out a high percentage of the trouble-causing ultraviolet rays while allowing the tanning rays to get through. One such preparation is Sun 'n' Surf, which comes as a sunburn cream and a new suntan spray.

Containing homomentyl salicylate, an active ray filtering ingredient, Sun 'n' Surf can help you promote tanning and avoid painful over-exposure. And if you do forget to apply it while out in the sun, you can get rapid relief from sunburn pain by using the cream after exposure.

WASHINGTON AND

"SMALL BUSINESS"

By C. WILSON HARDER

Many veteran Washington observers feel greatest improvement needed in government is return to old-fashioned intellectual morality.

People look to government for an example of morality. Along the Potomac today there are those government experts who decry expansion of consumer installment credit on grounds it is immoral for people to spend beyond their means.

Yet government itself furnishes the example. For instance, increased use of tubeless auto tires is making inroads into inner tube use. Government collects tax on inner tubes. To offset this loss, serious consideration is being given to a tax to replace inner tube tax. Little thought is being given to cutting expenses accordingly.

It is interesting to note Coleman Andrews, recently retired income tax head, is now stumping for repeal of that tax, largely on ground it leads to governmental excesses.

The administration beats drums for multi-billion dollar highway program. Ways and means of raising taxes for program are discussed. But as yet, there is no guarantee such extra taxes would go into roads.

For example, in eight years, 1947 through 1954, Federal government collected almost $13 billion in special automotive excises from highway users, but has spent bare $4 billion on roads. Where has other $9 billion gone? An interesting speculation.

Part has probably gone to defense against communism. Yet, © National Federation of Independent Business paradoxically, part has undoubtedly gone to help communism. For some officials in the International Cooperation Administration, huge give-away operation descended from Marshall Plan, cannot seem to recognize a communist when they see one.

In recent 60 day period ICA shelled out over $9 million in American tax money to communist Yugoslavia in hides, cotton, coal, ocean transportation and even road building equipment.

This fellow Boz, alias Tito, is even more wondrous than the wonderful Wizard of Oz. In fact, like Stalin, born something else, he, too, works under an alias.

The late Stalin probably only rates as a bigger communist than Tito because with so many more millions of Russians than there are Yugoslavs, Stalin could liquidate more than Tito can. There is no difference here between the quality of murder; the only difference is in quantity.

Yet this nation's give-away agency, now under complete State Dept. control, hands out money hand over fist to build up Yugoslavia. It almost appears there is a design to prove that a communist state can be successful. Thus world has spectacle of a government making angry noises at those who call themselves Russian communists, smothering with kindness those who call themselves Yugoslavian communists.

To complete Alice in Wonderland situation, government is going to give a huge amount of rubber tires to Formosa, just in case Chiang Chinese might be useful someday to help kill off communist China.

But no American company can bid on this business. It has been reserved for Italian makers. A weird situation.

The high point of the day will be the appearance of Mr. Reed J. Glenn Beall also will be present. The luncheon is open to husbands and friends of the members.

AS A MAN SOWS, SO SHALL HE REAP

It is an age-old truth that the crop you grow depends on the seed you plant and the way you plant it. A very modern group of food growers, the canning industry, understands the importance of this ancient truth.

All those who have grown canning crops know that canners almost literally stand shoulder to shoulder with their growers to help reap the finest possible harvest. All over the country, canners cooperate with seed suppliers, machinery manufacturers and farmers to make agriculture a scientific, predictable business. The results show, in the last 20 years, a scientific, predictable business. The results show, in the last 20 years, the yield per acre for tomatoes, the leading vegetable crop, has almost tripled. Peas and corn, next in importance, have increased yield per acre of 66% and 76% respectively. Quality of the crop has improved simultaneously. Canners have made much of this increase possible.

Let's be specific. Ninety-five out of a hundred canners provide farmers with seed or plants for tomatoes, peas, corn and other processing crops. They do so because research has proved to them that this is the best seed available. These seeds have been developed through years of breeding and tailored to meet the canner's specific needs.

Farm machinery is another area of joint interest to canners and farmers. Years ago, canners inspired the introduction of the pea viner for shelling green peas, saving everyone time, money, and work. Now, at the canners' instigation, a mechanical bean picker will join the ranks of farm machinery. The corn harvester will do much to keep the corn growers in business during periods of manpower shortages. The bean picker will render the same service to bean growers.

When harvest time comes, farmer and canner both reap a rich crop because they have sown and tended it with knowledge and care.

ECONOMICS - BUSINESS
SOCIALISM - COMMUNISM
George F. Sanders

Competition Pays Off
In the U. S. today we have nearly 170 million people who are free to dream and to try to make their dreams come true. This gives us a great creative force at work developing new ideas, new products, new inventions, and new techniques of production. This is in contrast to a Socialist or Communist nation where a handful of "Economic Planners" do the thinking for the economic production and economic welfare of all the people. A companion factor in our wonderful success in America is our freedom to compete with the dreamer.

Not all of us can be Edisons and bring into being such great inventions as the electric light, the phonograph, etc. Yet our system permits others to compete with the Edisons. There are certain patent rights but they are always limited, and American ingenuity sparked by freedom has demonstrated again and again that there are many ways of doing things, and almost always there is a better way.

Ford's New Ideas

The automobile had been invented for many years, and there were many different kinds of cars on the market, when Henry Ford, an obscure auto mechanic, dreamed of producing a $500 car which the average family could afford to own. Cars then were selling for $3000 and $4000 which, in those days, was a small fortune. Only the very wealthy drove automobiles. But Ford had the freedom and the incentive to try out his ideas.

Ford brought into being the first mass-production assembly line and achieved the reputation of "turning out cars like a machine turns out link sausages (hot dogs)." Within a few years the Model T was selling for $375 and had become world-famous. Millions of American families bought them. Yet Ford, did not have a monopoly on the market, or on production ideas. Other companies competed for the mass market. Chevrolet, Plymouth and others were successful. Through the years companies have come and gone. In my files are the names of 1400 companies organized to manufacture automobiles in the past 60 years. The ones which have best pleased the consuming public have lived.

Production By "Planning"

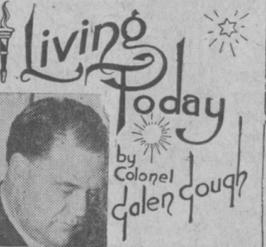

In the Socialist countries the automobile industry is "nationalized" or socialized. The industry is a state-owned monopoly. The government produces all the cars. No individual or group of private citizens can compete, no matter how efficient they might be as producers—or how inefficient the government operation might be. Weigh this fact with the additional fact that Americans drive 85 per cent of all the automobiles in the world today! This is proof that freedom to compete is a great factor for improving human welfare.

An authentic report came out of Communist Hungary recently. A man wanted to buy a pair of shoes. The shoe manufacturing plants and the shoe distribution stores are owned and operated by the government, and the production is under the direct control of the "Economic Planners." The man's foot was measured. He was told to come back in two weeks. But it was nearly two months later that he finally got his pair of shoes—and, alas, they didn't fit! The citizen had no recourse. He was stuck with them. There was no competition allowed in the manufacture and distribution of shoes.

Natural Impulse Harnessed

To compete is a natural impulse in human nature. The American freedom system, with its checks and balances, permits competition to act a wholesome force for progress. Occasionally a rotten spot is found in the field of competition; somebody trying to take advantage of this freedom, unfairly. But these exceptions are short-lived. Natural laws or man-made laws ultimately eliminate the "sharp" operators.

With our freedom to dream, and our equally important freedom to compete, the United States has far outdistanced the other nations of the world. Recently I asked the head of the political science department of Harding College to give me a list of the top wealth-producing nations of the world. Of course, America led the list. But the powerful fact was this: When I added up the value of production of the next 10 nations, I found that America produced more than all of them combined! What a dramatic measurement of the comparative advantage of our system!

Director Approved Merchants Administration, Inc. Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — We never know what is in the hearts of men. It is wise to discriminate when we know for sure that a person is adversely maneuvering to defeat the good purpose of justice, but until then we should accept the leaders of our nation to the office they are elected.

SENATORS: Senators in Washington are frequently visiting friends and they go about their activities in the Capitol as they should, and they have little time for personal visiting, as a rule; but they find time to hobnob with their intimates when the occasion arises. Often they can be seen in restaurants and in public places, and it is not unusual to see one of them talking to someone on the sidewalks. Truly we find Washington a democratic place to do business. Moreover, it is a place where the average man can get something done if he knows his way about. Lobbyists are a dime a dozen and if you know the right people a bill you favor might be pushed. It is wise, too, to know your senator and congressman. Political contacts never hurt anyone.

There is one thing you can bank on, a congressman is not going to present a bill that will hurt his chances of re-election, nor is he going to discuss seriously any fly by night proposition.

LEGAL: Knowing the basic principles of certain legal matters I can, from a layman's viewpoint, see many advantageous changes which could be made in the present merchandising methods where advertising is concerned. Briefly, I believe a bill should be passed that makes it illegal to falsely advertise a product. Any merchandise sold should be sold as it is represented and at the price quoted. No substitutions should be made without the consent of the purchaser or the money paid for it should be refunded.

PERSONAL: The writer's new position is unique in its way. As a business man, my previous organizational experiences carried me through corporations without legal entanglements and for this I am proud. Through various corporations organized for philanthropic purposes, I was able to obtain the interest of the Federal Security Agency, the Emergency Office of the President of the U. S., through Physical Education, Defense Health and Welfare Services, the F. B. I., and others which were concerned and preferentially supported my effort. As a result of this, I believe that my contacts will help a good cause in my work as director of the Approved Merchants Administration. I hope to eventually present this bill which opposes false advertising.

CORPORATE: Until the time comes, the Approved Merchants Administration will be pulling for fair trade through proper adver-

The Power of Memorial Day

by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale

I had the privilege of growing up in small Ohio communities in the early part of this century, and one of my most inspirational memories centers around Memorial Day and the old soldiers of the Civil War.

To me, Memorial Day was one of the most moving of all the national holidays. I was stirred by the speeches and martial music from the bandstand or cemetery on what we called "Decoration Day." There was something about the newness of life that the Spring had brought; soft sunshine falling on the fresh green grass of early summer, the misty hills in the distance, the sound of stirring national songs, and above all, the softly flapping flag in the gentle breeze as the speaker told us of our country, the deep devotion of its heroes, and recounted once more the stirring episodes of our heroic past.

And many a lazy summer afternoon, I sat on the coping around the old courthouse listening to the veterans of the Civil War tell of their experiences in the epic struggle between the States. A boy's imagination quickly sent him off behind long columns of blue or grey, and to him, such names as Antietam, The Wilderness, Shiloh, and Gettysburg became very real and meaningful.

Those old soldiers used to talk gratefully of Lincoln's insistence that those who had borne the heat of the battle and the burden of the struggle, the widow and the orphan, were to be given not charity, but their rightful due as the dependents of those brave men who had fought to preserve liberty and to keep the Union intact. It was regarded as a sacred duty of the nation, and the nation kept faith with its veterans.

In those days, as now, were many who had been disabled by the struggle. Their ability to compete in life had been reduced by wounds suffered in battle. Even as a boy I remember hearing how it seemed they were thought of only on such days as Memorial Day, when orators, fervent in their patriotism, remembered, if only for a day, the long continuing sacrifice made not by those who had died in battle, but by the disabled who were to live for many years following the great struggle.

The heroes of World War I and World War II and the Korean War are, of course, men who, with no concern for themselves, gave their lives that freedom might live. We can never do them adequate honor. And, we must never forget them. They died in their young life, forsaking the opportunities of the years that the rest of us might live and develop our highest hopes and dreams.

However, there are other living heroes who deprived themselves of either physical, emotional, or mental health for us and for their fellow countrymen. It would be as wrong for us to neglect or forget them as their buddies who today sleep on some Pacific Island or in a European cemetery. A hero dead or a hero maimed and disabled are both due our equal gratitude and our unceasing devotion.

We must never forget that the most effective way of honoring those who have died is to remember the living disabled, that their lives may be rich and full. They are a great asset to our country as the living embodiment of devotion to freedom. A country is recreated indeed which does not everlastingly keep alive grateful appreciation to those who suffered disability to perpetuate everything that we Americans hold dear.

There could be no better time than on Memorial Day to resolve that we shall gratefully support the honored men and women who have suffered disability from the wars of the United States.

BABSON

Writes . . .

By ROGER W. BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass., May 24—The practice now followed by the personnel departments of large corporations to secure the best graduates from high schools and colleges is absolutely wrong. They interview those graduates whose marks place them among the highest 10 per cent or 20 per cent of their class. This custom may disrupt the entire class and spoil some of the graduates. When a graduate, or any one else, gets the idea he is "indispensable," it is a dangerous situation.

The marks which one receives in high school or college are largely due to memory. These marks are no index of industry, loyalty, or even common sense. Educators preparing examinations try to devise questions which determine "judgment," but the students learn the questions and answers in advance. This even results in judgment tests being determined largely by memory. Memory is very important; but it does not take the place of judgment, loyalty, integrity, or the fundamentals which make and break corporations.

$64,000 Questions
Educators are greatly disturbed over the fabulous question tests which the radio and television chains are operating. To have a horse jockey become the leader for data on art; or to have a cobbler secure such a reputation for his knowledge of opera; or to hear of others of these "miracles," is very disturbing.

Yet, they get far better results from these jockeys and cobblers than from many professors or experts on the subject. I forecast that these results will completely revolutionize educational methods, standards, and tests. Either the nation is missing the intellectual capacity of thousands of unknown and humble people, or else the professors and experts are standing on very thin ice.

What About the Quiz Kids?
Educational leaders are giving the "Quiz Kids" much thought and worry. The 10-year-old boy who answered questions on the stock market naturally interested me greatly, since I have given my entire life to stock market problems. The answers given by this kid could not be matched by any member of the New York Stock Exchange. But how much will it amount to? My organization will spend considerable time and money watching this 10-year-old boy.

All I can say now is that I once employed the man who had been the youngest to graduate from Harvard College, up to that time. He could perform wonderful feats in mathematics. I felt he would be a great aid for Babson's Reports. We, however, could not keep him at work on the things for which he was best fitted. He had a hobby for collecting street car transfers. I have in my library a book which he wrote on the subject. Finally, he refused to do anything but run a lawn mower. Yet he received very high marks in college.

Newsboys Are Worthy Of Attention

If I were an employment manager, I would make a study of newsboys. A successful newsboy must have a fair memory. He must have courage, initiative, honesty, and industry. I have a friend, Harry B. Taplin of Wellesley, Mass., who is making a study of newsboys. Certain qualities must be possessed by all boys (and girls) who deliver newspapers to homes. I especially, however, have in mind those boys who hold the busy locations on downtown street corners of our big cities. I have never made a study of these boys, but my hunch is that they often become very successful in business, if given an opportunity. I wish every newspaper in which this column is published would make a study of its newsboys.

It is useless to discuss the great problem of education in a column such as this. I, however, wish to leave with readers two thoughts: (1) That there is something fundamentally wrong with our present educational system of marking and promoting. These radio and tele-of his or her class, don't be discouraged. The chances of such graduates may be just as good as if graduating at the head of their high school or college classes.

insurance companies. The Joint Committee on Atomic Energy is actively seeking an insurance formula which will provide adequate protection.

Another type of catastrophe insurance is also being considered by the Congress. It is flood insurance. Private companies feel they cannot handle the particularly difficult risks of flood insurance alone.

The Senate has passed a bill—frankly called "experimental"—authorizing a $5 billion Federal insurance and reinsurance program. It limits liability to $250,000 for any one business loss and to $10,000 for a residence. Buyers of policies would pay 60 per cent of the premium; the Federal government would underwrite the rest (after June 30, 1959, the states would be responsible). The program is limited to participating states. I cannot predict the action the House will take, but no insurance program is a substitute for flood prevention and control.

A careful study of the various measures designed to bring retired government workers' annuities in line with current living costs leads me to the conclusion that Senator Carlson's bill comes closer to reality than any of the others. Consequently, I have introduced a companion bill in the House.

The House has passed a bill, almost identical with one I introduced, providing for an increase in annuity payments to District of Columbia teachers. During the debate I had the opportunity of recommending to the House—as a matter of fairness—that in the future, bills providing for increases for civil service employees and District of Columbia teachers should be considered at the same time.

I have recently introduced bills providing for (1) a revision of the Fish and Game laws of the District of Columbia to bring them in line with those of Maryland, and (2) to provide for established fees for commitments of patients to St. Elizabeth's Hospital.

SENATE CLOAKROOM

By J. GLENN BEALL

Thumbing through the notes and memoranda on my desk, I find a regular smorgasbord of information pertaining to matters of vital interest to all parts of the State.

I hope you enjoy the variety. On top of the pile of reminders is an announcement that the date of the Baltimore convention for small business men has been changed.

The new date, which was set so that the best possible speakers could participate in the meeting, is June 21. A site has not yet been selected, but the 1000 persons expected to attend will probably meet in the auditorium of a Baltimore high school—perhaps City or Eastern.

According to officials of the Small Business Administration, which is sponsoring the conference for residents of the Maryland area, persons who attend the one-day meeting will learn the needs and procurement procedures of various government agencies. The conference will be open to all interested parties.

Another item which merits the attention of Free State citizens, especially those in the poultry-growing areas of the Eastern Shore, is Senator Ellender's report to me that hearings might be held soon on a bill to provide for the compulsory inspection of poultry and poultry products by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture.

I have been attempting to get prompt action on the measure, and Senator Ellender has informed me that my views have been forwarded to the subcommittee which is considering the legislation.

Laboratory Sought for Beltsville
Also in my stack of notes is a report that several Congressmen are trying to have the proposed $19 million animal-disease research center of the Dept. of Agriculture constructed in the mid-West instead of Beltsville.

Since scientists, consultants, and testing equipment are already readily available to the Beltsville location, it would seem logical to erect the new facilities there.

After all, many research experts are stationed permanently in this region, and it would be a lot more efficient to ship the animals to the scientists than to have the laboratory men make time-consuming trips to the animals.

I can assure you that I will do everything possible to see that the new center is built where it should be—Beltsville.

Early Wednesday morning 33 seniors left on the annual class trip to Washington. The tour was conducted by Mr. George Rosensteel, who took the students to the FBI Bldg., Washington's Monument, Smithsonian Institute, Pentagon Bldg., White House and other public buildings. On Tuesday the freshmen and sophomores contested to determine the champion student of the required Latin words. The match resulted in a tie, 2-2, but on a percentage basis the sophomores won as they recited more words and had a lower percentage of losses. The sophs claim Michael Topper and Patricia Burke, while the frosh gave a big hand to Marian Hess and Jill Gough. Who will win in the final tryouts? Watch for next week's account!!!

Make the most of your pasture, but also make sure that your cows are obtaining all the nutrients needed to maintain High Production and High Body Condition to promote Capacity Milk Flow the entire lactation period.
