Most Anything At A Glance

BY ABIGAIL

As we enter into the new year, Emmitsburg faces the sobering fact that we are about to assume the responsibility of a half-million dollar debt. This means that many of us, in fact most all of us, will never live to see the day when the debt will be cleared off. The news sounds awesome at first but one can readily see the necessity for the indebtedness. First the Water Company had to be purchased with subsequent replacement costs and improvements. In addition sewer improvements and other costly needs of the Town upped the cost of living the modern way. The sum is an enormous one, in fact it represents the largest investment in the history of the town, but the burden is not so staggering as one would suppose. The Town Fathers have set up a bond issue to finance the improvements and the payments by the taxpayers will be a gradual one, possibly working no hardship on anyone, due of course to the long time allotted for its amortization.

Work still is in progress on the installation of the natural gas pipe line and the local water system mains. The installing companies have made remarkable progress despite the sub-freezing weather. At present the gas line is in Greenmount with only about a mile and a half to go. There are several "missing links" though and it is expected to be a few more weeks before the line is completed. The workmen on the water lines have kept steadily busy in the frigid weather and pipes are being run under the roads at this very writing.

The Dept. of Water reports difficulty in getting water from the reservoirs to the Town proper, due to freezing troubles. Since July water has been pumped from wells and streams to augment the flow to the town and officials ask citizens and patrons to conserve as much water as possible at this time, due as we said before, to the freezing conditions at this time.

CARD PARTY

A Card Party will be sponsored by the St. Joseph's High School PTA in the school auditorium on Tuesday evening, Jan. 14 starting at 8 p.m.

Refreshments will be on sale and admission is 50c per person. Three hams will be awarded as door prizes. The general public is cordially invited to attend.

Merchants Will Sponsor Safety Page

The advertising industry has taught us that, to establish public acceptance of a product, the same basic sales story must be told over and over again—in a variety of ways and as dramatically as possible. Merchandisers have found that they can create a better public demand for their products by changing its appearance, by putting it in a different, more attractive wrapper or container, or by adding a new and mysterious ingredient.

The same philosophy is being applied to traffic accident prevention. The only reason people continue to listen and to heed these admonitions is that the story is being told in new, different and original ways. It is being dramatized, presented in a new package, a different wrapper and with some added ingredients. The need for traffic safety is the same, but it is our earnest hope, that the addition of zest and variety and the ingenuity with which our safety minded officials present the needs, may strike a resonant note and eventually penetrate into the deepest recesses of our minds and result in making us all so conscious of our role in the problem of safety, that we will all make individual effort to have our community high in the ranks of accident free areas.

Watch for our series of Safety Editions beginning February 14.

Mounts Face Busy Schedule Next Week

The Gettysburg College basketball team upset favored Westminster to capture the first annual Battlefield Tournament, Saturday at Gettysburg. The Bullets topped the Titans 59-48 after Mt. St. Mary's routed American University 80-62 in the consolation game, played before 1300 fans.

The all-tournament team was composed of George Strouse and Doug Kepner of Gettysburg; Dixie Rowlands and Lou Skurcenski, Westminster, and Mike Costello of Mt. St. Mary's.

A 24-point performance by Mike Costello gave Mt. St. Mary's its third place position in the tourney. The Mountaineers' victory avenged an earlier one-point setback at the hands of the American U. squad.

Mt. St. Mary's built a 17-9 lead after the first 12 minutes of the Doug Kepner of Gettysburg; Dixie Ben Still and Jack Townsend game, but in the last eight minutes had sent the Eagles to a 28-27 lead at the half. American continued to hold the upper hand until the 13:18 mark when Ed Folk and Mike Johnston swished nine tallies and the Mount was in the driver's seat for the remainder of the game with a 48-41 lead.

Four minutes after Folk started the surge, the 6'5" rebounder sustained an injured left ankle and was forced to leave the game. Lou Martine and John Carroll took over the boards and the Eagles were held to three goals in the last six minutes. Both coaches cleared their benches in the late moments of the contest.

Costello landed seven of 20 field goals and went 10 for 14 from the foul line. Jim Shickora and Ron Rawlinson paced American with 12 points each.

Mt. St. Mary's will wait until January 7 to get back into action when they tangle with Western Maryland at Westminster.

The Mount will be host to three teams next week when they meet Shepherd next Wednesday; Old Dominion on Friday and old-rival Loyola next Saturday. All home games begin at 8 p.m. in Memorial Gymnasium.

Manufacturing Co. Holds Xmas Party

Members of the Town Council, union representatives, George L. Wilhide, chairman of the Board of Directors, Farmers State Bank, Mr. Silverman and Mr. Berman, of the Emmitsburg Manufacturing Co., were among those attending the annual Christmas party sponsored by the local manufacturing concern, held in the Mt. Manor Restaurant on Dec. 21.

Music was furnished by a popular hillbilly orchestra and all employees thoroughly enjoyed the festivities.

During the evening public relations between the employees, the Town and the concern were discussed and various suggestions made. Company officials discussed the construction of the new plant to be erected on Creamery Road and it was believed that operations on this project will commence in the near future.

OBITUARIES

Francis Adams, 58, Fairfield R2, died suddenly Monday evening at 5:45 o'clock in Freedom Twp, of a coronary occlusion.

The Adams County coroner, Dr. C. G. Crist, said Mr. Adams was driving on the Gettysburg Rd. when his car ran up a bank at a motel near the truck stop. Persons at the motel went to the car, found Mr. Adams ill, and called the Gettysburg ambulance. The ambulance drivers on their arrival found death had apparently occurred and summoned Dr. Crist.

Mr. Adams was a son of the late Edward and Lou (Orndorff) Adams and husband of the late Mary E. Shorb Adams, who died in 1947.

He was a member of St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Emmitsburg, of the Holy Name Society of the church, was a farmer and for eight years was employed by the Pennsylvania Department of Highways. Recently he was employed by the McCoy and Hinkle Pipeline Co., installing pipeline between Emmitsburg and Gettysburg. He was reportedly returning home from that work when he became ill and death occurred.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Francis McLaughlin, Fairfield; two grandsons; a brother, Earl Adams, Fairfield R2, and three sisters, Mrs. Romanus Florence, Emmitsburg, Mrs. Herbert White, Emmitsburg and Mrs. Bernard Sprankle, of Fairfield R2.

Funeral services were held yesterday morning (Thursday) with a Requiem Mass at St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Emmitsburg with Rev. Fr. Louis Storms officiating. Interment was in Mountainview Cemetery. Wilson Funeral Home, Emmitsburg, was in charge of arrangements.

Special Mass For Blessed Seton

A solemn High Mass will be celebrated at 10:15 a.m. January 5 in the Cathedral of Mary Our Queen, Baltimore, in thanksgiving for the beatification last March of Blessed Elizabeth Ann Seton.

Archbishop Shehan will celebrate the Mass, which will also have as its intention Mother Seton's swift canonization.

Mother Seton, in ceremonies March 17 in Vatican City, became the first native-born American to be beatified, the final step before sainthood.

The Mass, sponsored by the Maryland chapter of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, is held annually on the Sunday closest to the anniversary of Mother Seton's death, which occurred on January 4, 1821.

The Baltimore chapter of the St. Joseph College Alumnae has asked Catholic churches in the area to offer one of their Masses January 5 for Mother Seton.

Mother Seton, born in New York in 1774, lived in Baltimore and Emmitsburg. A convert to Catholicism, she founded the American branch of the Sisters of Charity, the first order of nuns established in this country.

Car Injures Man

The driver of the Emmitsburg town snow plow was injured when pinned between the door and cab of his vehicle last Monday night while inspecting the blades of the plow.

An unidentified woman driver backed into the snow plow, causing the accident, J. Norman Flax, Town Commissioner said.

The snow plow driver, Wilbur Umbel of Nort Street Ave., was taken to the office of Dr. George Morningstar where he was X-rayed for possible internal injuries.

Comedienne Will Appear In Show At Local College

Anna Russell, international concert comedienne, opera, stage, screen, television and recording star will appear in her One Woman Show in January 13 at Saint Joseph College, under the auspices of the Cultural Arts Program, co-sponsored by Saint Joseph's and Mount Saint Mary's College.

Returning to the concert stage after a sabbatical from musical activities during which she starred in New York in "The Pendulum", Miss Russell will present a varied program of original sketches lampooning the world's great and not so great. Sometimes described as "the funniest woman in the world", her social satires set to music have been enthusiastically received from Cape Town to San Francisco.

In addition to her coast-to-coast tours in the United States, Miss Russell performs frequently in the Far East, Australia, and South Africa, as well as her native British Isles. She has also appeared as soloist with the New York Philharmonic and various symphonies. She has starred with the New York and Toronto Opera Companies. Miss Russell's 1963 tour will be her 11th coast-to-coast tour of the United States.

KNOW YOUR SOCIAL SECURITY

Will Rogers once said, "My biggest problem as I grow older is not finding out how little I know. My problem is that I know so much that ain't so." The accelerated developments of the twentieth century lead us to feel quite the same as Will Rogers. Change—rapid change—is the order of the day, in almost every area of life. Ask someone what social security means to him and you may get an answer like this: "Social security is what you get when you reach 65." While this idea is not entirely wrong, it is far from being the whole story. Many changes have been made in the Social Security Law over the years making it a program of lifetime protection, rather than merely a retirement insurance plan.

Congressional action has increased social security's protection of the worker and his family. Now, disabled workers, regardless of age, are covered; the workers' families are protected in case of no matter how young the workers are; and both men and women may retire and draw social security benefits as early as age 62.

From the day a young worker has had at least a year and a half in covered work, he begins to have social security protection.

To learn more about that program and the protection it provides, write the social security district office for Booklet No. 35, "Your Social Security." It's free.

Engaged

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hardman of Emmitsburg, announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Jean, to Russell L. Hartman, Jr., of Fairfield, Pa., son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lloyd Hartman, Sr.

Miss Hardman is a graduate of Emmitsburg High School, class of 1961. Mr. Hartman is a graduate of Fairfield Joint High School, class of 1958.

No date has been set for the wedding.

New Line Linkage Augments Local Electrical Supply

Electrical energy began flowing December 27th through a 230,000-volt transmission line linking the Potomac Edison System and the generating plant of the Potomac Electric Power Company at Dickerson.

Work on the million dollar project began last spring.

The line has the highest energy-carrying capacity in the PE system, which serves the electrical power needs of 176,000 customers in an 8,000-square-mile area covering part of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

The interconnection is the first between PE and PEPCO.

PE District Manager, John W. Morgan, said the bulk power line will enable both companies to take advantage of seasonal load demands and will increase reserve capabilities of both. Peak demand in the Washington metropolitan area served by PEPCO occurs during the summer air-conditioning season, he explained, and occurs in the PE system during the winter.

A new peak demand was established in the PE area December 19.

The district manager also emphasized that the interconnection will help PE "hold the line" on electric rates.

Steel towers carry the line eight miles from PE's half-million-dollar substation at Doubs to the Dickerson generating plant. They are the first steel towers used for a major transmission project in the PE system.

Most of the line has been constructed for double circuit. Initially, however, only one 230,000-volt circuit is being used.

An existing 138,000-volt line from Millville, W. Va., to Frederick, was connected with the new Doubs substation.

The link with PEPCO, the district manager pointed out, provides another interconnection between the Allegheny Power System companies and utility systems in the east. PE is a subsidiary of APS.

Nearly half the North American continent was tied together last year through a series of interconnections. Seven of these were built by APS companies—three by PE and four by West Penn Power Company.

All of these interconnections, Morgan commented, enable electric utility companies to benefit from economies gained by generating electrical energy close to the source of coal or other fuel. They also enable the utilities to use excess power not needed in other areas, he added.

ESSO Grant Will Aid Local College

The ESSO Education Foundation announces that Saint Joseph College is the recipient of an unrestricted grant of $3,000 under the Foundation's 1963-64 program. In awarding the check to Sister Rosemary Pfaff, D.C., president of the college, M. J. Rathbone, Chairman of the ESSO Education Foundation, stated, "This is an unrestricted grant which the Foundation views as an expression of its confidence in the educational objectives and work of your institution." Saint Joseph's is conducted by the Daughters of Charity.

Grants of previous years to the college from the ESSO Foundation have been designated for the development of the Fine Arts program. The Fine Arts Institute in Oriental Culture is currently being offered to students, faculty, and interested persons from area colleges. Sister Rosemary announced that the new grant will also be used for further enrichment of the curriculum.

The ESSO foundation's program of unrestricted grants for 1963-64 totals $750,000 to 170 institutions awarded in an effort to meet the tremendous need for educational opportunities and the demands for more and better educated manpower.

Most of the line has been constructed for double circuit. Initially, however, only one 230,000-volt circuit is being used.

An existing 138,000-volt line from Millville, W. Va., to Frederick, was connected with the new Doubs substation.

All of these interconnections, Morgan commented, enable electric utility companies to benefit from economies gained by generating electrical energy close to the source of coal or other fuel. They also enable the utilities to use excess power not needed in other areas, he added.

During the evening, Mrs. Dan Lindsey cut a beautifully decorated cake she had baked for the occasion and all present sang Happy Birthday. Dropping in for the cake-cutting was Mr. Lindsey's daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Costantino, Dean and Gail, of Silver Spring, and Mrs. A. Lindsey's sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph R. Van Orsdale of Washington.

Many gifts, flowers, cookies and cakes were received from friends and neighbors. Notes from grandson R. Donald Lindsey and his family and granddaughter, Sandra (Mr. and Mrs. C. Harvey Carlin and family from Japan), and a phone call from his other daughter and husband, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Swales of Binghamton, N. Y., while the party was in progress, made him very happy. A nice time was had by all.

Half Million Bond Sale For Town

Sealed proposals have been requested by the Burgess and Commissioners of Emmitsburg for two water system bond issues totaling $515,000 in value.

Both bond issues, one for $475,000 and one for $40,000, will be dated January 1, 1964. They will be open for bids until 11 a.m. on Tuesday, January 7, when the sealed bids will be opened in the town office.

The $475,000 bond issue is in coupon form in $1,000 or $5,000 denominations bearing interest to be determined by the successful bid and will be paid semiannually from 1965 until as long as 1998.

The $40,000 bond issue, in registered form, will be in $4,000 denominations maturing in equal annual installments without interest on January 1 from 1965 to 1974.

The Farmers and Mechanics National Bank of Frederick is the registrar and paying agent for both issues. The issues were approved by the Town Council in accordance with the state code and town charter.

The bond issues are for the purpose of retiring the remaining bond notes resulting from the acquisition of a previously privately owned water system by the town of Emmitsburg and financing the cost of replacement, improvements and extension of this water system recently authorized by the Town Council.

The town has pledged its full faith and credit and unlimited taxing powers to the payment of the principal and interest on these bond issues which it hopes to pay off from the net revenues obtained from the expanded water system.

In another resolution, the Emmitsburg Town Council agreed that after July 1, 1964, the beginning of the first fiscal year, all of the rates and charges for the consumption of water in Emmitsburg would be increased 50 per cent to help pay for the bond issues.

The Emmitsburg water bonds are exempt from all state, county and municipal taxation. The $475,000 bond will issued in $1,000 denominations unless the successful bidder requests $5,000 bonds instead by notifying the Town Council within 48 hours of the bid award.

The Sisters of Charity of Saint Joseph College have stated that they will submit a bid at par on the $40,000 bond issue.

Farm Bureau Meeting Planned

Maryland farm leaders, representing county and State Farm Bureau units, will be in attendance at a national program kickoff in Hershey, Pa., from January 8-10.

Noah E. Kefauver, Jr., State Farm Bureau president, stated that "the challenge to Farm Bureau is to exert the kind of leadership that will help make it possible to pass needed legislation."

The Farm Bureau leader pointed out the need for new wheat legislation. "Unless Congress takes action, farmers will be faced with another wheat referendum, and a campaign by the Washington planners to sell a government supply-management program.

"In view of the overwhelming defeat the government plan suffered in the referendum last May, it should be clear evidence that wheat producers want to move away from restrictive government programs," added Kefauver.

"In carrying out adopted Farm Bureau policy," said Kefauver, "one of our major efforts is to obtain a sound and workable wheat program. One that will place emphasis on improving individual farm family income through greater influence of the market price system rather than government spending."

Farm Bureau's policy on a wheat program is coupled with a land retirement plan, controlled sale of surplus government holdings, termination of allotment and marketing quotas, and a support price reflecting the market, or 50 per cent of parity, with premiums on quality grain.

About World Markets

World trade must be carried on at a fairly high level if the nations are ever to enter into mutually satisfactory relationships that are often summarized by the word "peace."

These hopes and aspirations alone are enough to justify the choice of the topic, "Markets in America's Future," as the theme of Freedom Forum XXV, to be conducted this time in Little Rock at the Lafayette Hotel on February 3 to 7, instead of being on the Harding College campus.

In the years following World War II it was no problem for American business to expand exports. Demand from war devastated countries, spurred by our foreign aid, was strong.

world. Now the situation has changed greatly. The flourishing industries of Japan and West Europe are able to meet their own needs as well as provide sharp competition for the U. S. around the world.

On the whole, our nation's producers and traders have held a strong position in world trade despite the stiff competition. We have expanded our exports all the while, commercial shipments for the first half of this year being up about 2 per cent and more than double the rate of 1950.

Our best efforts, however, have not been good enough to offset the outflow of our resources as the government spends on foreign aid and overseas military programs.

It can erupt into crisis in short order if we permit it to do so. With Europe outselling us in Latin America and other foreign aid areas, we still want to send billions abroad.

duce less or sell less or buy less than it now does. It is the hope of all that trade can be increased among all nations, to the advantage of both buyer and seller.

Peaceful Competition It remains to be seen whether the free world can trade successfully with the Communist nations. If Russia and China are severely disciplined by famine conditions, so that reality makes them enterprisers and traders rather than gangsters and bandits, the world prospects for peace will be enhanced.

All About Dogs

To The Hounds

"There were five great white dogs silhouetted against the setting sun watching me intently. I was worried... until their owner rode into sight. He was using the Russian wolfhounds to chase coyotes that had been attacking his sheep."

earliest uses of his canine friends was coursing, or chasing wild animals, says Tex Fawcett of the Purina Pet Care Center, in St. Louis, Missouri.

Coursing with greyhounds is probably the oldest competitive sport in which dogs are used. Ancient paintings and other archeological finds give abundant proof that men who had little need to catch their own food were extremely fond of the sport.

Today there are 21 breeds of hounds recognized by the American Kennel Club that owe their development to the chase. They range from the improbable little Dachshund with his short legs and long body to the distinguished Saluki of Egypt, once the companion of pharaohs.

The stately Bloodhound is said to have descended from the Hounds of St. Hubert, patron saint of hunters. Before the Christian era, ancient chroniclers noted the exceptional tracking ability of the hounds, referring to them as sleuth-hounds.

There are a lot of other hounds: Foxhounds, Coonhounds, Basset hounds, Elkhounds, Wolfhounds and Afghan hounds—examples all of the selective breeding of dogs to fulfill their ancient role as man's faithful hunting companion.

BABSON

Writes . . .

BY ROGER W. BABSON

Babson Says Automation Means More Jobs

BABSON PARK, Mass., Jan. 2—Whenever there is a new upsurge in technological efficiency, there is an immediate outcry that this will mean less employment and reduced earnings. It has long been my opinion that technical improvements—even in the radical form of modern automation—do not mean fewer jobs or lower wages.

What Actually Happens

On the contrary, more rapid and cheaper methods of doing work mean more jobs in the long run. I believe this is proved by the statistics that chart the progress of employment and earnings over the more than 60 years that I have been forecasting economic changes in the U. S. A. Unions and workers are naturally upset when they see jobs taken away from men and women and given to machines. But they are looking at the short-range problems, not the long-range benefits.

It would be foolish to deny that there are serious immediate difficulties posed by automation. Retraining, replacement, and other programs are necessary to cushion the initial impact. Management, union, municipal, state, and federal authorities will recognize the temporary confusion that must be alleviated. For one thing, there is more need for workers of high skills, less for those with no training.

Always The Same Alarm

When Henry Ford, long years ago, started his fantastic belt-line going, many economic observers and the working groups generally were positive that the result would be wholesale unemployment and lower pay. Mr. Ford answered the last part of the charge by immediately paying his employees the biggest hourly wage in history; and the prediction of wholesale unemployment was proved wrong by history itself. At each step during the "industrial revolution" when new ways of speeding production were undertaken, the same alarm was sounded. But, each time, there turned out to be more jobs in the long run rather than fewer—better pay instead of "sweatshop" rates. It is often forgotten that when new labor-saving machines are brought out, these products themselves have to be manufactured, serviced, and repaired. This opens up a whole new web of jobs. Even a casual examination of fundamental statistics will reveal the vast increases in employment that have paralleled history-making technological advances and greater efficiency in all lines.

60 Million Jobs
Once Visionary Goal

Many of you will remember the dark time in the 1930s when unemployment constituted about 25% of the labor force. Even after the pump-priming and business aids of the New Deal, the jobless in 1940 still made up about 15% of the work force. Vice President Henry Wallace wrote a book called "Sixty Million Jobs", a hopeful work which many economists considered unrealistic and visionary. But—and this is my point—even though the ambitious efforts to meet competition during the recovery years brought about ever-greater technological changes, jobs actually became more and more plentiful.

So with the spectacular influx of automation in recent years, the number of jobs has steadily increased. Total civilian employment stands now at better than 69 million, a figure that nobody would have believed if it had been predicted only 15 or 20 years ago. A gradual but definite change in the pattern of employment has helped the situation: Not only have new industries sprung up—such as electronics, instruments and controls, and aerospace—but more workers have been absorbed by trade, finance, service, and government.

Wages Have Also Skyrocketed

Moving up with employment have been earnings. Back in 1909, manufacturing workers were making less than 20c an hour, on average; but now they are making $2.47. The trend is still upward and will be as far ahead as we can see. The weekly take of such employees amounted to $9.74 in 1909; it has now passed the $100 mark. So those who expected that fewer jobs and lower pay would result from belt-line processes and automation have been wrong thus far. It is my feeling that they will continue to be proven wrong over the years ahead.

People who lead vital, dynamic lives mesh their thinking and activities into the whirling gears of today's social, economic and political machinery simply by reading their newspaper.

ALL ABOUT BABIES

A Public Service of the National Baby Care Council

Watch Those Toys

By Thomas F. Lambert, Jr.,
Editor-in-Chief, Law Journal
National Association of Claimants'
Counsel of America

The purchase of toys for babies and young children should be done with great care and consideration.

For the past few years our organization has sponsored within our membership a unique committee called the Products Liability Exchange, whose purpose it is to gather and exchange information concerning products which have been known to cause accidents.

With the assistance of the 10,000 attorneys who are members of our Association and who have handled thousands of liability cases in the courts, the Products Liability Exchange has developed the following pointers parents should follow when purchasing toys for babies and young children.

1. All edges should be smooth.
2. There should be no pointed or projecting parts.
3. Toys should be large enough so they cannot be easily chewed or swallowed.
4. All toys should be coated with a non-toxic paint.
5. Consider the construction and materials. Will baby or a young child be able to easily break, crush or rip the toy into pieces that may be potentially harmful.
6. Consider the age of the baby or the young child. Is he old enough to handle the toy safely?
7. Toys that contain spring mechanisms are for the older child.
8. Spark-producing toys are for the older child. Sparks should be weak enough not to cause harm or fire.
9. Wrapping including plastic bags should be removed before the toy is given to baby or the child.
10. Before buying, inspect the toy carefully and read any instructions, directions or warnings that may be printed on the package.

Accidents do not just happen. Sometimes a manufacturer has overlooked a potentially harmful element in a toy. It is therefore the duty of every parent to report any accident involving toys to the manufacturer so that measures may be taken to prevent any recurrence.

Sometimes accidents are caused by a toy poorly selected for the baby or the young child to whom it is given.

Properly selected safe toys can be more than playthings. They can offer the baby and the young child the opportunity to exercise his developing senses and help him explore the world further.

Most Mountain Hons are taken when treed by dogs. A high-velocity rifle isn't necessary to bring them down. A good shot can even put a 22 in the brain and do the job.—Sports Afield.

Enthusiasm is the best fuel to warm up a cold prospect.

MARYLAND DEVELOPMENT

By HARRY A. BOSWELL, JR., Chairman
Maryland Department of Economic Development

Funds earmarked for the use of the Governor's Science Resources Advisory Board are included in the budget request of the State Department of Economic Development for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1965.

Gov. J. Millard Tawes on June 19, 1963, created the board with L. Mercer Smith, vice president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., as chairman and fifty-seven prominent educators, scientists and business executives as members.

In constituting the board the governor described his action as "an important step in developing and enhancing Maryland's science resources." The Department of Economic Development had previously identified science-oriented industries as one of Maryland's major economic assets.

The increasing importance of the Maryland-D.C. area as a major center for science-oriented or research and development industries is commanding national attention, and is attracting scientists from all over the world.

The September issue of "Industrial Development and Manufacturers Record" devotes 20 pages to this amazing birth of "The Baltimore-Washington Area—Scientific Double Star", likening the two neighboring cities to a pair of stars which appear to the naked eye to be one.

"Small wonder that planners in the two areas have long since recognized that a Chesapeake supercity is in the process of emerging, with a high degree of interaction between its two centers and a projected population of 8 million by the year 2000", the article predicts.

Thirty years ago, there was little recognition of the complementary relationship between the two cities, and of the fact that each could gain from cooperative effort.

Baltimore was then an industrial center and world port, while Washington was the seat of national government, which was more involved with domestic problems than with impending world conflict. Baltimore's highly developed world port and Washington's global diplomatic ties combine to facilitate communications and trade between the neighboring cities and the rest of the world.

Seven universities, 26 four-year colleges and 16 two-year colleges, vast federal research and development facilities and several giants among the nation's research development firms—Westinghouse Electric Corp., The Martin Co. division of Martin-Marietta Corp., Bendix Corp., W. R. Grace and Co., Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc., Vitro Laboratories, ACF Electronics, Fairchild-Stratos Corp., AAI, Inc., IBM Corp., RCA Data Systems Center, RADCOM Division of Litton Systems, Inc., Thiorol Limited Nuclear Corp., and Aerojet General—jointly provide the proper intellectual environment and cultural climate for what has become one of the nation's fastest growing centers of research and development activity.

The big change in Washington began during World War II, when the government was faced with solving logistical problems on a world-wide scale, as well as a need to develop entirely new types of weapons. These two conditions brought together in the national capital top scientific and management people from every quarter of the country. The increasing rate of technical change since the war has induced many of these people to establish permanent residence in the Washington area.

The most significant by-product of this great migration is the creation in the area of a new breed of executive-scientists who are equally at home in both the research laboratory and the development workshop. This new ambidextrous profession, coupled with an ideal environment, is the key to the unsurpassed growth of the Baltimore-Washington corridor as a research and development center, where the problem is analyzed and where the solution can take form first in design, and finally, in the end product of research and development.

Early in the State's drive for economic expansion, the Maryland Economic Development Commission proposed that the Governor appoint a Science Resources Advisory Board to encourage the location of science-oriented industries in Maryland.

The Department of Economic Development compiled and published "Opportunities for Science-Oriented Industries in Maryland", a brochure presenting the state's many advantages for research and development industries. A "Directory of Science Resources in Maryland", listing 209 Maryland research and development firms, has just been published.

An early successful joint effort of Harford County, the Maryland Department of Economic Development, the Governor's Advisory Board and Maryland's congressional delegation ended with the recent favorable decision which assures the location of a nuclear pulse reactor at the Aberdeen Proving Ground. The Martin-Marietta Company and the Maryland Academy of Science also contributed importantly to the successful effort.

"A state is known by the companies it keeps."—Governor J. Millard Tawes. Westinghouse Electric Corporation established a manufacturing and repair plant in Maryland in 1900. Now employs more than 13,000 workers in 18 plants in this state.

Calculator For Cooling Introduced

A new Air Conditioning Calculator recently made available to air conditioning contractors and professionals in the home building field will mean greater comfort at less cost for families building or buying air-conditioned homes.

The new calculator, developed by the National Mineral Wool Insulation Association, supplies a rapid and accurate method of calculating summer heat gain to ensure compliance with the FHA's new Minimum Property Standard on insulation for air-conditioned homes. It also shows readily how installing mineral wool beyond the amounts called for by FHA will cut both purchase price and operating costs of air-conditioning equipment.

Last year an Electric Comfort Calculator was introduced by NMWIA for use in specifying electric heating equipment for homes insulated with mineral wool. The new Air-Conditioning Calculator, which is similar, provides a virtually fool-proof method of determining the size of cooling equipment and the amount of mineral wool needed to provide maximum comfort at lowest cost.

LINCOLN, DAVIS HOLD NEW YEAR RECEPTIONS

By Lon K. Savage

A band of 78 horsemen from the Second Maryland Cavalry rode out from Harpers Ferry 100 years ago this week and went bounding across the snow covered fields of northern Virginia, hoping to find and destroy a group of Confederate raiders who had been plaguing federal troops in the area. They dashed to Hillsboro, to Waterford, to Purcellville and to Upperville—all in vain. Then, at Upperville, a shot rang out from nowhere, and a cavalryman went limp in his saddle, a bullet hole in his head.

So the year 1864 opened—the terrible year—the year that would bring thousands more to death, that would crush the Confederacy almost—but not quite—to its knees, that would pit Grant against Lee at the Wilderness, Spotsylvania, Cold Harbor and other points ever closer to Richmond. It would bring Sherman up against Joe Johnston in a horror filled fight for Atlanta an ensuing "March to the Sea."

Opens Quietly

But it opened rather pleasantly on New Year's Day in Washington and Richmond, the capitals of the warring sides. In Washington, President and Mrs. Abraham Lincoln held a reception in the White House, while at Richmond, President and Mrs. Jefferson Davis held a reception in their home—"The White House of the Confederacy." Callers at both said their respective presidents were unusually friendly and warm.

The Lincolns' reception began at noon, when the doors to the White House swung open and a crowd of uniformed officers and smartly dressed men and women swarmed into the East Room. Lincoln greeted each cordially, often with a joke. Beside him stood Mrs. Lincoln who, one caller noted, was not in mourning for the first time since their son, Willie Lincoln, had died 20 months earlier.

At Richmond, much the same type of scene transpired that day. At the White House of the Confederacy, the same types of crowds came in, although the uniforms were grey and the civilian clothing, perhaps, was not quite in such good condition. President Davis shook hands warmly with his well-wishers, while beside him stood his wife, Varina Howell Davis, who was in mourning for her father who had died at Montgomery, Alabama, the preceding March.

Differences

But there were great differences in those two White Houses that day. Those who crowded into the executive mansion at Washington spoke confidently of the victory they were sure would come to the United States in the Civil War. In Richmond, although they would not say so aloud, some feared that the greatest moment of the Confederacy had passed—that the fate of the Confederate States of America had somehow been sealed during the year that had just ended.

Next week: Grant for President?

Read Psalm 139:1-12. If I take the winds of the morning, and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea; even there shall thy hand lead me, and thy right hand shall hold me. (Psalm 139:9-10.)

In early days when driving across the prairies at night or in a snowstorm, we sometimes found ourselves getting off the trail, confused, and lost. My father would tell us, "Don't try to guide the horses. Let the reins slack and give them their heads. The horses know the way better than you do. They will take you straight home."

Some of us like to think that we know the best route to take through life. We are determined to chart our own course, to guide our own destiny. So we become lost!

How much better if we could learn to leave it to God to guide us! He knows the road, every rock, every pitfall; also the green pastures, streams of water, sheltered paths. He will lead us, not on the road where we in our foolishness might wish to walk, but along the road we need to travel heavenward.

OFF AND RUNNING by John I. Day " ... But Not Forgotten "

Anyone unfamiliar with the story might think the South Dakota Handicap an odd name for a race run at River Downs in Cincinnati, Ohio. The race is not a tribute to the coyote state, however, but honors a horse that some years back thrilled fans in the Ohio circuit with his speed and endurance. For the past several seasons, River Downs president, Leon Slavin, staged a gala South Dakota Day and the 21-year-old horse and his 74-year-old owner, Al Smitha journeyed from "their" farm at Lexington, Kentucky, to receive the homage of the fans. South Dakota won't be making the trip this year. He was killed instantly by a lightning bolt last August. South Dakota was a son of the late William Woodward's Triple Crown winner of 1935, Omaha. You won't find his name in the equine hall of fame, but if they had such a roster in Ohio, South Dakota would be right there with another Ohio favorite, the "Coal Black Lady", Imp. During seven seasons of racing, South Dakota won 34 races and $72,000. He might have been much better known, and his earnings far more, had his owner chosen to race at richer tracks. He did venture into Chicago on one occasion and set two track records on the turf. He smashed nine other track records at distances up to 2 miles and it was at River Downs that he established a world record for a mile and 70 yards which stood until 1958.

Book Review

GUIDELINES FOR THE LEADER AND THE COMMANDER

GUIDELINES FOR THE LEADER AND THE COMMANDER. By General Bruce C. Clarke, U.S. Army, Retired. 100 pages. Stockpole Company, Harrisburg, Pa. $1.00. Reviewed by Colonel Ervan F. Kushner, USAF.

The experience of almost a half-century of dedicated service is contained in General Clarke's new book, "Guidelines for the Leader and the Commander." The military career of its author commenced as a Private in World War I and concluded as Commander in Chief, U.S. Army, Europe. It was a career of broad horizons, and it permitted the gathering of useful precepts for effective leadership which are now printed for the edification of today's leaders.

General Clarke, who has been referred to by General Maxwell D. Taylor as the most effective U.S. Army trainer in modern times, has admirably succeeded in presenting to officers and enlisted men alike, regardless of duty assignment or station, those basic fundamentals of command responsibility and leadership which can spell the difference between victory and defeat. Motivation, good morale, progressive training, and physical conditioning are some of the essential elements of superior units that effective leaders stress, according to General Clarke. These are but a few of the many subjects he discusses in this handy volume that is in essence a distillation of his long experience as a commander and troop leader.

The foreword to the book is dedicated to the ground combat Soldier and this theme prevails throughout most of the book. Wisely reminding the reader that the soldier in the field is just as important in a general war as he is in a limited one, the author clearly reiterates those principles for effective command, which, despite the sophistication of modern weaponry, remain indispensable for success on the battlefield.

The admonition to staff officers that they must understand "The thin line that divides staff supervision from meddling interference" is particularly wholesome as is the concept that the direction of a unit can be better accomplished by a "chain of suggestion" rather than by a "chain of command."

Thousands of officers and men in all components of the Army have been influenced in their careers by serving under General Clarke. Study and application of the time-tested and practical tenets of leadership set forth in "Guidelines for the Leader and the Commander" will have a salutary effect upon our present and future military leaders.

deaths in Maryland during 1962, Dudley G. Anterson, State Health Department Accident Prevention Chief, said this week. One-half of those deaths were caused by gas seeping from motor vehicles and seven by utility gas. The 1962 statistics showed an increase over 1961 figures, when the total number of accidental carbon monoxide deaths was 17, with motor vehicle gas causing seven and utility gas five.

A survey of records for the five-year period from 1958 to 1962 reveals that the number of such deaths has risen almost every year, mounting from ten in 1958 to the 1962 total of 24. The lowest number of deaths in the five-year period was eight in 1959.

urged families to prevent such tragedies by checking furnaces and inspecting gas pipes or gas-powered equipment for possible leaks. Automobiles and all motor vehicles should be checked for any defect which may allow gas seepage. He warned against the danger of running a car engine, or any other gas-powered engine, in a closed garage regardless of how cold the weather may be outside the garage. He also cautioned against sitting for long periods in cars in which the motor is running, unless the car is well ventilated by an open window.

Children and anemic persons are especially susceptible to this type of poisoning, Mr. Anderson

Winter weather always increases the risk of such poisoning, Mr. Anderson said, because more gas-powered equipment is in use and because people frequently forget the need for adequate ventilation in cold weather. Although motor vehicle gas accounts for a large percentage of accidental deaths, he pointed out that the invisible killer also may come from several other sources. Any gas-powered engine allowed to run in a closed garage, a furnace with insufficient draft, a leaking gas stove, heater or gas pipe may result in carbon monoxide poisoning.

son, and added that even in amounts as small as 1/50th of the normal oxygen content of air, carbon monoxide can be fatal within an hour of exposure.

If a carbon monoxide accident occurs, Mr. Anderson said that the following action should be taken promptly: Remove the person from the poisonous area; call a doctor immediately; keep the person warm and apply artificial respiration, if necessary, until the doctor arrives.

Frostbite Likely This Time Of Year

Frostbite is an ever present danger in winter in much of the nation. It can be a serious injury.

First signs of frostbite are "pins and needles" prickly feeling and then numbness, says Today's Health, the magazine of the American Medical Association. The affected part will turn white or gray, and later red.

Frostbite can be very painful for a long period, can result in amputations and leave the victim hypersensitive to cold for the rest of his life. In some ways the damage is similar to a burn.

Prevention is the best protection against frostbite. Dress properly in warm clothing, waterproof shoes and heavy dry socks. Cover face and ears. Keep clothing dry from outside moisture and from perspiration. Avoid tight clothing or garters that may restrict circulation.

Motorists should carry heavy clothing and shoes in the car. It might be necessary to hike to a garage for assistance if the motor stalls.

The first step in first aid is thawing of frozen body tissue. Bring the victim indoors to a warm room. Treat the frozen part with gentleness. Don't rub or massage. Ice or snow applied to the frozen part merely delays thawing.

Prompt medical treatment is important. Control of severe pain is required. Antibiotics and anti-tetanus injections may be needed if the skin is broken.

First degree frostbite, similar to sunburn, is likely to attack the ears, toes, fingers, cheeks or nose. Second degree frostbite produces blisters, and third degree freezing damages deep tissues. Much of the frozen part may be lost.

Most cases of frostbite need not have happened, if the victim had been properly dressed and had used judgment about staying out too long in subfreezing weather.
