claimed by the President," the Senate and the House of Representatives must adjourn each year by the last day of July, according to the Legislative Reorganization Act.

Most of my colleagues on Capitol Hill agree that the present session will probably end prior to that deadline, but recently I made a routine inquiry to see what procedure would be followed if important business did retain the present Congress until August.

The answer was: "None." National Emergency
The reason, I was reminded, is that our country is still officially in a state of "national emergency" proclaimed in 1950 by Mr. Truman, who was President at the time.

Even under ordinary circumstances, the time limit which was imposed on Congressional sessions by the Legislative Reorganization measure of 1946 could be extended by the mere passage of a resolution by both Houses.

Speaking of adjournment, it is also interesting to note that in case of disagreement between the two Houses as to a time, the Constitution authorizes the President to "adjourn them to such time he shall think proper".

No President has ever exercised this power, and there is some question as to whether it might not apply solely to special sessions which he himself called. Precautionary Measure

The condition of "national emergency" which I mentioned in connection with this discussion on adjournment should not be confused in any way with a state of war.

Under an emergency proclamation such as the one which has been in effect since the Korean conflict, a great many provisions of law are automatically kept in force to permit the Government to take necessary action promptly.

The condition has been maintained as a precautionary, stand-by measure.

One last word, now, about adjournment.

Many Marylanders have told me that they would like to see a debate or discussion on the Senate floor.

Since the 84th Congress is now in the process of winding up its business, anyone who wishes to visit the Senate while it is in session should do so within the next week or two.

Passes permitting visitors to enter the Senate gallery are available in my office — Room 443,

Named Local Heating Specialist

John H. Reddig, formerly manager of the Potomac Edison Co. offices at Front Royal, Va., has been appointed to the newly created post of residential heating specialist for the local electric company. He will transfer to the company's general offices in Hagerstown.

In his new position, Mr. Reddig will be responsible for the development and application of the Potomac Edison System's program concerning the use of electricity for house heating, both in the various forms of resistance heating and the heat pump. He will receive special training for his new duties and will attend electric heating schools sponsored by leading manufacturers of electric heating equipment.

Mr. Reddig has been associated with the local electric light and power company since 1949 and is well qualified to serve in an advisory capacity for local building and wiring contractors.

His first position with the company was that of commercial representative in the Waynesboro, Pa., area. He had held the manager's post in Front Royal since 1954.

Mr. Reddig attended the University of Pittsburgh and is a veteran of four years' service with the U. S. Army.

By Dr. George S. Howard
EDITOR - JEFFERSON
COURTESY BUREAU

Lesson From England
Some of the clearest, most effective writings on the danger of expanding government power has come out of England in the last 10 years, as political control over this once great nation has seceded from the Conservative Party to the Labor-Socialist Party and back again to a Conservative Party which will might now be labeled, "Conservative Socialist Party" since it is passively operating a nation that is pretty well socialized.

Some of the most powerful indictments of Socialism have come from writers such as Alfred Edwards and Ivor Thomas, both Labor-Socialist members of Parliament at the time the Socialists took over. As Labor-Socialist leaders they saw what State (or Government) control over the economic freedom and initiative of the people, and they loudly called for a "halt!" But their Party ran roughshod over them and continued to make the State the lord over all economic life in Britain.

Called It "Tragedy"

Ivor Thomas wrote a book which was powerful in its story of awakening. It was entitled "The Socialist Tragedy" (published in America by the MacMillan Company). But alas, although the so-called Conservative Party is back in control in England, the Socialist "tragedy" continues to run its course. Anthony LeJeune, member of a little band of Englishmen calling themselves "The Society for Individual Freedom," has written an article in the Society's quarterly magazine "Freedom First," published in London. The article is entitled: "The Suffocation of Freedom."

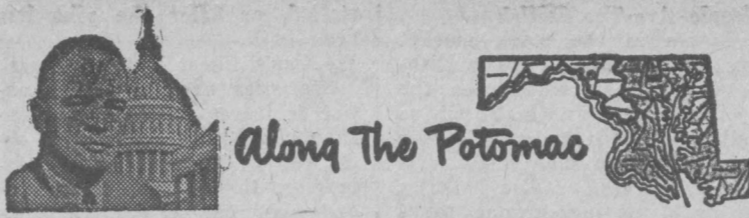

"Individual freedom can be killed as effectively by economic suffocation as it can by the interdicts of a police state," LeJeune observes. "The combined effects of inflation, confiscatory taxes and ubiquitous 'social services' have gone a long way towards making us all (the people of England) pensioners of the State."

A Simple Equation
"As governmental activity increases, the State demands more money; as it gets more money, it becomes more powerful compared to the individual. Every time I am compelled to give the State an extra shilling, the State increases its economic power over me by two shillings—the shilling it gets and the shilling I lose. The process has been gradual and cumulative. Fifty years ago, nobody would have believed that free people would stand such a burden of taxation; but then nobody would have believed that free people would stand so much interference by the State . . .

"When the government does for me what I might or might not be doing for myself, when the government takes and spends my money, when the government makes my decisions for me, I am deprived of freedom . . . Worse still, many politicians want to take my money, not because the State needs it, which might be defensible; not because they want to spend it themselves, which would be understandable; but simply because they think it is a bad thing for individuals to keep their own money."

"Dull" Reform
"The policies of State interference and high taxation are inextricably connected . . . Just as the transfer of economic power from the individual to the State inevitably reduced the freedom of the individual (in England), so his freedom would automatically be increased if the process were reversed. Individualists could do far worse than press for the one dull basic reform which would simultaneously increase the freedom of the individual and restrict the activity of the State: that is, the really drastic reduction of taxes."

This Englishman describes cutting taxes as "a dull basic

Along The Potomac

Congressman De Witt S. Hyde - 6th District, Maryland

Washington, July 11. — The Little Youghiogheny Watershed Project, which is so important to Garrett County, has been approved by the Department of Agriculture. The project plan is in its final stages. With Committee approval of legislation cutting the waiting time from 45 days to 15, there is no reason why the reform." It is "dull" in that it has none of the romantic splendor which many politicians can generate when sponsoring big spending projects. It is a "basic reform" because reducing taxes would halt the growth of government in an era when the trend everywhere is toward expansion of government. Holding down the growth of government is the only way any people can preserve their individual freedom. This is a lesson which I hope all Americans will learn before it is too late.

Project cannot be finally approved before Congress adjourns.

Congress has approved an increase in the overall ceiling for small flood control projects which the Army Corps of Engineers is authorized to initiate and complete without specific Congressional approval. The amendment raises the ceiling from its present $3,000,000 to $10,000,000. Total cost permitted for individual projects has also been raised from $150,000 to $400,000.

The flood control project on Bear Creek at Friendsville is to be constructed as a part of the small flood control projects by the Army Engineers. Rapid progress is being made on approval by the Corps of Engineers for this flood prevention work. The total cost is estimated to be $50,000, well under the limits of the amended Flood Control Act. A plea of insufficient funds by the Engineers is no longer an obstacle to this worthwhile project. Various bills to revamp the federal retirement program are now before Congressional committees. Each has its own merits and my hope is that an acceptable bill will be worked out and reported to the floor for consideration by the members of the House and Senate. But I would like to call attention again to the fact that bills now being considered do no include increases in annuities for the federal worker who has already retired. I believe the Congress will fail its duty if it does not bring the incomes of these retired individuals more in line with the current cost of living.

Babson Discusses Successful Investing Babson Park, Mass., July 12. Many people are disturbed over the way the stock market has acted during the past few weeks. From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

"Keep The Change"

If you've seen "Mac" Johnson this week, chances are he's told you his waitress story. For those who haven't heard: "Mac" recently stopped at an out-of-town diner. He ordered the chef's special—and his waitress (brand new on the job) made every possible mistake. She confused the order, spilled the soup, dropped the rolls, brought him a wrong dessert. Despite it all, "Mac" left a substantial tip. But she smiled and handed the money back. "Keep it, Mister—you've sure earned it more than I have," she said. From where I sit, that girl deserves credit for admitting her shortcomings—something not everyone is big enough to do. For instance, I'm convinced lots of folks know they're wrong when they deny me the right to a glass of beer with my supper . . . just because they happen to prefer some other beverage. They wouldn't like me ordering them to accept my choice.

BONNIE ROLLS

People Are Too Selfish

Losses in the stock market are due primarily to selfishness. This applies to even the "conservative investor," so called. He tries to get a higher rate of return than his investment deserves, or else he tries to avoid paying income taxes by buying second-grade revenue bonds issued by "authorities" of turnpikes or of small communities, mostly in the South. Unless the investor supplies something along with his money, he is headed for trouble.

This is not a criticism of small towns and cities. I much prefer "full obligation" bonds of such small communities to the bonds of big cities. These latter usually both suffer from poor government and also would be vulnerable in case of World War III. "Bigness" is no more a good measure of a community's credit than of a man's character. There also are good revenue bonds; but I like to buy them after the electric, gas or water plant has been installed, or after the pike has been built.

We Can't Cheat Natural Laws

Statistics show that the nation is increasing its wealth only about 3 1/2% a year. In order for an investor to get safely more than 4% he must render some real service. In addition, let me add that the small cities are growing more healthily than the big cities. I have noticed that most of the sensible graduates from college this June have insisted upon taking jobs in smaller cities. Such places are having the soundest growth, are the best in which to bring up a family, and should be the safest in case of World War III.

The Bible tells us that the fruits we get out of life equal only what we put into it. Surely, in the long run, we reap only what we sow. Action and Reaction applies not only to mechanics, chemistry, and all the physical sciences, but to character building as well. All natural laws apply to successful investing as well as to successful living. Money can temporarily be secured through begging, stealing, or speculating; but usually such money is lost, or the so-called owner dies of a heart attack. Very seldom does such money do the children and grandchildren much good. Too Much Education?

I believe in Education; we probably cannot get too much of the right kind. This especially applies to Atomic Engineering and Business Administration. Education as it is passed out today by High Schools and Colleges will never help to build up an estate and keep it. The honest and successful way to create a fortune is by rendering service. To do so requires that you and I store up cash during these boom times so as to help the nation when it again "goes through the wringer." But should we expect a college professor who has not done successful investing for himself to teach it to others?

Those of us who will then have the cash to buy, build, and invest, during the next period of depression, will render great service. For this service we will be richly rewarded. The savings which we are holding today to invest then should be multiplied two or three times in a short period. If educators would give more attention to character building and economic laws, and arouse in sufficient students a desire for service, I forecast that unemployment could be eliminated and we would have a much happier world.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Carroll Elder and family, Pittsburgh, Pa., who have been visiting here with Mrs. Genevieve R. Elder, have returned to their home.

Personal Health

A warning that death or mental crippling frequently results from lead poisoning among children has been sounded by Dr. J. Edmund Bradley, head of the Dept. of Pediatrics at the University of Maryland School of Medicine.

Writing in the July 8 issue of PARADE, the Sunday magazine, Dr. Bradley points out that lead poisoning is far more widespread among children than is generally realized. In Baltimore, for example, when Dr. Bradley and his research team conducted lead determination tests recently on children brought for a variety of reasons to the clinic at the University Hospital, over 44 per cent showed evidence of excessive lead in their tissues.

Although an effective de-leading treatment has been developed by Dr. Samuel P. Bessman, of the medical school staff, under grant from the Playtex Park Research Institute of Dover, Del., parents are reminded that lead can do considerable permanent damage to the brain and nervous system of a child by the time it is removed. The Playtex-sponsored research resulted in a technique for administering calcium disodium EDTA (ethylene diamine tetra-acetic acid), a chemical once used for the removal of scale in boilers.

Children who develop lead poisoning generally acquire the disease by sucking or swallowing materials containing lead. While some chew on lead toys, the principal source of trouble is lead paint. In the older homes occupied by millions of American families, lead paint frequently lines the walls, even though newer, non-poisonous paints have often been applied on top. When the paint peels, the child who chews on the peellings or plaster fragments begins a process which may result in a severe—and even fatal—case of lead poisoning.

Dr. Bradley also points out that "do-it-yourself" home mechanics sometimes forget that lead paint, which can be very useful on the outside of a garage, may be dangerous if applied to cribs, toys, playpens or other surfaces within ready reach of children. Lead, when swallowed, accumulates in the bones. Then, when the body suffers an infection—even something as minor as a cold—the lead flows into the blood stream finds its way to the nervous system. The result may be mental and emotional crippling for life. In many cases, the disease progresses to encephalitis (brain inflammation) and death.

Statistics on the incidence of lead poisoning, says Dr. Bradley, are not too reliable. According to the latest figures available to the U. S. Dept. of Health, Education and Welfare, the country suffered 231 deaths from accidental poisoning by lead and lead compounds from 1931 through 1954. Since, however, lead poisoning is not an officially reportable disease, most communities maintain no records on it. Dr. Bradley sees significance in the fact that of the 231 deaths that were reported, 176 were of children under five.

In the City of Baltimore, where the campaign against lead poisoning is carried on more diligently than almost anywhere else in the country, the Dept. of Health reported 461 cases of lead poisoning among children from 1931 through 1954. Of these, 104 died.

Diagnosis of lead poisoning, Dr. Bradley says, is not difficult if the physician has been alerted to look for it. For this reason, a mother can make a very significant contribution to her child's health by reporting promptly to the family physician whenever she detects any evidence that her child has been teething on the window sill, chewing lead toys, or nibbling on paint peellings and plaster fragments.

Mohler Rises With State Roads Commission

Mr. Mohler, top State Roads Commission engineer in the District comprising Frederick, Carroll, and Howard counties, started out in the late 1920's as a road inspector. When he took the job during a summer vacation from engineering school, he hardly realized that he was beginning a lengthy career with that organization. In 1929 after college he returned to the State Roads group and since then has risen steadily in the Commission. After ten years of construction work he was made chief of a survey party; and six years after that he became the resident maintenance engineer of Frederick County. In 1950 he was assigned assistant district engineer in Cumberland and then four years ago he was appointed District Engineer for District Seven with headquarters in Frederick. Born in 1907, Mr. Mohler is a native of Frederick. He graduated from the Frederick High School and besides taking special courses at the University of Maryland, he attended for three years the Johns Hopkins School of Engineering. He is married and has three children. Mr. Mohler's many engineering abilities and his friendly personality have done much to further his career.

Thomas G. Mohler

Wheat Support Prices Announced

Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson this week announced that the national average wheat price support for 1957 production, if quotas are approved in the July 20 referendum, will be $2 per bushel.

If quotas are not approved, the available support level under legislative provisions will be at 50 per cent of parity, or about $1.21 cents a bushel on the basis of current parity estimates.

These national average support levels will be available in Maryland and other commercial wheat states for those who comply with their individual farm acreage allotments, said Chester S. Bradley, chairman of the Maryland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee.

National average wheat price support rates for 1956 production, as announced by the department on April 23, are at $2 per bushel—the same level which is being continued for 1957.

Under the formula of the controlling legislation, and on the basis of the department's supply estimates, the indicated minimum national average wheat price support for 1957 would be at 77 per cent of parity. On the basis of the June 15 parity estimate of $2.42 per bushel, the support level would be about $1.86 a bushel. However, the Secretary is continuing the support for 1957 at $2 per bushel under his discretionary authority.

In making the announcement, Secretary Benson said, "It has been possible to increase wheat exports, through aggressive use of the special authorizations Congress made available. The Soil Bank, through both its Acreage Reserve and Conservation Reserve Programs, opens the way for very substantial production adjustments in the years immediately ahead. We have turned the corner and expect to start making steady reductions in the huge wheat surplus."

A generation ago the pike didn't have much of a reputation. Nowadays he's regarded as one of the country's top-ranking game fish. What makes this so interesting is that even a hard-fished lake, supposed to have only smaller pike, is pretty sure to contain some great brutes. This time of the summer, big ones are lying on the bottom in deep water, feeding little. Your chances of hooking one will be better after a few hard frosts in the fall.

If you've never tackled pike before, here are some tips from Jason Lucas, angling editor of Sports Afield magazine.

TACKLE: Fresh water spinning tackle is pretty much out of place in fishing for big pike; it's best to use spinning tackle of the sea type, meant to hurdle bigger lures and bigger fish. Even the most expert anglers are forced to use quite heavy tackle or lose the big fish; however, those who've had lots of experience with pike prefer casting tackle. With this, use a line of not less than 20 pounds test; those who troll only often use line much heavier, up to 50 pounds test.

You need no larger than an ordinary bass-size casting reel; nor is a drag handle needed. Mr. Lucas disagrees with the oft-given advice that one needs a very stiff rod to set the hook in a pike's hard mouth. Inspection will show his mouth to be softer than that of a bass, and he usually takes a lure much deeper, making him easy to hook. Use a rod with no more than "medium" bass action. Be sure to use a wire leader—six to eight inches is long enough. LURES: Pike are inclined to favor a shiny spoon, sometimes with pork rind. On some days you'll get more strikes with an underwater plug. But there's a third type that has been producing unusually well for Lucas: A surface lure retrieved very slowly—about one turn of the reel handle in two seconds. This certainly refutes the old "rule" that pike prefer a fast-moving lure!

There's a favorite trick of pike that causes many broken rods: Very often one of them will put up practically no fight when you first show him; you lead him right to the boat—until he gets a good look at you. Then there's a sudden, terrific splash and he's off jet-propelled. To save rod and fish, hold the rod well out from your body. When his swift rush turns wrist, pull the tip down to the water—fast—release the reel handle, and lighten thumb pressure on the spool until it's just enough to prevent an overrun.

"Industry, in answer to the challenge, has increased its giving to higher education in the past five years from $40 million to about $100 million. But higher education today is receiving a smaller percentage of our national income than it did 25 or even 50 years ago. Unless heroic measures are taken, we may have within 10 years a deficit of more than 100,000 properly trained college teachers."
—Philadelphia (Pa.) Bulletin

On the Alert, 1956

Nationwide Test To Be July 20-26

For seven days in July, Operation Alert 1956 will confront civil defense planning with the type of problems that would arise out of a mass nuclear attack on the U. S.

THE THIRD ANNUAL training exercise, scheduled for July 20-26, will enact on a nationwide stage some of the civil defense measures which would be taken if this nation were suddenly attacked by bombers and submarines capable of wiping out millions of persons and dozens of cities in a day.

Plans call for 76 cities, air bases and Atomic Energy Commission installations to be hit by 125 mythical nuclear bombs. These would include 39 hydrogen bombs rated as high as 5 million tons of TNT equivalent each. More than 30 Federal agencies will cooperate by evacuating key employees and operating from emergency sites. Coordinated by the Federal Civil Defense Administration, State and local CD organizations will carry out training exercises as if the attack were real.

JUNIOR SPACEMAN and Davy Crockett were among the two-thirds of the population of Bangor, Maine, which took part in a test evacuation during Operation Alert 1955. The test was typical of the ways local communities are expected by the Federal Civil Defense Administration to tie in their local civil defense training with Operation Alert 1956.
