on how to arouse interest in the school and in the scholastic achievement of the children among those parents who seemingly have no interest. Among the suggestions heard were the possibility of having the parents receiving the report card directly, and discussing the needs of the child with the teacher; appointments for parents after school hours to discuss the needs and expectations of the child with the teacher; to have class mothers to contact the parents individually before the meetings. Sister Francis reported that records showed that approximately one-third of the parents come to the meetings occasionally, one-third attend the meetings all the time and one-third never come. Mrs. Dillon was appointed to find out what the advantages of membership in the National Association of Parent-Teachers Association are, and whether or not membership would justify the dues which are quite high. Also discussed was the question of the association financing trips to nearby places of educational value for the various grades. A suggestion was made to include only the three highest grades in this plan, however, the eighth grade is always given a trip at the end of the year. If these trips were made, the children should be told in advance what they would be expected to look for, in order that they get the educational value from the trip. Most of the group thought it better to buy much needed supplementary books and films for the school instead of making the trips. The transportation committee will find out the bus charges for trips to Annapolis, Washington and Baltimore. Sister Francis expressed her sincere thanks to all the parents who helped make the recent Bishops Relief Fund Fair such a success. A total of $432 was cleared from this affair. This amount was divided among the four parishes, and checks sent to the respective pastors. Sister Francis closed the meeting with a prayer, after which the film, "Christ the King," was shown.

Army Recruiter Offers Choice Assignments

The U. S. Army is now offering the finest enlistment choice in its history. Under this new plan, you can choose the exact Career Group in which you would like to receive training. Called the "Choose-It-Yourself" Vocational Training System, the new plan offers a young man the opportunity to choose service in an Army Career Group that satisfies his own desires and aptitudes. The plan offers more than 50 Career Groups from which to choose; as a result, the enlistee is now able to receive precisely the training he desires. For example, if you want to work in electronics—and have an aptitude for that kind of work—you are guaranteed on-the-job training or schooling in electronics after you complete basic training. The guaranty is entered in your Army record when you enlist. This plan is the most unique opportunity the Army has ever offered young men. Job training under this new program is also available to young women. Details of the new plan consist of the new enlistment options consisting of 10 major Occupational Areas: Combat, Electronics, Electrical Maintenance, Precision Maintenance, Military Crafts, Motor Maintenance, Clerical, Graphics, General Technical and Special Assignment. Each of the Occupational Areas consists of a number of Career Groups from which the applicant can choose. Here are two examples: Occupational Area: No. 2 — Electronics Career Groups. There are 10 Career Groups within the area including: Missile-guidance systems, radio, radar, television, electronic fire control—even atomic weapons. Occupational Area: No. 4 — Precision Maintenance Career Group. Precision Maintenance General; Ammunition, Armament Maintenance, Atomic Weapons and Guided Missiles Assembly and Repair, Metal working, Prosthetic Appliances, and Quartermaster Equipment Maintenance.

The new plan is open to both young men and women. In order to qualify for this option, an applicant must achieve a score of 100 or more in an aptitude-area

BABSON

Writes . . .

BY ROGER W. BABSON

Babson Discusses World War III

BABSON PARK, Mass., Mar. 19—To read what some of the very best columnists are writing today you would think that the United States is on the brink of war with Russia. Furthermore, these men should be better informed than I am. However, I do wish to add my "two cents worth" to what they are writing.

Situation In Berlin
Without doubt the Berlin situation is serious. Unless Khrushchev backs down on his threat, we could be in World War III within a couple of months; but I definitely doubt such an event, and here is my reason. No nation will start a world war with intercontinental or other missiles until it has in production a workable anti-missile missile. This is a very important statement; but I make it without any reservation.

Naturally, work on such an anti-missile missile is highly "classified", which means very secret; but it would be extremely difficult to keep such tests secret. Russia could perhaps make her tests in Siberia; but even these might be discovered and tracked by means of their electric waves which would travel around the globe. Each of the "big four" nations has listening posts. These are distributed throughout the world. Hence, all tests of anti-missile missiles by any nation would be discovered.

When World War III May Be Expected

Let me repeat that at present no nation has such anti-missile missiles in production. No nation will dare fire an intercontinental missile at any other nation until it has an anti-missile missile. On the other hand, whenever Russia or Germany, or perhaps the United States, has such protection which its enemy does not have, we should be prepared for World War III. Hence, I urge readers to follow every news item on anti-missile missiles; but don't get excited over what else is said about Russia or Germany or our United States.

There is a good possibility that World War III, if it occurs within a few years, will be started by Germany. Not only has Germany the most to gain or lose, but Germany has the best scientists. Germany was first to start her laboratories working on anti-missile missiles. While Russia and the United States have been wasting precious time and a billion dollars competing in sputniks and circling the moon, Germany has had all her physicists and chemists at work to protect her against Russian missiles.

Seeking Anti-Gravity

For some years I have been much interested in the work of the Gravity Research Foundation, of which Mr. George M. Rideout of New Boston, N. H., is President. This Foundation was the first to print and distribute anything regarding "Anti-Gravity." Physicists smilingly referred to it in their lectures, but never in print. Finally, in answer to the offer of an award of $1,000, two men in June 1958 won one of the Foundation's essay contests. They were Giuseppe Cocconi of the astronomical department of Harvard University and Edwin Salpeter of the Nuclear Laboratory of the University of California. Their subject was the "Anisotropy of Inertia." In simple layman's language this refers to "Anti-Gravity."

Up to the present time all "anti-missile" work has been done on the basic assumption that both the Newtonian Mechanics and Einstein's General Relativity are unchangeable and that these especially apply to Gravitation and Inertia. If it can be shown that this basic assumption is not true, an entirely new aspect and approach must be made to anti-missile studies. I believe that both Russian and Germany are making such anti-missile studies. I sincerely hope that the United States will cease ridiculing anti-gravity, especially in connection with anti-missile missiles.

DMV Closed Good Friday

James B. Monroe, Commissioner of Motor Vehicles wishes to announce that the Department of Motor Vehicles will be open for business on Maryland Day, Wednesday, March 25, but will be closed on Good Friday, March 27.

The Commissioner also wishes to remind the public that 1958 license plates for privately-owned passenger cars and motorcycles will expire midnight, March 31.

TAX HINTS

Q. During a flood last year my gas furnace was ruined. It was not covered by insurance. Is my loss deductible?

A. The loss is deductible as a casualty loss on page 2, Form 1040. The amount of the loss is determined by the difference between the fair market value just before the casualty and the fair market value immediately following the casualty.

Q. You did not mail me an income tax form. Am I excused from filing a return?

A. Every citizen or resident of the United States under 65 who has $600 ($1200 if 65 or over) or more gross income, is required to file a return. The mere fact that we did not mail you a return does not excuse you from filing. All of the forms you need are available to you at any Internal Revenue office.

Q. In addition to my wages, my employer gave me two shares of stock in the business. Is this taxable to me? If so, how do I determine how much income I am to include?

A. The two shares of stock are considered additional wages. The fair market value of the stock is reportable as gross income. Your employer can furnish you with this figure.

Q. I have not received a Form W-2, withholding statement, from my employer. Am I excused from filing an income tax return?

A. Employers are required by law to furnish you with a withholding statement showing the amount of total wages earned by you and the amount of income tax withheld therefrom during the year. If you have moved, it is possible that your form was mailed to your old address and lost. You should contact your employer and ask for your Form W-2.

Q. I am employed as a waitress. In addition to my salary, I receive my breakfast and my lunch. Are these meals taxable to me?

A. If you, as a matter of choice, receive the meals, the value of the meals is taxable income to you, whether or not it is stipulated to be part of your salary. However, if as a matter of convenience to your employer, you are furnished meals on your employer's premises, the value of the meals is not taxable income and need not be reported on your income tax return.

Q. What exemptions may a taxpayer claim?

A. Every taxpayer is entitled to a $600 exemption for himself. If he has reached 65 years of age by the close of the year, he may take an additional exemption of $600. Furthermore, if he is blind at the close of the year, he is entitled to another $600 exemption. On a joint return of husband and wife or if the wife has no income and is not the dependent of another taxpayer so that the husband may claim exemptions for her, the same over-age and blind exemptions are allowable. If both husband and wife are over 65 years of age and blind it would be possible for them to have six exemptions between them. A taxpayer is also entitled to an exemption of $600 for each person who qualifies as a dependent.

Dr. David S. Jenkins, superintendent of schools for Anne Arundel County.

Delbert Baker, of Patterson Park High School, Baltimore City, is president of the Maryland Scholastic Press Advisors Association which is sponsoring the thirteenth annual spring convention. Previously the meeting has been held on college campuses in the Baltimore-Washington area.

In charge of registration and arrangements is Mrs. Lillian Dexter, journalism teacher at Glen Burnie High School and advisor to the Glen Burnian.

semene. He Himself "went a little farther" even than the point where He left Peter, James, and John. There He faced alone the last great test in tuning His will to the will of the almighty Father.

What if Jesus had not gone that little farther in obedience to His Father's will? What a difference in world history and salvation.

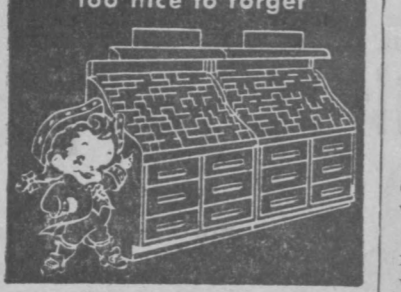

Men of vision have ever sought to go a little farther in the progress of science and other fields of work. Yet how often we as Christians are content with our testimony that we are just about as good as the general run of Christians.

Jesus constantly insisted that a mere getting by, mere average goodness is not enough. He held that the only goal worth striving for is a perfect tuning of our will to the will of God. Christ calls us to venture a little farther and yet a little farther into the plan of God for our lives and for His kingdom. "Ye therefore shall be perfect," He said, "as

ON OUR NEW FAMILY POLICY

Have you heard about Nationwide's new FAMILY POLICY? Imagine! One broad policy . . . one low premium — provides life insurance for Dad, Mom and all the kids. And it automatically covers each blessed event (over age 14 days) WITH NO INCREASE IN PREMIUM!

There just isn't space here to describe all the other unusual features of this "all-in-one" FAMILY POLICY — like Dad's paid-up life protection at age 65 . . . or the special benefits that are offered to Mom. So, for all the facts, why not phone — or see me soon?

John's Plea To Washington

John Jones works in an industry. He operates one of the small but amazingly productive machines in a plant that turns out a widely used electrical appliance. He is on an hourly wage rate. But the pay is good and his income is a little above the average for skilled workers in American industry. His monthly income is more than $6450, his annual income above $5,000. John made out his federal income tax return two weeks ago, and he did some thinking and figuring. And then, for the first time in his life he wrote a letter to his Congressman.

John, on his tax return, attached a slip that showed he had already paid more than a month's income in withheld income taxes; and yet he owed an additional sum for which he had to send Uncle Sam a check. He noted too the amount of taxes he'd paid through the year on purchases of merchandise. And he set about figuring how much indirect, or hidden taxes he'd paid during the year. When he totaled the whole thing up and then added his state and local taxes, John had a better understanding of why he didn't have a bank balance and was "just barely making ends meet."

Just A Little Guy
He wrote his Congressman and his two Senators. "I'm just a little guy," he told them, "and I know the government performs some mighty valuable services for me and my family. But I've been doing some figuring and thinking a lot. In spite of the services, government has become a heavy burden on me. It's costing too much. Even in defense spending I suspect a lot could be saved. And since we're in a cold war we ought to be cutting expenses and not increasing them in all the other services. Please use your influence to cut government spending everywhere."

This is one of the most effective letters that could be written to Congress. It is sincere and moderate. If just half of the workers in American industry would take careful stock of how much tax they are paying and do what John has done, the pruning knife would begin to work in Washington. Thrift-Minded Don't Write

In Washington recently I visited with two members of Congress who are very influential in Congressional activities. We talked about the budget, the national debt and the deficit. Both men are sensitive to the wishes of their people back home. One showed me his day's mail. It contained several letters from people who were obviously banded together in an association to push for a Congressional appropriation for a particular project in their area. There was only one letter from a citizen asking that federal spending be cut back.

"We know that most of our people back home want to see government spending cut back," this Congressman said. "But we don't hear from many of them. We hear from the ones who have some personal interest in some project that requires federal spending. The thrift-minded people, the thousands who are aware that constantly increasing government spending has become a real burden, eating away at a man's earnings, simply do not write letters—at least not many of them write to me. It is human nature for us to forget their situation and to be impressed by those who are constantly camping on our doorstep—asking for some costly spending project." Penalized By Waste

It is no exaggeration to say that the average American family could own and operate an automobile, or send a child through college, with the amount of money that could be cut from their tax bill if every possible measure of thrift were applied in government and if, for the duration of the cold war at least, plans for new projects and all unnecessary spending were set aside.

On my desk is a report from a House of Representative subcommittee which made an ever-so-brief study of some phases of our foreign economic aid program. They turned up hundreds of items of stupid waste. Just one of these concerned a

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT RHEUMATIC FEVER

PREPARED AS A PUBLIC SERVICE BY THE MEMBERS OF THE FREDERICK COUNTY HEART ASSOCIATION

Today we are publishing the final installment in a series of three articles on Rheumatic Fever. Today, "How You Can Protect Your Child Against Rheumatic Fever." It is commonly known that this childhood disease can cause serious damage to the valves of the heart. This process was described in an earlier article in this series. Not so well known however, is the fact that medical investigation has provided the knowledge how to prevent Rheumatic Fever.

If your child has never had Rheumatic Fever, you can help see to it that he does not get it. If your child has ever had Rheumatic Fever, it is important to make sure that he never has another attack. The key to Rheumatic Fever is proper attention to "strep" infections. Certain kinds of infections (strep sore throat, scarlet fever, some ear infections) open the door to Rheumatic Fever. As many as three to ten strep infections out of a hundred are followed by Rheumatic Fever. For someone who has already had one attack, the chance of getting another is much greater. Each attack is a new chance that the heart will be injured. To guard your child from Rheumatic Fever, you must protect him against strep infections. A strep infection, once recognized, can be treated successfully.

When To Call The Doctor
Most streptococcal infections are in the form of "strep sore throats." But not every sore throat is a strep throat. Chances are that a child does not have a strep infection if his only complaint is hoarseness or a cough. You can use the following seven points as your guide to when to call the doctor—and what information to give him. If your child gets a sore throat and has any of the signs or symptoms listed below, phone your doctor right away. Don't wait! Be prepared to give him the answers to these questions:

1. Did the sore throat come on suddenly?
2. Does the child complain that his throat hurts most when he swallows?
3. Does it hurt him under the angle of the jaw when you press there gently with your fingers? Are the glands swollen there?
4. Does he have fever? How much? (Usually a strep infection brings on a fever between 101 and 104 degrees.)
5. Does the youngster complain of a headache?
6. Is he nauseated? Has he vomited?
7. Has he been in contact with anyone who has had scarlet fever or a sore throat? (Any child who has been exposed to scarlet fever should see his doctor for preventive treatment even if he does not have a sore throat.)
Your Doctor Decides
The above signs and symptoms help your doctor decide if he should examine your child for a strep infection. Your youngster isn't likely to have all these symptoms and only your doctor can tell if your child has a strep infection. Your job is to report any of these signs and symptoms as soon as you notice them so that your doctor can start treatment right away. In fact, if your child has a sore throat with fever, it is wise to call your doctor for his advice. This is how you can help the doctor protect your child against Rheumatic Fever.
Pamphlets Available
The material contained in this article, and the two which preceded it, is summarized in pamphlets available for the Frederick County Heart Association, 118 W. Church Street, Frederick, Md. Write for "What You Should Know About Rheumatic Fever" and "Now You Can Protect Your Child Against Rheumatic Fever."

Sawmill shipped to Iran three years ago by the benevolent custodians of our hard earned money siphoned off to Washington in taxes. The sawmill cost us $500,000. The Iranians found it to be useless—it couldn't handle the heavy teakwood logs of the region. It hadn't even been uncrated, just allowed to sit on the hillside and rust away. Let's more of us follow John's example and write our congressmen. It could turn the tide, give us more money for our own family needs, halt the dangerous growth of powerful government, and preserve national strength.

Sister Hilda Introduces Convocation Speaker

Sister Hilda, president of Saint Joseph College, Emmitsburg, delivered the following address of welcome at the convocation Saturday afternoon when Mrs. Mamie Doud Eisenhower received an honorary Doctor of Laws degree:

Milestones are always vantage points. From them one can look back through sunlight and shadow to the place of beginning, and gain perspective for the untrod path ahead. This year Saint Joseph College pauses to note a century and a half of existence as an institution for the higher education of women in these United States, and it seems to me that the whole success of its future may well be in giving renewed impetus to the values which gave it birth.

Our republic had just emerged from the thraldom of oppression when a rickety covered wagon brought Mother Seton and the first faculty to this valley. James Madison, father of the Constitution, was entering upon his office as fourth President of the United States; a profound scholar noted for religious tolerance, he clearly recognized education as the only true foundation of civil liberty and the one guarantee of its welfare and stability. At an epoch when formal schooling for women was a moot question, he pointed out:

"The capacity of the female mind for the highest education cannot be doubted having been sufficiently illustrated by works of genius, of ereditation and of science; that capacity carries with it the right" . . . to such an education."

Had not the quality of mind and heart of his charming consort, Dolley Payne Madison, impressed upon him this conviction?

It can hardly be thought that Mother Seton, whose method of instruction drew largely on contemporary examples of those distinguished for virtue, failed to offer to the young girls under her charge the womanly ideal then extant in the First Lady of the Land. This devoted wife and mother gave to the people of her time the warm memory, still recalled, of cheerful deference, staunch loyalty, unflinching devotion. The domestic life of the President and his Lady pictured the harmony and happiness to be expected when morally stable, mature persons mutually esteem and respect each other. From that home, as from a center, radiated goodwill and gracious hospitality.

Our American Foundress, also a wife and mother, could appreciate and point out to her students how such a family mirrors the Divine characteristics of that long-ago Family of Nazareth and must, of necessity, leave its impress on the moral fiber of a nation. Here again she was seeing exemplified the same background of values which had marked yet another wife and mother in early 17th Century France—Saint Louise de Marillac, her prototype in the origin and development of the Daughters of Charity.

To Louise de Marillac as to Mother Seton, the nobility of womanhood was always measured by its likeness to Mary, the Mother of God, who first showed forth to the world for all time the perfection of goodness and courage that remain the earmark of a gentlewoman in any generation, no matter what her role, no matter what her culture.

Today, then, at this opening celebration of the Sesquicentennial of Saint Joseph College, it is particularly gratifying to welcome to our campus one who has won the hearts of the country by gracing the position of First Lady of the Land with all those qualities we like best to associate with women. Our board of trustees has indeed been farsighted in singling out Mrs. Mamie D. Eisenhower to receive the honorary Degree of Doctor of Laws. Nor can we fail to welcome most heartily a dear friend in the person of Miss Alice May, whose total dedication to the welfare of the neighbor has long been an inspiration to our Sisters and their co-workers. It was with sincere, heart-felt pleasure that we received her nomination from the Archbishop of Baltimore as the worthy recipient of the Saint Louise de Marillac Medal.

And, Your Excellency, Bishop McNamara, it is entirely fitting that you should preside in our midst today, you who lose no opportunity to pay public homage and acclaim to our beloved American Foundress and who so thoroughly appreciate her ideals.

It is my pleasure to extend to all who honor us with their presence today the cordial welcome of the board of trustees and the faculty of Saint Joseph College and to invite you to join us in thanking God for His blessings so bountiful through the years.

Closely linked with the history of Saint Joseph College are the priests of the Congregation of the Mission, known as the Vincentian Fathers. To their spiritual guidance the faculty and students here have long been confided. Even before there had been effected in 1850 the affiliation of the Sisters with the Daughters of Charity of Saint Vincent de Paul of Paris, so much desired by Mother Seton, the sons of our mutual founder, Saint Vincent de Paul were defining our college's objectives and moulding its ideals. For over a hundred years Vincentian priests have been represented not only on the faculty, but on the board of trustees as well, helping to shape the policies and plan the future of Saint Joseph College. Today's glorious chapter is telling evidence of the value of their contribution!

It is then, with grateful affection, that we introduce our distinguished speaker on this occasion, the Very Reverend Sylvester A. Taggart, C.M., provincial superior of the Eastern Province of the Congregation of the Mission. His Vincentian fathers themselves operate and staff a number of outstanding universities throughout the country. With pardonable pride we recall that a few years ago Saint Joseph College listed Father Taggart's name among its faculty members.

As a son of Saint Vincent, his deep personal interest in and acquaintance with the history of Saint Vincent de Paul and Saint Louise de Marillac, who together founded the Daughters of Charity, make Father Taggart eminently fitted to speak to us about Saint Louise who is honored today by the bestowal of her commemorative medal for distinguished personal effort in the field of social service.

It is a special joy for us to welcome him again to Saint Joseph campus and a real honor to present him to you.

Nation's Livestock On Increase

Livestock and poultry numbers on U. S. farms and ranches increased significantly in 1958, the USDA has reported.

Dairy cows and calves declined two per cent from January 1, 1958 to January 1, 1959. Horses and mules showed a decrease of eight per cent.

All other species increased: Beef cattle were up four per cent; Hogs were up twelve per cent; Sheep and lambs were up four per cent; and Poultry, including turkeys, were up four per cent.

The Department said cattle numbers equalled the previous record of January 1, 1956. Hog numbers were the largest since 1952. Sheep numbers were the largest since 1948.

The actuality of the present seldom looks as good as the theory of the past.

Mrs. Landon Edwards and family, Richmond, Va., visited over the weekend with friends and relatives in town.

OUR STATE UNIVERSITY

Since 1946, more than 5000 Maryland youths, ranging in age from 14 to 21, have learned to care for and operate tractors and other machinery skillfully, safely and efficiently through the 4-H Club tractor care program.

Operated by the University of Maryland Extension Service, the State-wide project has enabled farmers to save many thousands of dollars in time, money and valuable farm machinery through virtual elimination of serious accidents, breakdowns, fuel waste and reduction of costly repair jobs.

Agricultural engineering specialists of the extension service, county agents and community leaders are teaching the youth of our State the know-how of keeping equipment in top shape thru demonstrations and actual experience in the day-to-day care of tractors.

Interest in the program has been maintained by county, State and regional participation in 4-H tractor operators contests. In addition, each club member keeps a tractor project book which is judged at the county level. County winners compete for the honor of representing the State of Maryland at the annual national 4-H Club Congress in Chicago.

Each year scholarships are awarded to the 12 top entries in the national competition.

Attesting to the effectiveness of the tractor program, the State of Maryland has had six national winners in recent years, an outstanding record of performance.

Group Opposes Milk Controls

"Marylanders for Milk Freedom," a group of Maryland citizens organized to fight proposed milk controls in Maryland, announced the appointment of Herman L. Mills as president of the group. Mills is a prominent Hagerstown businessman, and is the former mayor of that city.

After accepting his appointment to the office, Mills said, "I am proud to be able to serve 'Marylanders for Milk Freedom' in this capacity. Every loyal Marylander I believe, subscribes to the principles of free enterprise upon which this group was founded."

"Marylanders for Milk Freedom" was formed to combat a bill, now in the ways and means committee of the state legislature, which proposes the formation of a state milk control commission for Maryland. The proposed commission would have power to fix the price of milk and all dairy products, at the farm, wholesale, and retail levels.

Mills stated that the popular "Marylanders for Milk Freedom" group drew more than 20,000 members in the first week after introduction of the bill and that its growth was "picking up like a landslide" daily. Every section of Maryland is represented. Mills went on to say that the Baltimore headquarters processes thousands of applications and letters each day, and that as the word has spread throughout the state, the number of applications received each day has grown steadily.

When asked why he had accepted the appointment as the group's president, Mills replied, "because I believe in free enterprise, and that includes freedom in the milk industry too. But," he continued, "I'm just one person. The important thing is that alert, freedom-loving people from all over Maryland, fed up with steadily rising living costs, have taken up this fight with a will to win. They like their milk, and their state, free from socialistic controls, and they've shown they have the guts to fight to keep it that way."

According to Mills, membership in the group now numbers over 30,000 and it is still growing.

Ironically, Mills and one of the co-sponsors of the controversial bill, Delegate McElwee, both reside in Hagerstown. Upon being questioned about the need for milk controls in his part of the state, Mills replied, "If I thought the Hagerstown area needed controls, I would have sided with McElwee. Free enterprise, which helps keep milk consumption high, consumer prices reasonable, and farmer income up, is what Maryland has now, and that's all we need."

Baltimore headquarters for the group expressed great pleasure upon learning of Mills acceptance and pledged to put every resource at its command at Mills disposal. "Marylanders for Milk Freedom" is located in the Mathieson Building, 10 Light Street, Baltimore.
