Decorating our town for Christmas is a splendid and commendable attitude we all agree, but lately there seems a bit of contention as to how it should be done. For the past decade almost, the same pattern or scheme has been used and a change, by many, seems to be desired. I can understand their attitude easily enough but I just don't have the answer to the problem. Christmas decorations, especially on a large scale, are laborious and costly and a lot of assistance is needed. A good many of us are quick to gripe about some pet dislike of ours but when our assistance is implored we disassociate ourselves with the project. If improved or varied decorating is desired then someone will have to come to the assistance of the town which cannot afford to spend the time and money required for any increased amount of decorating. As it stands the cost of erecting what decorative equipment we now possess runs nearly $500. With the advent of the new sewer line every tax dollar counts these days. Don't misunderstand me, I am not opposed to having more elaborate lighting scheme for the town's streets, but I feel the town itself, has been doing its share. In years past a number of local organizations used to take certain sections or landmarks and make it their annual duty to decorate these spots. I wonder why this custom couldn't be revived? Church fronts, the square, the Doughboys, etc. could be utilized to dress up our town considerably by these organizations. It's just an idea provoked by the number of suggestions I have heard for a change.

Wednesday's six-inch snowfall came as a surprise to most of us after having one of the driest years in quite some time. The snow began early Tuesday evening and continued until late Wednesday. Garages and filling stations did a rushing business selling snow tires, putting on chains and towing stuck cars. Many local motorists found it necessary, so slippery was the snow, to install chains over their winter tires. The schools were limited to a half-day session Wednesday and all day yesterday, much to their satisfaction, I imagine.

I can't help but wonder what the effect of increased defense spending will do to our public works program. Many towns and municipalities have been utilizing federal funds for town improvements to sewer lines and facilities. State aid also has been forthcoming. With the defense appropriations in mind I can't help wondering if some of these projects will be disbanded if and when this federal and state aid ceases? All haste should be used by those considering any of these improvements in the near future, lest they will fall by the wayside.

To those sports-minded individuals who enjoy basketball, our Mt. St. Mary's state championship team opened its current season last night. The Mounties are defending their title which they have won for four consecutive years. A lot of good basketball is in store for local fans this winter at the local gym and I do hope local fans support the team which has brought so much publicity to Emmitsburg. It's seldom a little town like ours has such sports luminaries arise and when we do have such an asset right in our back yard, let's back them up with steady attendance. See you there tonight?

Carol Singing Here December 18

The Emmitsburg Community Christmas Carol Sing will be held Wednesday, Dec. 18, at 8 p. m. on the lawn of the Presbyterian Church. The entire community is invited to attend and participate in the singing.

Plans are being made to broadcast appropriate instrumental and vocal numbers from the bell tower. Why don't you come? Enjoy the singing and delicious refreshments. Bring your friends.

Federal Funds Available For Sewer Project

Federal money has been set aside for the construction of Emmitsburg's new sewerage system, it was announced at the regular meeting of the Burgess and Commissioners held Monday night in the town office. Chairman of the Board Charles R. Fuss presiding with a full board in attendance.

The Town Fathers approved a $1000 donation to the Vigilant Hose Co., payable immediately. This donation was pledged during the recent financial drive.

The solons met with a representative group of State Roads Commission officials and discussed the paving and curbing of N. Seton Ave. A lengthy discussion transpired but no decision was reached concerning the improvement to the town's streets which are state-owned.

Reports of the clerk and secretary were given by Town Clerk Louise Sebald and these reports were approved as presented. Charles D. Gillelan, tax collector, reported collections to date and announced that most of the sewer taxes owed by S. Seton Ave. Extended property owners, who were recently annexed and who are tapped into the sewer line, have been collected.

Police Chief Robert L. Koontz gave his monthly report to the Board and parking meter revenue was reported for November as $290.

The Board has been informed that Federal money for the new sewer system has been approved and has been set aside for the town's use just as soon as the necessary prerequisites are met. Rights-of-way are being obtained at this time and it is hoped that some actual construction can be started in the spring. Council announced that workmen were currently engaged in erecting the town's Christmas lights and that they will be turned on as soon as the erection has been completed.

The Emmitsburg Farm Bureau Planning Group met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Meadows Tuesday evening with all seven families present.

The meeting opened with a reading "Learn to Pray," by Mrs. Edgar Emrich, followed by a reading by John Baumgardner, "God To Be Thankful For." Everyone answered the roll call by telling "what they were most thankful for during the year." The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, followed by the treasurer's report.

The membership elected officers for the coming year with the following results: George Martin, chairman; Glenn Springer, secretary; Raymond Baumgardner, treasurer; Raymond Keilholtz, discussion leader.

A dinner and movie meeting was planned for Dec. 5.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Keilholtz in the form of a Christmas party.

Local Man Fined After Car Crash

Robert Eugene Glass, 18, Route 2, was fined a total of $10 and costs at a hearing before Justice of the Peace John H. Baschore Tuesday afternoon in Gettysburg following an automobile accident at 3:30 o'clock at the intersection of Springs Ave. and Hay St., Gettysburg.

Gettysburg police brought the charges against Glass and said he was traveling on Hay St. and failed to stop his car at the intersection and struck an east-bound auto on Springs Ave. driven by Emma M. Coxson, 31, Gettysburg. Damage was estimated by police at $75 to each car.

Education is the greatest promoter of business to be found anywhere.

FIRE CHIEF WARNS OF DIALING WRONG NUMBER

With the advent of winter weather the Vigilant Hose Co. wishes to remind the public that the danger of fire increases and in view of this fact that several calls for assistance have been made to the Fire Hall, the firemen wish to inform the public that no one is at the hall most of the time.

Fire Chief John S. Hollinger announces that day calls, between 8 a. m. and 10 p. m., should be dialed to HL 7-5151. Night calls, Sundays and holidays, phone HL 7-4141. These numbers are listed in the phone directory under FIRE ALARM.

Chief Hollinger reminds that the phone in the Fire Hall is a pay phone and NOT for emergency and should not be used to report a fire. He requests that the public strike out this number in their phone directories listed under Emmitsburg Fire Co. and insert the above numbers. Only the first numbers listed in this announcement should be used. He suggests citizens keep these numbers handy by their phones.

The by-pass is an important segment of the improvement of all of Maryland's section of U. S. 15. The eventual plans call for the by-passing of Emmitsburg and Lewistown as well as the by-pass around Frederick now under construction.

The by-pass of Thurmont runs 4.4 miles from Little Hunting Creek north to Owens Creek, about five miles south of Emmitsburg. In addition there are connections with Maryland Routes 77, 81 and old U. S. 15 in Thurmont. The contract was performed by Richard F. Kline of Frederick at its low bid of $1,094,331.

HISTORY OF OLD FOUNDRY INTERESTING ONE

This year marks the 30th anniversary of the closing out of one of Emmitsburg's principal industries. Unknown to the youth of today this business was at one time one of the most prosperous and employed about 10 local men. The business in reference is the old Frailey Foundry which closed its doors back in 1927.

The foundry was located on the site which is now the home of Mayor Clarence G. Frailey. Original founders of the industry were Messrs. Jones and Hardman who instituted operations back at the turn of the 18th century.

At first the building was located where the Clay Z. Green, Pastry Shop, is now situated. In later years the entire plant and building, intact, was moved to the Frailey site on W. Main Street. Jones, a member of the original two founders gave in to his urge to find his future security in the new West and sold his share to the late Fred Troxell who died in 1852. Hardman continued the operations later relinquishing his interests to the Hays Brothers, who traded as Joseph and J. T. Hays. A number of years later ownership of the concern was taken over by the Frailey brothers (1881) and David Ohler was head blacksmith, assisted by the four Frailey boys, Thomas, William, George and Oscar. The business remained in the hands of the Fraileys until its extinction in 1927, a period of 46 years.

Machinery and household articles were manufactured by the concern which made its own steel, hauling a special type of sand, by horse and wagon from near Frederick. The main equipment for operating the plant was a cupola, a number of blowers to heat the molten steel, portable engine, a carpenter shop and other essential paraphernalia. During the Civil War wounded soldiers were treated at the foundry after being injured at Gettysburg.

Items manufactured by the foundry included plow points and shears (both iron and wood), heavy stone crusher jaws, freight train brake shoes, window sash weights, iron stoves, iron fencing (some still standing in Emmitsburg), watering troughs, paper weights, alligator bootjacks and stoves for all public schools in the county.

Just as the horse gave way to the automobile so did the foundry to progress. Year after year new inventions made available to the public cut deeply into the production and usefulness of the foundry. Electricity eliminated horse powers, cars made useless wagons and buggies and horse-shoes; oil outmoded the coal stove; tractors sounded the death knell to horses. Other changes in the mode of living put the finishing touches on the local enterprise and in 1927 the old foundry succumbed to modern advancement, after an interesting history of 127 years.

Citizen Urges Town Curfew

Editor, Emmitsburg Chronicle:

Dear Sir—

It seems to me that the citizens of Emmitsburg have overlooked their main endeavor. They have tried numerous times to look after the well-being of its youth by promoting financial drives for a recreation center, swimming pool, etc., and have yet to reach their goal. Granted that such propositions take time and effort, and I commend those who are backing these drives. But what happens to the youth while they are waiting?

Just this past Friday I was returning home from an out-of-town visit and I figure the time to be very close to 1 a. m. What did I see at that time of a very cold morning . . . four young girls in their early teens sitting alone, with no apparent reason, on the steps near the Fire Hall. What were they doing there at that hour or, for that matter, what would anybody be doing there at that time in the morning? Prior to this, might I add, about 11 p. m. I observed two of these girls sitting on the steps of the VFW while a pair of boys wrestled further up the street. This is the question I put before Emmitsburg. Are you going to bide your time waiting for a previously proposed solution that may never be realized and allow the youth to continue to roam the streets until all hours and getting into mischief? Could we not do something to counteract the present condition while we wait or shall we just glance in the other direction and overlook these conditions.

In my mind immediate action should ensue—perhaps a curfew placed on youth up to a certain age, but let us not stand around idle. I beseech the interested citizens of this community to take ACTION!

The Life and Music of Henry Dielman

By REV. DAVID W. SHAUM

Harmonic Idiom

The nineteenth-century romantic composer experimented with new harmonic and chord progressions in an attempt to expand the expressive powers of music. "Especially they investigated the capacity of dissonant harmony to generate emotional tension." Generally there is a greater use of chromaticism than in the preceding Classical period. New chords and chord progressions appear. The seventh, ninth and altered chords came into prominence. The idea of a tonal center becomes more obscure. Modulation is used for its own sake—the pleasing or unique sounds that it will produce—rather than to bridge the passage from one key to another. Non-harmonic tones are more freely used.

These piquant chord progressions teased the ear, imparting to the musical fabric a bewitching variety of colors. They revealed a new harmonic language that stands as one of the foremost achievements of the romantic era.

Throughout most of his works, Dr. Dielman used the ordinary major and minor chords with a minimum of chromaticism to add variety. Rather than attempt the usage of dissonants and altered chords, he seems to have preferred seeking color and variation by means of rhythms, such as that of dotted eighths followed by sixteenths. This pattern is used consistently and runs like a thread through nearly all his compositions.

In his "Mass for Three Voices" Dielman constantly modulates from tonic to dominant and back again and invariably closes with the authentic cadence. The "Veni Creator Spiritus" (of the same work) uses the cadence of leading tone to tonic.

The usage of non-harmonic tones is clearly seen in the Kyrie of the three-voiced Mass where double neighboring tones and anticipation are found. There is a sparing use of pedal point. The composer did not overly use these devices.

Chromaticism is found in the Benedictus of the Mass where in a descending passage Dielman begins on a E flat and descends, chromatic-wise, to G. A few bars later he requires two of the three singing voices to descend more than half the scale in chromatic harmony. Generally, Dielman's music contains no harmonies that were used for dissonance or strange effects. He made demands upon the voice of the singer by skips and leaps in intervals, but not upon the ear of the listener. The majority of the compositions are in the major keys. A few sentimental songs, like "The Music of Yesterday" and "President Harrison's Funeral Dirge," are in the minor key.

Melodic Line

Romantic melodies are characterized by a warmth of personal feeling and a freer treatment of phrasing than is found in the Classical period.

In the domain of tone color romanticism made what is perhaps its most signal contribution. . . The romantics regarded color as a value in itself. They strove for sensuous beauty, for tonal enchantment. Now the horn, the romantic instrument par excellence, came into its own; as did those expressive combinations of woodwinds and strings that were so dear to the romantic imagination. . .

The romantic interest in tone color went hand in hand with a steady growth in the size and importance of the orchestra. The center of musical life in the nineteenth-century was no longer church or palace, but concert hall. The new patrons of music, the middle class public, were ready to support large bodies of musicians for whom playing was a full-time occupation. Interest came to center in the orchestra and, among musicians, in the art and science of orchestration. The huge colorful ensemble offered composers an ideal medium for the large public forms of music, for the brilliant colorism and grandiose rhetoric that came to characterize the late romantic style.

It is easy to recall, hum or whistle a melody from Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony," a theme from Robert Schumann's "Piano Concerto in A Minor," or the wistful "Traumerl." These melodies are rich in sonority and heavily melodic and readily lend themselves to being remembered. Despite the many songs which Henry Dielman wrote for choral groups, it is strikingly apparent that his melodies were not the velvety sonorous sounds of the usual romantic composer and were not retained after hearing. The many poems, verses and bits of doggerel that he set to music do not sing in such a way to be long remembered. The only exception to this aspect of music seems to be "The Christmas Hymn." Perhaps this is the reason why it has remained so perennially popular and is now the only Dielman music in print. This melody is joyfully expressive of the religious faith and warmth inherent in the words of the text. Although it leaps and bounds by fifths, by octaves, and demands much vocally, it is as simple as "Silent Night," as majestic as "Adeste Fideles," and as stirring as "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing."

The melodic line through all of Henry Dielman's writings is generally diatonic. In religious and secular works there is only an occasional use of chromaticism. The simple employment of the diatonic constantly points to a conservative romantic rather than an experimental one. At times he attempts "tone color" or "tone painting," and succeeds rather well at it. In his Mountain Song when he speaks of the mountain as our home "and we climb its shady hills, and we drink its purring rills," the scaling of the heights is depicted by an ascending scale in the melody which then trills and dips in painting the bubbling water. Still another passage speaks of the "warbling birds" and the music correspondingly imitates the chirp and twitter of feathered songsters. Another song "Hark! 'Tis the Breeze," used a running triplet accompaniment to depict the breezes of twilight, and a descending line tonally speaks how "gently the night's soft curtains close." It is possible that the facility and rapidity with which these compositions were often written may account for their lack of tunefulness, for something had to be sacrificed for the short time in which most of them were composed.

Text

Henry Dielman received and accepted poems, texts, verses which he willingly set to music. The principal authors to whose words he gave a musical setting were Mrs. Hemans, Father John McCaffrey, Thomas Moore, Samuel Lover. Father McCaffrey, President of Mount Saint Mary's College, and friend of Dielman, never pretended to be a poet. Writing verse was rather an avocation for him, for among the many poetic bits that he penned, the only one that contained a spark of the Muse was the familiar stanzas of "The Christmas Hymn." One does not take seriously the unctuous outpourings of sentimentality handed to Professor by the budding laureates of the annual graduation classes of St. Joseph Academy to be set to music and entitled "Farewell Ode." They were so many minutiae, ephemeral as the occasions on which they were sung.

Certainly on these occasions the composer was not helped by his librettists. There is one fine text in the translation used by Dielman in his setting of the "Te Deum." Whether he translated the Latin himself or had some divine do it for him or used a standard translation of the day, it clearly expresses the full import of this Hymn of Thanksgiving. There is some needless repetition in this lengthy work which lessens its effectiveness.

Conclusion

Henry Dielman was a performer, teacher, and composer. A consideration of the compositions forces one to agree that, whatever their merits, extrinsically or intrinsically, the passage of time is the test of their durability and value. In the case of Dielman only one musical composition has survived this criterion, "The Christmas Hymn." This is still published and joyfully sung each Christmas along with the standard holiday music by many church choirs and choral organizations. The reason why the other compositions did not withstand the test of time is due precisely to the fact that they were composed for the event of the day or the hour. It was a case of "musique d'occasion." Whenever a new president was inaugurated or an important personage came to town or the local militia paraded on patriotic holidays, it prompted the writing of a composition. Dielman had a keen awareness of the forces and the feelings of the times had caught with the spirit of the event, arose to the occasion. In a word, he had his finger on the pulse of the community and the country. The event took place, the music was played, and then forgotten as promptly as it was written. The occasion and the music were alike ephemeral. Coupled with the ability and facility of Henry Dielman to marshal forces was the existence of a municipal band in almost every city and town of that day. Every locality, which could afford it, had its own musicians who performed on all holidays and important occasions throughout the year. These performers were eager to obtain new music and to play it. They were only too happy to find composers who wrote such occasional music. The composer was happy to have his music and his reputation noised abroad and hence cooperated. Henry Dielman, as a composer, was precisely that—a writer of music for a given occasion—pleasant pieces for the moment. This explains why there were no great compositions and why his music was not long remembered.

Since composition was not this musician's forte, we must look for his worth in his other talents as performing artist and teacher. Newspaper accounts of auditors and critics tell of Dielman's ability as a performer and accompanist on the violin and the piano. It was on the latter instrument that he was the most skilled. A letter quoted in this dissertation from his opponent in a musical "duel" openly and highly praises Dielman's ability as a pianist and accompanist. Closely allied with these professional performances was the man's work as a private teacher and college instructor. In such positions he not only taught and performed, but, more important, he encouraged the art of music for future musicians. This was an important musical contribution in days when a young nation was attempting to develop herself economically, socially, politically and culturally. The history of music attests that nineteenth-century America was a period of seeding growth and development. There were few native musicians; but the influx of German artists, instrumentalists and teachers aided immeasurably the artistic growth of the young nation. "The number of professional musicians, both visiting performers and resident teachers, decidedly increased, the most important influence naturally still being exerted by those coming from abroad."

as a whole with reference to the future is obvious. Dielman in his position as artist and teacher in Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and as an instructor at Emmitsburg was one of those who helped raise the popular standards of appreciation, discrimination and aspiration.

WASHINGTON AND "SMALL BUSINESS" By C. WILSON HARDER

The Congressional Joint Committee on Reduction of Non-Essential Federal Expenditures, headed by Sen. Harry Byrd, (Va.) and with Rep. Clarence Cannon, (Mo.) as vice chairman, is having a rough time of it.

In other words, they just can't seem to keep ahead of the constantly increasing federal payroll, let alone find out what over 3 million people on the federal payroll actually do to justify their salaries.

C. W. Harder

There has just been released a report by this committee on the subject of the number of government employees in July of this year, as compared to June of this year.

Interestingly enough, civilian employment in the Dept. of Defense dropped 1,278, employees outside the continental U. S. dropped 1,415, and employment in government industries dropped 2,471, while employment of foreign nationals dropped 4,995.

Thus, on this basis, it looked as if the committee could report some progress toward bringing economy to government.

But that does not prove out to be the facts, as civilian employment in the executive branch of the government, excluding the Defense Dept., jumped from June to July by a total of 7,552 persons. Thus, after taking allowances for reductions as already reported, forces of bureaucracy swelled 6,274 in one month.

Here, then, is a hard fact when consideration is given to a rumored drive to reduce taxes in next Congressional session.

The Apache Indians derive their name from the Zuni word "Apachu," which means "enemy."

Writes . . .

Babson Discusses President Eisenhower

BABSON PARK, Mass., Dec. 5—The sad news about President Eisenhower cast a gloom over general business and the stock market. It has also made us all wonder, and realize that things like this may happen at any time. Believing that readers would appreciate some remarks from a friend of the President, I venture the following:

The Stock Market Outlook
Those who have followed the stock market the past few days know how jittery it has been. It will go up ten points and down ten points in a given day. Therefore, it would be meaningless for me to discuss it in detail.

However, I will record that the Dow-Jones Industrial Average on the morning of Tuesday, November 26, was 442.97, and closed that night as 453.34. As I am writing this release, the Industrial Average is 446.03. Readers can look up the latest figure in their daily papers when receiving this release. As to the future, we fear no crisis or panic in business or the market, but there will be a gradual sagging off. People will wait until they see what develops.

Political Outlook
I feel certain that President Eisenhower's illness will tend to make the opposing parties unite on his foreign policy and on defense. The President never pretended to know much about money affairs or agricultural or many other domestic problems. The President, however, probably knows Europe better than anyone in Washington, and it is too bad that he has had such a struggle to put through his recommendations. With his Army record, the President should have his feet on the ground when making recommendations as to defense problems. Of course the situation has been changing so fast, from bombers to short-distance missiles to long-range ballistic missiles and now to satellites, that no one knows what the future will bring forth. Nevertheless, I repeat that any political bitterness which has existed during the past few months should now be buried and we should approach a coalition government. This could be a silver lining to the dark cloud.

What May Happen To Khrushchev

We must not forget that the Russians have their troubles as well as we. Khrushchev is not only vulnerable to similar misfortunes at any time but is also liable to be shot, a possibility which our political leaders need not fear today. These are not pleasant thoughts for any nation, but it is well to remember them and not think that all the misfortunes will befall America.

I personally have great confidence in Vice President Nixon. If he handles himself well during the next few weeks, as I believe he will, this should be of some advantage to the Republicans in 1959 and 1960. It gave Nixon an advantage over possible candidates of both of the large parties. As to whether the present misfortune will help either party in the Congressional elections next year, no one would dare forecast at the moment.

Await Opening Of Congress

There is more or less talk about Mr. Eisenhower's resigning. As to his physical situation, I have no right to judge or forecast. I cannot, however, imagine him quitting now. He himself will want to wait through the Christmas season and until Congress opens the first week in January. If he decides to resign, he will probably include such a statement in his message to Congress at that time. Personally, I sincerely hope he will not resign.

In closing, let me say that President Eisenhower was trained at West Point to give his life for his country. He was always prepared to die on the battlefield. I know that when his time comes, he will be proud to die at his work or "with his boots on." The fact that he went over to the airport to meet his foreign visitor on a stormy day is true testimony to his courage, patriotism, and fundamental beliefs.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Keating

Hunters taking to the woods this fall can expect the best deer hunting season on record, according to a survey by Michael Hudoba, Washington Editor of Sports Afield Magazine. With only some local and regional exceptions, reports from the various state game departments pile up returns like a political landslide. Deer herds are building up and number of herds increasing. Deer are even spreading into new areas where they were unknown before.

Although hunters have been bagging over a million deer a year since 1948, deer numbers continue to increase until the deer has become legal game in 45 states, and even two of the states closed to a gun season have a bow-and-arrow season. This, despite the fact that man's population is growing and spilling out over the countryside. Heavily populated Illinois is having its first deer hunting season since 1900.

This is not surprising to the nation's dedicated biologists and game managers. In fact, many of them are appalled at the debilitation that comes to deer herds—not from overhunting but from too much coddling, which allows as much as 42 per cent of the nation's deer population to be wasted each year. There is a growing mass of evidence that good management pays off in better herds; that those states which have any deer seasons continue to maintain increasing and healthier deer populations. We need not and should not lose thru unnecessary waste all the 42 per cent of deer lost to causes other than hunting, says Hudoba.

This year's deer hunting is expected to be a banner year. Deer are increasing, and with it management problems and the need of public understanding of game management grow. This is vital if we are to expect future years of records for America's number one big-game animal.

Practically all high-speed Gold Cup racing boats have propeller shafts made of Monel nickel-copper alloy because of its great strength, stiffness and resistance to corrosion in salt water.

NEU-GABLONZ, West Germany—In this amazing little city on the doorsteps of the Bavarian Alps southwest of Munich I have found a wonderful story and a mighty advertisement for private enterprise. Thirteen years ago the Nazi Panzer divisions kept an ammunition dump here on a wooded knoll. Twelve years ago the U. S. Army swept in and took it. Eleven years ago, with the war over and a detachment of U. S. occupation troops settled at the dump, two bedraggled men walked into camp and asked to see the Commanding Officer. The men were hungry and

NO. 18777 EQUITY

In the Circuit Court for Frederick County

Patricia H. Wilson
vs.
Braden W. Wilson

ORDER OF PUBLICATION

The object of this Bill of Complaint is to procure a divorce A Vinculo Matrimonii by the Complainant, Patricia H. Wilson, from the Defendant, Braden W. Wilson.

The Bill states in substance that the Complainant, Patricia H. Wilson, is a resident of Frederick County, State of Maryland, where she has resided for more than one year last passed; that the Defendant is a non-resident of the State of Maryland whose last known address was Route 1, Coal Center, Pennsylvania.

The Complainant and the Defendant were married on the 24th day of December, 1953 in Winchester, Virginia, by Rev. Duetwall, a regularly ordained Minister of the Gospel; that no children were born to the parties to this cause as a result of said marriage; and that although your Complainant has always conducted herself as a kind, dutiful and affectionate wife towards the Defendant, Braden W. Wilson, the said Defendant has committed the crime of adultery between the time of the said marriage and the filing of the Bill of Complaint, with a woman whose name is unknown to the Complainant; that the Complainant has not lived or cohabited with the said Defendant, nor has she condoned his actions in any way, since discovery of said adulteries.

The Bill then prays that the Complainant may be divorced A VINCULO MATRIMONII from the Defendant; and for such other and further relief as the nature of her case may require.

ORDER OF COURT

It is thereupon ORDERED by the Circuit Court for Frederick County, Maryland, on this 6th day of November, 1957, that the Complainant, Patricia H. Wilson, by Order of Publication of this Court to be inserted in some newspaper published in Frederick County, Maryland, once a week for four successive weeks on or before the 14th day of December, 1957, give notice to the said Defendant of the object and substance of this Bill, warning him to be and appear in this Court in person or by solicitor, on or before the 30th day of December, 1957, and show cause, if any he has, why the decree should not be passed as prayed herein.

Clerk, Circuit Court for Frederick County, Maryland.

footsores. Their only belongings were a handful of personal effects carried over their shoulders in crude cloth knapsacks. They had tramped all the way from Gablonz in the Czechoslovakian Sudetenland, searching for a place to make a new home. The Army C. O. referred them to a refugee camp down near Landsberg, some 15 miles distance. But the two Czechs didn't want refugee camp life; they liked the looks of the country surrounding the ammunition dump.

Story Was True

The two men begged shelter for 14 persons in one of the unused frame buildings at the dump, and the privilege of earning their "keep" by day and working at their craft by night. They said they were decorative glass and jewelry artisans. They said they had 12 companions straggling on behind. They told the C. O. they wanted to establish an industry that "soon will be selling merchandise all over the world."

The skeptical American officer gave them shelter. Then he sought through Army channels to authenticate their story. It was true. For two centuries Gablonz in northeastern Czechoslovakia, had been world famed in the glassware and costume jewelry trade. It was a city of 25,000 highly skilled artisans whose products from several hundred small work-shops were in great demand throughout the world. But Gablonz had fallen under the control of the Communists. And the Gablonz free enterprisers couldn't knuckle under to the Reds. One day the Communists militia came and drove the people from their homes and workshops. Forced Out

The Gablonzers had to leave behind their priceless tools, their property, virtually everything they owned. Gablonz became a ghost town; its people scattered and fleeing westward toward freedom.

The U. S. Army Officer improvised housing and shop arrangements for the 14 Czechs. The industrious refugees earned their upkeep, and they began working at their creative art. Other Czechs from Gablonz came to the old ammunition dump. When the Gablonzers began to merchandise their wares, U. S. authorities helped a little with housing and leased them land space on the dump. The men borrowed axes, felled trees, hauled them and had them cut into rough timber for their expanding needs. In 1947, when the U. S. Army unit moved, there were four firms of Gablonzers, working 22 people. The Army C. O. shook his head, unbelieving: The four firms were selling merchandise as far away as America.

Two years later many more Czechs from old Gablonz had arrived; there were by then 156 firms with 1,470 people working.

New City

"Today the ammunition dump has disappeared; so have the first crude buildings of the Czechs. On their sites the Czechs with loving care have built a model little city, one of the most colorful in the world. Neu-Gablonz has a population of 15,000 of which 6,000 are artisans working in more than 300 small shops. Other of the original artisans of old Czechoslovakian Gablonz have settled in adjacent Kaufbeuren. And there is third Gablonz industrial community at Markt Oberdorf.

of Jesus Christ as the pilot. Christ can carry man safely through; He is God's fulfillment of the promise of the prophets. Man has only to seek Him who is the Light and thus find security of the Christian faith.

Crossing the Pacific Ocean by ship from San Francisco to Australia, I went up on deck near midnight to look for the Southern Cross in a windtossed sky. Suddenly a sea pigeon, attracted by the lights of the Ship, flew aboard. It was very tired and nestled without resistance in my hand. It had been blown and buffeted by the winds. Finally it had sought refuge on the great, pulsing bulwark of the ocean liner.

I thought how similar this tiny bird was to man. He is tossed and thrown about on the vast waters of the ocean of life. But he can find refuge in the Christian faith with the living example

Prayer

Our Father, we thank Thee for the coming of Christ as foretold by the prophets. We thank Thee for the coming of Thy beloved Son into the world. Help us to confess to Thee our sins and accept Christ's salvation. For His sake. Amen.

"Warm-Up" To Problems Helps Condition Mind

Warm Up To Your Problems

Got a problem to solve? Who hasn't? Where to put the new baby and all its paraphernalia? How to get more closet space? How to get the children to eat breakfast? Whether to take a new job? What college to choose? Which man to marry?

Now and then we all have problems to solve, even if we don't appear on TV shows where the victim has to figure out how to get the ping pong balls into the paper cups. Some people rush right in and try the first thing that comes to mind, and the second, and third—and maybe the sixth one works. Some people walk around all sides of the problem, look it over carefully, and plan out a solution before they make a move.

Now psychologists have come up with a suggestion to help you get ready to solve a problem. A brisk mental "warm up" is the idea. Problem solving, they say, is something that requires an uncommon response. They believe it's possible to train people into the ability to make that "uncommon response." So, just as a track athlete "warms up" for the 100 yard dash, you can warm up for problem solving, with "warm up" problems.

State bonuses for war-time military service no longer need be counted in computing "other income" to establish eligibility for Veterans Administration benefits. The VA has announced that the recently enacted Public Law 85-311 exempts state bonuses in the reporting of income by parents of veterans claiming death compensation and by veterans filing for non-service-connected pension.

The five millionth GI home loan was guaranteed by the Veterans Administration during September 1957.

The VA said the five million home loans, totaling nearly $42 billion, have been made to World War II and Korean conflict veterans during the 13 years the GI loan program has been in operation.

Of the $42 billion, the VA has guaranteed or insured about 55 per cent.

Nearly 22 per cent of the five million home loans, or 1,080,000, have been completely paid back by veteran borrowers.

The VA reported also that only 34,000 home loans, or less than seven-tenths of one per cent of the total, have resulted in claims paid by the Government, proving that veterans have been outstanding credit risks.

The average amount of all GI home loans made to date is $8400.

In addition to the more than five million home loans closed thus far, the VA has guaranteed or insured 70,800 farm loans and 230,000 business loans. These two types of loans total more than $913 million.

World War II veterans have until July 25, 1958, to apply for VA guaranty of GI loans. Korean conflict veterans must have their loans completed before Feb. 1, 1965.

Desert pocket mice can live without drinking water. The little rodents flourish for months in arid sand, feeding on dried seeds alone.

The forest service of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture administers 181,000,000 wooded acres in 38 states, Alaska and Puerto Rico.
