Most Anything At A Glance

- By Abigail -

At the present time we have a heat wave and a drought on our hands. The heat wave is rather intense with high humidity and we actually fight it every day for our very survival. For the past two weeks I believe we have had only one day that the temperature didn't reach 90 degrees and that was last Saturday. Electric companies report record peak loads as fans and air-conditioners are brought into play in an effort to beat the heat. Many have taken an advanced vacation in an effort to escape the present hot blasts.

Along with this infernal heat we are plagued with a drought. Hardly a drop of water has fallen during the past five weeks and crops are beginning to wither rather rapidly. Lawns are dead and our water supplies are dwindling. A considerable drop in the water level of our reservoirs brought the Town Council to its feet this week and effectively immediately, there is a ban on what is considered needless or useless waste of water such as sprinkling dead lawns, washing off sidewalks or filling or refilling swimming pools. The ban is a moderate one and one quite justifiable, in our opinion. We still have a pretty good supply, however, we intend to keep that reserve, just in case. There's still a lot of summer ahead of us and the experience we gained from the recent five years of drought should teach us that conservation of water is of the utmost importance. We hope it won't be necessary to pump water from Toms Creek so soon because that's a pretty costly operation, as we have learned from experience. There is no cause for alarm. The ban will be lifted just as soon as we have had sufficient rainfall to fill our reservoirs, Mayor Seidel says.

The Town's streets received a good brushing this week as Public Works Superintendent Flax utilized the services of half dozen youths from the Job Corps. The boys cut weeds, painted Town property and cleaned the streets. In all fairness to them, they did an excellent job and we are truly grateful for their services.

There will be no Chronicle published next week folks. It is a real problem for a small plant, such as ours, to provide vacations for our employees. After many years of struggling along short-handed during the summer months, we have come to the conclusion that it would be best if we closed the plant and all take our vacation at one time. We hope you will bear with us and when we return we will again furnish you with your usual interesting little hometown newspaper.

Homer Boland writes to inform us that Joe Kolb, former local man, has been named vice president and manager of the marketing department of the Martinsburg Veneer Corp. and its affiliates. Joe, as you will remember is married to the former Ann Wivell, daughter of Mr. Joseph W. Wivell and the late Madeline Wivell of Emmitsburg.

BAND SCHEDULE

NOTICE

In an effort to insure vacations for all employees of the Emmitsburg Chronicle, the management has agreed to suspend publication for one week.

Preliminary View Of Recreation Area

A preliminary sketch of Emmitsburg's proposed Recreational Area is shown above. The local Chamber of Commerce is about to begin a fund drive to raise money for the facility. An informative brochure is in the printing stage and will be distributed to the public before the fund raising is started, showing contributors just what their money will be doing for the Town.

Citizen Feels College Carries Own Weight With Water Rate

Editor, Emmitsburg Chronicle
Dear Sam:

I claim the privilege of answering your last week's letter for the single reason that from a friend you may not take offense. You and I have a thing in common. You and I have lost a Town election. I grew a beard and bled it all on the Sisters. You only blame it on the Sisters. If we get smart we can both win next time! All that is required is that we reconcile ourselves to a few elementary facts of American political life.

Who ever heard of a candidate in a strong pro-union town sounding off against labor unions in the course of his campaign? You went even further; you wrote a letter to the Editor about the Sisters' water rates!

If I got a single Sister's vote she has not come forward to identify herself. But let's consider the merits of your arguments. Are they not fairly summed up in this: That we townspeople use less water than our three institutions and yet pay more than they pay? I would rather concede this than check it out. But even so, isn't it really a question as to whether the Sisters pay a fair amount? You say that they pay $11,000, which sounds pretty stiff to me. I maintain a household of 12 persons and pay the nominal rate. If my establishment were 100 times larger than it is, and I were required to pay 100 times more, I would still pay only a small fraction of $11,000 and have nearly double the users that the Sisters have!

If the Town did not have the Sisters—and the employment they furnish—what sort of concessions would the Town be willing to make to get them? Would we not rather willingly, agree, that $11,000 would be a fair charge for water? Industries are commonly offered this sort of concession as a persuasion to locate in a particular area. Why not the Sisters . . . to keep them here? I would be more easily persuaded that they pay less than they ought if you could demonstrate, as for instance, that Hood College at Frederick or Gettysburg College nearby, pay appreciably more.

Let's remember too, that a water system, even in private ownership, operates as a public utility and grants the lowest rates to the largest users. There are sound reasons, founded on equity and justice, for this. Even today the electric companies, also public utilities, encourage you and me, to use more and more, and promise that the more we use the less the rate shall be. Why not our institutions?

There are also other considerations which the Sisters might throw out if—like you and I—they loved an innocent argument. When a private water system becomes public it's just another public service like a police department . . . or a school system. If every element of the citizenry were obliged to pay according to its use of the police department, the slum areas of our large cities would be taxed 90% of such costs. From what I read in the papers they would rather do without the service than to be taxed so unjustly.

My big point I've saved until last. Have you stopped to think, Sam, how our taxes might double except that the same Sisters who pay only $11,000 for water, educate two-thirds of the Town children at practically no cost? Let's you and I resolve to worry no further that our dear friends may not be carrying their own weight.

Locals Eliminated In L. L. Playoffs

The Emmitsburg Little League All-Stars were eliminated in district play Monday as the Frederick American League defeated Emmitsburg 6-1 at Frederick.

Frederick pitcher John Bowers hurled a two-hitter and hit one of the home team's two home runs.

Bowers didn't allow a hit until the third inning when Mike Olinger rapped a double to rightfield. He went to third as the throw got past the second baseman and scored when the catcher, trying to pick him off at third, threw the ball over the third baseman's head.

Olinger got the only other hit when he singled up the middle with none out in the sixth. He was erased on a double play.

Bowers fanned ten in the game including five in a row. He walked three, two of these in the fifth when Emmitsburg had two men on base with two out.

Bowers got Frank Saylor on a pop to second to end the threat. Kevin Topper went the distance in a losing effort. He gave up nine hits and fanned seven.

Hess Found Guilty Of Drag Racing At Trial

Dennis Ray Hess, 19, of Taneytown, was found guilty of drag racing and innocent of involuntary manslaughter by an Adams County jury Monday afternoon.

The charges against Hess arose from a fatal accident March 10 about six miles south of Gettysburg along the Emmitsburg Rd., in which Charles Calvin "Butch" Crum, 22, of 230 S. Washington St., Gettysburg, was fatally injured. Crum suffered a fractured skull, broken neck and internal injuries when his northbound car left the highway, smashed into a telephone pole, then "flipped," according to the testimony, "several times" before coming to rest against a tree.

Testimony in the case showed the Hess and Crum vehicles were in the process of passing when they touched, and the Crum car then swerved into the telephone pole and trees.

But there was disagreement as to which car was passing the other at the time of the accident. Crum's stepbrother, Jerry J. Brawner, 19, Emmitsburg R1, a passenger in Crum's car, held Hess attempted to pass Crum's auto, and swerved against it, thus forcing the Crum car off the road.

Hess and a passenger in his car, Lawrence Ott, 20, of Emmitsburg, both held that Crum was the driver seeking to pass at the time of the accident. Their testimony and that of Brawner agreed that Hess with several passengers in his car, started north on the road to Gettysburg from the Emmitsburg square. About the same time Crum, with Brawner as a passenger in his auto, starting driving west in Emmitsburg. Crum then decided to go north and drove to the Gettysburg-Emmitsburg Rd. Near the Mason-Dixon line he passed the Hess vehicle.

Hess and Ott held that the Crum car apparently stopped along the road after passing the Hess car. They said that the Crum vehicle next appeared in back of their auto.

According to Hess and Ott the Crum car attempted to pass Hess' vehicle on the right hand side, first bumping the rear bumper of the Hess car, as the pass was attempted, and then shortly thereafter, as it came alongside, bumping the Hess car at about the front door. The Crum car then went off the road into the pole and trees.

Hess explained that others in his car were not present to testify because they are in service, with one in Okinawa and another at Fort Bragg.

After the accident, according to the testimony of all three youths, Brawner hid in the woods and when he finally came out of hiding after being called by the others, he asked them not to reveal that he had been in Crum's car. Brawner said he had hidden at first because he "did not want to go back to the hospital."

Witnesses in the case also included Cumberland Twp Police Chief Bernard V. Miller, Sr. and John Zogby, of the state police, "In Depth Highway Safety Mobile Laboratory" which had been called to Adams County to join in the investigation of the fatal accident.

The jury, headed by Albert Weaver, North St., McSherrystown, as foreman, retired at 4:06 Monday afternoon to consider its verdict. It returned about 4:20 to ask whether it had all of the pictures made in the case. Assured that it did, the jury then retired again and returned at 4:54 with its verdict.

Youth Hits Two Houses With Car

An Aberdeen, Md., youth was charged with reckless driving following an accident in which, State Police said, the car he was driving Saturday morning went off Md. 97 in Emmitsburg and hit a light pole and two houses.

Charged was Edward L. Boyd, 18, following the 6:14 a.m. mishap in which police said Boyd apparently lost control of the car he was driving east on Md. 97 (W. Main St.) at the west end of Emmitsburg, running off the right side of the roadway and shearing off a light pole before striking a house belonging to J. Donald Harner and the house next to it belonging to Garrett W. Cecil.

The light pole was valued at $150. A 70-foot strip of aluminum siding and three wooden steps, valued at $200, were damaged at the Harner residence and seven cement blocks valued at $5 were reported damaged at the Cecil residence.

Boyd's 1965 car was demolished. Half of those who get cancer could be saved by early diagnosis and treatment says the American Cancer Society.

Guest Speakers For Anniversary

Sunday morning, July 28, at 10:30 o'clock, the Incarnation United Church of Christ will begin a series of services observing the Centennial Anniversary of its present Church site and the Bicentennial anniversary of the organization of the German Reformed Congregation of the community.

Rev. William H. Simpson, Ph.D., will be guest speaker at the service and he will assist the pastor, Rev. John C. Chatlos, in the Sacrament of Holy Communion. Rev. Simpson, a pastoral son of Incarnation Church, is the son of Mrs. Leah Michaels Simpson, West Main Street, and the late Walter A. Simpson. Special music will be provided by the Church Choir.

Then on Sunday evening, July 28 at 8 o'clock, a Musical Service is scheduled featuring the Handbell Choir from the Evangelical Reformed Church, Frederick. Also included in the service will be selections by Mr. and Mrs. David Reifsnider, Miss Susan Martin, the Davis family, and the Church Choir. Prior to the service, Miss Beverly Davis, church organist, will present a 15-minute organ recital. The offering will be applied to the Organ Fund.

August 1 at 7:30 p.m., will find Community Night, scheduled by the Anniversary Committee. At this informal service, there will be greetings from the pastors of all the churches of the community, St. James Church, Littlestown, Pa., and the Town Council. Following this service a Fellowship Hour is planned at the Elias Ev. Lutheran Parish Hall.

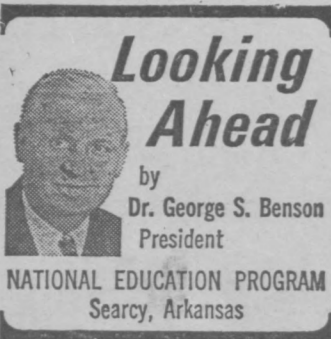

The public is invited to attend any of these services. They have been planned with you in mind. Come, enjoy the services with us.

Rev. Edmund P. Welker, pastor of the Carroll Charge, Westminster, will be the guest speaker at the final anniversary service at Incarnation United Church of Christ on Sunday, Aug. 4 at 10:30 a.m. Rev. Welker preceded the present pastor, Rev. John C. Chatlos, at Incarnation, serving as pastor from 1943 until 1957. May we continue to serve the community as an inspiration for future generations. The committee for the anniversary celebration was as follows: Chairman, Mrs. George J. Martin; Mrs. Eric Glass, Mrs. Effie Hoke, Miss E. Mae Rhodes, Mr. Elwood Elker, and adviser, Rev. John C. Chatlos.

Is Our War News "Poisoned?"

Usually the best testimony that can be obtained about an organization or an institution comes from some person within it. For many years questions have been raised about the "objectivity" of the news gathering and reporting organizations in the United States, including the so-called "wire services" (Associated Press and United Press International), newspapers, television and radio stations and publications. Jim G. Lucas, Pulitzer Prize winning war correspondent of the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain "has been there" in journalism, and is a good witness.

In testimony given to the United States Senate Subcommittee on Internal Security, Jim Lucas, who returned a few months ago from Vietnam where he had covered the war for four years, was asked the question by Senator Strom Thurmond: "Why is it that our news media cannot get over to our people that this is not a regional war but a war between the Communists and the free world, and that we are not in Vietnam just to save the South Vietnamese . . . but are there in our own national interest?"

"Not On Our Side" Lucas replied: "That is a question I have asked myself many times, Senator. 'Am I wrong on this?' because I see so many people who take an opposite point of view. I do not think I am wrong. There is no monolith known as the press or the media. I work for Scripps-

Howard, this guy works for CBS, and this one for the Times. In some cases, it is a mechanical problem. . .

"The press, I like to think, is representative of this country. If the country is divided, the press is divided. There are those in the press corps who do not see it as you and I see it. They do not think we have any right to be there. They do not believe the domino theory, which I think is still valid. . . Some just are not on our side. Accreditation Procedures Questioned

"If I have any recommendations to make to this committee (continued Jim Lucas) I would suggest that you take a hard look at some of the accreditation procedures of the Pentagon, because they do not require much to get out there. I would particularly apply this to reporters from other countries who are assigned to our forces, who are entitled to access to classified information, some of whom actually go back and forth between the lines.

"We are not required to give this consideration to people like that. A lot of our reporters are young; they are trying to make a name for themselves. Covering a war is a lot different from covering a courthouse or a city hall. I call them go-go boys who don't give a darn how many lives they cost if they can launch a successful career. Not a lot, but some are like that.

Enemies Accredited To U. S. Forces

"And finally, early in this war, the wires and the networks were trying to cover it on the cheap. They hired whoever they could get, anyone who could type, the beachcombers. Many were of other nationalities. The wires (AP and UPI) and the nets (CBS, ABC, NBC) didn't even have to pay the guild scale. Professionally, some turned out well. They were good reporters; they had contacts; they know the country now after 4 or 5 years in the field.

But some simply do not like us. They make no bones about it. They are not on our side.

"I do not believe we should demand that a reporter be prejudiced in our favor. But we have every right to insist that he not be prejudiced against us. Some are openly and flagrantly hostile. I am thinking right now of a couple I have never heard say 'We' about anything. It is always 'You'. 'You Americans did this. You bloody Americans did this, that, or the other thing.' As for the press policing itself, we are far too competitive for that."

Jim Lucas made some very serious comments, and he knows it. He is saying there are some enemies among the people who are reporting the Vietnamese war to the American nation. I am writing Senator Thurmond urging that the Senate Committee push its investigation into the quality of news coming to us from Vietnam. Momentous decisions must be made by our nation on the basis of information coming from Vietnam. How much of it is biased, destructive of American interests?

St. Joseph's Gets $108,000 In Grants

St. Joseph College's department of nursing will receive grants totalling over $108,000 during the next five years to provide undergraduate training in psychiatric nursing.

Administered by the National Institute of Mental Health, the yearly grants of $21,700, will enable the College to award traineeships to two students each year during the five year span.

Sister Aloysia Dugan, chairman of the department of nursing, said that each of the awardees for the coming year will receive $1,500 in tuition benefits and $1,800 in stipends under the program at St. Joseph's.

The stated objectives of these federal grants are to improve the quality of the mental health training; to enlarge the capacity for training people; to help in the development of specialized training programs; and, through trainee stipend awards, to enable a greater number of persons to pursue careers in mental health disciplines.

Using a nursing problems teaching approach. St. Joseph's psychiatric nursing program is designed to develop, deepen and broaden concepts of interpersonal relationships in all areas of the curriculum.

Two full-time members of the nursing faculty are responsible for the psychiatric nursing course, which consists of 60 hours of lecture and 120 hours of clinical laboratory.

In addition, the students attend staff conferences and go on field trips to state hospitals, half-way houses, and mental health clinics. They also participate in weekly seminars at which they share experiences in the areas of mental health, psychiatric nursing, and public health nursing.

Students of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes present research findings at seminars to which both faculty, students, and guests are invited. The themes center on some aspect of mental or public health.

During the past year, topics included "Pain and its Alleviation," "Implications of L. S. D.," and "Cardiac Crisis." In all of these presentations, particular emphasis is placed on psychological ramifications of the physical danger.

The Seton Psychiatric Institute, Baltimore, Md., is the cooperating agency used for the students' clinical experiences in the psychiatric nursing program at St. Joseph College. The Institute is a private, 280 bed hospital for acute and convalescent psychiatric patients.

The College has been able to award six such trainee-ships in four years under the mental health program which is administered through a branch of the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

Blue Cross Gives Insurance Advice

The Maryland Blue Cross and Blue Shield Plans this week reminded new and prospective brides and grooms to check their health care protection to make sure they are adequately covered.

The plans pointed out that coverage for newlyweds under their parents' family contracts stops at the end of the marriage month. However, there is a 30-day grace period following that month during which newlyweds may enroll for husband-wife or family protection without a lapse in coverage.

Those over 19 years of age with individual memberships of their own also were reminded that marriage means they too must convert their coverage to either the husband-wife or family plans within 90 days after the wedding to receive benefits. Only under family memberships are maternity benefits available, the plans added.

For information on coverage available to newlyweds, the plans request that calls be directed to the nearest Maryland Blue Cross and Blue Shield office. The number in Hagerstown is 733-5995.

Two Fire Alarms Answered

The Vigilant Hose Co. responded to two fire alarms over the weekend. At 1:45 o'clock Saturday afternoon the firemen were called to a grass fire at the Thomas Ott property on DePaul St. There was no damage. At 11:30 o'clock Monday they were called to a car blaze at Welty's Market on W. Main St. The fire burned all the wiring on the motor.

Warning Issued On Mufflers

Attorney General, Francis B. Burch, has issued a memorandum to the State Police and local law enforcement agencies following a number of complaints recently received concerning excessive muffler noise. General Burch called attention to the fact that Article 66 1/2, Section 924A of the State's motor vehicle law provides that every motor vehicle "shall at all times be equipped with an adequate muffler in constant operation and properly maintained to prevent any excessive or unusual noise."

The memorandum points out that any modifications of an automobile exhaust system which results in an increase "in an amplification or increase of motor noise over and above the noise emitted by the muffler originally installed on the vehicle is prohibited." Mr. Burch also reminded law enforcement officials that motorcycles and motorbikes are included in the definition of motor vehicles and are also subject to the provisions of the law concerning mufflers.

Mr. Burch pointed out in his memorandum that a violation of the muffler statute constitutes a criminal violation punishable by a fine of up to $100 and imprisonment of up to ten days. He called upon all law enforcement agencies "to enforce this section with vigor and diligence."

Mr. Burch in issuing his memorandum indicated there had been a sharp increase in the number of complaints received from citizens throughout the State complaining about excessive muffler noise. He said that loud muffler noises are not only a violation of the law but "represent a particularly obnoxious form of irritation and annoyance. Many persons are just as concerned about excessively loud noises penetrating our environment as noxious fumes and gases which pollute it." As one recent complainant aptly put it, "I personally find nothing more irritating than to have my eardrums assaulted by a loud and thunderous roar from an automobile or motorcycle."

Servicemen's Group Life Insurance policies are extended for 120 days after discharge at no cost to the insured. Policies can be converted at regular rates during that time.

Taxing Travel Abroad
WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., July 25 — Undaunted by the thumbs-down attitude of Congress earlier this year, the Johnson Administration is pushing once again for a tax on Americans traveling abroad. No Real Curb To Dollar Drain Responding to public sentiment and to the dictates of common sense, Congress wisely decided that the original proposal to levy a 30% tax on all tourist expenditures exceeding $7 a day should be shelved. We predict that the solons will just as firmly reject this latest — the milder — proposal to levy a tax on tourist expenditures of more than $15 a day. Actually a tax on travel—no matter how stiff—would provide no real curb to the dollar drain. While it is true that the dollars spent abroad by American tourists do add a not insignificant sum to our imbalance of international payments, it is naive to believe that travel tax would be an effective—or even a proper—remedy. The spirit and the letter of any such tax law could be easily circumvented, with the possible net result being a greater, rather than a smaller, tourist-dollar flow abroad.

Free Access And Free Trade

In this period of mounting U. S. and world monetary problems, we need to place greater emphasis on free trade and free access to all the markets of the world. Anything that hinders the maintenance and/or expansion of our trade with other countries ought to be looked upon with disfavor by Americans generally and by Congress in particular. Travel is one of the prerequisites of expanding trade. They go together like love and marriage. Hence our government should be encouraging—not discouraging—travel abroad.
Of course, it would be desirable to put the travel segment of our balance of payments into better equilibrium. But there is a way to do this without penalizing Americans traveling abroad. What we need to do is step up our official and other efforts to persuade greater numbers of foreign tourists to visit the United States.

Unbridled Government Spending
We are faced with a great challenge . . . certainly one of the greatest we have encountered in all our history. Our way of life and our economy are squarely on the line. We must make them work. For the immediate future, this means putting our balance of payments and our federal budget in order, and doing so without placing unnecessary curbs on the freedom of Americans or of American enterprise. Big and unbridled government spending have had a whale of a lot more to do with our present plight than has the spending by American tourists abroad.

In this century of unprecedented industrial development, great social change, and enormous economic progress, we need to remember that half the peoples of the world are still under-privileged. If we are to succeed in holding our place in the world—and of bettering it—we must tailor our aspirations to our abilities and our means. If we are to surmount the problems which beset us on every side, we must give clear direction to a well-rounded, closely inter-related social and economic policy, foreign and domestic. Don't "Let George Do It"
The travel tax is ill-conceived. It catches at straws and tries to make scapegoats out of American tourists, while Uncle Sam continues to spend so fast and furiously that the budget is some $25 billion out of whack. Who's to blame? We are all to blame, for the excesses of government are the result of our own indifference and inertia.

The spirit of "Let George do it" is rife in the land. In droves we stay away from town meetings, school committee sessions, state legislative hearings. One result of this has been the tendency of state and big-city governments to side-step their responsibilities . . . to pass the buck to an Uncle Sam only too eager to govern locally as well as nationally to centralize, and to control. Would that we realized how high a price we are already paying for such paternalism . . . in dollars and in diminished freedom.

A VIEWPOINT

By Terry Smith

I think it's time to examine the old bromide that you vote for the man, not the party. The majority of our citizens have grown up believing that this is one of our inviolate truisms, ranking beside such others as the Democratic Party is the friend of the working man, and the Republican Party is the rich man's coalition. These and others are equally as false. The simple truth is that it makes precious little sense to split your ticket when voting for regularly elected officials. I excuse the judiciary from the fore-going, because in most instances they are not as frequently elected as Presidents, Senators, Congressmen, Aldermen, Sheriffs, etc.

The logic of believing in an executive candidate to the point where your ballot is cast in his behalf, then on that same ballot supporting legislators of the opposite party supposedly espousing an opposite viewpoint escapes me. If you believe in a party's platform enough to vote for it, what sense does it make to deny that party the machinery to implement its programs?

Let's examine the question from a negative standpoint. Candidate Jones representing the Republican Party is running for President. You believe that Mr. Jones represents what is needed for the country and you cast your vote for his election. Now, as you move down the ballot you vote for Senator Brown, and Congressmen Green and Black, all Democrats. All of your choices are elected, and the Democrats hold a clear majority in the Congress. As the administration of President Jones unfolds you are particularly chagrined because he is failing to enact those programs for which he was elected, and most importantly those programs for which your support was given. Immediately your anger and self-righteous criticism is directed against the President for his deception, and he is castigated as just another example of opportunistic politics. But what about those Senators and Congressmen of the opposite party, who, by their opposition, have successfully blocked the programs initiated by the President.

This is where the inconsistency develops. Where do you place the blame for ineffectiveness? Who do you vote out of office next election year? If you believe in a candidate enough to vote for him, give him the mandate to carry out his program by electing those sympathetic and dedicated to the same beliefs. If dissatis-

SOCIAL SECURITY NEWS

In its first two years of operation, Medicare has paid $8.4 billion toward the hospital and doctor bills of the Nation's elderly people.

Taking note of the anniversary of the comprehensive program of health insurance for the aged, which began July 1, 1966, President Johnson stated that the program has meant "new hope and renewed health that light up thousands of lives in every community in this land."

"Medicare has paid the expenses incurred in 10.6 million hospital stays and 45 million medical payments," he said, "and more than one million elderly persons have received posthospital care in nursing homes and in their own homes."

Payments under the hospital insurance program totaled $6.3 billion for the two-year period and a total of $2.1 billion was paid out under the supplementary medical insurance program.

According to Robert M. Ball, Commissioner of Social Security, 19.7 million older people 65 and over, just about everyone in that age group is now covered under the basic hospital insurance part of Medicare, and 18.6 million of them, or 95 per cent, have enrolled in the voluntary medical insurance part that helps pay doctor bills and a wide variety of other medical expenses in and out of the hospital.

"Because of Medicare," he said, "many thousands of older people, who might have deferred or gone without care—and possibly died—have been able to afford treatment. Millions have the security of knowing that serious illness is no longer the financial threat that it was in the past."

With ability to pay, also, older people who would otherwise have been charity or ward patients are able to receive care as private patients and in institutions which meet Medicare's quality standards.

The application of these quality standards, he pointed out, has contributed to an upgrading of health care that has benefited patients of all ages. And because institutions participating in the Medicare program must be in conformity with Title VI of the Civil Rights Act members of minority groups in many communities now have access to quality care for the first time.

By paying for care outside the hospital, Commissioner Ball noted, Medicare has made it possible for physicians to choose the level of care most appropriate to the older patient's condition and has pointed the way to new patterns of health care.

Since January 1, 1967, for example, there have been 640,000 admissions of older people to extended care facilities for posthospital care, and 485,000 home health care plans have been set up for older people to receive visits from visiting nurses, physical therapists, and other health care specialists. Bills have been paid for 1.4 million visits of older people to the hospital for outpatient diagnostic services.

"The successful operation of the Medicare program over the past two years would not have been possible," Ball said, "without the cooperation and hard work of thousands of people, both inside and outside the Federal Government."

Involved with the Government in the operation of the Medicare program, he said, are 123 private insurance organizations — Blue Cross and Blue Shield plans and private insurance companies who receive and pay Medicare bills under contract with the Federal Government; 6,900 participating hospitals; 4,700 participating extended care facilities; 2,100 home health agencies; 2,550 certified independent laboratories; and agencies of 50 different States.

"Medicare enters its third year on a sound administrative basis," Commissioner Ball said. "With experience and the close cooperation of all involved, problems that arose with the launching of the massive program have been eased, and the entire administrative process is under continuous careful study to assure that it operates at maximum efficiency."

"The real measurement of how well the program is operating, he noted, would require a house-to-house canvass of the Nation's 19.7 million elderly people with supplemental visits to their children to whom they looked in the past when the costs of illness outran their resources."

But over the past two years, hundreds of those who have benefited from Medicare have themselves told of their experiences so that others would learn of the value of the protection.

Dozing Driver Hits Steps

Robert C. Copenhaver, 25, Emmitsburg, agreed to pay damages to a step railing and flower pot which occurred on Saturday, July 20 at 3:10 a.m. when two witnesses testified they saw his car strike the front steps to Crouse's Store on the Square.

Questioned by Officer James J. Trout, Copenhaver agreed to pay the damages estimated at approximately $40. Copenhaver told Officer Trout that when he approached the Square he stopped for a red light, dozed off temporarily and his car left the highway, crossed the sidewalk and hit the steps. He admitted that when he got home he noticed minor damage to his vehicle. No charges have been preferred.

School Bus Law Being Abused

Gilbert U. Newby, Director of Logistical Services for the Board of Education of Frederick County has issued a plea to local motorists for their cooperation in the observance of the law regarding school buses stopped to pick up or discharge passengers. The law requires drivers traveling in both directions to stop.

According to Newby, the use of school buses for summer programs conducted by or in conjunction with the Board of Education is at an all time high this year, and since the end of the regular school year many motorists have failed to stop for school buses when the vehicles displayed the flashing red lights. Newby emphasized that the law is applicable year around and applies to drivers in both directions, in the city as well as in rural areas.

Newby went on to say that many bus drivers have complained to him of being passed while displaying the flashing red signal as they picked up or discharged children. Recently a child was injured in such an occurrence pointing up dramatically the need for strict observance of this law.

Although local law enforcement agencies are cooperating to the fullest extent in this campaign, area residents can also assist by noting license numbers of offenders and testifying as witnesses. Only by enlisting the aid of citizens in both observing the law and in prosecuting violators can the children's safety be assured, Newby said.

Programs in operation this summer which utilize school bus transportation includes:

The Early Bird Program of physical examinations for pre-school children conducted in cooperation with the County Health Department.
An educational program for the children of migrant workers.
The Head Start Program which involves 14 buses serving 11 schools.
The Community Action Day Camp.
The Sight-Saving Program.

In Frederick County the slogan is not the perennial, "Schools back in session—watch that child"; it's more appropriate to say, "Schools still in session—watch that child", since the local picture shows little slackening of the pace with the advent of summer.

Food Needs Special Handling In Hot Weather

"When In Doubt, Throw It Out"
Caution in handling and preparing foods, especially when feeding large groups of people, was urged today by Dr. Charles G. Spicknall of your Frederick County Health Department.

He indicated that the greatest number of reported outbreaks of illnesses associated with food last year occurred in homes. The largest number of persons who reportedly suffered from illness associated with food however, was composed of those who had eaten at banquets or other gatherings, beef, pork, turkey and fish were most often involved, but all kinds of foods were listed as possible sources of sickness.

Dr. Spicknall said that in most cases illnesses could have been prevented by following basic handling and preparation procedures. He suggested that homemakers and those responsible for food at picnics, parties or similar affairs learn how to identify and avoid spoiled and contaminated foods.

Dr. Spicknall explained that most meats, including fish, shrimp and fowl, have a disagreeable odor when they are spoiled or contaminated. In addition, uncooked fish meat that pulls away easily from bones, dressed fowl that is sticky to the touch, and beef, pork and similar fresh meats that become slimy are considered unusable as food.

When preparing raw fruits and vegetables, Dr. Spicknall said, look for white to grayish powdery deposits. These may indicate presence of agricultural chemicals that could be harmful. They should be washed off the food completely before preparing it. A good test for canned foods is to note tops and bottoms to see if they have swelled out into dome-like shapes. This usually means that the contents have spoiled. Also, canned food that is unfit for use will often have an abnormal odor.

Popular salad spreads, such as those made from chicken, egg, tuna, and ham must be kept refrigerated until ready to eat. Similarly, custard-filled pastries and some cold cuts need constant refrigeration as protection against the growth of potentially harmful organisms in them. A good point to remember, Dr. Spicknall stressed, is that foods which are refrigerated when purchased should be kept refrigerated until eaten.

Left-over foods should be examined completely before serving, for unusual odor, visible growth of mold, unusual appearance, etc. Refrigeration below 40° F will help retard spoilage of left-overs, but for safety such foods should be cooked again before eating.

Dr. Spicknall added that personal cleanliness is a must in food preparation. He urged that those who are responsible for food wash their hands thoroughly immediately before starting and keep them clean during preparation. Clean clothes or aprons are recommended, and he pointed out that individuals with open cuts or scratches should not be permitted to handle and prepare foods.
Dr. Spicknall reminded area residents that their health department is always available to help answer questions. "Don't let your picnic, party or banquet become the cause of illness for your guests through improper food handling and preparation," he said, and he then offered this thought, "When in doubt, throw it out!"

WOMEN'S HEALTH

By Louise Chase
Women's Medical News Service
Clinic Averts Teenage Unwed Pregnancies
SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Is there a way to help sexually active teenage girls avoid unwanted, unplanned, out-of-wedlock pregnancies?

Physicians who have worked with such "at risk" girls for more than a year in a special adolescent clinic in Baltimore reported at a recent medical meeting here that they believe there is.

Alarmed by the increase in illegitimate births in their city, and by the fact that every year for the past five years more than 1,000 girls aged 14 to 16 have given birth to live infants, health authorities joined forces to bring what they described as a major "chronic illness" under control.

A clinic providing "a vast, continuing spectrum of aid" was established at a voluntary hospital to meet the special needs of these adolescent girls. Psychological and emotional support, complete medical and dental care, health education, as well as contraceptive counselling and sex education were all part of the program.

Problems Aired
In small biweekly group sessions, the girls were encouraged to discuss problems important to them. Common subjects, in addition to sex, were personal hygiene, contraception, and illegitimate pregnancy.

In the first 15 months of the program, some 200 girls came to the clinic for help with a variety of problems. Of these, 69 were eligible for and accepted contraceptive services. "The only criteria for eligibility" the report noted, "are sexual activity and parental or guardian's consent."

Trust Vital
The physicians observed that some girls at first refused contraceptive services, apparently in the belief that such help was preferred only because the adults disapproved of the sexual activities. When the girls came to trust the adults and to believe that they were there to help them and not to judge them they returned for contraceptive counselling.

One of every four girls in the group given contraception was between the ages of 12 and 14. The physicians emphasized that in view of the "realities of our society" girls must be reached with counselling early rather than late in puberty.

While a variety of birth control methods was offered, it became evident that the girls preferred the pills. "It is the only form of contraception that is universally acceptable to these young people," according to the physicians. They hated the pelvic examination required for fitting a diaphragm and would not tolerate the discomfort of IUD insertion or steroid injections.

Eighty-five per cent of the patients remained on the pills. The physicians regard the 15 per cent dropout "remarkably small." Virtually all the girls accept total responsibility for their medication. There have been no pregnancies among them. This is in contrast to sexually active girls treated in the obstetrical clinic, nine out of 10 of whom became pregnant within one year after having begun sexual relations without the use of birth control.

Problem Nationwide
The importance of preventive programs is highlighted by the fact that there are more than 130,000 teenage out-of-wedlock births in the U. S. every year. And this is considered a low figure since 16 states do not report illegitimacy statistics.

The problem is not exclusively or mainly a teenage one, however. Sixty per cent of illegitimate births occur to women over 20. Nor is it exclusively racial. It has been found that nonwhite teenagers are the only group to show a sustained decline in illegitimacy rates since 1957.
