Pursuant to my column in last week's edition of the Chronicle when I discussed the benefits this area would receive if the big dam at Six's Bridge were built, and if it would be open for recreational purposes, I have come up with some pertinent information. My information comes from Senator Glenn Beall and Congressman Charles McC. Mathias. I questioned the value of the project, on a local level, unless it would be used also for recreational purposes. I have been assured that this is part of the purpose of the enterprise. Here's Senator Beall's response: The project will permit recreation and free public access thereto. The present policy of the Army Corps of Engineers is to acquire, as a part of reservoir project construction, adequate lands necessary for the realization of optimum values for all purposes including adland areas to assure full realization of optimum present and future outdoor recreational and fish and wildlife potentials for each reservoir. In addition to land below the maximum flowage line, fee title will be acquired to provide for public access to the maximum flowage line, of for operation and maintenance of the project. Title also would be acquired for such lands as are needed to meet present and future public requirements for outdoor recreation, as may be authorized by Congressman Mathias writes: I understand that boating and swimming will be allowed on the proposed reservoir. There have been some predictions, however, that the lake would not be suitable for requatic sports because of changes in the level of the water resulting from operation of the reservoir. Now there you have your answer. I would venture to say that fishing, swimming, boating, hunting and other associated sports would be permissible when the dam is completed. If these things mature then our area would fast develop into a sort of resort affair which would bring thousands of people here and which would be a financial boon to the community, one that is badly needed.

The Babe Ruthers have had a good year, their initial one here. If you would care to witness just what has developed then be on hand when the playoffs start here Monday. All-stars from the teams have been moulded into a team that will engage outsiders and some sterling baseball playing is in store for those taking the time out to watch the locals strut their stuff. Let's back up these youngsters with ffiour moral support folks. They have worked hard their first year and may be the nucleous of future town team. See you there Monday?

Babe Ruth Playoffs Here Monday

This area will be given an excellent opportunity to witness some high caliber baseball playing when the district playoffs in the Babe Ruth League will be held starting Monday on the local grounds.

This Sunday the stars of several local teams will be selected to represent the area in the All-Star playoffs. A Valley League, comprising players of Emmitsburg and Smithsburg, will be formed and will meet opposition teams from throughout the county and other areas. "I . . . am filled with gratitude to our Heavenly Father for all the mercies He has extended to us," Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee wrote in a letter to his wife 100 years ago this week.

Lee's gratitude was caused by events at Richmond, thy 4:10. Goodspeed). where Gen. George B. McClellan's siege had been lifted and where McClellan's army had been driven away from the Confederate capital. But before the week was out, Lee This places Demas in noble comwould have still more reason for gratitude.

For that same week, two of the Confederacy's greatest guerilla fighters, Bedford Forrest and John H. Morgan, mas has deserted me," especially went on the warpath in Kentucky and Tennessee with re- at a time when Paul needed him sults that would spread consternation among the federals all the way to Washington.

At daybreak on July 9, the same day that Lee wrote world. his letter, Morgan rode into the little village of Celina in north central Tennessee with 1,000 men to begin his series of raids. Four days later, Forrest, with 2,000 cavalrymen, his attitude or what he did-just moved at a trot into Murfreesboro, Tenn., to battle with the federals there.

Forrest's Raid

Forrest's attack was the more sensational. After capturing the pickets outside Murfreesboro, he sent a troop may at first bring a thrill; but be so quick to run to the drug of Georgians dashing into the town where they captured federals on the streets and most of the federal supplies. A Texas unit charged into one of the federal encampments, shooting and yelling over the tents, and a battalion of Tennessee and Kentucky soldiers captured a Pennsylvania cavalry unit, then circled to the rear to prevent a federal re-

The fighting continued into the afternoon, until Forrest demanded surrender "or I will have every man put to the sword." The threat brought about a capitulation, and Forrest captured, in all, 1,700 troops, about 600 horses and mules, four pieces of artillery and a quantity of government supplies.

Morgan's Raid

Morgan's attack at Celina was of little consequence, in itself, but it began a series of raids that would have important results. At Celina, he attacked 240 Pennsylvanians, driving them off and taking a score of prisoners.

That night, Morgan and his men crossed into Kentucky for 19 days of raiding through the Cumberlands, and when he was through he was able to report: "I have traveled over a thousand miles, captured 17 towns, destroyed all the government supplies and arms in them, dispersed about 1500 Home Guards (and captured) and paroled nearly 1,200 regular troops. I lost in killed, wounded and missing, of the number that I carried into Kentucky, about 90."

There was another development that week in the federal army that would work for the good of the Southern cause

In Washington, Gen. John Pope, the federal general who had captured Island Number 10, was getting off to a bad start in organizing the government's new Army of Virginia in northern Virginia. On June 14, Pope issued an order telling his troops, "I have come to you from the West, where we have always seen the backs of our enemies." The order, instead of inspiring his new troops, made them angry. It was the first of many mistakes for Pope in his new command, but it would not be the worst.

sleepless now and then. And nobody can live a completely stressfree life, so extra tension must be expected from time to time.

For another, what you can buy in the drug store are not true tranquilizers or sleeping pills. These can still be bought only with a prescription. Principal ingredients of the patient medicines are an antihistamine, a couple of mild sedatives, and sometimes a pain-killer. The pills may produce a slight drowsiness.

The government allows these drugs to be sold over the counter because taken in the recommended dosages they are harmless. But the tense insomiac is just the one most likely to take more than the recommended dose or get im patient for results and repeat the dose too soon. Any of the ingredients in excessive amounts can be dangerous. And no tranquilizer or sleeping pill should be taken Thee this day, and to be strong for a long period of time except under a doctor's supervision.

For the sleeplessness try a warm bath, a hot drink, more ventilation, a bed-time snack. You can disregard occasional tense moments as the hard lot of anyone living in this unquiet world.

But if sleeplessness and tension ersist, they can be serious symp toms and should not be self-treated. Delay in seeking medical advice may make an underlying condition worse. So if you feel tense or have difficulty sleeping most

A Warning To Heed

The Wall Street Journal, a newspaper which has been watching the stock market closely for a long time, carried some pungent editorial comment following the recent down-swing of stock prices. It referred to the price break that caused the value of stocks to drop many billions as a "jolt" that could serve as a "timely warning," one the nation had better heed. This jolt to the market, it said, might be very helpful if the country and Washington, would pay any attention to it.

Being no thing apart from the rest of thec ountry, the market may be considered a mirror in which real or imagined economic conditions are reflected, the Journal explained. "Whenever its wild enthusiasm reflects an illusion it is only because a delusion exists elsewhere." It is easy for all of us to recall the widespread lack of confidence and the fear that followed the government's massive unleashing of punitive power against the steel industry. Basic Delusions

But the Journal probes further. "The root of the stock market's trouble, which is now being corrected, is a delusion. It is the delusion that a nation, unlike a family, will never be called to account for imprudent economic policies. It is the delusion that the Government, if it will just intervene boldly, can always keep everything spinning upward. It is the delusion that Government can abuse the economy one moment and whip it on to new heights in the next."

President Kennedy's oft-repeated campaign promise was to "get America moving ahead" to unheard-of levels of growth and employment. This kind of unprecedented prosperity would, of course, patch up all the deficits in the budget caused by throwing billions around in order to achieve the prosperity. A sort of "perpetual emotion" of politicians, as the wag put it. Here is the Journal's description of how the President, dissatisfied with the booming decade behind him, would move the nation ahead to greater and greater growth: To Move Ahead

"True, there were a few little problems. But the Administration was going to solve the dollar problem abroad by cutting Aunt Bessie's customs allowance. It was going to spur business by suing nearly every major company under the antitrust laws, and hold down prices by telling major industries what they could do. It was going to encourage savings by withholding taxes on savings, encourage farmers to solve the farm problem by putting them under the tightest controls ever, encourage labor by fixing the formula for their wages."

This approach, the Journal went on to say, has never made any sense. It is a credit to our system that the economy is still robust despite all the punishment given it. "All it needs now is for people to stop abusing it. To stop pretending that costs can be pushed up and prices held down, that we can spend without limit at home and abroad and never pay the piper, that high taxes are a tonic for vigorous growth, that Government can make the business of the nation go forward by kicking it in the behind." Back To Basics

The Journal is entirely right. Perhaps it is not required that business be loved by the government, but some evidence of respect is essential. What business and industry needs from government most of all is understanding. This should include an appreciation of the nature of the free economy that makes possible our high production, high consumption pattern and is responsible for our high standards of living. The conciliatory words of recent weeks have been helpful, but words alone will not be enough to restore confidence.

All of us need to get back to the basic idea that a really free economy is one that it largely self-propelled, one that requires no coddling and petting from dispensers of patronage and political spoils. The fact is that we still live under a private capitalistic system, and it is the only kind of system that most Americans desire to live under. Our free enterprise system has been taking a terrific pounding in recent months from those who would have the government direct and manage to. Too many persons in high places do not want to promote a free economy nor allow people to make their own decisions. They want everything socialism has to offer except the name, forgetting that socialism is the road to mediocrity.

Wherever the market may be historically, it is high in consideration of the low yields of most good stocks. These yields are from 2% to 3% mostly. Compared with this most savings banks pay from rate of 31/2 % or more. I am devoting my column today to discussing the various advertisements in magazines, placed largely by big-city West Coast banks and savings and loan associations, promising this high rate of interest with safety. Probably some people in each of the 400 cities in which this column appears are sending money out of their local community for deposit in one of these establishments which advertise in leading magazines. I believe this is wrong and unpatriotic.

My Own Experience

I invest money for a charitable organization in Gloucester, Massachusetts, for which I sold stocks at a handsome profit early in 1962. I depositied $75,000 with the Savings Department of the Cape Ann National Bank & Trust Company at 31/2 % interest. I invested $50,000 in the 4% stock of the company which supplies Gloucester with natural gas. This preferred stock sells at a discount to yield around 5%.

One of my co-trustees urged that I use the 31/2 % deposit to buy similar cumulative preferred stocks which yield 5%. The able Vice President, Mr. Waldon Anderson, telephoned me that a member of my family is a director of the bank and that my great-uncle was one of the founders. Thereupon I agreed to leave this $75,000 at 31/2 % with the understanding that, if the rate is changed to 4% for new deposits, this charitable trust's deposit of $75,000 will be marked up to 4%, although of course, the higher return will not be made retroactive.

Every City Needs Strong Banks I believe that it is very unpatriotic for anyone living in an eastern city to withdraw his account from a local bank, or to take his "capital gains" and send the money to great banks in Los Angeles or even San Francisco. Every one of the 400 cities or towns having this column needs the money for expansion for established local businesses. Southern California, which is getting a majority of the defense money and is starting new electronic companies every week, does not, in my judgment, need the money.

For a community to grow, its people must realize that its banks are a "two-way street". In order to loan money, the banks must increase their deposits. Therefore, the local people should not withdraw their money and send same to big Western banks. Help Your Local

Banks And Industries

It's a fact that weed beds and fish seem to go together like ham and eggs and girls and boys.

The reasons for this attraction are well known. The weeds are an apartment house to the micro-scopic animal life that live in a lake. Minnows and a lake. Minnows and other small fish go there seeking this aquatic life and bass and other game fish go there seeking the smaller fish.

The weed beds also provide cover for the game fish, and they like to be protected from even larger game fish that could be about. This is where a predator called man comes in. He, too heads for the weed beds, to comb out the game fish that he wants for his din-

Now a bait man is quite happy with this situation, by and large, because he can dunk a minnow or a night crawler almost anywhere, regardless of how many weeds are in the way. He can pick out a small opening and plunk his bait in-to it, with a good chance of tatching a fish.

Not so with the lure tossers. They are forced to either use a weedless plug or have each cast come back with the lure looking like a loaded hay rake. And while there are a few really weedless lures on the mar-ket, most of them hang up when the going gets tough. So what can a dedicated artificial lure man do?

He can glide along silently with the prop on his feather-weight Merc 60 barely turn-ing over, flipping lures beside the overhanging mass of weeds, searching for tiny channels and holes in which he can drop a surface plug, or working just off the edges with a deeper lure.

He might lose a few lures in so doing, but the rewards will more than justify their loss. them personally. It will do them | placement? Use a bobby pin. And | Advances in surgery make it good and do you good. California is a wonderful state.

THE MARYLAND ECONOMY -Maryland Department of Economic Development. As the southern anchor of the future "Megalopolis" reaching from Boston to Washington, D. C., Maryland is rapidly emerging as a dynamic economic area. In the last ten years, Maryland's population has grown at nearly twice the national rate and economic activity has increased to keep pace. This is Jacques Lassaigne, translated by the first of a series of annual re-Stuart Gilbert. NOTICE

Low water pressure is being experienced here and there throughout Emmitsburg due to the use of water for the purposes of irrigating lawns, sprinkling vegetable gardens, filling plastic swimming pools, etc. Some folks are unable to get water for extended periods because others are drawing water continuously for the above mentioned purposes. It is regrettable that this free use of water cannot continue since there is plenty of water in the reservoirs. However, the water mains are not large enough to carry the regular amount plus the additional lawn and garden use, therefore the pressure drops. In order to correct this, we must enforce our already existing rule and ask that lawn sprinkling, garden irrigation, the filling of plastic pools, etc. be discontinued until further notice. Full cooperation in this matter will restore normal pressure and many of your neighbors and friends will be most grateful. Thank You.
