Tuesday's primary results in West Virginia's presidential election was indicative of the religious toleration that has transpired in our nation during the last three decades. The astounding and exciting victory accorded Senator John Kennedy was a welcome sign that religion should not ever again enter into politics. Senator Kennedy may not win the election but at least this ancient barrier appears to have been broken. West Virginia is predominantly non-Catholic. In fact, only five per cent of the total population is of the Catholic faith thus proving that the voter has come to realize that religious deferentialism is no deterrent to the presidency and proving that one can cast aside any religious bigotry and vote for the man and his principles. Senator Kennedy might possibly not gain the Democratic nomination but I am certain that religious bigotry has been buried in West Virginia soil.

The recent shooting down of one of our planes over Russian land unquestionably has created a lot of dissension and animosity in certain circles but in a way it is a good omen in as much as it proves to us that our Government leaders aren't just idly willing away the time and our money. In prior wars this country was caught flat-footed and was totally unprepared to cope with any overt or hostile acts by enemy nations. Indications are, after the recent downing of our plane, that we are wide awake and have been so for some time. This really is a comforting feeling and I can't see where there will be any retaliation because after all Russia has been doing the very same trick for decades. How many Russian planes have flown over American soil is a matter of conjecture but the millions of Communists at work here engaged in espionage and sabotage is not conjectural—it is real fact. The irony of it is that there is a little our country can do to prevent this fifth column from operating because under our form of government they can't be made to give incriminating evidence against themselves and immediately invoke our Fifth Amendment and escape scot free. The truth is there are only a few serving or have served time in any of our penal institutions for the crime of espionage yet it is known there are several million active Communists at work here this very moment. No, we don't have to fear the Russians because we were caught just this one time, I don't believe.

Calls For Support Of Blood Bank

Editor, Emmitsburg Chronicle:
The need for additional blood donors in our community is becoming critical. The demand for at least one type has been so great recently that the sources of supply are just about gone.
When there is an accident or other emergency and a transfusion is called for almost anyone is willing to help. However where the conditions are less dramatic, as in the case of lingering illnesses where the blood is destroyed, it is harder to stir up much enthusiasm. The need is just as real and in either case it is truly a "matter of life and death."
We as members of the human race have a duty to help sustain the lives of fellow humans and every healthy adult man and woman should be willing to help. Your family doctor can tell you whether you are physically able to donate blood and how often you may do so. If it is a matter of convenience that stops some, I am sure that the time could be worked out with the hospital authorities to suit almost everyone. We would not want to hear that someone died because it was inconvenient for us to help them.
It is thought that giving the problem some additional publicity at this time might bring results.
Sincerely,
W. H. Kelz

Two Injured In Vehicle Mishaps

Three accidents in which two persons were hospitalized were investigated in the Emmitsburg area over the weekend.

Friday evening at 6 o'clock Philip G. Little, Thurmont R2, was attempting a turn off the new Route 15 onto the old road near St. Anthony's south of here, when the rear of his car was struck by a machine operated by Donald Paul Lynolt, Silver Spring, Md. The impact shoved the Little car into a concrete culvert. Trooper William Morgan investigated but has filed no charges.

Saturday evening about 7:20 o'clock on the Tract Rd. about a mile west of Emmitsburg, Catherine E. Ott, Hanover, was driving south when her car struck a bicyclist, Earl August Rice III, 12, Emmitsburg R3, when the boy rode out a driveway and across the road in front of the car.

The boy was taken to the Warner Hospital in Gettysburg with brushburns and a hip injury and was admitted there for x-ray examinations. He was taken to the hospital in the Emmitsburg VFW ambulance. Chief Wilmer E. Law investigated the accident and said the car operated by the Hanover woman was owned by Gilmer H. Glass Emmitsburg.

Miss Shirley Keilholtz, 21, Emmitsburg, was admitted to the Frederick Hospital early Saturday morning for lacerations and abrasions of the scalp and legs after the car in which she was a passenger ran off Route 77 near Graceham and struck a tree. Little League Tryouts Saturday

Final notice of tryouts for positions on the Emmitsburg Little League teams has been given officials announced this week. All boys interested in trying for the teams are asked to be present Saturday afternoon, May 14 at 2 p. m. It is pointed out that there are a considerable number of positions still unfilled and it is the hope of the league officials to be able to field four complete teams with an ample number of reserve players. Any boy between the ages of nine and twelve is eligible to participate in the action. Those showing up for tryouts are asked to bring along their birth certificate.

Miss Dolores Zurgable, Washington, visited over the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Zurgable.

Wide-Range Phone Service Likely Here

Plans for wider range telephone calling service were discussed at the regular meeting of the Emmitsburg Lions Club held Monday night in Fitzgerald's Mason-Dixon Inn, President Ralph D. Lindsey presiding with 22 members in attendance.

During the meeting a film demonstrating the effectiveness of the U. S. Navy was projected by two representatives of the Navy, a lieutenant commander and a chief petty officer. President Lindsey announced that the investiture of newly-elected officers will take place at the next regular meeting.

On hand to discuss the wider-range telephone service was the local general manager of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., Roger Heck. It is hoped that calling service and privileges will be extended to Emmitsburg patrons. The new range would include Taneytown and Frederick. At the present time coverage is extended only to Thurmont. A survey of the company's records indicate that at present 30% of the long distance calls from Emmitsburg are going to Taneytown and 33% to Frederick, Mr. Heck revealed. At the present time Emmitsburg patrons have access to about 2200 phones between the two towns, Emmitsburg and Thurmont, and is in what the company designates as a No. 5 area. Should the privilege of wider-range calling be instituted here Emmitsburg would be elevated to the 1A class and would have access to approximately 22000 phones throughout the county and parts of Carroll County.

It was pointed out that free toll service was discussed a number of years ago between Taneytown and Emmitsburg but at that time there was not enough sentiment locally to make the change. Should the new service be instituted local rates for residential phone service would increase approximately 75c per month and business phones would be hiked an additional $3.

In an effort to sound out any sentiment for the new service the Lions Club formally asked the phone company to conduct a survey of its local patrons and should this survey indicate that 51% of the patrons desired the service it would be established on a permanent basis by the utility. The survey will be conducted in the near future via a questionnaire to be inserted in the monthly bills and which all local patrons will be asked to express their desire for acceptance or rejection.

Dr. D. L. Boegle, chairman of the local drive for old eyeglasses, reported that a sizeable number of glasses had been deposited in containers at the Farmers State Bank, Emmitsburg Chronicle and Emmitsburg Feed & Farm Supply. The glasses are for indigent families both here at home and abroad. Anyone having old useless glasses about their home are asked to contribute them to this noble humanitarian cause.

THIS 'N THAT

GEORGE W. WIREMAN

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of two articles on the art of brewing in which the author traces step by step the many processes in the brewing of quality beers and ales.

Last week I covered in brief, the history of beer, which is the generic term for all malt beverages which are produced by the fermentation process, including ale, porter, and stout. This week, I shall cover the many manufacturing processes in the age-old art of brewing.

The brewing process starts with the grinding of the malt in a brewery mill especially designed for the purpose. The purpose of this operation is to break up the malt kernels into a relatively coarse malt meal without, at the same time, shattering the exterior malt husk too much. The malt husks, separated cleanly from the endosperm portion of the kernel, eventually must serve as a filtering medium at the end of the mashing process, except where special mash filters are being used. Malt mills, which range in size from one to six pairs of steel rolls, are therefore so designed that they subject the malt to a crushing, rather than a grinding action.

The ground malt then is mashed in the correct amount of water at exact temperatures, which are varied to a definite time schedule and automatically recorded. Temperature control is necessary to enable the enzymes properly to solubilize the proteins and the starches into dextrins and sugars to a predetermined sugar degree.

The mashing process accomplishes a threefold purpose. First, it brings into solution those substances of malt and adjuncts that are readily soluble in warm water. Secondly it permits the malt enzymes to act upon the insoluble substances and render them soluble. Thirdly, it allows a far-reaching enzymatic degradation of starches, proteins, gums etc., into products of lower molecular weight and of a kind that ensures a wort of proper composition and acidity.

Having dissolved the desirable solubles from the malt in the brewing water, the resulting liquid is known as wort. Where such cereal adjuncts as corn or rice are used, the grain first undergoes preliminary boiling with water in open or pressure cookers. In such cases, the cooker mash is then introduced into the main malt mash. The wort is filtered and flows into a larger copper kettle, in which it is boiled with hops. The wort obtained from the boiling is subjected to vigorous boiling for two to two and one-half hours in the brew kettle. The brew kettles are large vessels, made either of copper or stainless steel and are available in various designs and shapes. They are covered by a high dome from which rises a fairly wide venting pipe to the roof of the brewhouse to permit the escape of vapors.

Wort boiling has for its objectives (1) the concentration of the diluted wort; (2) the complete inactivation of any enzymes that may have survived the final mashing temperature; (3) the coagulation and precipitation in the form of "kettle break" of high-molecular proteins; (4) the extraction of desirable hop constituents; and (5) the complete sterilization of the wort.

Hops are usually added at various stages of the boiling process at the rate of about 0.35 to 0.50 lb. per barrel of beer. A common procedure is to add about one-fifth of the total hops about one hour after the start of boiling, two-fifths some 30 minutes later, and the rest just prior to the termination of boiling. The advantages of this procedure are that maximum protein precipitation is attained by means of the first addition, adequate glittering of the wort is obtained by the second addition, while the third addition imparts the delicate hop aroma to the wort.

After the boiling processes, the hopped wort is transferred from the kettle through a strainer, which is used to separate the hops from the wort. The wort then passes to the cooling room where its temperature is reduced to approximately 47°F. Wort coolers are of several types. Formerly, the wort was allowed to cool in large shallow vessels, called cool ships. This method of cooling has now been largely superseded by more efficient methods in which the wort passes either through closed double-pipe or plate-type heat exchangers, or flows over vertical Baudelot coolers, which bring about rapid and effective temperature reduction. Frequently the cooled wort is subjected to the first of a series of clarifications with by means of centrifuges or diatomaceous earth filters.

After proper cooling and aeration, the wort is collected in fermenting vessels, usually glass-lined, in which the digestive enzymes contained in the pure brewers' yeast convert the malt sugars into alcohol and carbon dioxide gas. The yeast is kept biologically clean and is constantly examined in the laboratory. A detailed record is maintained of each yeast crop and its genealogy. Photomicrography is used in recording and studying special conditions and phenomena; detailed reports are then submitted to the brewery's fermentation department for its guidance. A pure yeast culture apparatus is maintained to supply the brewery with fresh, pure cultures when needed.

During the fermentation process an excess of delicately flavored carbon dioxide gas is produced, and this is carefully tested, collected, and stored in specially designed storage tanks, later to be united with the finished brew.

After the fermentation process is complete, usually at the end of a week, the new crop of yeast is carefully collected and stored in a special yeast storage tank for use in the next brew. The fermented brew is then transferred from the fermentation tanks to storage or aging tanks. It is during this transfer that the brew passes through a cooler. When it has reached cold-storage temperature, it is allowed to age and clarify by sedimentation. After the proper aging period, usually about eight weeks, the brew is transferred from storage to finishing tanks, and then is either barreled or racked or packaged in bottles or cans. During the transfer from the storage to the finishing tanks, the brew is carbonated by reuniting it with the carbon dioxide gas produced during fermentation. In both the racking and packaging processing, the brew is passed through government meters for tax purposes.

Beer reaches the trade either in unpasteurized form, in which case it is filled into barrels and in half-gallon bottles, or in pasteurized form in a variety of sizes of bottles or cans. The old wooden barrel has largely been replaced by steel, stainless steel or aluminum cooperage. Prior to filling with beer, the barrels are thoroughly washed with hot water and sterilizing solutions, or they are re-pitched. Filling the barrels is performed by semi-automatic rackers which operate on the counter-pressure principle by first establishing gas pressure in the barrel equal to that in the racker so as to avoid a sudden release of gas from the beer and excessive foaming. Unpasteurized beer is a perishable product and must be stored at low temperatures to prevent possible deterioration.

The bottling and canning department of a brewery has today, become a highly mechanized plant in which most of the operations are performed automatically. Returned bottles are first subjected to thorough washing and sterilization to submersion in sterilizing solutions at high temperatures, exterior and interior scrubbing by means of brushes or hot water jets, and final rinsing by hot and cold water.

The sparkling clean bottles are then conveyed to the rotary filler which fills each bottle to a predetermined height under counter-pressure conditions at amazing speeds. The filled bottles next pass to the crowner which seals the bottles with a cork-lined or plastic-lined metal crown. The filling and crowning procedure with cone top cans is essentially the same as with bottles, whereas flat cans require a special filler and sealing unit.

The filled and sealed bottles and cans are then taken through a pasteurization process. This process is done in huge pasteurizers which are generally of the spray type. Practical experience has shown that holding beer at a temperature of 135-140°F. for 15 to 20 minutes will render the product biologically stable. To avoid excessive breakage of glass, the temperature increase and decrease must be carried out in gradual steps so that the total pasteurization cycle will require about 55-60 minutes in the case of bottles and 40 minutes for cans.

Following pasteurization the bottles then pass through automatic labeling machines which affix body labels, neck labels and, in some cases, neck foils.

In this modern day and age, the brewing industry is no exception when it comes to being completely mechanized. The final stage of packaged beer handling is done at high speed, automatic equipment packs the finished bottles or cans into variously designed carrier cartons and shipping cases which can be automatically stacked into palletized unit loads for shipment by truck or rail. Manual handling of the packaged product has been largely or completely eliminated in most of the larger breweries and could well be labeled, "untouched by human hands."

This is the story of the art of brewing, and at this point I wish to thank Reidar N. Wintervold of the Miller Brewing Company of Milwaukee, Wisconsin for his contribution of material which made this article possible. To the Miller Brewing Company, who has made many contributions to the brewing industry, this article is dedicated.

NOTICE OF MUNICIPAL CHARTER AMENDMENTS FOR THE BURGESS AND COMMISSIONERS OF EMMITSBURG

Pursuant to the Charter Amendment Resolution No. 3, passed by the Burgess and Commissioners of Emmitsburg on May 4, 1960, the following is published as a fair summary of the proposed amendments.

The proposed amendments make an entirely new charter for the municipality and changes the name of THE TOWN OF EMMITSBURG. The limit of $10,000 on property which the Town may own has been removed. Boundaries are not changed. Property qualifications for Commissioners for Commissioners are required and for the Burgess are raised, both set at $1,000 and technical changes are made in old section 153 and other sections of the Charter. The old Charter is Sections 161 to 184, inclusive, of the Code of Public Laws of Maryland—1930 Edition. Voting by machine is allowed in addition to voting by ballot. Many obsolete provisions and sections which have not been followed have been omitted. Sections 157, 158, 165, 166, 167, 173, 174, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 182 and Chapter 188 of the Laws of the General Assembly of 1939 have all been included although the wording and organization or placement of these sections have been changed. The Board of Commissioners have retained all of their specific powers and their general powers have been expressed in more general terms, thus broadening their overall powers. The Commissioners are allowed to meet as they decide; limitations on their taxing power have been eliminated; provisions regarding the constable, town treasurer and tax collector have been expressed in more general terms and financial information and requirements have been amplified and made more specific and detailed. Tax collection powers have been changed to agree with modern state law; the borrowing power has been enlarged and generalized; the town is enabled to codify its ordinances and the entire charter has been reorganized under a modern type charter so that specific provisions may be more easily found. The NEW CHARTER shall become effective on July 4, 1960, unless a proper Petition for a Referendum thereon shall be filed as provided by Section 13 of Article 23A of the Annotated Code of Maryland, and provided that the other provisions of Article 23 A of said Code applying in such cases are all followed.

This summary is published by authority of Clarence G. Frailay, Burgess.

Teachers Announce Position On Report

The Maryland State Teachers' Association announced today its official position on the Warfield Commission Report concerning the expansion of the University of Maryland.

and Towson State Teachers Colleges be absorbed by the University of Maryland as branch institutions. The teachers' organization opposed this recommendation as not being the most desirable means of expanding the opportunities for higher education and teacher education in the state.

fields other than teacher education be instituted at these three colleges. It warned, however, that additional faculty and facilities will be needed since these schools are already operating at peak capacity.

The recommendation of the Warfield Commission to place the teachers colleges at Frostburg, Salisbury and Towson under the control of the Board of Regents of the University of Maryland is opposed by MSTA on the grounds that this change would not increase the supply of teachers in the state.

The governing mayor's guest appearance will take place shortly after the East-West summit conference, where the status of West Berlin's 2,500,000 citizens stands high on the agenda.

Mayor Brandt will speak in English to about 130 students of the Armed Forces who have successfully completed university academic requirements.

Baltimore Raceway Offering Large Purses

Final sustaining payments have been made on a list of 210 horses for Baltimore Raceway's Lord and Lady Baltimore Stakes, General Manager Joe Lynch announced this week.

The Lord and Lady Baltimore Stakes will be raced in six divisions with at least one $10,000 race a night being presented during Baltimore's Grand Circuit Week, June 6 through June 11.

Baltimore Raceway will operate this year from June 6 to July 2 with Grand Circuit competition featuring the opening week of the meeting.

Lynch pointed out that the two richest races in the history of the track will be presented on June 10 and 11, as the climax of Grand Circuit Week. The Lord Baltimore No. 1 trot will be raced on Friday, June 10, and the Lord Baltimore No. 1 pace will be presented the next night.

pleted on 30 of the nation's top pacers for the event, along with 27 trotters.

The two-year-old portion of the stake will be presented Monday through Thursday of Grand Circuit Week with purses estimated at $10,000 for each event. The filly pace will be raced on Monday, June 6, and the colt and gelding pace the following night.

Stable-wise, the entry list of the Stakes reads like a "Who's Who in Harness Racing."

"We have been fortunate in attracting the top two-and-three-year-old stake horses in the country," asserts Lynch, "and consequently the best drivers and trainers."

Since most of the two-year-olds still remain an unknown quantity, the early interest is centered around the Lord Baltimore No. 1—the three-year-old portion of the stake.

Every horse which started in the trot and pace divisions of the two-year-old event a year ago has been kept eligible for this year's portion.

That means that Rainbow Stables' Smitty Rainbow, which coped the $12,155 two-year-old Lord Baltimore pace a year ago, should be around to see if he can make a clean sweep of honors, along with R. W. Sidley's Willowood, which won the $10,430 two-year-old trot in 1959.

More Red Carpet, Less Red Tape and Just One Jet to the Soviet

U.S.S.R. vacations assume new plausibility as Russia cuts costs and relaxes restrictions to attract more American travel. For instance, the most recent parting of the Iron Curtain allows SABENA Belgian World Airlines to bring her giant Boeing "Intercontinental" jets right on in.

There are further indications that Russia's Welcome Mat is out. Faster action on visas has been effected, frontier formalities simplified, and, in vast contrast to the supervised sight-seeing of the past, the tourist is on his honor—and on his own.

Expenses of staying in Russia have dramatically decreased from an estimated average of $30 per day to an estimated average of $16 (room, bath, three meals, and transfer by car counted in). Hotels have conceded notably to western notions of comfort, menus offer wider range and hospitality beams more broadly as the Soviets (al-including meals and access to the beautiful Black Sea beaches, a bargain which would be hard to come by off-season in Miami.

For sheer stimulus, a sojourn in the U.S.S.R. is unrivalled. Here is a challenging outlook, a vigorous people, a way-of-life (incomprehensible to us) being made to work, and still the cultural heritage of the Czars glittering through. The places to go and sights to see are as indescribably vast and various as the nation itself.

An efficient domestic jet network now makes it feasible for the traveler to cover tremendous terrain in a limited stay. He may gasp at the ancient art treasures of Leningrad (Tolstoi's St. Petersburg) saunter through storied Kiev, witness Moscow's Bolshoi Ballet and fabulous Georgian circus, shop the exotic Tashkent bazaars, sample the spas of the Russian Riviera and still have time to idle down the Volga-Don by boat—in a total two weeks.

In 1959 alone, some 15,000 Americans sallied forth to the Soviet on trips of combined enlightenment and enjoyment. With this year's improvements in transport, accommodations, rates and courtesies, SABENA authorities confidently look for that number to double.

EFFICIENT FEEDING AND LIVESTOCK MANAGEMENT

By Dr. Gustav Bohstedt Emeritus Professor of Animal Husbandry University of Wisconsin

Coarse Roughage Is Ballast for a Cow

The old-time sailing ships frequently carried heavy and sometimes rather valueless freight in their holds, so as to plow the deep more steadily and to keep the ship on an even keel. It was called the ballast.

In some parts of the country, hay of any sort, and especially good hay, is scarce as a result of a dry growing season last year.

In consequence almost any kind of roughage will need to be fed. Corn stalks, straw, coarse hay, ground corn cobs, anything within reason may help fill the voids in the digestive tracts of the cattle before the onset of a new pasture season.

Let us hope that this poor grade of roughage is not the only feed, but that some silage and certainly grain, as needed, may supplement any coarse roughage of this kind.

If the bulk of the roughage intake is of poor quality, a milking cow is up against a tough proposition. This is the reason: coarse roughage is pretty well lignified, meaning that the plant cells are thick and "plastered" with what has been compared to a kind of cement which is lignin. This lignin is practically indigestible and renders anything to which it is attached pretty much indigestible too.

In the process of rumen digestion, a fine quality leafy forage is broken down rather quickly by the millions of bacteria. It may require a day, more or less, after which a cud at a time is brought up to the mouth for rechewing or rumination, then to be reswallowed to go down the rest of the digestive tract.

But a coarse, lignified kind of roughage may stay in the rumen twice as long for digestion before the mechanism of regurgitation takes effect. Here in the paunch it occupies valuable space that should by rights be taken up by better and more digestible feed in order to have the cow produce milk as she should.

For this reason it is necessary to do our best to compensate by feeding more of a suitable grain mixture, higher in protein than usual, and also well fortified with certain minerals including those that are supplied by trace mineralized salt.

Question: Why is it that cows when fed chopped green alfalfa, as obtained from a meadow, do not bloat as they do when pasturing the alfalfa?

Answer: The reason appears to be that when fed in a chopped or even a long condition, such green alfalfa has to be eaten whole, tops, stems and all. Pasturing in a field of alfalfa, the cows eat mostly the more palatable tops, even though they are bloat-producing forage. California investigators were able to produce many cases of bloat in the barn or yard when they simulated pasture conditions by feeding just alfalfa tops.

A Capitalist International
If we are going to survive in a war with a relentless enemy, which in a few short years has gobbled up nearly half of the world, we must change our policy toward the affairs of other nations. Our policy of "non-intervention" is aiding in the evaporation of freedom throughout the world is jeopardizing

our own survival. The term
"non-intervention" may sound nice and moral; but actually when we stand by and see millions of human beings, whom we could help, being engulfed
within totalitarian Communism,
non-intervention becomes fundamentally immoral.

World Communism publicly

and proudly announces that it is out to Communize the world.
Since 1945 the Soviets have got approximately half of it. They have sent Red agents in the hundreds and thousands into every nation in the world. Backed by all the resources of international Communism, these armies of Reds are aggressively and successfully working for the destruction of capitalism and the establishment of Socialist Communist systems in every nation,
with the Kremlin in control.
With all this going on, and with little being done to promote capitalism, some important United States leaders seem to expect nevertheless that Communist will not win and Capitalism will not lose. Under the circumstances the expectation is not well founded.

Our Drops Of Rain
One trip to Uruguay by the President, and a few study and good will missions by a group of pre-occupied America legislators or college professors, are like puny drops of rain on the ocean compared to the vast torrent of activity being conducted in Uruguay by Communism's army of agents and fellow travelers. In all the media of communication the Red agents are selling their product to Uruguay's three million people and destroying good will toward Capitalism.

In every activity in the life
of the little country, Red agents are busy building their influence.
How can the tiny bit of Capitalism which still exists in Uruguay survive—with a highly organized and skillfully commanded army at work undermining and smothering it out while from afar we merely shake our heads with non-intervention displeasure. Uruguay is cited as a small example. A Congressional committee reports that the Soviet has 5 million agents working in 27 countries to destroy the last vestige of respect for Capitalism and establish Socialism-Communism.
Encirclement By Default

In Cuba we see Capitalism
being crushed out of existence and a Red dictatorship being set up, with acute and visible dangers to our security. Our policy is: Don't interfere with Cuban internal affairs. We allow Castro to take over the property of American citizens and don't demand payment. At least we should withhold payments for sugar (bought from Cuba at double the world market price) to cover these property seizures. We even fought a war in Korea to prohibit Communism from ruling the South Koreans; yet in Cuba, right on our doorstep, we permit the establishment of a Communist stronghold and the subjection
under Red dictatorship of Cuba's 6 million people. It doesn't make sense; and our safety is jeopardized.

We hand over $750 million to Sukarno in Indonesia and say to him in effect: "Now you do what you think best: make a deal with Khrushchev, accept control from Moscow, set up a Communist system, or become a Nazi. For ourselves we like Capitalism and constitutional government. But maybe you don't. We wouldn't dare suggest that you try Capitalism!"
In view of this "non-intervention" policy, Indonesia is considered by qualified observers today to be for all practical purposes a satellite of world
Communism.

All-Out Campaign
As part of any aggressive offensive to save our freedom and fulfill our moral obligation to make a better world for all mankind, the United States ought to conduct an all out campaign for Capitalism. We

Farm Bureau Opposes Gov. Pay Increases

Farm Bureau has registered opposition to numerous bills before Congress to provide pay increases, costing $1.6 billion a year, for a very large number of federal government employees including those in the postal service.

Roger Fleming, secretary-treasurer of American Farm Bureau Federation, has sent telegrams to all members of the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, reading as follows: "We know of no data which justifies the general increase proposed.
Last year federal employees received a costly fringe benefit with the enactment of a federal health insurance program. Any overall adjustment in federal salaries of this kind would set off another round of pay increases for non-government workers. This type of pay increase, not definitely related to increased productivity,
would be inflationary."

should frankly and proudly proclaim that we propose to make the world Capitalistic. We should then get busy doing it.
We should use every ethical device—education, factual propaganda; should guide infiltration
by native Capitalists into every phase of a nation's life including government, and so on.

How better could we be of service to mankind? Capitalism has to have constitutional government to exist; it is based on individual property rights, the dignity of the individual, unfettered opportunity, the system of free choice. We need to put our agents, working to establish Capitalism, into every free nation of the world. But these agents need to be practical-minded, solid-thinking, experienced persons who understand and are sold on American Capitalism and are dedicated to its basic principles and its extension throughout the world.

Mr. Dudley points out that com-

ABUNDANT LIFE

by ORAL ROBERTS

CHRIST IS A PERSON

There is a great influence
from Christ in the world today.
His Spirit is present in varied forms all over the universe.
Christ is also an idea in the minds of millions of people, but above and beyond all of these is the outstanding fact—
Christ is a person.

Christ is the Son of man and the Son of God. He is a person who can be in your heart, who can walk by your side, who can talk with you day by day
throughout your human existence. Christ is a person.

He was born a person. God was His father, the Virgin Mary was His mother. He was known as a person to these parents.
He was known as a person to the lowly, humble shepherds
who came to worship Him.
Several days later the wise men came from various parts of the world to worship Him.

They looked upon Him as a person. Later in the temple of God He was known as a person to Simeon, the prophet, and Anna, the prophetess.

King Herod knew Christ as a person and was afraid of Him.
The angels knew Him as a person and worshiped Him.
The people of Nazareth knew
Christ as a person—and rejected
Him. As a twelve-year-old boy
He was known as a person by the priests and lawyers in the temple of Jerusalem.

Christ preached and healed

as a person. Satan challenged Him as a person, coming to Him in the wilderness and tempting Him face to face as a person. Satan knew Christ was a person.

The disciples knew Him as a person. Christ died as a person, as a man on a cross, hanging suspended between heaven and earth. He died as a person in our place and He rose
as the Son of God.

And He is a person near and dear to me, Oral Roberts. I first knew Christ as a person
when I was a child. Growing up in my father and mother's home, I found that they were so close to Christ that they talked with Him, they walked with Him.

And when I gave my life to God, Christ became nearer and dearer to me as a person, not only in my heart but also by my side and in my hands.

I believe not only that Christ is a Spirit, an idea, a symbol filling the world, but that He is also a person, a living man and He, Jesus, is in my heart.
He as a person walks by my side and speaks in my ear.

Jesus Christ is a person. He wants to be in you. He wants to be with you. He wants to walk beside you—and that makes all the difference in the world. He invites you now to accept Him as your personal Saviour, a Saviour who is a person.

Q: I always feel awkward about meeting people. I guess I'm shy but wish I wasn't. Is there anything I can do about it?

A: Shy people very often approach strangers or groups with the gloomy conviction that the worst is about to happen: that they'll be snubbed—that they'll be disliked—that somebody will be rude to them. Shyness then becomes a sort of quaking defense against these imaginary rejections.

If you stop and give the problem some thought you'll realize that, unless you do something to provoke dislike (such as being deliberately rude) there is no reason on earth why people won't accept you wholeheartedly. Many of them are as uneasy and shy as you and are waiting for some indication of friendship or acceptance on your part.

The next time you find yourself in the midst of a new group of people, meet them on the premise that they're going to like you. They will, too.

itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. (Matthew 6:34).

While learning to drive an automobile, often looked far ahead and sometimes saw traffic problems. I then began to worry about how I would manage to drive through when I got to that place.

My husband, who was my teacher, always said, "Don't worry about the traffic ahead: watch what you are doing here. Those problems you see ahead will usually clear up before you get there."

How true that fact is in the life of a Christian! Jesus always counseled against worrying about what may lie ahead. The psalmist tells us to cast our burdens on the Lord.

We become concerned with things that may happen tomorrow instead of doing all we can today. Too often we forget that God is present with us today and will be with us each tomorrow. Everything will work out all right if we have faith and exercise patience.

Prayer
O Father, teach us to be calm, trustful Christians, not anxious over something that may happen in the future. Help us to be busy in doing Thy will today. Sustain our faith that we may use every moment as a shining one for Thee by doing good in the Master's name. Amen.

Morocco Trades On Progress

The Kingdom of Morocco has recently opened a trade center in New York City at 51 West 43rd Street, to provide American businessmen with reliable, up-to-date information about Moroccan export and import needs.

Under the direction of Mr. Michel Sippel the center will work in close contact with the Moroccan Ministry of Commerce to provide last minute trade data for the importers. The center will give further assistance by keeping prospective importers by keeping examples of Moroccan products and manufacture on hand.

Since Morocco is primarily an agricultural country, it is expected that the bulk of American imports will be of cereal and vegetable products. Moroccan handiwork, however, is among the most delicate and intricate to be found, and should also figure prominently in future exchanges between Morocco and the United States.

One exhibition at the trade center which should charm adult and child alike, displays a variety of Moroccan dolls dressed in costumes peculiar to the different regions of Morocco. This photograph shows a doll in the colorful garb traditional in Marakesh. This delicate craftsmanship for which Morocco has long been famed makes its handicrafts among the most artistic in the world.

Those in whom Christ lives never walk alone.

BABSON

Writes . . .

BY ROGER W. BABSON
Babson Discusses Individualism Versus Associations

BABSON PARK, Mass., May 12—The days of rugged individualism have ceased. Henry Ford was noted for it. He always wanted to "go alone, across lots and on foot." He had little use for committees or associations. For many years he would join the National Automobile Manufacturers Association; he and others were in a position to go it alone because they had some original ideas and were patient enough to work them.

I Believe In Co-Operation

The story of advancing civilization, however, is a record of man's willingness to co-operate. The Trade Association Directory, prepared by the U. S. Department of Commerce shows that there are 3,000 regional and 7,000 local associations of businessmen. With these are affiliated 12,000 trade associations, 5,000 local Chambers of Commerce, and 30,000 businessmen's luncheon clubs. It seems as if everyone is a "joiner," and may join several business groups. Yet even the above figures do not cover the many purely social, church, labor, and farm fraternal groups. As for employees' organizations, there are 200 national and about 800 local unions.

There has been much fun poked at the "Organization Man," meaning a lower-echelon executive in big business corporations. But practically every man and woman are members of organized voluntary groups. In our free U. S., these members retain a very large degree of independence; and, except in cartels and some labor unions, individuals are not coerced or regimented or herded. On the whole, ours is a nation of free individuals—though not as free as were our pioneer fathers.

Small Businessmen

Freedom to organize is one of our basic American freedoms. Special and new interests keep arising in our world of rapid changes; one new bustling area is that of Small Business, which since 1938 has been self-organized solely and specifically to protect the legitimate interests of independent small and medium-sized business people. The largest of these Small Business Organizations is the National Federation of Independent Business, with headquarters at Burlingame, California. G. Wilson Harder, president. This Federation presents its point of view to the Small Business Committees of the Senate and House. It is outstanding in its co-operation with all Senators and Representatives—and in keeping them informed of grassroots opinion on all legislation affecting small business. It has a highly respected and competent Vice President in Washington giving full time to matters of legislative activity.

There was established by Congress in 1953 the Small Business Administration and a subsidiary, the Small Business Investment Administration. This latter has made total short-term loans of $856,403,000 to upwards of 20,000 individual independent small business firms; in addition it has advanced long-term equity capital of $3,785,000 during the past year. It is now administering over 19,000 business and disaster loans, including loans transferred from the former R.F.C. Sixty per cent of these loans were made in participation with banks. The cumulative losses through 1959 from SBA loans have been only 1.1%, a remarkable showing. I am convinced that the "little people" have financial responsibility and character.

Are We Over-Organized?

Is organization "cramping the style" of individuals and reducing their initiative? Are too many of us becoming "leaners" instead of "lifters"? I believe that as long as organizations are voluntary, they will wither away when they lose their usefulness. Individuals can make their influence felt within homogeneous groups of their choosing, dealing with problems about which they have direct knowledge.

For some years—with my associate Ernest Gaunt of Orlando, Florida—I have watched these "small businessmen and women." At least once each year I like to publicly testify to their integrity, industry, and importance. They are the hope of America.

School Patrols

Will Parade

On Saturday

Some 3,000 boys and girls from the Maryland area will participate in the 24th Annual School Safety Patrol Parade, May 14, in Washington, D. C., according to Fred R. Ulrich, president, Automobile Club of Maryland.

The local contingent will spend the better part of a day in the nation's capital devoting part of their time to visiting the city's many historic sites the AAA club official said. The trip is intended as a reward to the local Patrol's for their efforts in protecting their schoolmates in traffic.

Leading the Maryland delegation to Washington will be Mr. T. T. Pantaleo Jr., Club safety director. Included in the delegation will be approximately thirteen bands, nine slogans and seven floats.

The five-hour parade honoring the nation's 770,000 School Safety Patrol members, the longest of its kind in Washington, is held on historic Constitution Avenue, with the Capitol, the Washington Monument and the Lincoln Memorial as a backdrop.

As part of the ceremonies, May 14 will be designated "School Safety Patrol Day", by AAA President Frederick T. McGuire Jr.

Mr. Ulrich said the effectiveness of the Patrols can be measured by the startling drop in traffic deaths involving school-age youngsters.

"Since the Safety Patrol Program was launched in 1922, the traffic death rate of children between 5 and 14 years of age has been cut in half, while the death rate of other age groups has nearly doubled," he said. "The diligent efforts of the Safety Patrols undoubtedly have played a role in this reduction."

The AAA club official said some 30,000 boys and girls from 25 states and the District of Columbia will march in the event.

have been built since World War II on what were once farms and woodlands.

Deer find the new environment much to their liking. It doesn't take long for new land-owners to close the region to the deer hunter by posting legally obtained forbiddance signs. Choice browse, with no hunters, makes a haven for the deer. As a herd increases, damage mounts. In some areas deer are shot for control, but in heavily populated sections, this can't be done.

In the Ligonier Valley of southwestern Pennsylvania, experimental trapping is being tried by the Pennsylvania Game Commission. Traps are built of heavy oak in openwork slatted construction. They resemble huge rabbit traps.

Trapping is best in severe winter months when ice and snow make fodder scarce. The hungry whitetail follows a food trail of apples and corn into the trap and is caught when it trips a wire. A boxed-in deer may panic and be severely injured in its wild surge for freedom. Therefore trap dimensions are such as to allow comfortable entry, head down. Once the trap is sprung, the victim is so confined that there is no room for movement to cause injury. The sides of the trap are moved inward to restrict the animal further as it is transferred to a transporting crate. A panel in the top of the crate is opened, and as the deer puts its head out, one game protector holds the head and another affixes an ear identification tag. Thus the deer is marked and recorded to establish its history after release.

Loaded on trucks, deer are taken to selected release areas. Most deer are set free on game lands managed for public hunting. Others are set free in remote areas where these animals are scarce and forage is good. Some whitetails refuse to accept new range and return to be trapped repeatedly. A repeater, so identified by its tag, is moved many miles farther, in hopes that it will stay put.

Persons receiving social security benefits can save themselves a great deal of inconvenience if they report promptly when they change their address, according to W. S. King, Manager of the Hagerstown Social Security Office.

Our country is on the move; the latest figures show that one out of every five families will relocate at some time each year. Many of these are folks who are getting social security benefits.

If you are getting benefits, you can assure prompt delivery of your monthly checks by reporting a change of address as soon as you move. Pre-addressed post-card forms are furnished to each social security applicant. This card may be completed to make the change. If you have misplaced the card, a signed note or post-card to the nearest social security office, showing your name, social security No. and your new address will do. You may, of course, call at any social security office and fill out a change of address form if it is more convenient. Telephone calls will not do for changing an address.

The Social Security Administration is only interested in addresses of those who are getting benefits—so if you are not getting monthly checks, do not send a notice of change of address. On all correspondence to the Social Security Administration, your social security number should be shown. The social security office for residents of Frederick County is located at 59 North Cannon Avenue in Hagerstown.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Rodgers and family, Baltimore, visited over the weekend with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Topper and Mrs. Thornton Rodgers.

Things You Should Know About Locks

To keep your locks in good working order... check periodically to make sure the screws on all latches and knobs are tight. Try rubbing moist soap on the strike-plate of a troublesome latch. Use graphite—never oil—on a lock that's hard to turn—especially stubborn auto locks.

No matter how secure your locks are—the house is safe if only you and the family have keys! Builders, rental agents, or previous tenants may still have the keys to your home. When moving into a house, have the tumbler on the locks reset. It's inexpensive.

In the past there have been cases of criminals posing as locksmiths in order to gain entry to homes. Beware of bogus locksmiths! Your legitimate locksmith carries an identification card, registered with the Associated Locksmiths of America.

Freezer Tips Given

Since many families stock their freezers with quarters or sides of beef at this time of year, C. S. Brinsfield, Chief, Division of Food Control, State Department of Health, released today a list of suggestions for families with home freezers.

Mr. Brinsfield pointed out that the Department is interested in seeing that all foods stored in frozen food cabinets are handled in a manner which will guarantee the maintenance of their quality and wholesomeness during the time of storage.

"It should be remembered," Mr. Brinsfield said, "that a home frozen food cabinet or deep freeze is primarily a frozen food storage facility and not intended to be used to freeze large quantities of foods."

As a rule, the amount of food that can be frozen in a home freezer at one time should not exceed one and one-half pounds per cubic foot of storage space. Consequently, if a large quantity of meat is to be purchased it should be cut, properly wrapped, and "sharp frozen" before it is placed in the home freezer for storage.

"Sharp freezing" quickly freezes the outer areas of the meat so that the juices are retained rather than lost through weeping. Before the sharp freeze process, the cuts should be well wrapped in heavy duty freezer paper, with packages so nearly air tight as practical to prevent dehydration in storage. Properly packaged and properly sharp frozen meat is not only nutritionally superior to poorly packaged or slowly frozen meat, but also in most instances has a better flavor.

Other suggestions from the State Health Department for families with home freezers are:

1. Make sure your deep freeze maintains a temperature of 0°F. or lower. Freezer thermometers are available for this purpose. If the temperature stays above zero for an appreciable period of time, loss of quality—or actual spoilage—can result.
2. Prior to obtaining the supply of meat or other foods, check to see if the storage cabinet needs defrosting. If frost is too thick around the sides, more electricity is used.
3. Check the gaskets on the door or lid to be sure that refrigeration will not be lost. This can be done easily by placing a piece of newspaper on the gasket and closing the door. If the newspaper cannot be pulled out without tearing, the seal is satisfactory.
4. Know the source of your meat, and the grade you are purchasing. Freezing cannot improve the flavor or quality of the original product.
5. Tell the person cutting the meat the weight or size you want in various cuts — thickness of steaks, amount of trimming and boning, etc. See that all packages are properly wrapped.

Latest survey shows there are 5,845,000 outdoor motors in use in this country.—Sports Afield.

ages of meat are dated and marked as to the name of the cut.

6. If you have any packages in your freezer when your new supply arrives, place the old packages on top of the new, so that the old will be used first.

Senator Kennedy To Visit Frederick Today

United States Senator John F. Kennedy will bring his meet-the-people campaign for Maryland's Democratic convention delegate votes to Frederick today (Friday, May 13).

The Massachusetts Senator is the first major contender for the Democratic nomination to campaign in the Free State.

He will begin a Western Maryland tour at Hagerstown at 8:00 a. m. and arrive in Frederick by car at 11:30 a. m.

After a tour of Frederick County, the Senator will drive to West View Shopping Center in Baltimore County for a tour of the center with County Chief Executive Officer Christian H. Kahl and Michael J. Birmingham.

Senator Kennedy will be joined there by James Nolan, North Central Kennedy chairman.

From Baltimore County, Senator Kennedy will go to Anne Arundel County but will return to Baltimore for a Metropolitan Area Rally at the Emerson Hotel at 8:00 p. m.

Yesterday Senator Kennedy toured Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties. He will tour

the Eastern Shore May 14.

Mount Splits Doubleheader

Mt. St. Mary's and Towson State divided a Mason-Dixon Conference doubleheader at Emmitsburg Tuesday afternoon, Towson taking the opening game 5-0 while the Mounts grabbed the nightcap 5-4.

Jerry Doelle tossed a two-hitter for Towson in the opener as teammates Harry Rest and Lee Hammand backed him with home runs. The first game was a makeup of a 2-2 tie at Towson April 1.

Larry Wheeler's three-run homer in the third inning featured the Mount victory in the second game. A pair of runs in the fourth inning enabled the Mount to survive a four run rally by Towson in the top of the sixth.

The Mountaineers, 5-6, ended their season yesterday when they met Western Maryland here.

Mother's Day guests at the home of Mr. Mrs. Roy Wivell were: Mr. and Mrs. James Wivell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wivell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wivell and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Wivell and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wivell and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hoff and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Reaver.

Medical Milestones

New Diuretic Drug Developed

One of the more common physical disorders the physician faces in every-day practice is edema, the accumulation of excess water in the body. Edema is not a disease itself, but rather a symptom of some other disorder. The edema can, however, become serious if not corrected.

Edema manifests itself visually by swelling of the ankles, legs, hands and arms. It can be caused by a number of things, most often by a weak heart or malfunction of the kidneys.

"Congestive heart failure" (weakened heart action) is the most common cause. When heart action lessens, it is unable to pump the amount of required blood at the normal rate. As a result, the kidneys do not manufacture and discharge urine at a normal rate, thereby causing an increase in salt and water in the body. The problem, then, is to eliminate this excess body fluid and at the same time maintain a proper balance between water, salt and other essential minerals.

Digitalis, a powerful cardiac stimulant, is often used by the physician to increase heart activity. The diet of the patient is also regulated, with particular attention to the intake of salt. And as a third step, and one of the most important, the doctor will prescribe a diuretic, a drug which increases the body's elimination of fluids. These three approaches can help the congestive heart failure patient live a comparatively normal life.

There are a number of diuretics available to the physician. For many years these agents had to be injected, but in recent years oral forms have been developed. Medical science, though, has not been satisfied and the search for more effective, less toxic diuretics has continued.

The search has paid off with a better, non-mercurial diuretic that can be taken by mouth, giving us another medical milestone in the treatment of edemas. Sold only on prescription, the drug is called Naqua. It is more potent than other agents of its type, is less toxic, and tends to maintain a better balance of water and salt.

When excess fluid backs up in the body, hypertension (high blood pressure) results. The new diuretic also relieves the hypertension by eliminating excess salt from the body.

If you notice swelling of the ankles or hands, you should consult your family doctor, for this could be a symptom of some other illness.
