Mammoth Parade Thursday

Most Anything At A Glance

- By Abigail -

This week a curfew was put into effect in Taneytown. Several other towns and nearby cities have had such curfews for quite some time and it is generally conceded that there is a certain amount of effectiveness derived from their implementation. For several months now there has been a new crop of hot-rodders having a field day in Emmitsburg. A curfew, such as other towns now have imposed could go a long way in breaking up the mavericks who have been having a "field" day on Emmitsburg streets.

Next week is carnival week in Town folks and the committee in charge has lined up some high class entertainment. I know a lot of you older people have had your fill of carnivals in years past but if you don't care to ride or play the games of chance, why not drop in and listen to the good music? There's a plenty to keep the younger generation busy the entire week, so here's hoping Emmitsburg is ready to turn out and support its only carnival.

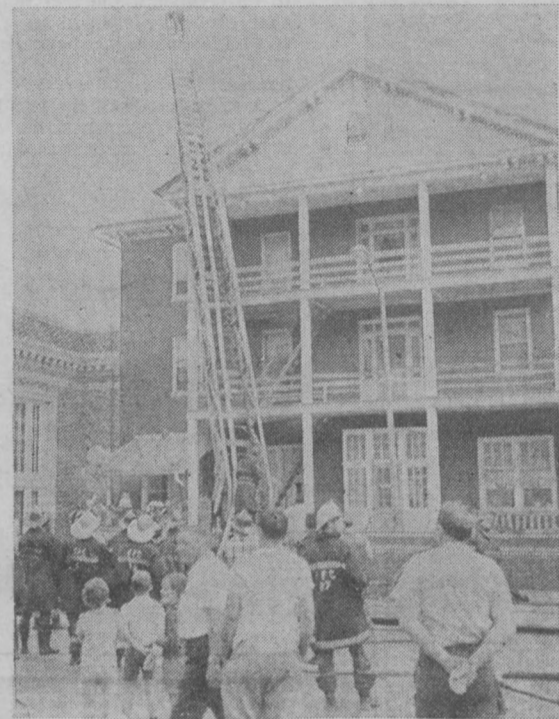

I felt much better about the security of the Town when last week the fire drill on the Square proved to me, and the public, that we actually have the city's fire protection here. I watched with pride as the Gettysburg firemen righted their 100-foot aerial ladder over the top of the old Hotel on the Square and shot plenty of water over the top and several buildings distant. This was fine, I thought. Just about then the men of the grand old Vigilant Hose Co. sprang into action and in a few minutes they were throwing water through their own apparatus over the top of the tall Knights of Columbus. I watched with amazement and pride, our young fire company members scoot up the 55-foot ladder and go into action. It proved to me then, that if a serious fire ever did occur on our Square that in about 10-15 minutes we could have half a dozen fire companies on the scene and that our own fine local company would be able to contain things until help arrived. Our thanks and appreciation to that fine group of young men who comprise the Vigilant Hose Company.

The race for space is rapidly reaching its conclusion or destination, so to speak. After this week's highly successful moon orbit all seems in readiness for the United States to set its first man on the moon. The flight was perfect and apparently the experimental stage is over and we are about to harvest the results. I can vividly recall, back in 1961 when President John F. Kennedy predicted that within the decade we would land a human being on the moon. This prognostication is about to come true. Present space program plans call for just this sometime in July. What then, is the paramount question being asked by the citizenry? Where do we go from the moon? Billions of dollars, none of us actually know how many, have been spent to get this accomplishment of landing on the moon achieved and most people are now of the opinion that perhaps we should let the space program in limbo. We sort of feel that excessively spending on the future of the program should be cut but not abandoned completely. Perhaps a Space Institute could be established on a permanent basis whereby a continuous study of the science could be maintained until such a time, if ever, we feel we should explore other distant planets.

Messrs. Louis Orndorff and Alen Davis spent the week vacationing on the Chesapeake Bay.

No race or group is immune from multiple sclerosis. There is no great difference in occurrence between whites and non-whites living in the same area.

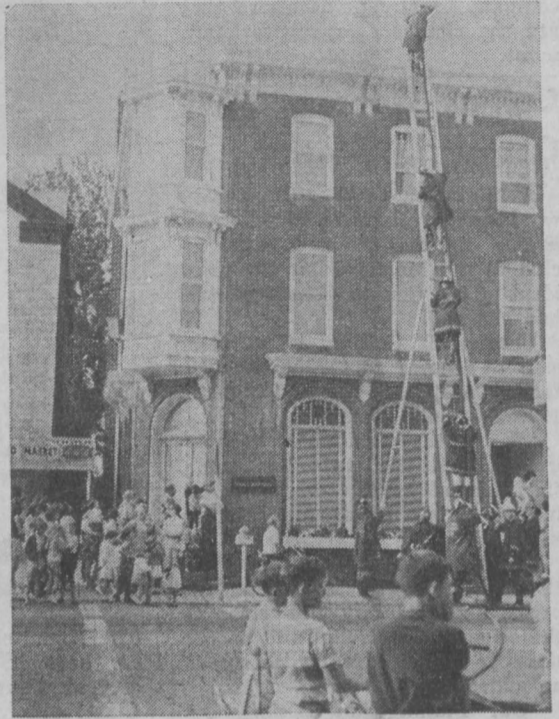

Fire Drill Shows Water Pressure Adequate Here

Gettysburg firemen "take care" of old Hotel on Square during fire drill held May 22. The 100-foot ladder is shown in action.

A large turnout of local citizens witnessed the fire drill and pumping demonstration hosted by the Vigilant Hose Co. on the Square last Thursday evening at 7 p.m.

Over 15 firemen from various units out-of-town, participated in the drill. Units were present from Fairfield, Gettysburg, Thurmont, Taneytown and Rocky Ridge. Fire Chief Guy R. McGlaughlin of Emmitsburg, said the drill represented what was termed a first and second alarm in Emmitsburg.

Residents of the community expressed pride and satisfaction in the knowledge that such excellent, experienced and outstanding neighboring fire companies could be depended upon in an emergency. We are especially privileged here to have the availability of the 100-foot aerial ladder of the Gettysburg Fire Co. in case of fire on any of our high buildings either in town or at the two colleges.

On Friday, May 30, the Reverend Ronald Fearer, Pastor of Elias Lutheran Church, will receive the Master of Sacred Theology Degree from the Lutheran Seminary in Gettysburg. Mount Students Charged With Car Tampering

Four Mt. St. Mary's College students were charged with tampering or damaging a motor vehicle Wednesday after investigation by Police Chief Henry Filler.

The quartet, all juniors at the college, signed statements for the police and posted $53 collateral apiece for a hearing Wednesday night before Magistrate Guy A. Baker, Sr. All four forfeited the collateral when they did not appear for the hearing.

Three of the students were apprehended Wednesday but the fourth member was unavailable as he had completed college examinations and returned to his home. The four were charged after damaging a 1969 Mustang owned by C. Frank Zarnowski, college professor, Tuesday morning at approximately 1:30 a.m.

Charged were Francis Hayes, Millburn, N. J.; James A. McGee, Auburn, N. Y.; Michael J. Saunders, Auburn, N. Y.; and Robert F. Voight, Haddonfield, N. J. Investigation showed damage to Zarnowski's vehicle included, two flat tires, broken windshield, damaged hood, broken mirrors and all wiring stripped from the engine. Damage was estimated at approximately $600.

Chief Filler, assisted by State Police, determined the guilty youths after lifting fingerprints from the car and comparing them with those of the youths. Zarnowski had parked his car at the former Hoffman Apartments, where he resides, on West Main Street. Chief Filler discovered the damaged vehicle at approximately 5:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Pastor Fearer began his post-Master STM studies in 1960, met his language requirement in 1968, and completed his thesis in January of this year. The thesis was titled "An Investigation of Roman Catholic Confraternity of Christian Doctrine's Elementary School Year Religion Program." It attempted an evaluation of existing curricular materials for Confraternity use, by the standards of modern kerygmatic catechetics now being voiced by Catholic educators.

Pastor Fearer received a Bachelor of Divinity Degree from Gettysburg Seminary in 1958, a Bachelor of Arts Degree from Gettysburg College in 1955, and an Associate in Arts Degree from Frostburg State College in 1953.

Graduation will begin with Holy Communion at 4 p.m., in the Church of the Abiding Presence, at the Seminary, and will conclude with a brief Vesper Service at 7:30 p.m. The Degree will be conferred at the evening Service. The public is invited.

Town Commissioner Recommends Flax For Supervisor

In last week's Chronicle, Commissioner McDonnell, in his letter to the Editor, asked the question: "Do You Know that Emmitsburg has no maintenance supervisor?"

I would like to inform you how Emmitsburg is deprived of the services of an excellent and well qualified man for this position. I refer to Commissioner Norman Flax, who has a 10-year record of dedicated service to the community.

A majority of the Town Commissioners want him, and I know a great many taxpayers want him, but Mayor Seidel refuses to sanction his appointment.

Mayor Seidel bases his objection on the statement that Mr. Flax had the position at one time and quit. (Refer to the Mayor's letter in the Chronicle dated May 9, 1969). However, Mr. Flax has a letter of dismissal signed by the Mayor, stating, in effect, that his services were no longer needed. I had hoped to include that correspondence in this letter, but said document is at present in the possession of Mr. Flax's lawyer.

However, with Mr. Flax's consent, it will be published as soon as available. I know that Mr. Flax would again give valuable and dedicated service to the Town and save the taxpayers' much money.

In the meantime, the weeds continue to grow higher and the streets become dirtier. But, in my mind, these are minor problems compared to what could happen to some of our installations such as our disposal plant, reservoirs and pipelines. These things command constant supervision. They do not maintain themselves; and a major breakdown in any one of them could be calamitous.

Now, I think it is time for the Mayor and Commissioners to stop acting like "kids"; time to stop personality conflicts; time to sit as a dedicated body of men, determined to resolve the problems of our fine community as best we know how, keeping in mind always that we are servants of the people, and that the only "Bosses" are the taxpayers.

If you would like to have Mr. Flax as your supervisor, write to the Mayor or to your Commissioners stating your wishes.

Or, better still, attend the Town meetings. You are always welcome, and you have the right to know how your money is being spent.

Respectfully,
Ernest Rosensteel

They carried identical cascade bouquets of yellow and pale orange daisies.

Miss Regina La Croce, neighbor of the bride, was flower girl and wore a dress identical of the bridesmaids and carried a basket of daisies.

Best man was Darwin Jones, Mitchell, Indiana, friend of the groom. Ushers were Richard Oster, Cherry Point, N. C., brother of the bride, and Kenneth Childers, Seipoo, Indiana, brother-in-law of the groom. The men were attired in tuxedos.

Thanks Community For Support Of Fire Drill

The Vigilant Hose Company wishes to thank the residents of Emmitsburg for their co-operation during the fire drill held on the Square on Thursday evening, May 22. Special thanks to Mayor Seidel, the Town Commissioners and to Police Chief Filler for their cooperation and assistance.

The purpose of the drill was to pre-plan for a major fire in the center of town. The practice was staged on the Square with the assistance of fire companies from Fairfield, Gettysburg, Rocky Ridge, Taneytown and Thurmont. The Gettysburg aerial ladder was set up in front of the Myers Apartments and water was thrown over the building to test the adequacy of the water supply.

With the completion of the drill the protection of the center of town will be much faster should a first and second alarm be sounded and the assistance of the neighboring fire companies be needed. One thing that was learned, is that the water supply is definitely adequate.

The Vigilant Hose Company also wishes to thank the assisting fire companies and the nearly 125 firemen who participated in the drill.

Woodsboro Fire Co. Backs Graceham

The Woodsboro Volunteer Fire Company has voted not to respond to assistance calls from Thurmont Volunteer Fire Company as long as the Graceham Volunteer Fire Company is in service and closer.

A letter to the Thurmont company was sent by Woodsboro Chief Jerry M. Crum last week, notifying Thurmont of the decision. The Woodsboro firemen made the decision at a recent company meeting.

Crum told Thurmont "We are obligated to the people in our area to give them the best and most efficient service possible." He continued, "Therefore we can not justify running our engine company or ambulance into your (Thurmont) area as long as you have a company closer than we are."

Noting that he did not want to cause hard feelings between the companies, Crum said that he hoped the Thurmont firemen would understand the position of his company. He added that when Woodsboro is the next closest company to Thurmont they would be more than glad to respond in assistance.

Although the two firehouses, Thurmont and Graceham, are only two and one-half miles apart, Thurmont has never requested Graceham as an assistance company for any of their run territories.

When the issue came to light several weeks ago, Chief Harry O. Miller of the Thurmont Fire Company stated that when his company needed assistance manpower was usually the most critical problem, and that Graceham failed to turn out the manpower necessary.

The incident several weeks ago concerned the fact that Blue Ridge Summit from Pennsylvania and the Vigilant Hose Company of Emmitsburg were called to assist Thurmont for several grass fires on the west side of Thurmont while Graceham was not called, according to the Frederick County Central Alarm.

The various Frederick County fire companies work together to set the response areas for each company; however, the back-up or assistance companies are usually selected by the chief of the first due company.

Thurmont is second due or back-up company on almost all of Graceham's calls, and the officers of Graceham have said repeatedly they would respond as a back-up company to any point where they are the closest company to Thurmont.

Collins Opposes Census Limitation

A limitation of the 1970 census would greatly affect planning programs in Frederick County, including the Master Plan, the president of the County Commissioners has charged.

Charles E. Collins, in a letter sent to federal representatives, attacked proposals for limiting the 1970 Decennial Census.

"We have a number of programs, and the state has some, that depend greatly on the information from the census," Collins asserted.

"Also, I understand that the 1970 questionnaire is now on the press, and certainly this close to the census year is not the proper time to make drastic changes," he added.

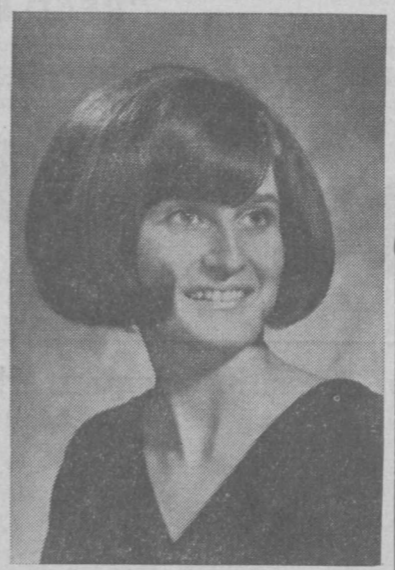

"Our Planning and Zoning Department and our County Master Plan would be affected greatly," he further asserted.

Collins sent the letters to Rep.

J. Glenn Beall, Jr., Sen. Joseph D. Tydings, and Sen. Charles McC. Mathias.

Copies also went to Rep. Charles H. Wilson, chairman of the subcommittee on Census and Statistics, and Maurice Stans, Secretary of the Department of Commerce.

OFF AND RUNNING by John I. Day

All Have Four Legs

To paraphrase Gertrude Stein's redundant observation about a horse, "A horse is a horse," and to most of us any difference besides the color is found in the meticulously recorded past performance records of Daily Racing Form. When a yearling is led into the sales ring, however, there are no past performances except those provided by his pedigree. At major sales today the pedigree as well as Madden was for ten consecutive years, 1918-1927, America's leading breeder of Thoroughbreds.

It is said that he hesitated over only one broodmare in the field and then correctly named her yearling. Lending credence to the story is the fact that John E. Madden was for ten consecutive years, 1918-1927, America's leading breeder of Thoroughbreds.

A story is told of the late John E. Madden's eye for a horse. It seems that a luncheon discussion can business, the apparel industry has gradually gained a greater measure of investment interest. In the past ten years, it has shed its ugly duckling appearance and taken on a more sophisticated stature. During this period, consumer outlays for apparel have fared better in relation to the trend and total volume of disposable income than they have in the past.

Favorable Fundamentals
Several factors have accounted for the improved image of the apparel industry. The most important factor has been the remarkable growth of personal income, particularly with respect to income per capita and per family unit. As the decade of the 1950's drew to a close, consumer expenditures for clothing burgeoned. The progress of income growth and the accompanying expansion of buying power via consumer credit altered the pattern of consumer spending to the degree where an increasing proportion of discretionary consumer buying power has been flowing into the apparel field. The affluent environment has made it possible for most consumers to maintain larger wardrobes, and has encouraged greater fashion consciousness.

Furthermore, the growth of the nation's population and the change in its profile—wherein the teenage and young adult groups have been experiencing rapid increment recently—have benefited the apparel industry. Credit for the progress now being enjoyed by the clothing field must also be given to changes within the industry in the form of knitted fabrics, mixtures of synthetic fibers, bonded fabrics, and stretch fabrics.

Characteristics Of The Industry
The apparel industry is a fragmented structure composed of many firms, most of which are small and either privately or closely held. It must be recognized that the element of risk is an inherent part of the field. It is subject to the ravages of sudden and very radical changes in fashions and styles. The element of foreign competition is also of great importance.

Long-Term Outlook
However, the over-riding consideration is that apparel manufacturing enjoys the status of being a business which is basic to consumers. Looking ahead, the industry is not likely to lapse back to obscurity.

The fundamental social and economic progress of this nation, though not without problems, bodes well for the continued affluence of the buying public. Moreover, the years ahead will see a significant increase in the 15-30 age group, which yields much power in terms of demand and fashion receptivity.

Investment Factors
A continuing record level of personal income, and consumer acceptance of new and colorful fabrics and fashions point to fresh sales gains for the apparel industry in 1969. Despite pressures on profit margins, the expected increase in volume of business should enable most clothing manufacturers to post higher earnings versus 1968. In the past two years, socks of apparel firms have experienced mixed performances, but in the stock market setback since late 1968, many of the apparel issues have receded to levels which make retention worth while, and some attractive buying opportunities have been spawned.

The Research Staff of Babson's Reports Incorporated recommends retention of the common of BLUE BELL, BOBBIE

BROOKS, CLUETT PEABODY, MANHATTAN INDUSTRIES, and UNITED MERCHANTS & MANUFACTURERS. For accounts which can undertake additional common stock commitments, and which can assume the risks incumbent in an industry which is subject to changes in styles and consumer preference, the Babson Staff favors the common of EAGLE CLOTHES, MUNSINGWEAR, and RUSS TOGS, and the common and $1.50 convertible preferred of WARNACO.

Merry Tiller SCOTSMAN model—shown with Finger-Tined Rotors and extensions to 24" —is the thrifty power package for small garden plots. Combines 3 hp with chain-drive transmission to deliver the equivalent of a 5 hp worm-gear unit. Adjustable, detachable rear wheels.

NOTE: Last week's fictional column reported the capture of the President and the takeover of the USA by a Zovet force threatening total destruction. An ultimatum for unconditional surrender is presented to the President. He is forced to comply. He speaks on TV from the White House, surrounded by Zovet guards (this is another fictional column).

"My American compatriots: Our nation has been taken over by the irresistible power of Zovet Communism. I ask that all citizens accept their local and state governments and police forces without resistance. Resistance can only bring needless bloodshed and destruction upon our people. It is too late to resist."

"A few minutes ago, the following people were brought to my office under heavy guard of Zovet troops flown up from Cuba (TV camera brings each into focus as the President goes down the list): The Vice President, the Speaker of the House, the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, the Chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, the Secretary of Defense, the Secretary of State.

"To reassure you of the authenticity of this telecast of surrender, the Zovet Premier has asked each to speak to you: 'A Total Surprise?'"

THE VICE PRESIDENT (TV camera zooms in): "It is true. Our nation has been taken over. There was no possibility left for resistance. I join the President in urging a calm and unresisting surrender."

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE: "It was a total surprise to all of us on the Hill—well, almost all. For years, our good judgment was infected with wishful thinking. It is a sad awakening."

CHAIRMAN SENATE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN RELATIONS: "I was wrong. We were defenseless; the Zovets weren't. They took advantage of this—to my surprise. I feel, however, everything will be all right. The Zovets are not as bad as some Americans would have you believe. Communism is not, after all, unthinkable. It is a reality, here and now. Let us make the best of it."

"We Disarmed"
CHAIRMAN HOUSE COMMITTEE ON FOREIGN AF-

FAIRS: "The danger some of us felt deep down in our bones has come to pass. It took us 10 years to tear down our military might and our protection. But we did it. To survive as a nation there was no alternative but to surrender."

SECRETARY OF DEFENSE: "We disarmed ourselves, actually dismantled our nuclear defense unilaterally, until the Zovets knew they could take us. They have. There is no point in further comment."

SECRETARY OF STATE: "We are sending a bristling message to the United Nations, requesting an immediate convocation of the Security Council to insist upon the rights of a defeated nation. I trust all Americans will accept defeat like good patriots."

THE PRESIDENT: "Now, my fellow Americans, we have only one thing to fear—the death of our will to live. We must look ahead idealistically to a better day for the world and mankind. Chins up!"
"Otherwise, Yes!"

THE ZOVET PREMIER (just arrived from Cuba): "Do as you are told and you will not be shot. Otherwise, yes. The gentlemen you have just heard will not return to TV. Only our Zovets. Long live the revolution!"

The Zovet guards, on orders from the Premier, line up the President and the other U. S. officials. The President is separated from the line and led through the door into the adjacent corridor. A guard places a pistol behind his right ear and shoots him. The noise is loud inside the late President's office. The Vice President is escorted through the ceremony. A second shot.

The Speaker of the House is next. Then the Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. As he is led through the door, he comments: "All this is so unreal!" The slumping of his body on the growing heap in the corridor after being shot is not.

Only the Secretary of Defense takes action. He lunges for the nearest Zovet guard, crying out in anger. He is clubbed and marched outside.

His body falls across that of the Senator.

The Zovet Premier steps through the door, looks at the bodies and utters, without visible emotion, a single word of American slang: "Chumps!"

Multiple Sclerosis Battle Continues

Important gains in the continuing battle against multiple sclerosis may come from clues uncovered through research in recent years. While none of these point directly to a specific method of prevention or treatment, they substantially increase our basic understanding of the disease process. Such an understanding is essential to the eventual development of an effective preventive or method of treatment for this crippling disease of the central nervous system.

There is increasing evidence that multiple sclerosis is an autoimmune disease. In such diseases, the normally protective immunity machinery of the human body is misled into attacking one or more healthy, vital body tissues. Researchers were first led to suspect that this was happening in MS when it was found that many patients have abnormally high levels of gamma globulin (GG) in their cerebro-spinal fluids. (GG is the material that contains most of our circulating antibodies.) Other investigators have since learned that something in the blood of many MS patients can destroy myelin, the nerve insulation whose disintegration is such a striking feature of multiple sclerosis. This destruction can be produced by adding MS blood serum to cultures of nerve cells grown in the test tube. It has been shown further that if the serum used to produce this destruction of myelin is washed away, and normal nerve nutrients added, the myelin will grow back again. It is not yet known whether this myelin-destroying factor in the blood is a cause or an effect of multiple sclerosis, but studies aimed at settling this point are now going on.

More recently, it has been found also that MS serum, added to cultures nerve cells, will reduce their ability to transmit nerve impulses even before any myelin damage can be detected. This finding suggests (but does not prove) that myelin breakdown may not be the first step in the development of the disabling symptoms so common in MS. This test tube observation of disruption in nerve impulse transmission can also be eliminated by replacing the MS serum with new feeding solution.

Several investigators believe that MS is caused by an unusual kind of virus, called a "slow virus." Unlike the better-known viruses, which produce obvious illness soon after they enter the human body, these viruses produce observable illness only years after the infection has begun. With such a long period between contact and illness it is understandable that the resultant disease is often attributed to all sorts of other causes, the true cause being long forgotten or never apparent to the victim.

To check out this slow virus theory, the Society has just awarded a three-year grant to Dr. Hilary Koprowski, Director of Philadelphia's Wistar Institute. Internationally respected for his part in the development of the polio vaccines and for showing that viruses are associated with some forms of cancer, Doctor Koprowski plans to apply a wide range of new and complex techniques to the task of learning whether a slow virus is involved in the cause and development of multiple sclerosis.

The growing interest in both the virus and autoimmune theories in MS research has led some experts to combine them into one picture of how the disease develops. They suggest that the process leading to multiple sclerosis starts when certain virus particles invade cells of the central nervous system. As long as the particles stay inside the nerve cells without damaging them there is no visible disease. When, however, they multiply and break out of these cells they each may carry away a small part of the cell wall with them.

The victim's body now develops antibodies to the combination of virus particles and nerve cell fragments, and these antibodies then attack the healthy nerve tissues which also contain these fragments. Thus the widespread destruction of nerve tissue associated with the crippling symptoms of MS would result from an autoimmune process originally set in motion by a virus infection.

Recent studies suggest that middle and upper income city dwellers in temperate climates run the greatest risk of contracting ME. Before the development of poliomyelitis vaccines, surveys showed a similar pattern of incidence for that disease. The ultimate explanation of this finding in polio was that in a fairly unsanitary community babies were exposed to the virus during the first six months of life, when antibodies acquired from their mothers were still present in their bodies and could protect them from the full force of the disease. An infection with polio virus, for example, coming during this early period, would make the baby only mildly sick. It would, however, be sufficient to produce permanent immunity against a later infection. Since modern sanitation (characteristic of middle and upper income city dwellers) tends to shield many infants from early infections during the period that maternally acquired antibodies are still present, large numbers of people now grow up susceptible to potentially crippling viruses.

Since MS, like polio, is a nervous system disease, some researchers suspect that it too, is produced by a virus which once caused only trival infections in infancy. If this theory is eventually found to be correct the solution, of course, would not be a return to the unsanitary past, when so many babies died of serious and repeated childhood illness, but to track down the cause of each disease and, as with polio, develop an effective means of preventing it. Since its founding in 1946, this has been the basic goal of the National Multiple Sclerosis Society. During these 23 years the Society had provided over $8,900,000 to support promising research on MS all over the world.

Do you not know... God's Spirit dwells in you? —(1 Cor. 3:16).

All of us want to be self-confident. It is a natural result of being spiritually minded, of being God-centered. When we are aware of the God-qualities in us and give expression to them, we feel assured and at peace within ourselves. His light gives us direction. God in us does the work through us. In fact, for the work to be done in this world, we need to have confidence in the God-self indwelling us and give expression to it.

Mathias Supports Public Financial Statement

By Senator Charles McC. Mathias

Public Office And The Public Trust

At various times this spring, some United States Senators were visited by a representative of the Comptroller General, who brought with him a special "security envelope." In the privacy of his own office, the Senator could hand over a sealed envelope, which was placed inside the security envelope, sealed before the Senator's eyes and then taken back to the Comptroller General's office to be kept under lock and key.

Inside those envelopes, guarded with the elaborate security usually reserved for the most delicate items of national security, would be a copy of the Senator's income tax return and a statement of his financial interests. The envelope could be opened, but only by the Senate's Select Committee on Standards and Conduct and only during an investigation of alleged violations of the Senate rules.

Having shared his own financial secrets with a locked file, the Senator might then go to a public committee hearing on a nomination for high executive position. There, before the TV cameras and the press, he could interrogate the nominee about the details of his income, stocks and debts. In many cases, Senate committees have gone far beyond requiring public disclosure, and have insisted that nominees sell their private holdings or place them in trust before assuming a government post.

Clearly there is a double standard here. It is perpetuated by Senate Rule 44, adopted last year, which is titled "Disclosure of Financial Interests" but requires Senators to make public only certain honoraria and any political contributions which they may personally receive.

Candid public disclosure of all financial interests by all who serve at high levels of government—legislative, executive and judicial—is a recognition that public officials, elected and appointed, are fully accountable to the people. It would give the people the information they need to determine whether any personal interests are influencing official decisions. Disclosure also serves as a deterrent, since the realization that a questionable transaction will become public knowledge can be enough to prevent the deal from taking place.

Last month Mrs. Mathias and I—in addition to complying fully with the Senate rules—made a public statement of our financial interests, outside income and net worth. We made a similar statement last year, when I was a Member of the House and a candidate for the Senate. I believe that full public disclosure should be required by law—and I believe that mounting public pressure may soon push Congress to approve such a law.

The most dramatic event behind this pressure has been, of course, former Justice Abe Fortas' recent resignation from the Supreme Court, after the nation learned that he had accepted, and eleven months later returned, a $20,000 sum from a foundation controlled by a prominent financier who was subsequently jailed for stock market manipulation. If all sitting judges were required to make annual public disclosure, it would not have taken months of investigation by a national magazine to unearth these facts.

Nineteen sixty-nine also emphasized another problem: that of the outgoing government official who takes a lucrative post with a company with close connections with his former department.

Two cases outlined this question. In one, the Department of Transportation on December 31—20 days before the close of the Johnson Administration—made a grant of $25.2 million, the main beneficiary of which was the Illinois Central Railroad. Since mid-December, Secretary of Transportation Boyd had been negotiating to become President of the Illinois Central at a large salary.

Secretary Volpe's review of possible conflicts of interest confirmed that Mr. Boyd had in fact refused to become involved in the grant application in any way. But Mr. Boyd's action, while well motivated, left only the unsatisfactory alternative that the Secretary effectively abdicated his official responsibility to review the largest single mass transit grant ever made by his Department.

Another case involved Thomas Morris, the Johnson Administration's Assistant Secretary of Defense for Procurement, who left the Pentagon and became Vice President of Litton Industries. Here, the man in charge of all defense procurement joined a firm which in the last year had jumped from 36th to 14th place among companies receiving such contracts—from $180 million to $466 million. Inevitably there was a suspicion that Mr. Morris' job was in recognition of past benefits, in assurance of future contracts, or both.

Any situation which invites suspicion, whether justified or not, is undesirable. Indeed, much of the current public alienation from government is rooted in a feeling that officials can't be trusted to promote only the public interest. Disclosure requirements can help public confidence that this is not a fact.

An important first step would be enactment of a bill sponsored by Senator Clifford Case, myself and other Senators. This measure would require full public disclosure by officials of the executive branch earning $18,000 or more, and by all members of Congress, candidates for Congress, and Congressional officials and staff earning over $18,000.

The bill would also extend the principle of disclosure to oral or written communications to all Federal regulatory agencies about cases pending before those agencies. All such ex parte communications would become part of the public record of the case, tending to discourage Congressmen, for instance, from pushing too hard on matters involving their constituents or friends.

The chances for passage of disclosure legislation in this Congress are encouraging. Last year, during debate on the new Senate rules, a public disclosure proposal failed by only four votes. Events this year have greatly increased public awareness of the problem—and public insistence on effective action.

A much more difficult question—perhaps an unanswerable one—is how to deal with the case of public officials who, while completing government service, are considering private employment offers. Here again, disclosure may provide an answer.

We should seriously consider legislation to require that any relevant employment offer made to an official with jurisdiction over any case, application or contract award should be made part of the public record of that matter.

Under this approach, the Illinois Central's offer to Secretary Boyd, for instance, would have been on the record and, given full public knowledge of that offer, he could have reviewed the grant application instead of abstaining. Were disclosure of job offers required, I doubt that any offer of employment in such circumstances would be made. Few prospective employers would risk such disclosure—and a growing national uneasiness about "for-hire" government leaders would be offset.

There is widespread interest in the possibility of barring former government officials for a time from private employment in fields in which they had previously exercised control or established public policy. This approach is prompted primarily by the fact that many high-ranking military officers and Pentagon officials have moved to major posts in defense industries. But we should move with caution in this area, lest—by imposing too many restrictions—we deter from Federal service the very kinds of men and women we most need to recruit, the citizens with the greatest abilities and broadest experience.

The line between the "public" sector and the "private" sector in America today has become blurred and indistinct, and in some areas has almost disappeared. In many policy areas, the "interests" of government and business have become so intertwined that the possibilities for conflicts are limitless, though actual improprieties seem to be very few.

It is encouraging that basic questions are being asked and alternatives being examined. In this task, I believe the Congress should both take the lead and set the example. If we can enact meaningful disclosure laws and at the same time conduct a thorough analysis of the real principles of public service, we will have gone a long way toward restoring the people's confidence in their government.

Invention of the row crop tractor in 1925 opened the way to new efficiency in cotton production.

AN OPINION

By W. Terry Smith

Surely Senator Pastore is kidding when he proposes a governmental agency to preview prospective television programs. Citing the alleged excess violence now being shown, plus the supposed breakdown of the industry's self-imposed code the good Senator feels that perhaps it's time for the Federal Government to move in. I find this proposition highly interesting for two reasons. It appears as if the government, not satisfied to arbitrate and control practically all of our activities as it is, now feels itself incumbent to arbitrate our tastes as well. Secondly, this country needs further bureaucratic growth like the Emmeys' need another award category. What ever happened to the old free enterprise principle of selection? If you're not satisfied with a particular product whether it be soap flakes or television programs you simply choose another. Sooner or later the manufacturer or the sponsor will get the message and change to conform to what the public wants. It either does this or it faces the inevitable law of economics.

On the other side of the question I find myself in complete disagreement with the Smothers Brothers who rail against the network censoring their product. This to my way of thinking is the correct way for control to manifest itself.

A corporation, using its judgement as to what constitutes public acceptance, is modifying its own product to conform to this standard. Certainly NBC must feel that in its editing, the final presentation will better sell the goods and services of its advertisers which in the final analysis is what the network is in business for.

I can see no possible justification for governmental interference in this particular context, but can clearly see the motivational factors for it. The people, again being treated as if they did not possess the ability to reason, think, and discriminating choose for itself, are going to lose one more freedom to big brother. One final note: Don't get too attached to those cigarettes you enjoy because daddy is already moving in this area.

Cancer Brochure

Now Available

"Charting a Course of Hope," is the title of a new brochure available from the Frederick County Unit of the American Cancer Society.

Mrs. C. Carroll Wickless, Unit president, said that the brochure was designed to acquaint the community with the objectives, goals and programs of the Society.

As pointed out in "Charting a Course of Hope," the American Cancer Society's long-range objective is to "eliminate cancer entirely as a disease of mankind." The immediate goal of the Society is to "save as many lives and to diminish suffering from cancer to the fullest extent possible."

In capsule form, Mrs. Wickless said, the brochure describes each of the Society's three major program areas: research — from which the final goal of total cancer control can be achieved; education — alerting the community by teaching the importance of early cancer detection and prevention; service—bringing greater comfort to cancer patients, easing the burden on their families.

Also outlined is the philosophy and need for the annual crusade conducted by the Society to "obtain enough dollars to wage an unrelenting fight against cancer." For a copy of "Charting a Course of Hope," write the American Cancer Society, Frederick County Unit, 105-A West Second Street, Frederick, Maryland 21701 or call 662-2357.

Writer Disagrees With Governor's Action

Editor, Emmitsburg Chronicle:
Thirty-three years ago the Maryland General Assembly enacted a law which prohibited importation into the state of more than one quart of alcoholic spirits, and prescribed penalties of fine and imprisonment for offenders. During the ensuing 33 years hundreds and hundreds of working people have in fact been fined and/or imprisoned under this criminal statute . . . mostly for bringing liquor into the state from the District of Columbia, where spirits are cheap.

Last week, following 33 years of dereliction, and failure to enforce the law against the well-affected "better sort" of wealthy persons who travel in and out of Maryland by plane and ship to luxury rendezvous in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, (where liquor is even cheaper than in D. C.), the state comptroller suddenly determined that his "duty" required him to take action. Accordingly, 100 bottles of choice liquor were confiscated from wealthy vacationing passengers as they deplaned at Friendship Airport, and what a hue and cry! Despite the fact that this privileged class was not even arrested or charged with the criminal offenses they had committed, much less fined or imprisoned, the governor has come out in favor of a remission of all forfeitures; which means that he intends, if possible, to give back the liquor!

This unequal enforcement of one particular law points up the trend of the established class to exempt itself from the law. Generally, the conduct of this class—regardless of how mean and vicious it may be—is not classified as criminal. In numerous other instances the criminal laws are simply not enforced against this favored class. It is for these reasons that 80% of the inmates of our penitentiaries and jails are poor black members of the disestablished segment of our national population. In truth, they are a sort of political prisoner.

This sort of fakery has gone too far. Even the ignorant and unenlightened have commenced to understand.

Last week figures were released which showed that 732 abortions had been performed under Maryland's new loosen-up laws. 368 were performed on women whose mental health was threatened; 247 were performed on women supposedly raped or subjected to incertuous relationships; while the balance was performed on women whose general health was too delicate to undergo a normal delivery. The report left to a footnote the further explanation that in more than 80% of the cases the expectant mothers, married and unmarried, had become pregnant by "boy friends."

Thou prepare a table before me. —(Psalms 23:5).

This day is God's gift to us. It is ours to plan, activate and enjoy. It is laden with limitless opportunities. It is like a feast prepared especially for us. We can take or do as little or as much as we desire. Knowing this let us fill up this day with worthwhile thoughts, words, and deeds. And with these thoughts make it a successful day—one where God's love warms our hearts with gratitude.

If the Shoe Fits-

Should the feet be pampered?

Millions of dollars are spent yearly in beauty salons to beautify the American woman. Yet, neglected feet and ill-fitting shoes will line the face, dampen the spirits and, can be related to more serious physical ailments. Because feet get more wear and abuse than any other part of the body, it is important to give them the loving care and pampering that is given to the most beautiful face.

Your feet will appreciate a refreshing daily bath; a foot powder will aid in drying. When your feet are tired, stimulate them by immersing alternately in hot and cold water. A vigorous massage with a rough towel is good. Apply lanolin, cream or lotion to areas of feet that are dry or cracked. Trim toe nails straight across.

Exercises such as toe wiggling, arch stretching and slow ankle rotation should be enjoyed at every opportunity. Putting your feet up on a table, a desk, or anything about two feet above the floor is highly recommended to stimulate circulation. It's relaxing for the whole body and good for the feet.

Wouldn't it be a shame if you saved a pile of money for retirement and there was nothing to retire to?

There's only one way to save money that insures your country's future at the same time.

That's U.S. Savings Bonds. With U.S. Savings Bonds, you're simply helping your country make the future a little better than the present.

Also, Savings Bonds are easy and automatic. All you do is fill out a little card through a Payroll Savings Plan where you work. And then you sit back and forget 'em while the money piles up.

And if you set just a little aside every payday, you'll never even feel the pinch.

And you don't have to muster up any willpower to save every payday, because your boss does it for you. It's something like setting up extra paydays for the future.

If your Bonds are lost, destroyed, or stolen, we simply replace them without cost.

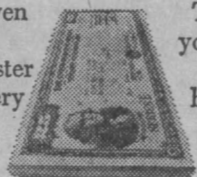

So there's no risk. You can even cash in the Bonds whenever you need to, for an emergency.

Think about Savings Bonds for your retirement.

One $25 Bond a month would be a pretty good start.

It's not only a way to insure money for retirement.

It's a way to insure retirement.

You pay no state or local income tax on interest.

Majestic Prince Rated One Of Greatest Horses

Majestic Prince, unbeaten after thrilling wins in the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness and possibly one of the greatest thoroughbreds ever to run in this country, will make a return trip to Maryland this fall for the $150,000 Washington D. C. International at Laurel.

Trainer John Longden, who won the 1961 International on T. V. Lark, said he would like nothing more than to close out Majestic Prince's 3-year-old campaign in the great 1 1/2-mile grass classic this November.

"The International is definitely in our plans. I think this colt will like to run on the grass, and I am certain that he will have no trouble getting the mile and one-half," Longden said.

John D. Schapiro, president of Laurel Race Course and the man who founded the International 18 years ago, noted "we would love to have this great horse in our race. It is a tribute to the International, and to Maryland racing, that John is already thinking about us."

The International, which brings together horses from all over the world, is an invitational event, and an invitation to Majestic Prince is purely an academic matter.

Majestic Prince, a big beautiful chestnut colt who was purchased as a yearling for what was then a record $250,000, is unbeaten in nine starts. Besides the Kentucky Derby and Preakness, he has won the Santa Anita Derby.

Schapiro, who is already carefully studying the form of horses from all over the world, will announce his plans shortly for his trips to Europe to select participants for the race, which was won this past year by Sir Ivor, the Irish champion and English Derby winner.

"The prestige of this race is mushrooming," Schapiro said, "and it is taking its place among a few select races which breeders, owners, trainers and jockeys, alike, all want to win."

Lions Community Auction June 13

The annual Community Auction was discussed at the regular meeting of the Emmitsburg Lions Club held Monday evening at Mt. Manor Restaurant, President Milton A. Sewell presiding.

The auction will be held Friday, June 13 and residents are asked to donate articles to this charitable event, or have the articles sold on a 20% commission basis. The Lions will pick up all articles, if requested. Gus Shank will auctioneer the sale.

Lion President Sewell read a copy of a letter sent to Wallace E. Hutton, chairman of the Parks and Recreation Board of Frederick County, asking for allocation of funds for recreation purposes for Emmitsburg, during the next fiscal year. The installation of the newly-elected club officers will take place at a meeting in the near future, the president announced.

20 Seminarians Ordained

Twenty young men educated at Mount Saint Mary's Seminary are being ordained as priests in their home dioceses this month. Another 52 young men will move a step closer to their goal of becoming Catholic priests in ordination ceremonies for lesser orders in the campus chapel on May 31.

Rt. Rev. George D. Mulcahy, rector of the Seminary, said the Saturday ordinations, starting with Mass at 8:30 a.m. and attended by relatives of those being ordained, will be conducted by Most Rev. F. Joseph Gossman, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore.

Seventeen men from nine dioceses will be ordained to the Order of the Diaconate. Fourteen from nine dioceses will be ordained to Minor Orders. Twenty-one men from thirteen dioceses will be ordained to the Order of the Tonsure.

Poetry Contest Winners Named

The Catholic Daughters of America, Maryland Division, recently announced winners in their annual poetry contest for Division I (gr. 4-6) and Division II (gr. 7-9). Four of the six prizes have been awarded to Mother Seton School children of Emmitsburg, Maryland. They are:

Division I—2nd prize, Jeanette Thomas, gr. 6; 3rd prize, Cynthia Pryor, gr. 6.
Division II—1st prize, Edward Hobbs; 3rd prize, Joanne Mugishima, gr. 7.

Congratulations to our children for a fine display of talent and spirit. Gratitude to the Catholic Daughters of America for sponsoring such a worthwhile project.

Frederick County Backgrounds

By SAMUEL CARRICK
The Cochran Family
"A country without a past has no future."
America today, in its desire to lead in every so-called progressive movement, is in danger of ignoring or forgetting its past. This nation has a past, glorious and imperishable, it should be cherished, taught and honored. Through the centuries great empires, powerful in their own might, have forgotten the lessons taught by their forefathers and have fallen. The centuries and the people that have gone into the making of a great nation cannot be obliterated—they remain a part of life and progress today, yesterday, and in all the years that are yet to come. The fathers and pioneers of these United States still live for their values and ideals are a part of life today. This should never be forgotten.

Many a great man or woman, the record of whose life in his or her post of duty, burns as an everlasting flame, rests in a country churchyard, forgotten, save by God. A study of these quiet people cannot help but be inspiring. They did their job steadfastly, advanced the frontier and civilization and last, but no means least, served their God faithfully and in all reverence.

The historical and genealogical notes pertaining to the McNair family are continued at this time.

The last McNair family burial plot in Tom's Creek Presbyterian churchyard to be considered in this series, is that of Samuel Scott (4) McNair. His children were listed in last week's column. The inscriptions follow:

11. "Sacred to the memory of Samuel S. McNair, born Jan. 21, 1807, died Feb. 7, 1875, aged 68 years and 16 days."

Note: Samuel Scott (4) McNair was a son of Samuel (3) and Lavina McNair, and a grandson of Alexander (2) and Margaret McNair. He was the third generation of his family to bury in Tom's Creek Presbyterian churchyard.

12. "Sacred to the memory of Statira C. McNair, born August 1, 1815, died Jan. 5, 1885, aged 69 years, 5 months and 4 days."

Note: Statira C. Bigler the wife of Samuel Scott (4) McNair and the mother of 11 children. No more need be said or written. Her descendants "shall call her name blessed."

Members of the fourth and fifth generations of the McNair family in America are also interred in old Tom's Creek. These comparatively recent graves are located in the east end of the burial ground and are well marked.

(This concludes, for a time at least, the account of the McNair family).

The next clan to be considered in Tom's Creek Presbyterian churchyard is that of William (1) Cochran, emigrant, pioneer and founding father of an outstanding family in America.

According to the late Dr. William Henry Egle, well-known historian and genealogist, "William Cochran, the emigrant ancestor of the Cochran family, was born in 1693 and died in 1771. He first settled in what is Delaware County, Pa., but in 1732 bought a tract of land in the 'Manor of Carrollsburgh' (Carroll's Delight) from Daniel Carroll of Dudington. When the 100-year border dispute between Pennsylvania and Maryland was finally settled by Mason and Dixon, Cochran's tract was found to be in Pennsylvania."

Helman, in his "History of Emmitsburg, Maryland," writes that "in the house of Daniel Beard there is a foundation stone with 'W. C. 1768' carved thereon." This old stone house, which has long since been demolished, was built by the pioneer William (1) Cochran. It was on the tract taken up by said William in what is now Liberty Township, Adams County, Pa. In times of unrest and danger, particularly from the Indians, this Cochran home was used by the settlers in the locality as a place of refuge and served as a blockhouse as well.

Additional data taken from "Egle's Notes and Queries" states that William (1) Cochran married Sarah (Cochran), who was born in 1702 and died in 1785. Dr. Egle lists their children as follows:

1. Andrew (2) Cochran, no further data.

2. William (2) Cochran, married and had issue.

3. James (2) Morrow, born 1732 and died in 1810—married Jane Cochran, who was born in 1742 and died in 1815. This branch of the family remained at "Carrollsburgh."

4. John (2) Cochran—settled on the site of Waynesboro, Cumberland (now Franklin County, Pa., soon after 1750.

John (2) Cochran married - - - Baird and four or more children were born to their union, as follows:

1. John (3) Cochran—no further data.

2. Jean (3) Cochran—married James Clark.

3. Eleanor (3) Cochran—married Joseph Junkin and became in due time, the ancestress of many distinguished Americans, who have been proud to trace their ancestry to the pioneer William (1) Cochran.

4. Mary (3) Cochran—married William Findley.

There is a most interesting story often told in connection with Eleanor (3) Cochran. But for a fortunate circumstance or twist of fate she would have been numbered as one of the victims in the Enoch Brown massacre. This tragedy took place on July 16, 1764 and has long been included in all chronicles of border warfare.

The tale of this particular tragedy begins with the appearance of a band of Indians, who were seen near Fort Loudon, near the Conococheague Settlement, in what is now Franklin County, Pennsylvania, on Sunday, July 22, 1764. On Wednesday, July 25, 1764, Susan (King) Cunningham, sister of the Rev. John King, left her home located near the present site of Mercersburg and started thru a woods to call on a neighbor.

When she did not return as expected, a search was made and soon her body was found not far from her home. She had been murdered and scalped.

The next day, July 26, 1764, the murder of Enoch Brown, a schoolmaster, and 10 of his scholars, took place. This tragedy was unique in frontier atrocities.

The notes on the Cochran family will be continued in this series next week.

Taneytown Curfew Now In Force

An 11 p.m. curfew went into effect Friday night to combat what Taneytown town officials called a "rising tide of lawlessness."

The curfew ordinance was approved at a recent emergency meeting of the town council.

The new law requires all persons 19 or under to be off the streets, stores, or other public places unless accompanied by a parent or guardian.

The curfew went into effect despite some questions raised about the interpretation of the ordinance. It was claimed by some persons that the curfew would only be in effect from 11 p.m. to midnight.

Mayor Neill Powell said "that in his opinion the town had a legal curfew ordinance which would go into effect at 11 p.m. Friday." He said he felt the entire curfew issue had been overplayed by the news media.

While Powell said he had received no unfavorable comments but rather favorable comments from parents, area teen-agers affected expressed unhappiness at the curfew, claiming that it penalizes everyone rather than those involved.

Some adult citizens, however, said they felt the curfew would cut down on vandalism and hot-rodding, of which they had complained to the town council for the past few years.

Violators are subjected to a $100 fine, or 30 days in jail.

Powell said the curfew comes as a last resort, with teen-agers aware of the lack of an anti-loitering ordinance, coming to Taneytown from near-by Union Bridge, which has a curfew, and from other towns.

Veterans should contact the Department of Labor concerning their re-employment rights.
