Mother Nature seems bent on devastating local crops one way or another. With gardens badly parched and vegetables stunted, and with the hay crop at about half yield and the corn threatened by the extended drought, along came another twist of fate in the form of hail. So heavy and large was Monday night's downfall of hail that orchard crops, corn and other maturing produce were shredded and knocked to the ground. Orchardists report the damage so severe that crops might well be ruined for several years to come. In Taneytown, Gettysburg and Fairfield areas residents reported the hail that fell was as large as golf balls. Seems as though this will be a tough year for area farmers, gardeners and orchardists.

A real setback to the town's progress occurred recently when the new list of house numbers being compiled by the local Jaycees became lost. Considerable time and work in compiling this list of numbers was done by the Jaycees and now it has all been in vain. With it goes any hope of having door-to-door mail delivery as one of the prerequisites is that all houses in the community must be numbered. For a decade now I have been clamoring for someone or some group or the town officials to get this project under way. The Jaycees took up the challenge and had just about completed the list when bingo, it has become lost, destroyed or tossed out. This probably represents the death knell to the project for another 20 years so you might as well get used to walking to the Postoffice for your daily mail.

Employment opportunities locally have a great potential for the next several years. With the new building projects now under way at both local colleges, all kinds of labor, both skilled and unskilled, are needed. The one project is estimated to last for at least three years so you see there should be little if any unemployment here for several years. With the addition of these new buildings there will be added employment for they have to be staffed and maintained by personnel. Yes, the employment security picture here at the present appears rather bright. In addition to the above mentioned projects it is rumored that one of our local factories will expand soon and another will erect a complete new building at another location here.

Garden Club Meets

Mrs. George Green entertained the members of the Silver Fancy Garden Club at luncheon at the Green Parrot Tea Shop, Emmitsburg, on Thursday, July 19.

Following the luncheon, the members adjourned to the home of Mrs. Green for the business meeting with President, Mrs. Andrew Eyster presiding.

Mrs. John White of Emmitsburg was welcomed as a new member. The guest speaker was Mr. Rhea Kincaid of Thurmont, an Agronomist for the Federal Government who showed slides of Maryland called "The Land and the Book" with the Rev. Mr. Day of Harford County narrating in verse accompanied by organ music. Mr. Kincaid has won a Federal Government award for the slides which are noted for their beauty and realistic scenery, and he has exhibited them in all sections of the state.

The August meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. James Lord of Taneytown.

A food sale will be held Saturday, July 28, beginning at 10:00 a.m. at the Fire Hall. The sale is for the benefit of the Babe Ruth baseball clubs.

Ball Game Sunday

Emmitsburg's two Babe Ruth teams were handed a double victory last Sunday when the teams from Smithsburg failed to appear for the scheduled double-header. This Sunday, July 29, a game will be played at Community Field beginning at 1:30 p.m. Two players were injured last week: Rice with a cracked rib and Hess with a broken thumb.

Lutheran Festival And Supper Tomorrow

Rev. Philip Bower, pastor of Elias Ev. Lutheran Church, announces that the annual festival and ham supper for the benefit of the church will be held on the church lawn Saturday. Servings will start at 3:30 p.m. and will continue until all are served. Should inclement weather prevail the affair will be held in the parish hall.

During the evening entertainment will be provided by the Dynamics, a local orchestra, and a concert will be presented by the Emmitsburg Municipal Band. Director Walter A. Simpson announced the following program for the evening: March, Spic and Span, Losey; overture, Daughter of the Elm, Skaggs; fantasia, Gems of Stephen Foster, Tobani; Idyl, Glow Worm, Lincke; march, Rigoso, Chambers; polka, Lichensteine; popular, Sail Along Silver Moon, Henrich; march, American Red Cross, Panella. The concert will be the second of a series of four Mr. Simpson announces.

Patrons attending the supper will find on hand many other varied interesting and entertaining features. The public is cordially invited to attend the affair.

CHURCH PICNIC SUNDAY

The annual Picnic for the Incarnation-St. James Parish of The United Church of Christ will be held on Saturday, July 28, at Mt. Tabor Park in Rocky Ridge.

The families and friends of members of Incarnation Church of Emmitsburg, Md., and of St. James Church, R.I., Littlestown, Pa., are invited to Mt. Tabor Park any time during the afternoon on Saturday. The time before supper will be free for various recreational activities—horseshoes, baseball, and enjoying the slide.

Supper will be served at 6:30 p.m. Each family is requested to bring its own picnic basket lunch, which is to be spread on one large table under the pavilion. From this table, the meal will be served 'cafeteria' style. Each family is also to bring its own plates, cups, and silverware. Lemonade for everyone will be provided by a committee of ladies from Incarnation Church, and cakes for dessert will be furnished by various ladies of the St. James Congregation. The tablecloth and napkins will be furnished.

The program and hymn-sing will begin at 8 p.m. Vocal solos, duets, and readings presented by various members of both congregations of the parish will be included in the program of the evening. Miss Janet Springer will serve as the pianist for the group singing of many of the favorite hymns. An offering will be received during the program to defray the expenses for renting the park and for the treat of ice cream which will be served following the evening program and entertainment.

The following persons have served as members of the program and refreshment committee: Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Swomley, Jr., Mrs. George J. Martin, Mrs. Glenn Springer, and Mrs. D. Frank Harman of Incarnation Church; Fred W. Fissel, Mrs. Lee R. Krout, Mrs. Robert T. Laughman, and Mrs. John C. Chatlos of the St. James Congregation.

In addition to a milking herd of 31 registered Holsteins, 25 heifers of various ages are kept in their own loafing barn. The farm features a 500 gallon bulk tank, barn cleaner, silo unloader, bulk feed storage and a full line of machinery. Spring Dale Farm houses 750 chickens and sells hatching eggs.

The farm is owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Weaver. Mr. Weaver, a graduate of Gettysburg High School, is secretary of the Battlefield Chapter of Future Farmers of America. FATHER TWOMEY TRANSFERRED TO MICHIGAN

Official announcement of the transfer of Rev. Fr. James Twomey, pastor of St. Joseph's Catholic Church was made at all the Masses in the church Sunday. Father Twomey, who succeeded Father John Sullivan, now deceased, five years ago, will take up his new duties at Jackson, Mich., sometime in August.

During his tenure as pastor here Father Twomey made many improvements to both the church itself and the surrounding grounds. Among the principal improvements made were: Removal of the high wall around the rectory grounds and installation of a new lower wall which helped eliminate a serious traffic hazard at that spot; cutting back of the graveyard fence so that motorists could better see oncoming traffic; refurnishing church pews; retiling church vestibule and adding new doors; installing new isle linoleum; recarpeting sanctuary and just recently relaid new sidewalk and curbing on the church side of DePaul Street.

Father Twomey leaves a host of friends here and will be tendered a farewell social Monday evening following church devotions on the church grounds, by his many friends.

100 YEARS AGO

McCLELLAN IS ORDERED BACK TO WASHINGTON

By Lon K. Savage

Gen. Henry W. Halleck, the federal government's new commander-in-chief, traveled down from Washington to Harrison's Landing on the James River just east of Richmond 100 years ago this week with an all-important decision to consider.

The decision: whether to pull Gen. George B. McClellan and his army of 100,000 back from Richmond toward Washington or to let the army try again to take the Confederate capital.

Halleck and McClellan conferred along the river bank without reaching any basic agreement, but before the week was out the decision had been made. McClellan would withdraw and come north again. It had been reached partially because of the military situation at the time, but probably more because of politics and personalities.

Cordial Meeting

Halleck and McClellan were cordial but stiff at the meeting, and no real decision was made. Halleck suggested that McClellan attack Richmond at once. McClellan indicated he would if he had 20,000 re-enforcements. (He estimated his enemy under Gen. Robert E. Lee at 200,000 strong when actually it was about 60,000). The meeting broke up with McClellan apparently thinking he would be re-enforced, Halleck thinking otherwise but being non-committal.

Meanwhile, other machinery was working that would make the decision for them.

In Washington, word came in that week that the South's "Stonewall" Jackson was coming north and already reached central Virginia, menacing with his hard-fighting army the new federal army that had been assembled under Gen. John Pope. Halleck, back in Washington and thinking Richmond might be weak without Jackson, telegraphed McClellan to feel out the Confederates around Richmond, and McClellan did so, bringing on a little skirmishing between one of his divisions and the Confederates. But the fighting petered out.

Lincoln Impatient

Still other forces were at work. President Lincoln had reached almost the end of his patience with McClellan. On his visit to McClellan earlier in the month, McClellan had given him a letter outlining what he considered would be the proper way to conduct the war—as if it were McClellan's and not the President's task to make such decisions. Moreover, Lincoln was fast approaching a decision to issue a proclamation emancipating the slaves, and McClellan had shown himself opposed to this step. There was a political difference between them, in addition to the many differences over military matters.

Finally, while McClellan still insisted upon re-enforcements—men were not available—and while Jackson was threatening the federal troops in northern Virginia, the administration reached its decision. McClellan would have to pull back.

And as July came to an end, Halleck informed McClellan of the decision to withdraw his army and ordered him to start at once putting his men on transports to go up the Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River to a camp near Washington. McClellan, arguing all the way, complied.

Next week: Confederates plan to invade Kentucky.

An intelligent patient, who expects to get well, will not try to tell the doctor how to treat his ailment.

The modern puzzle is how the old folks managed to raise their children without a book on child care.

"I've Shipped More Milk Than Ever Before"

• When Dairyman C. R. Pool, Westminister, Maryland, switched his cows to Southern States Dairy Feed, his milk production—and profits—jumped way up. "Last month I shipped 37,449 pounds of milk from 34 cows," he says. "The month before that—37,470 pounds. And this was not just a spurt of the season." "To me this proves that a good way to establish a steady milk flow is to use Southern States Feed," says this profit-minded dairyman.

BABSON

Writes . . .

BY ROGER W. BABSON

Babson Discusses

Growth Companies

BABSON PARK, Mass., July 26—This is not an endorsement of "Growth Stocks." I do not recommend specific stocks in this weekly column; I will, however, discuss ten companies whose stocks are listed on the New York Stock Exchange that I believe have a bright future.

Office Equipment Companies

Owing to social security, retirement pensions, etc. many men and women who are now doing office work will retire within the next few years—with fewer replacements. This means there will be an increasing demand for machines to do office work now being done by these people—especially speeding up said work.

Among such companies I might especially mention the Adressograph-Multigraph Corp. and International Business Machines. I will also include Zenith Radio which hopes to get one million of its TV cabinets into the public schools, hospitals, and office buildings. I believe that TV will revolutionize teaching in our schools. Zenith Radio is also leading in color TV.

Camera Companies

These companies not only make a profit on the sale of their cameras and films to the public; but are also making large sales to the U. S. Government. Families are not content to own one camera, but each member of the family wants one. The family also buys the latest models as they come out.

Among these the Eastman Kodak Company stands out most prominently. The Polaroid Corp. is very progressive and has many valuable patents for the use of which other camera companies must pay royalties if they want to hold their trade. It is rumored that the Gillette Company has some plans along these lines, using part of the huge profits made from their razor business. All three of the above should profit from the constantly growing population of the U. S., which should reach 280 million in 1975.

New Building Companies

Although Corning Glass Works is best known for its "Pyrex" glassware, its great growth should come from new modern buildings. More glass is continually being used in new office buildings; while factories will appear as being built of all glass.

As new buildings of all kinds will need automatic heating, cooling, and ventilation systems the products of Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator may be in great demand. I could also include Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing in this general growth due to their ingenuity and new products. This company is known as the "Three M's".

Drug Companies And "Home Products"

The drug companies probably spend more money on research than any other group. Furthermore, they are on the verge of making some very wonderful discoveries in connection with DNA and RNA; two chemicals which may provide living cells. My first choice is American Cyanamid Company (which owns Lederle Laboratories). I also think that Bristol-Myers Company has good growth possibilities; and also Plough, Inc., of Memphis. However, perhaps the best of all is the great duPont Company of Wilmington.

My mention of "Home Products" in the above heading is because the American Home Products Co. has a very large sales force handling some products ordinarily sold by Procter & Gamble which could also be listed here. These are two companies that should profit by inflation—toward which we are surely headed. Let me add the steels, coppers, oils and natural gas companies; yes, most companies with great natural resources.

Rely On Averages

This makes fifteen corporations in all which I believe have distinct growth possibilities. I suppose my readers would like me to boil the list down to ten companies. I will not do this as so much depends upon the human factor of management which cannot be forecast. I feel, however, that some of the fifteen will turn out to be great disappointments, but no living soul can now tell which are the five that should be avoided.

This leads me to emphasize once more the great importance of diversification. Those who had their money distributed over a large number of established companies during the recent great stock market decline have nothing to fear. The dividends need not be cut and prices should hop back. In fact, I believe that the combined average price of the ten "lucky" stocks among those discussed above will some day sell for over $1,000.

Deal with the faults of others as gently as with your own.

CONNIE STEVENS AND TROY DONAHUE HAVE STARTED to receive the build-up as a romantic team. The two will work together next season in Hawaiian Eye. Troy is being transferred from the canceled Surfside 6... A half-hour film starring the late Ernie Kovacs kicks off CBS's Comedy Spot series July 3. The title is "Medicine Man," in which Ernie was assisted by Buster Keaton. Comedy Spot, summer replacement for The Red Skelton Show, comprises a group of audition films for series that never made it... NBC is shifting the new Eleventh Hour series, which stars Wendell Corey as a psychiatrist, from Monday nights at 10 (ET) on its fall schedule to Wednesday nights at 10. Reason: To get away from Ben Casey competition. David Brinkley's Journal will go into the 10-10:30 spot opposite Casey.

Connie Stevens... teams with Troy

ELI WALLACH, KIM HUNTER AND SUSAN KOHNER WILL STAR in the first Dick Powell Show episode of next season. Titled "Tomorrow, the Man," it is now in production... The Virginian, on which NBC has pinned great hopes for next season, completed casting on a Saturday and went into production the following Monday. James Drury will play the title role, with Lee J. Cobb co-starring as a judge. The feminine lead goes to Pippa Scott, late of Mr. Lucky. Other regulars are Doug McClure (from Checkmate), Roberta Shore (of the Bob Cummings Show) and Gary Clarke (Michael Shayne). Guest stars for the opener will be Hugh O'Brian and Colleen Dewhurst... Morey Amsterdam. (The Dick Van Dyke Show) and Pat Carroll will do the title role voices for ABC's new Hanna-Barbera cartoon series, The Jetsons.

Richard Boone... How Paladin began!

RICHARD BOONE WILL PLAY TWO ROLES in the first episode of Have Gun, Will Travel, next season. The story will tell how Paladin became Paladin with Boone playing Paladin as a young man and as an old gunslinger who taught young Paladin the tricks of the trade... A total of 52 new series has already been announced (largely by their hopeful producers and press agents) for the 1963-64 season. Among the latest entries: The Man from Buckingham, based on a Rolls Royce automobile leasing company; Kilroy was Here, a World War II comedy; and three untitled comedies being offered by Tony Owen, producer of the Donna Reed Show... MGM has plans for "How to Win Friends and Influence People" as a comedy series.

MARYLAND

Around The World In 80 Days

By Anabel Hartman

13. Japan (continued): Yokohama
Yokohama was visited only in the same sense that Kobe was—driven thru on the way to somewhere else, in this case, as I've already said, our ship, which had come on here from Kobe to pick up its passengers from their various land tours. So I can only report a great industrial and port city with places of natural beauty in the way of parks and gardens preserved from earlier times along with the many modern developments.

As we left Yokohama the evening of March 21 we were setting out on our longest non-stop stretch of sailing except that from New York to Palma, in the Mediterranean, our first port of call in the Cruise; this was to take us 3,389 miles farther out into the Pacific, heading for Hawaii, more than half-way to our own West Coast. The program of Shipboard Activities, previously summarized, however, continued in full swing, and the six days out of sight of land, with cloudiness and sunshine but no rain or hint of rough weather in an area where ships are frequently caught in such, passed pleasantly. It was now that we crossed the International Date Line and received from Father Time a whole extra day (a second Sunday, March 25) to compensate for the hours lost as we kept turning our watches forward along the way. (We really did receive as one of various gifts from the Rotterdam a good-sized parchment showing the figure of Father Time parting, at the 180th degree of longitude on the earth's surface, the "Chain of Time" for the Cruise members to advance from "Yesterday" into "Today." Any one especially interested in this matter of changing time around the world may wish to see what our revived Emmitsburg Library has to furnish regarding it.)

14. Hawaii: Honolulu. (We were told these names are properly pronounced Hay-vy-ee and Ho-nolulu.)

The day before we landed in Hawaii we had the usual fascinating talk by AMEXCO's travel lecturer on the places about to be visited. I wish I could reproduce all of this for those readers who might be especially interested in our newest state, but that of course is impossible and I must limit myself to a few of the general points it was interesting to have recalled or to learn for the first time:

(1) Hawaii has one of the most romantic histories of all the Pacific islands. Its origin goes back millions of years ago to a huge crack in the earth's crust under the ocean and the gradual pushing up of volcanic material to the ocean's surface, resulting, more millions of years later, in the formation of the chain of 20 islands on the margin of the tropics in the North Pacific, all together named "Hawaii" after the largest one. Its earliest history is shrouded in myth but beginning about 500 A.D. there was migration of the earliest known settlers from islands farther south (Polynesia) who became the native stock, set up a number of separate rulers and some 1300 years later were united under one, whose dynasty endured until 1872. Meanwhile the islands had been visited by the English navigator, Captain Cook, in 1778, and named the "Sandwich Islands" after the Earl of Sandwich, sponsor of his expedition; older readers may remember, as I think I do, when this name was still in use, and may also remember, as I know I do, when the last native ruler of the islands, a woman, Queen Liliuokalani, struggled to hold the throne against the force of foreign influence, which had now become great, but was deposed in 1893. Also in the meantime, beginning 1820, Christian missionaries from the United States had come to the islands and were exerting influence on various other phases of Hawaiian life as well as the religious. But the complicated story of Hawaiian history in the last quarter of the 19th century and up to 1959, when it became our 50th state, must be left to the recollection or research of my readers.

(2) Hawaii has been practically taken over by other races than the original one, as the rest of the United States has been—pure-blooded Polynesians number less than 3% of the greatly mixed population of Caucasians, Japanese, Chinese, Filipinos, and other smaller groups. But in various ways the culture of the earliest known people, as here, continues to be a living and distinctive part of the life of this distant state.

(3) Hawaii (English form of the original "Owyhee") is by far the largest of the eight main islands, but Oahu, third in size, is especially important as the site of Honolulu, the state's capital as well as largest city, chief port, and a great tourist center. And seven miles away is Pearl Harbor, a major U. S. naval base and scene of the disastrous happening of December 7, 1941.

I will admit that Hawaii was not one of the particular places on the Cruise that I had any particular desire to visit, as I had most of the others, perhaps for the reason that I had the impression it had been completely spoiled by being "so commercialized." Well, that term, as of course I should have known, by no means applies to all of Hawaii nor to all of Oahu, the island we visited, and Honolulu itself is far from spoiled by its considerable industrial development. But let me now report directly on my pleasant day-and-a-half in a place I was not eager to see but regretful to leave.

First of all there was the touch of Polynesia before the Rotterdam had completed its docking—the appearance on deck of a group of pretty dark-eyed hula dancers, their arms full of leis made of fresh flowers. These they gracefully placed around our necks and then danced the hula to the accompaniment of singing by two older women. It is generally known that this sort of dance was in ancient times an important part of religious ritual, the arms and hands relating a meaningful story and the hips and feet providing the rhythm; but now that the ritual has disappeared it has become merely a piece of native entertainment.

The planned tour of Oahu was scheduled for the next day, so after lunch a companion and I set out by crowded city bus for downtown Honolulu, noting on the way the huge pineapple processing plants of Dole and Libby. Following a bit of business in a fine modern bank and a pleasant talk on cruises with a bank official who was planning one, came a relaxed visiting of a number of distinctively Hawaiian shops with rain-bow-hued shirts and gay-patterned muumuu in the windows and these and other items for souvenir buying inside, and a walk thru the beautiful grounds and lower floor of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel, fronting directly on Waikiki Beach, with a visit to an especially charming shop in the basement. It was here I became acquainted with a Hawaiian specialty, macadamia nuts, and bought a rather heavy jar of them to carry home and introduce to my friends—to discover later that they were available at several stores in Baltimore (but at least I did introduce a new delicacy). Then we sat in the open pavilion called Surf House between the Hotel and the Beach, drank delicious pineapple juice, and enjoyed the charm of a famous piece of Oahu Island, the beautiful wide white Beach bordering a vast stretch of the Pacific and the famous landmark Diamond Head, an extinct volcano, now heavily wooded, jutting far out to our left. But the special charm of the place was something we had been enjoying ever since we landed here, something that seemed almost magic in the air and the sunshine that can only be felt to be appreciated. The "Circle-Island Drive of Oahu" including luncheon at Crouching Lion Inn, our second day's scheduled event, included many things of interest that I shall have to summarize, having lingered too long in Honolulu: fine public buildings in the city and many beautiful homes and tropical gardens as we passed along winding roads thru the suburbs, an especially breathtaking view from an eminence called Nu-

TODAY'S Meditation

THE WORLD'S MOST WIDELY USED DEVOTIONAL GUIDE

Read Luke 17:11-21.
The kingdom of God is not meat and drink; but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost.
(Romans 14:17.)

When I visited the elderly women in a ward of a county hospital, I was rewarded by the love of these people who were shut in.
Many of the old people would pull me down to kiss me, since words seemed so inadequate. The families of some, I learned, had grown tired of visiting them. I realized anew that faith and works must go together to bring the kingdom of God into my own life and into the lives of others.

When we share the load that others bear, we find our own burdens are lifted. We represent Christ, and He never turns away from anyone in need. Nor should we.

As physical exercise develops strong muscles, so our work for God increases our spiritual power.

We grow in wisdom, and our prayers are the genuine pleading of a child to the Father. The answers are miracles of God's love.
Prayer!

Our God and Father, take away from us all that is not in accordance with Thy will. Let us put self away, as we bend to Thy will for us. Strengthen us for the right, we ask in Jesus's name.
Amen.

Thought For The Day
By expressing Christ's love to others, we strengthen the kingdom within them and ourselves.
Margaret Crosby (California)

The United States has long ceased to be a representative republic—it is now ruled by a combination of minority groups that

ALL ABOUT BABIES...

A Public Service of the National Baby Care Council

By Mabel Harned, R.N.
Philadelphia, Pa.

Five Common Questions

During the 27 years that I've been organizing and conducting training courses for expectant parents, five questions have been asked of me more often than any others. I'm repeating them here knowing that new mothers among the readers of this column will be interested too.

"What effect will baby have on my husband?"—Parents are people, husband and wife, and the identity of each and the relationship between them should not be changed by having a baby. It should bring them closer.

"Will I be a good mother?"—
The ability to be a good mother is not inherited. It must be learned.
One thing, though, will come naturally, a mother's love for her baby. And love is the greatest antidote for doubt.

"Will I lose my figure?"—The changes a woman's body undergo during pregnancy are temporary.
After baby arrives, with guidance from her physician, a mother's old familiar form should be restored. Sometimes, it may even be a better one!

"Must I nurse my baby?"— Whether baby is to be breast fed or bottle fed is a decision for the mother to make after she discusses all factors with her husband and physician. There are good arguments for both methods and factors which may influence a decision in behalf of one or the other.

"Is diaper rash something all babies must go through?"—No.
Diaper rash can be effectively prevented with good diaper hygiene which includes diapering baby with correctly processed diapers, prompt changing and a fastidious diapering routine as long as baby wears diapers.

The nation's diaper services have developed a professional routine for processing diapers as a safeguard to baby's health. It includes thorough cleansing with non-irritating soap, multiple rinsing with scalding hot water and sterilizing and drying with intense heat. Before drying, a special diaper antiseptic solution is added to the diapers which dries into the fibers and becomes active when the diapers are wet or soiled. This antiseptic inhibits the growth of bacteria and lessens the chances of diaper rash.

Diapers can be correctly processed at home. Medical authorities agree that when diapers are done at home they must be thoroughly rinsed to remove all soaps and detergents, boiled for half an hour to kill all bacteria and then treated with a special diaper antiseptic obtainable in drug stores.

Taxes (Deficits, And Debt)

President Kennedy certainly tilted with windmills in his Yale address. Even so, the ideas that he characterized as "myths" and "illusions" must seem more real to him with each passing day. His jibes at the conservative view in fiscal matters doubtless will remain to haunt his Administration. I his liberal fiscal policies do not play havoc with the nation's economy, there may be time yet for an awakening. We must, despite the President and his advisers, avoid the tragedy of giving way to Keynesian "myths" that even in our own experience have been shown unrealistic and unreliable.

Mr. Kennedy's plans for a tax cut in 1963 were announced early in June and soon thereafter Kennedy forces in Congress were working to hoist the ceiling on the national debt up to $308 billions. These moves reflect the Keynesian economics that in the Thirties so deeply penetrated the New Deal. A tax cut certainly will be welcome news to everyone, but the value of it will be cancelled in large part if it must be achieved by def-cit and if it enlarges the national debt. What the country really needs is a cut in government spending.

Deficits Good?

The President's advisers are saying that deficits are good for the nation. This idea is supposed to belong to the newer realism that must replace the clichés and liberate us into reality. This we assume, is one of the "sophisticated and technical" conclusions that lend themselves so readily to the use of a centralized government that always knows what is best for its people and insists on doing something for everybody, in its own way. Or is that the start of arguments for perpetual deficits, as the Administration begins its second fiscal year with a $7 billion deficit?

One of history's timeworn myths is that inflation is a cure all, a way to lift an economy by its own bootstraps. This is the thinking being fed to the President by the White House staff. It is the line that he has publicly defended in recent weeks. Whether price inflation is at an end is questionable enough, but with continued deficit spending the very heaviest inflationary forces will continue to be expended. The piper has been paid for the past 30 years, with the cost being a devalued currency that results from our using the debt to expand the money supply. Too Sophisticated

Obviously, no government spender ever wants to be accused of cheapening the dollar. Mr. Kennedy and his advisers claim to be protecting the currency, and they want to appear to be fighting inflation. Yet, the very tactics proposed are inflationary. Something new indeed will have been discovered, when the President learns how to fight inflation with more inflation. This idea appears so "sophisticated" as to evade reality entirely.

The President's recent public defenses of his fiscal policies make him sound like a New Dealer defending the nostrums of the 1930's, rather than shedding new light on current economic problems. Instead of calling for removal of the fat from government budgets so that reduced expenditures can produce lower costs and bring about realistic tax cuts, he wants to continue spending furiously for everything that can be imagined or suggested.

New Approach Needed

What we need is a new approach to the economic life of the nation one that does not include the tired old clichés of the 1930's. This new approach will not be found in chasing the myths that are inherent in Keynesian economics, including the free spending, state planning, tight controls, and bureaucratic methods of the depression days. This is the 1960's, Mr. President. Instead of trying to hide the truths so clearly revealed by the federal budget, the most obvious of which is that income rarely ever equals outgo, let's begin the task of bringing our federal finances into line with reality.

To be sure, presidents before Mr. Kennedy have retaliated in angry argument even when as wrong as could be. The public, I believe, is hopeful that there can be a return to fiscal responsibility as soon as possible whether in this Administration or the next. People want a government strong enough to cut spending, without fear of repercussions. They do not want one that attacks business but refuses to control and restrain itself. Let's have tax cuts only when and if they can be had without deficits, unless in a real emergency.

There are things that are right to say, but they may be said at the wrong time and to the wrong people.

OUTDOOR SPORTING TIPS

Emergency Jeep Wheel

no one ever has to use. But it might be a real lifesaver in the right circumstances. Suppose you are jeeping back in, real deep. And a tire goes. Okay you use the spare. Now, suppose that goes. What do you do? Call a cab! Try this: Put good tires on front wheels. Then jack up the back of the jeep. Now scout around until you find a sapling lith and strong enough to carry the weight of jeep's rear. Jam the sapling in between the wheel drum and the axle and bring it forward, out and around and top of the front fender. Its other end is on the ground behind the jeep. Empty rear wheel sits on sapling at the approximate correct height. Lash it tight wherever you can. Put the jeep in 4-wheel drive. Out you'll come. It's the old Indian travois principle and sapling's deep rut will make your trail easy to follow. But you'll come out! Works with one or both back wheels missing.

Empty Canvas Cover Puddles

Sometimes boat covers sag and fill with water. Or the way your boat stands, puddles collect and discolor paint or start rot. An old length of bath towel can be an automatic puddle emptier. Fasten it in the low point where water collects, throw end overside in open air. When rain stops, towel starts to dry, quickly sucks up water by evaporation. Does the job surprisingly fast.

Nature's Instant Fire

Pine cones are nature's instant cooking fire. Just toss a handful on your campfire. In minutes they are glowing just right for making biscuits, pancakes, cornbread, baked spuds. Hey! let's eat!

Roll Up Rod Carriers

Have you ever wondered how to transport a long surf pole or cane pole . . . when the rod carriers were somewhere else. This tip will do it. Just wrap two pieces of cloth around poles. Roll down rear window, pull cloth through, tighten window. Do the same in the front. Simple, wasn't it! (Don't forget and open window, though, to shake your fist at other drivers.)

Four Fast Ones

1. Twist the middle fastening eyes of jointed plugs just a touch off true. Gives a more realistic wounded action. 2. Gun rusting? Oil the inside of the case as well as the gun, next time you clean it. 3. Any soft cheese will stay on your hook if you melt it and mix with cotton. 4. An Angel Food cake pan (has a hole in the middle) makes a no-slide dog feeder when slipped over a ground

YOUR PERSONAL HEALTH

Baby Teeth

"It's only a baby tooth. Don't bother with it."

That's a sad mistake. Baby needs good teeth, not only for present use, but also for future dental health.

Once a toddler begins to eat solid food, he needs a good set of teeth to chew with. And neglect of baby teeth can lead to all kinds of dental trouble later on.

It is important to remember that the permanent teeth exist in "bud" form in the jaw under the baby teeth. If baby teeth decay and so are lost too early, the permanent teeth which follow may come out in the wrong position. Permanent teeth that are overcrowded or protrude can change the shape of the mouth and face.

Taking care of temporary teeth will help ensure what dentists call a proper bite (occlusion). That's the way the upper and lower teeth meet. Many children suffer from a faulty bite (malocclusion) because their permanent teeth have come in askew. Getting the permanent teeth into proper position later is a long and expensive business.

A child has his complete set of 20 temporary teeth by the time he is two or two and a half. Then is the right time to start taking him to the dentist for regular check-ups. Don't wait until he gets his first toothache. If his earliest association with the dentist does not involve pain, he may never develop that fear of the dentist which afflicts so many children, and adults too.

If song writers knew how some people would sing their songs they would probably quit working.

NEW LIBRARY OFFICERS NAMED

The following officers of the Emmitsburg Public were elected at a meeting held Friday, July 20: Chairman, Board of Trustees: William Ryder; recording secretary, Mrs. Paul Beale; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Gilbert Oddo; treasurer, Robert Simpson. New trustees for the coming year are Mrs. Charles O'Melveny and Miss Ruth Shuff. Those who served last year and will continue to serve as trustees are Mrs. John Chatlos and Roger Zurgable.

Mrs. John Warthen assumed her duties as Librarian on July 17.

Many new children's books have been added to the current collection in the past several weeks. Some of these are books which appear on Mother Seton School reading lists.

The Burr Artz Library in Frederick has loaned our library many books for adult reading on a variety of subjects. A special section is devoted to light summer reading. Mrs. Warthen will be glad to handle special requests for books not on hand which can be borrowed from the Frederick Library.

It might be noted that both the Sears and Montgomery Ward Catalogues are available for reserve use in the Library.

Use your library—the fact that approximately 800 children's books and 400 adult books have been taken out in the period April 7 through July 1, more than offsets the fact that only six persons attended the open meeting held Monday, July 16. Please continue to give the library your support and show your interest by using the library. Suggestions for improvement are always welcome—see the librarian or any of the trustees.

Thanks to Mr. Charles Harner for contributing the cost of the library's monthly light bill.

State Fair Date

Set For August 27

"More than $150,000 has been spent at the Timonium Fair Grounds since the closing of the 1961 fair last September," said Daniel B. Brewster, president of the Maryland State Fair and Agricultural Society, Inc.

Brewster also said, "Expansion and reconstruction of our State Fair facilities has been a major objective during recent years and this program is continuing as exhibitors and visitors to our 1962 Fair will have an opportunity to see while at Timonium."

Although the program of modernization, as the years progress, has not been completed to date, all will be in readiness for the opening date of the fair, August 27, announced John M. Heil, vice president and general manager of the Maryland State Fair and Agricultural Society, Inc.

As the visitors to the State Fair, stroll about the grounds, they will notice the brilliance of the freshly painted Exhibition Hall, which has been repainted and decorated; the new roof on the Swine Building and expanding openings in the Livestock Building; and many other new features including those added to the Grandstand.

The dates for the Timonium fair for 1962 are from August 27 to September 6 stated Mr. Heil.

Local Scouts Complete Day Camp Here

St. Anthony's Day Camp ended last night with a campfire and program which was attended by many parents and friends of the scouts.

This has been a busy two weeks for the girls and their leaders as they explored together the out-of-doors. The many rainy and cloudy days may have dampened the girls but not their spirits. The grove made an ideal place for such a camp as the members divided into two groups—the Brownies and the Intermediates. Each selected a place in the grove for their "camp home" where they carried out their activities and lived during the camp sessions. The Seniors had their headquarters in the building which was used by the camp director and nurse.

Each of the three units held a cookout—making and serving their own meal and cleaning up afterward. Many hikes were taken. The Brownies went to the Grotto and held a picnic on the way. The intermediates and Seniors hiked to Indian Lookout and ate there. The two older groups also went to Cunningham Falls State Park for an overnight trip, sleeping in tents and cooking their own meals. Making ice cream and eating it was an activity enjoyed by all. Even the staff surprised the Brownies on their day alone in camp by making a freezer full while they were on a picnic and touring the Klossky grounds.

The camp nurse taught the fundamentals of first aid to the girls and each Brownie made her own personal "match box" first aid kit to take on a hike or just to have with her when she went out.

The campers are already talking about next year's camp and a future Brownie was overheard saying "I hope they have it next year so I can go."

When any phase of life occurs, your entire thought you are unbalanced whether in a cell or not.

When men seek to win, regardless of what it takes, they can easily forget the principles of fair play.

Must Supplement Supply
Drought conditions in Maryland make it essential for heifers and dry cows on pasture to be supplemented with hay and short feed, the Maryland State Veterinary Medical Association told farmers this week.

Heifers cannot maintain growth and dry cows cannot be properly fitted without vegetation for them to graze, the veterinarians warned.

In addition, the water supply should be checked daily so that the livestock need not depend on the muddy, stagnant water found in footprints.
