Most Anything At A Glance - By Abigail -

I heard that several people in town almost "fell off their chairs" when they recognized a Miss Universe Contestant, Miss Mexico, as a young lady who had been living in Emmitsburg last year. Just never can tell what's going to happen next, can we?

Looks as if the opposition to the Sixes Bridge Dam project is going to keep growing. I would imagine that local opponents were heartened to learn that the Dept. of Interior has now gone on record as being against the project. Course, seeing as they are in Washington, they might you know how those fellows change their mind next week; are down there lately, here today and in court tomorrow.

One new shop has opened its doors in town recently, and another looks like it will be opening in the near future. We wish them both good luck and prosperity.

The State Lottery is starting to get closer to home. I bet that lady in Wodonsboro was a bit surprised to suddenly be $50,000 richer. But how about that other $50,000 winner who hasn't yet come forward to claim the prize? You folks better dig those tickets out and take another look at them, somebody's got that number.

It was a busy weekend for policemen and ambulance crews around here. Accidents will happen and they are certainly lamentable, but there isn't much excuse for some of the activity that has been taking place around here the last couple of weekends. Not a college student in sight, either, for those folks who think that that is where all our trouble comes from.

The Town fathers certainly did take a most definite stand last week in their reply to the proposed convention center that we've heard talked about for a couple of years now. However, it would appear from the talk I've heard that some of our residents have changed their mind and instead of being opposed to the project, are now wishing there were some way to insure its survival. I wonder why these folks, and others, whatever their opinions might be, didn't take time to inform the commissioners earlier. Seems to me that those men were elected to run the town for the town's people, but that does not relieve the residents of taking part in decisions. It also seems to me that most of the commissioners are fairly accessible most of the time. So, the next time you have a question about the way things are being run, or an opinion on how things should be done, take a few minutes to collar one of the town fathers and let him know.

Well, Mr. Nixon is again making history, although probably he would prefer to do it in another way. He has become the 2nd President in the history of this country to be served with a subpoena. I think the other one was Jefferson. I'm sure that the country will survive the Watergate mess, we've been through other horrendous times; and maybe it does us good to find that most of our idols have feet of clay, maybe we won't be quite so trusting next time and swallow everything that comes out of Washington.

Dept. Of Interior Against Sixes Dam

The Sixes Bridge and Verona Dam proposals received another setback this week when the U. S. Department of the Interior told the Army Corps of Engineers it "must withhold its support" of the proposals.

The Department cited what it called the Corps' "total lack of coordination" with it and its departments in formulating and reviewing the plans. The Department had recommended both dams in a 1965 report on recreational and scenic uses of the Potomac River basin.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior Laurence E. Lynn, Jr., indicated that the Corps' plan falls short of the Interior's standards in its evaluation of recreation uses, wildlife mitigation land, environmental impact and alternative water sources.

The Department of the Interior has added to the growing list of opponents to the project, including a local group "Save the Monocacy Assn." and the Town of Emmitsburg.

Red Sox Suffer 1st Loss Of Season

The Cardinals and pitcher Doug White routed the Red Sox 10-4 last Saturday in Emmitsburg Little League play. The loss was the first for the Red Sox after 17 consecutive victories. Pitching, hitting, and good defensive plays all contributed to the upset.

White fanned 11 and walked only 5 as he completely overpowered the Red Sox. The Cardinals got off to a good start getting 2 runs in the first inning and allowing the Sox only 1. Bart Stout-er's two-run homer in the third inning and Dave Hill's ground rule double in the fourth inning, highlighted the 10-4 victory.

Mount Students Hospitalize Two

Two area residents were seriously injured in accidents near here on Saturday morning.

Nineteen-month-old Kimberly Wivell, Emmitsburg, was seriously injured when she darted into the path of a car on Md. 76 just south of Mothers' Station.

According to State Police reports, the child was chasing her pet cat when she ran out into the path of a vehicle driven by Earl H. Plummer of Rocky Ridge.

Kimberly was first taken to the Annie Warner Hospital and then transferred to York General Hospital by the VFW ambulance.

Philip A. Wetzel, St. Anthony's, was transported to the Shock Trauma unit at University Hospital, Baltimore, by the Maryland State Police helicopter after being injured in an accident at his home.

State Police reported that Mr. Wetzel was working underneath a car, which was setting on wooden blocks, when the vehicle slipped off the blocks and fell on him.

PERSPECTIVES IN LEARNING

By Hazel Brown, President Harry Lundeberg School Education Crisis—Where?

During the past few years there have been many books and articles written about the crisis which exists in our present system of education. None of them have become best sellers nor did they create much discussion among most educators and parents.

Shocking titles such as "School Is Dead," "Inequality" and "The World Educational Crisis," created some interest among educators but very little action has been taken since these publications became available.

It is common knowledge that most Americans do not believe that the schools are in a crisis. The local communities have faith in their schools and exhibit this by maintaining the school board members who have served for many years.

A Gallup Poll taken in 1971 and published as "The Public Attitudes Toward the Public Schools," found that most Americans were generally satisfied with the public school system in their community. Most of the people felt the teachers and the curriculum were good. Only 3% felt that the curriculum was a major problem.

The major concerns of the parents were finances, discipline, narcotics and integration. These non-educational concerns reflect very little relationship to what children learn or how they learn. The problems of education as seen by most parents are not really educational problems but rather social and economical concerns.

The Gallup Poll found that parents viewed innovation and change with much apathy and fear. Thirty-two per cent of the people surveyed felt that the amount of changes taking place in schools today was just right and 22% felt that too much change was taking place. There is no way of determining what the parents recognized as innovations. It is possible that political and social changes were identified as educational innovations.

After reading the results of this survey, it is not surprising to find the educational reformer's cries falling on deaf ears. Few Americans want to hear about the problems within the school systems. Parents just want the same basic education for their children as they received: reading, writing, arithmetic, history, and spelling. How these subjects are taught is to be determined by the educators and is of little concern to most parents. The education crisis might exist but to most Americans it is understood less than the energy or gasoline crisis. The majority of Americans feel the schools are doing a good job in spite of the difficult social problems.

The best way to keep up with the Joneses is to take it easy and in a few years you'll meet them coming back. —Overland Life.

County Heart Association Fund Drive Surpasses Goal

The Frederick County Heart Association has completed another successful year with a final campaign total of $38,149.92, surpassing its $38,000 goal, according to the general campaign chairman, Robert E. Smariga.

"My special thanks to key chairman and their volunteers for this achievement. It is also encouraging to realize that the generous contributions from all over the county indicate how well the people in our communities understand the seriousness of the heart cause."

This amount includes Heart Sunday collections totaling $17,107.17, Federal Services contributions of $2,631.44, Special Events $4,013.14, and Memorials $4,560.41.

Emmitsburg, with the Ladies of Brute Auxiliary leading the drive with Mrs. Loretta Sprankle, chairman, contributed $1,109.75.

In addition to the campaign contributions, the Frederick County Heart Association received $11,733.41 as the final part of the Alvida Delasmutt bequest, and $45.26, the annual Mary Huebener bequest.

WASHINGTON REPORT FROM SENATOR J. GLENN BEALL JR.

Energy Initiatives

Our nation's energy crisis has been front page news for some time now, and its impact is being felt in just about every sector of our economy.

It is affecting our daily lives in a score of ways, and solving it has become a top-priority concern among public officials and policymakers.

I began reporting on the energy problem last year, and one of the major shortcomings I mentioned at that time was our lack of an overall government agency to handle policy matters involving energy.

What has developed is a piecemeal arrangement of offices and agencies which sort of grew up as we developed various types of energy resources such as coal, oil, gas and atomic energy.

This piecemeal approach has become inadequate for a number of reasons. There have been fundamental changes in the use of our energy resources over the years, and there have also been changes in technology which raised questions and problems of their own.

The present crisis, which began with fuel oil shortages last year and now includes gasoline shortages as well, has led to the Senate passing a bill to insure a fair distribution of petroleum products.

But our needs go beyond this. What is required is a fundamental change in our approach to the energy problem, and I think we have seen a breakthrough in the energy message which President Nixon sent to the Congress last week.

I think it is important to point out that the President has recognized the extent to which we have come together in seeking ways to solve the energy crisis, but he has also seen that we need a national policy to direct our efforts in this very complex problem.

His proposal includes the creation of a new cabinet office to be known as the Department of Energy and Natural Resources.

It would take in most of the functions of the Department of Interior, and it would also absorb many other offices which deal with our energy resources and their development.

This will be a major realignment of the cabinet, and I would hope that the Congress moves quickly in its consideration of the legislation to establish this new office.

The President has also stated his intention to create an Energy Policy Office in the White House, to be headed by Gov. John Love of Colorado, who will be the Assistant to the President for Energy. Again, this move would consolidate several existing offices in the executive branch and put them under a single director.

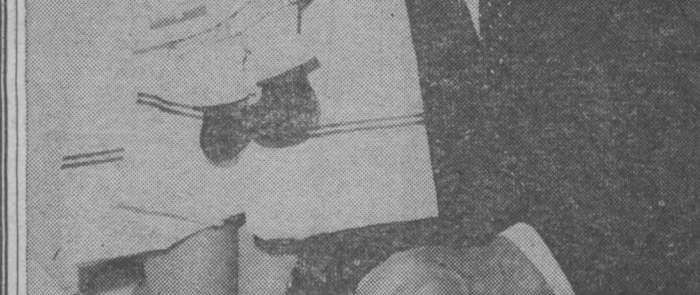

A third initiative in the President's message is his proposal to set up an independent agency to plan our future utilization of energy: the Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA).

Our shortage of oil and gas has made it apparent that the long-term answer to our energy needs will have to be found in the development of new forms of energy, and the President has asked for $10 billion for ERDA over the next five years.

For instance, we have ample supplies of coal, but it is bulky and impure. However, there are ways to convert coal into clean and efficient gas, but we have been slow in developing the technology to do it.

We must also increase our efforts in nuclear technology, in geothermal and hydroelectric production of energy, and in solar energy.

For the time being, however, we must rely on the energy resources that are available to us, and we must use them judiciously.

Keystone Of Progress
Once a year we develop a series of columns on the American way of life. Our conviction has been—and remains—that our young people are not getting sufficient education on our American system to be strong defenders of its basic principles; and that there has been so much damaging left-wing propaganda beamed to our adult population that a substantial number of them have weakened in their support of the foundation stones in our freedom structure—faith in God, Constitutional Government, the private ownership, competitive market economic system, called "capitalism."

So let's start at the very bottom of the structure. The keystone element in American capitalism is private ownership of property and the facilities of production and distribution. Private ownership makes our economic system 100 per cent different from the Socialist or Communist system. Karl Marx, in the Communist Manifesto, wrote: "Summed up in a single sentence, Communism means the abolition of private property." He made clear the fact that Socialism is the economic system of Communism.

'Communalism' At Jamestown
There is no better explanation of the role of private property, or private ownership, in an economic system than we find in the early history of America. When the English colonists reached the Virginia coast and began to build a community to be named Jamestown, they established what amounted to a Communist-Socialist economic system. There was no private property. Everything was owned "in common;" that is, by all the people. There was a common storehouse. All production, all products were brought to this storehouse—meat, vegetables, lumber, dry-goods, clothes—everything. Everything produced by every citizen in Jamestown went into the storehouse. Then it was doled out in absolute-equal shares to the citizens. Nobody owned the house they lived in. Nobody owned the gardens and grain patches. Nobody owned the clothes they wore. It was all communally owned.

It Fell Apart
What happened at Jamestown under this system? After about a year it all began to fall apart. When some of the less industrious pilgrims found they could get their full share of goods from the storehouse no matter how little they worked, they began to loaf. Naturally production of goods decreased. And when the industrious hard-working colonists saw the loafer eating and living as well as those who producing the goods, they too began to ease off on their plowing, and timber cutting, and all the other work of the colony.

Things got worse. Food became scarce. Fights broke out. This first community in America came close to having a rebellion of the industrious colonists against the loafers who were sharing equally in their production. Starvation of the entire colony became a possibility. All this history is set forth in the writings of Captain John Smith, of the Jamestown Colony. The colonists faced a crisis. Either a kind of dictatorship would be necessary to force the loafers to work or the common storehouse system would have to be abolished and the principle of self-reliance established. A substantial majority of the colonists were against forced labor; they were for self-reliance.
Private Ownership, Self-Reliance
The decision was that every family be given a plot of ground as their very own. They could keep as their own whatever they produced. A system of bartering was devised so that those who produced grain or livestock could swap some of it for other things they needed or wanted. Captain John Smith wrote in Jamestown history that when the people owned their own property, and could keep what they produced, they worked harder and produced more. Even those who had loafed before now began to work some. They had to work—or starve. Things thereafter flourished in Jamestown.

This was really the birth of the American private ownership, private enterprise system. It was founded on the principle of private ownership, and its accelerator was the profit motive (which we will examine later). The American system has permitted our people to live better than any other people in history. And the second point in this column is that powerful forces are seeking to destroy this system, and the defenders, if it is to survive, must include most of the 200 million people in America. Will you enlist?

GREAT SCOT!
ONLY IN AMERICA
With one notable exception, when you ask for "whisky" any place in the world, you get "Scotch." In the United States, "whisky" is understood to mean "bourbon."
The word is derived from the Scottish Gaelic phrase "uisge beatha" meaning "water of life."

This difference in word meaning may change in the next 15 years, according to researchers at the Teacher's Scotch Information Centre. Scotch, researchers say, is the best selling distilled spirit in the world but currently ranks third in total sales in the United States.
Sales projections, however, indicate that, by 1988, Scotch will be number one in America, too. With the growing popularity of Scotch in the United States, "whisky" may soon automatically mean "Scotch" here, making the word universal.
Now, a new kind of "whisky rebellion" may well be underway in the United States.

TOWN OF EMMITSBURG Proposed Charter Amendments
On July 2, 1973, at the regular monthly meeting of the Burgess and Board of Commissioners of the Town of Emmitsburg, certain Amendments were made to the Charter of the Town of Emmitsburg. A summary of those proposed and approved amendments appear below:
(1) Art. II, Sec. 2 of the Charter was amended so as to delete the requirement, for the office of Commissioner, of ownership of real estate within the town.
(2) Art. II, Sec. 9 of the Charter was amended so as to clarify the authority of the Board of Commissioners to appoint separate commissions for whatever purpose the Board might deem necessary. At all times such commissions are to act in advisory capacities only.
(3) Art. II, Sec. 12 of the Charter dealing with the powers of the Board of Commissioners was reworded and extended so as to expand and clarify their powers. Such powers as have been legally exercised in the past and water as have been specifically included within this Charter provision for the sake of clarity. The zoning power and the power to regulate public recreation and park services as well as provide for and regulate a police department have all been specifically included in the Board's powers, again, for the sake of clarity.
(4) Art. II, Sec. 15 provides for the working structure of the Board of Commissioners. It provides for the election of the President and Treasurer of the Board of Commissioners by the Board of Commissioners.
(5) Art. II, Sec. 14 simply provides that the District Court of Frederick County, Maryland has jurisdiction over violations of the laws or ordinances of the Town of Emmitsburg.
(6) All of Article III of the Charter which deals with the office of the Burgess has been revamped so as to clarify the powers, qualifications and duties of this elected official. Under the amendment the Burgess need no longer be an owner of real property within the town. Generally, the Burgess is designated as Chief Executive Officer of the town, responsible both to the Board of Commissioners and the voters of the town for its sound administration. The Burgess has the power to veto legislation, which power may be overridden by the Board. The Burgess is in charge of the appointment and discharge of all town officers (other than elected officials) and employees, with the advise and consent of the Board of Commissioners.
(7) Art. I, Sec. 3 deals with the police limits of the town, which extend for one mile from the town boundaries. All that was changed by this amendment as the the District Court for Frederick County shall have the power to try all violations within these limits, rather than the obsolete magistrate system.
(8) Art. IV, Sec. 2, dealing with elections generally provides for the appointment by the Board of Commissioners of three persons to act as judges of elections. Voters may now register on any business day with the Town Clerk.
(9) Art. V, Sec. 15 was amended so as to provide that the town budget shall be adopted not later than June 27 of any year.
(10) Art. V, Sec. 23 dealing with collection of taxes sets the tax year from July 1 thru June 30. All taxes are due on July 1, and overdue and in arrears the first day of the succeeding October and at that time will begin to bear interest at the rate of 2/3 of 1% per month or fraction of a month until paid. When improvements are added to any property between July 1 and December 31, resulting in an increase of assessment in that period, then tax for the last half of the year on this increase shall be due on the first day of January and overdue and in arrears on April 1, succeeding. Interest is charged as above mentioned.
(11) Art. VIII, Sec. 4 which provides for penalties for violation of any Charter provision having been amended to give judges of District Court of Frederick County jurisdiction over such actions.

UNITY

THE WORD is TIME
 By Ralph Rhea

Mankind has blocked time into segments called seconds, minutes, and hours, supposedly so that it will be a servant to man. However, quite often we find ourselves enslaved by time, especially when we feel that the future is uncertain and even threatening. Wouldn't it be wonderful if we could adopt the poet's attitude when he wrote:

"There's a magical isle up the river of time, Where the softest of airs are playing; There's the cloudless sky and a tropical clime And a song as sweet as a vesper chime, And the Junes with the roses are playing."

BUSINESS AND THE STOCK MARKET

Athabaska Oil Sands
By Babson's Reports Inc., Wellesley Hills, Mass., July 26, 1973—A constantly rising demand for petroleum in the face of declining reserves has focused attention on a secondary source of oil with great potential. Until recently the economics of the business has restrained development of oil sands, but increases in the price structure of conventional crude oil are making the synthetic crude extracted from oil sands considerably more competitive.

The oil or "tar" sands in question are located primarily in the province of Alberta, Canada, along the Athabaska River. The deposits lie within an area of some 30,000 square miles and represent oil reserves of some 600 barrels, one of the largest reservoirs in the world. The oil is actually contained in a sandy material which is processed to produce a synthetic crude oil.

History Of The Sands
The oil sands were first noted in 1778, but the need for oil in that era was minimal. Not until close to the end of the last century were the first surveys made and commercial development of the oil sands brought under consideration. Since then progress has been slow in perfecting practical production methods. Only a small percentage of the sands can be reached by surface mining; the remainder is as deep as 2,000 feet and must be reached through drilling a special type of extraction well. Several thousand wells have been sunk, but no feasible extraction process was found until fairly recently.

Currently, a hot water separation process appears to be the most practical. The sands are treated with hot water and steam which separates bitumen and waste products. Further treatment turns out a synthetic crude of good quality. Sun Oil Co., through its subsidiary Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd., is the principal producer of synthetic crude today. After a substantial capital outlay, Sun's operation is now considered to be on a commercial footing. Output is at a rate of 45,000 barrels a day, and a quota increase has been requested, raising this to 65,000 b/d. After six years of losses, GCOS recently was able to report a profit. This may, however, be short-lived since the Province has just moved royalty payments upward.

Future Of Oil Sands
It is this question of royalty payments which could restrict near-term development of the sands. But if it is resolved and the prospect of higher prices for conventional crude materializes, there could be a real boom in production of synthetic crude. Estimates indicate as many as 25 operating plants by the year 2000, with production capacity of 3.5 million barrels a day. Near term, there are plans for a 125,000-b/d plant to be built at a cost of $500 million. This would be constructed and run by a consortium of U. S. and Canadian companies. Another firm is also considering two 100,000-b/d plants at a cost of $800 million.

Farm Safety Week

"National Farm Safety Week, which began Wednesday, July 25, is a good time for farmers in Maryland to examine their farming operations and eliminate unsafe practices," reports Francis E. Lookingbill, executive director of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) State Office.

Each year, thousands of farmers and ranchers are killed or critically injured in accidents that could have been prevented if basic safety precautions had been observed. This is one of the major reasons President Nixon designated July 25-31 as National Farm Safety Week.

"All farmers are urged to consider ways in which they can incorporate safer practices into their work at home and in the fields," Lookingbill comments. "In addition, community leaders, private organizations, and radio and TV announcers are asked to assist in providing safety information to farmers. Posters, slide sets, and other methods of presenting information will be used."

In addition to this project, the Department of Agriculture is continuing its year-round farm and home safety program. Topics involve major aspects of farm safety. "The emphasis changes each month; for instance, the July campaign features falls," the ASCS director explains. Information on falls includes tips on household repairs and danger areas such as bath tubs and stairways.

Tevhological advances have brought with them an increased potential for injury. Lookingbill emphasizes, "Maryland producers should familiarize themselves with safe farming operations and encourage their neighbors to follow certain basic rules of safety."

Economics The Key

A decision is expected shortly on whether these projects will actually proceed. Again, it is largely a question of economics which will determine "go" or "no go." It has been estimated that full development of the oil sands would cost about $50 billion with a payoff of about $1.5 trillion in oil revenues. To justify such full development, a well-head price of $5 a barrel for oil would be necessary. This is somewhat above the current $3.50 a barrel, but there have been indications that higher prices are in sight.

The Research Department of Babson's Reports feels that the oil sands hold a great future promise and may eventually given the insurance the Western Hemisphere needs against the vagaries of the Mideast oil-producing countries. After our experience with the delays in the Alaskan North Slope pipeline, it is clear that every possible source of oil must be developed without further interference. And this most certainly includes the oil sands of Athabaska.

CANDY FACTS AND FANCIES

Whether you have an affection for almost any confection or are sweet only on the latest "no jelly" peanut butter bar, you'll find that candy through the ages has a truly rich history.

The earliest known records referring to candy are in Egyptian writings and paintings dating from 2,000 B.C. Crude drawings on tombs of the 11th dynasty show the confectionery processes used. Baking and confection making took place in the temples. The treats were not available to everyone. They were offered to the gods or reserved for royalty.

The general public first associated sweets with medicine. Druggists used them to disguise the bitter taste of their pills. Not until the middle of the 16th century is there any reference to the manufacture of candy or the setting up of candy stores.

The first candymakers in the American Colonies were the Dutch bakers of New Amsterdam. In the 17th century they made fancy creations for special events such as Christmas and New Year's parties.

Cong. Byron Urges Civil Rights Protection For Country's Policemen

Rep. Goodloe Byron urged members of the House Judiciary Committee Tuesday to approve legislation recognizing and protecting the civil rights of police officers.

Byron is a co-sponsor of the Policemen's Bill of Rights which is undergoing hearings on Capitol Hill this week.

In testimony submitted for the record he said "law enforcement officers are placed in a very special category in that they are only entitled to enforce the law, yet not fully enjoy its benefits." Byron pointed out that under the present system policemen are denied the right to seek civil redress of grievances.

"The denial of these rights has been the source of disenchantment with the system of criminal justice on the part of many policemen," he said.

According to Byron, the proposed legislation would establish a Grievance Commission to investigate complaints of police officers and it would also formulate a Bill of Rights for "Law Enforcement Officers" providing statutory protection for their constitutional rights and privileges.

"This proposed measure will ensure the police officer a fair share and guarantees him the same justice that he is responsible for enforcing," Byron concluded.

ECOLOGY IS CHILD'S PLAY

"Parents should realize when they throw away junk mail, they're robbing their child of an inexpensive and ecological toy," says Dr. Henry L. Harris, noted pediatrician and advisor to Open Line, a national telephone network to answer medical and psychological problems while keeping the caller anonymous.

"Junk mail delights a child," he adds, "because the tot enjoys taking letters out of envelopes, and of course, drawing on scrap paper."

Dr. Harris suggests parents and children start using recycled materials to create toys, crafts, and gifts. "Teaching a child about ecology at an early age, helps him appreciate his environment more, especially when he sees the many uses for a single item," he says.

For example, toys for the tub can be expensive. "And since children like playing in the bath, this is an excellent place to start with re-cycled toys," Dr. Harris recommends. Sponges, milk cartons cut in half, or an empty Mr. Bubble plastic bottle a child can fill and sink are often more exciting than costly wooden boats.

"One reason tots like tub play is it gives them a chance to release tension by splashing and throwing water, something they would be punished

Other re-cycled toys: cardboard shipping boxes become building blocks; a pie tin tied up with string and filled with bread makes an easy bird feeder, and fabric glued on a paper plate with eyes, nose, mouth and hair placed appropriately is a cute funny face to hang on a kid's wall. "Once children start learning to re-use throw away articles around the house, they'll be more ecology-minded while learning to use their imagination and inventiveness," Dr. Harris concludes.

Federal Grants to Maryland

Every Marylander is aware of the taxes we all pay to the federal government, and most people are at least generally familiar with the ways the federal government spends our money. As a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, I have a particular interest in how much money the government spends and how it is spent.

One of the means the federal government uses is grants of federal funds for particular programs or projects. Maryland receives these grants, along with other states. Some of the funds come automatically, in accordance with well-established programs and allocation procedures. Other grant programs require that applications be submitted by the local government agencies in the State that will actually use the money. I often am able to assist in the applications process so that the federal agencies that disburse funds are fully aware of the needs of the local agencies that will spend them, and so that some of the red tape involved in the process can be cut.

The grants touch virtually every aspect of local life and government in Maryland. Here is a sampling of some recent grants to our State:

The Baltimore City Health Department received a grant of $20,403 from the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism for a training program for alcoholism counselors.

The Montgomery County Housing Authority received $50,900 for improvements in its low-rent public housing projects, including extensive rehabilitation of buildings and grounds. This money came from the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Similarly, the Wicomico County Housing Authority received $125,000 to modernize low-rent dwelling units in that county—and the City of Annapolis received $875,000 for the same purpose.

The Regional Planning Council, which includes Baltimore City and Baltimore, Anne Arundel, Carroll, Harford and Howard Counties, received $70,000 in HUD funds for comprehensive planning assistance.

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission received $8,400 to help develop a 1.6 acre picnic and playground area in a neighborhood of Prince George's County not previously served by open space.

This is just a minuscule sampling of the great number of grants of federal funds to Maryland. But it is an indication of the variety of programs in the State that operate with the assistance of federal financing—which begins, of course, with the taxes that we pay. It is good to know that we are getting something in Maryland for the money we send to Washington.

HEALTH HIGHLIGHTS

PREVENTING PREGNANCY

When it comes to family planning, three million American women can't be wrong! That is the number of American females who have chosen to use the intra-uterine device (IUD) to avert the birth of unwanted children.

Added to this figure are another 10,000,000 women abroad who prefer the device to the pill, which has several drawbacks. Here are some reasons for their preferences.

First off, birth control pills are medicine. They are hormones which alter the workings of the body in ways which are not yet completely clear. They have side effects, some serious, some less important. Like other medicines, they are expensive and must be bought and taken regularly, month after month, to be effective. The IUD does not alter the hormonal balance of the body in any way, nor does it appear to have any common, serious side effects.

An IUD is a small, plastic insert which is easily fitted by a doctor up into the cavity of the uterus itself, and it can be worn for long periods of time. There, it acts in several ways to prevent pregnancy. The presence of the device increases the tone of the uterine muscle and this seems to discourage pregnancy. Meanwhile, a thin coating of white blood cells builds up on the IUD, and in the uterus. These cells are not normally found in large numbers in the uterus and their presence seems to discourage pregnancy. Finally, some IUD's are made in part of copper, a metal which seems to prevent conception even in minute amounts.

Until recently, IUD's were used mostly for birth control in women who had already given birth to one or more children. But now there comes a report of a new IUD which has been successfully used even in women who have never been pregnant. The device, the Dalkon Shield, is made of soft plastic and shaped like a shield with little feet on the side to hold it in place within the uterus.

A report from Johns Hopkins University details trials with this Shield on more than five thousand women. Of this overall group, only 1 percent became pregnant. The IUD seems a safe, effective method of birth control. It is certainly preferable to the use of the pills in populations where birth control techniques are poorly understood and observed. For such people, and perhaps for every woman, the IUD may be somewhat better than the pill for birth control.

Automobile traveling is getting to be a calculated risk.

Green Thumb Tips

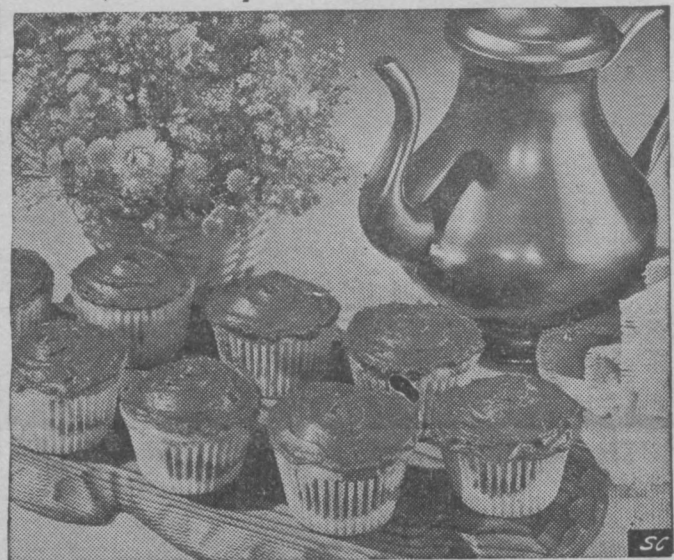

Moonflower is a quick-growing climber, producing massive 6 inch flowers which open at night with such speed that you can actually observe the petals move. In mild areas it can be grown as a perennial, but is best treated as an annual grown fresh from seed each year.

If you want to grow those gigantic sunflowers—the kind people win contests with, the variety to look for in the seed displays and catalogs is Sunflower, Mammoth. The black-and-white striped seeds should be planted directly into the garden after danger of frost in a sunny location and fertile soil. The huge yellow flowers appear on 6 ft. stalks, and the centers swell out as the seeds develop. Birds are especially fond of sunflower seeds, and so are children, since the meaty kernels have a nutty flavor.

Strawflowers are a recent addition to the flower garden. Discovered growing wild in the meadows of Western Australia, they are easy-to-grow. In addition to creating a magnificent garden display during summer, they can be dried to last all winter in dried flower arrangements. Colors include crimson, yellow, orange, pink and white. Parsley is one of the most useful herbs you can grow, and some gardeners even use it as edging to a flower border. The seed can be direct-sown into the garden, and although seed is generally slow to germinate, it is quite reliable. As the plants fill out you can snip sprigs to add flavor to so many dishes. Parsley is a biennial, and it will stay green in the garden even during winter, but the second season it will go to seed. Another good idea with parsley is to pot up some plants in the fall to keep indoors on a kitchen window.

Many household items make excellent planters to start seeds in. Pie and produce trays from the supermarket are good, and empty egg cartons are even better. For growing larger plants that need plenty of root room such as tomatoes and peppers, try using empty milk cartons filled with planting soil.

Who would dream that they came from a mix? Frost with a simple chocolate confectioners sugar icing and you have impressive company fare—in short order time!

CHOCOLATE MARBLE CUP CAKES

- Makes 16 medium or 12 large cup cakes
- One 1 1/4-oz. pkg. Flako Cup Cake Mix
- 1 egg
- 1/2 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 tablespoon cocoa powder

Aunt Sarah, I love you.

Remember my 10th birthday, when you gave me that funny piece of green paper and everybody made such a fuss over it. (Except me.) Frankly, it was a pretty disappointing present for a kid. I couldn't eat it, couldn't play with it, couldn't wear it—and Mom took it away from me practically the minute I got it.

And every birthday after that (and Christmas, too), you gave me another one of those Bonds, you called them. I thought you were pretty gooney.

At least, I never had to guess what I was going to get from good old reliable Aunt Sarah.

And what I got was good old reliable U.S. Savings Bonds.

What I didn't realize then was that you gave me a gift of security for the future. Thanks to you and those Bonds, I had extra funds for college. And they helped when I bought my first new car.

Next week, I'm giving my nephew, Harry, his first U.S. Savings Bond. I know the kid is gonna think I'm some kind of nut. But, someday . . .

Bonds are safe. If lost, stolen, or destroyed, we replace them. When needed, they can be cashed at your bank. Tax may be deferred until redemption. And always remember, Bonds are a proud way to save.

Take stock in America. Now Bonds pay a bonus at maturity.
