Most Anything At A Glance
- By Abigail -

The rains this week have offered some relief from the oppressive humidity that has covered our area. More important, they have provided some hope for area farmers who were becoming resigned to watching their crops shrivel from unrelenting heat and lack of water. The precipitation didn't dampen most activities around, either, as most folks just went about their business or waited a bit for the rain to abate. Saturday's rain didn't seem to bother our local firemen one bit, but nothing seems to get those fellows down.

With all this stuff about communities receiving more revenue sharing funds than they were really due and having to pay it back, I'm waiting to see how our town will be effected. There are many towns that would like to get their hands on the fellow who made such a gigantic boo-boo in the first place. Most communities have spent their funds and would find it impossible to raise the money with which to pay back the Federal Government.

Frederick County is due to receive some $18,000 in air pollution control grants. Seems to me that some of that could be well used in this end of the county to provide us with a landfill area. I haven't been hearing much about landfill lately; it would appear to be another one of those projects that have disappeared into that famous "sea of red tape."

Seems the State hasn't been able to give away enough lottery money — some of the winners seem a bit shy about coming forth. So there will be a special drawing and one of the thousand dollar winners will be $49,000 richer. I think I'll start buying 2 tickets a week—even my "no luck, no win" score just maybe I'll get one of those lucky winners.

Nothing can refresh the soul like a hot, spicy debate with associates over a political issue. But how often do we go beyond that and write our opinion to our Congressmen? Unfortunately, the answer is "seldom or never." Too many of us fear that one opinion is barely audible in the hubbub of current events. Yet, as one legislator has said, "The mail box is nearly as important as the ballot box to a member of Congress."

A short, factual letter limited to one topic could be just what a Congressman needs to chart his course in the right direction, and you will never know unless you write. It's easy to rationalize your way out of writing to your Congressman, but the plain fact is that our democratic republic could not function without citizen input. Remember "An official wants and needs to hear every point of view on an issue." Any that doesn't shouldn't be in office. An eight-cent stamp is a small price to pay for freedom.

False Alarm Sends Firemen Out

A report by "a little girl" to the Adams County Control Center claiming a fire at the John Flohr residence kept Emmitsburg and Fairfield firemen busy for over an hour at 10:45 Monday morning before the call was determined to be a false alarm. Control Operator James Gallagher said he became suspicious when the caller claimed she was 34 years old, but he sent both fire companies to the Flohr residence, where there was no sign of a fire. The caller told Gallagher there was a fire in a saw or a sign making machine in the basement. She claimed to be the only one at home, which she said was near the Hemlock Pheasant Farm.

Local Man Stabbing Victim

A 42-year-old Emmitsburg man was stabbed three times with a knife Sunday night after an argument with his wife over a loaf of bread.

Detective Sgt. Thomas Bosley of the Maryland State Police, reported that Cool and his wife, Anna Ruth Cool, 41, had been drinking, were both angry, and had been quarreling most of the day when an argument which led to the stabbing erupted over the edibility of a loaf of bread.

State Police were told that Mrs. Cool told Cool that she had had enough arguing and that she wanted to be left alone. She went to a sofa, he followed and grabbed at her, and she allegedly took a knife from under the cushions and stabbed him.

Cool ran outside the trailer home on Crystal Fountain Road, summoned help, and was taken to Frederick Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Maryland State Police arrested a 26-year-old Gaithersburg man Wednesday morning during an attempted narcotics theft at the Rexall Pharmacy on E. Main Street in Thurmont.

Paul Maurice Prather is being held by State Police pending a bond hearing on breaking and entering and larceny charges.

Prather was arrested after he apparently fell down a flight of stairs as he was carrying a large box filled with a variety of narcotic drugs. Charles R. Angell heard the noise and called police.

Angell, who owns a shop across Main Street from the Rexall Pharmacy, was on his way to work about 6:30 a.m. when he heard the commotion.

The trooper said that an inventory has not been completed yet, but that all of the drugs have been recovered and that the large box of "several hundred dollars worth" of drugs contained "mostly" depressant drugs, but some stimulants.

Police reports of the attempted robbery indicate that entry was gained by forcing open a boarded window on the ground level and that the thief then went up the stairs.

FREDERICK COUNTY BACKGROUNDS

BY SAMUEL CARRICK
Lost—On The Mountain

"I know there are no errors, In the great Eternal plan, And all things work together

For the final good of man. And I know when my soul speeds onward,

In its grand Eternal quest, I shall say as I look back earthward,

Whatever is—is best."

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Today as a diversion from the usual historical and genealogical column—a tragic story—contained in the files of the "Emmitsburg Chronicle."

The beginning of this chronicle is to be found in the Friends' Creek churchyard—with two graves:

1. Angeline J. Clagaugh, wife of William C. Clagaugh, died March 7, 1892, aged 26 years, 1 month and 26 days.

2. In memory of Aney E. Clagaugh, daughter of W. C. and A. J. Clagaugh, died July 1, 1887, aged 1 year, 9 months and 4 days.

In the "Chronicle" under date of September 3, 1881—

Married, August 31, 1881, in Liberty Township, Adams County, Pennsylvania, by J. E. Baker, Esq., William Clagaugh to Miss Angeline A. Shriner, both of this County.

The old story of the Clagaugh family tragedy is best told in the original account—as published in the Emmitsburg paper.

Saturday, July 9, 1887—

"On Friday, July 1, 1887, a little child of William Clagaugh, who lives on the mountain several miles from Emmitsburg, was lost in a manner altogether inexplicable, and no trace of it has yet been found.

"The child, less than two years old, followed its father on his leaving home, accompanied by an older sister, and the mother not perceiving its absence, knew nothing of the matter until the father returned and inquired for the child. As it was less than two years old, and in its bare feet, it seemed quite impossible that it could have gone very far over the rough stony ground, but when search in the immediate vicinity of the house failed to trace the little one, an alarm was sounded in the neighborhood, and a band of forty or fifty mountaineers started to scour the woods, whilst the frantic mother left to the care of the sympathizing ladies, refused to be comforted. All night long the unavailing search went on, and in the morning one of the men was sent to Gettysburg to consult an old colored woman who, it seems, is believed by the mountaineers and a good many sensible, intelligent people besides, to possess the mysterious power of seeing and knowing things from mortal eyes, unless assisted by the devil or some other evil spirit.

"The old woman reported that the child was living and in the possession of a neighbor, whose person and dwelling she described. When this information was carried to the excited hunters, they immediately surrounded the house and demanded it (the child). The inmates declared that they knew nothing of it, and though a thorough search was made and failed to reveal any trace of the lost child's presence, they continued to keep guard around the premises, threatening to shoot or hang the inmates, and of course growing more and more excited as the hours went by. Another deputation was sent to the Gettysburg Witch, who insisted that her first statement was correct, but that the old woman who had the child was also a Witch, and made use of some charm to prevent them finding it. She then gave them a counter charm, which they were to manipulate in a certain way till the child stealers' charm was broken, then they would get possession of it. The opposing charms are still working against one another, nothing has transpired, and the poor little innocent is still missing."

In the next two paragraphs the editor gives his opinion of the belief in and use of witchcraft. Needless to say his dissertation is not complimentary.

Saturday, July 23, 1887—

The Body Found—An Inquest—The Verdict—Story of the Lost Child—

"On Saturday morning, July 16, 1887, information was lodged before Henry Stokes, Esq., Justice of the Peace, that the body of the child of William Clagaugh, that mysteriously disappeared on July 1, 1887, had been found near the top of the mountain, near what is called 'Sheeps Rock'. The Squire thereupon commissioned Constable W. H. Ashbaugh to summon a jury of inquest. The jury was composed as follows: Henry Stokes, coroner, Francis A. Maxell, J. Henry Stokes, Michael Hoke, Joshua S. Motter, George P. Beam, Daniel Lawrence, Albert Smith, William H. Hoke, James M. Kerrigan, Walter D. Willson, Singleton Dorsey, Jacob L. Topper, and Dr. Robert L. Annan, physician. The jury repaired to the place where the remains were found, and having viewed them and their surroundings, carefully removed them to the home of William Clagaugh, where the inquisition was held. Magician And Party At Library

The Story Hour that has been held on Tuesday afternoons of each week, concluded on Tuesday, August 14. The story hour has been sponsored by the Frederick County Library Services and given personally by Miss Clare Dugan. Day care children have been faithful attendants and we are grateful to Miss Dugan for the story hour.

On August 22 at 1:30 p.m., the library will offer a magic show primarily for the Reading Club, but will welcome any other visitors. The Reading Club will end on August 18. Certificates will be awarded on August 22 and will be followed by the Magician and a watermelon party. Please mark the time so your children will not miss the party.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wilhelm has been volunteering her services in the library. Mrs. Wilhelm has been kind enough to work every Thursday afternoon on overdue notices. Overdue notices are a time consuming job and this service is most appreciated by the staff at the library.

Many donations of books have been received at the library. Those people contributing are: Mrs. Kay Klosky, Mr. John Hollinger, Mrs. Betty Wilhelm, Sister Helen Roddy, Mrs. Hazel Caldwell, and Mr. Bernard Kaliss. We are grateful for these contributions.

The library will revert back to the winter hours on August 31—please note. Consult your local paper for the correct hours.

witnesses were closely examined, and the following verdict was rendered: "That on the first day of July, in the year 1887, at the home of her parents, the said Emma Clagaugh, wandered away from home and perished from exposure or some other cause unknown to the jury."

The account of the Clagaugh tragedy will be continued in this series next week.

One note of explanation—the child is spoken of as "Emma Clagaugh" the name given on her tombstone is given as "Aney E. Clagaugh." Obviously "Emma" was her middle name.

BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

CONTROLS HELP CHECK INFLATION GROWTH

The Economic Stabilization Program has had "a significant impact in reducing the rate of inflation" during a period of fiscal and monetary expansion, Price Commission Chairman C. Jackson Grayson, Jr. recently told the Joint Economic Committee of Congress.

Grayson pointed out that 85 percent of the items in the Consumer Price Index—the most widely used measure of how inflation affects the American consumer—have increased at a lower rate during the stabilization program than in the year prior to controls. He noted significant declines in the rate of inflation for rent, medical care, clothing and other areas.

"The controls have helped keep inflation in check while other measures were effected to encourage economic growth," he said in testimony before the Committee. Grayson said this conclusion is substantiated by major price indicators, studies by independent economists and economic analyses made by the Price Commission staff.

"The best estimate economists in the Price Commission have been able to derive, based upon an econometric analysis of macroeconomic wage and price equations, is an estimated reduction in the rate of inflation from what it would have been without controls of between 1.5 and 2 percent points," he said.

As a result of the controls program, Grayson said, businessmen, labor and consumers have more confidence in the country's domestic and international future. "Our present inflation rate, in fact, is the envy of many nations," he said. Grayson said there had been positive and negative effects of the controls program. On the positive side, he said, "more people now realize that increased compensation without increased productivity only leads to inflation." Additionally, the stimulus of controls has heightened competition between companies and helped to reduce prices.

On the negative side, Grayson said, price controls interfere to some extent with the allocation of resources, affect investment decisions and are an added cost to doing business. He said the Price Commission is monitoring the extent of such problems in an attempt to minimize economic distortions caused by its regulations.

On another topic, Grayson said there were reasons to believe consumer prices will not rise at the same rate as recently reported increases in the Wholesale Price Index, a possibility that has been a source of concern to some observers. Increasing productivity, the reporting of list rather than actual wholesale prices and the large increase in prices of raw agricultural products account for the lack of harmony in the wholesale and consumer price indices, he said.

"We have searched and failed to find a good correlation between the Wholesale Price Index and Consumer Price Index rates of increase, thereby throwing doubt that the Wholesale Price Index increases will be reflected entirely in consumer prices," the Price Commission Chairman said.

LOOKING AHEAD

By George S. Benson, President, National Education Program

Great Factors in Production
"Have job opening for computer operator. Bring your own computer."

This is a fake advertisement to illustrate a point I wish to make in this column—the cost of creating a job. Did you ever wonder how much an employer has to invest in order to make a job? In American industry today, the employer on the average invests more than $35,000 for each job created. Machine tools are a part of that investment. And this is one reason why wages have just about doubled in the last 10 years.

Actually there are six major factors in the American economic system's incomparable production of goods and services: (1) Freedom to dream; (2) Freedom to compete with the dreamer; (3) Automatic screening of management; (4) Automatic, or market control of prices and wages; (5) High investment in the tools of production; (6) Personal freedom of employees.

The Model-T Dream
Freedom to Dream: The ready example is Henry Ford, who dreamed of producing a "tin-lizzie" mechanical buggy cheap enough for everybody to have one. He was a mechanical genius and in time came up with the Model-T which revolutionized transportation. Finally he devised the first mass production, assembly-line technique, and got the Model-T down from more than $1,000 to less than $300. Ford was able then to pay the highest wages in the world—$5 a day.

Freedom to Compete: Chevrolet and other companies came along to challenge Henry Ford, and when they got their product onto the market the competition made it necessary for auto companies to bring production costs down, down, down. In the 80 years cars have been built, about 1,500 companies tried to compete. The ones which offered the public the best automobile for the least cost got more and more of the business and they survived. All helped stimulate modern production. Competition Screens

Automatic screening of management: In the process of eliminating the companies which proved unable to compete with their competitors, an automatic screening of management took place, and this is going on every day in American industry. The very best management stayed in business, and with the highest caliber of managerial brains competing with each other, the public got the benefit in a higher quality product at a lower price. Only competition in the market place performs this automatic function.

Automatic, or market control of prices and wages: When the government acts as a non-participant umpire over the economy, prices and wages are governed by what the consumer buys and how much. The economic law of supply and demand, when not tinkered with, produces a self-governor on prices; and wages are governed, on the long haul, by consumer acceptance of what the company produces: profitable company with a swift selling product can pay higher wages than one whose product doesn't move in the competitive market. This may be over-simplification, but on the long haul it happens. Every 8-seconds!

High Investment of the Tools of Production: This is an amazing story. In Detroit recently, I toured one of the big automobile plants. I saw a mammoth machine stamping out front fenders. On inquiry, I was told it cost $500,000. One man was making a fender every eight seconds. For the first Model-T, one man could make two fenders a day. He finally made $5 a day wages. The 1973 fender-maker makes more than $5 an hour! In fact, average wages for such employees are $12,500 a year, not counting pen-

PERSPECTIVES IN LEARNING

By Hazel Brown, President
Harry Lundeberg School
A Search For
An Educational Utopia

The student who can adjust to the school system is the one who achieves educational success. He learns in any environment and is able to cope with a variety of experiences. This is a sad situation but it is the reality of education today.

There are few schools which have their total program or curriculum designed to meet the needs of all the students. The usual classroom situation forces the students to fit into the standard mold and become an "average" student.

Perhaps there is no utopia of education, but if it did exist, it would surely include individual instruction, a relaxed atmosphere, vocational and academic courses, and "built-in" motivations for learning.

Personal Freedom of Employees: Americans are freer to move from job to job than any other workers in the world. They are free to bargain collectively, or free to push their own apple cart. They can choose their occupation and location. And they can pull up stakes and go places, or go into business on their own. Workers with such freedom out-produce those who are working under the various forms of regimented Socialism.

These are the great factors which have helped our nation become the envy of the whole world.

in" motivational forces.

Much has been written about individualizing instruction but little has been accomplished in truly meeting the needs of students. Many young people are seeking the "real" life. They are weary of the facades which so often surround them. They feel that society and its institutions are phoney and have no true meaning in today's world.

Programs which have "built-in" motivations such as work-study projects, vocational courses, and apprenticeship and training skills are being greeted with enthusiasm. Students who want to partake of the "real" life find studying and training for a short range goal is just what they need. A job proposed at the end of an educational experience is worth the studying and striving.

Many students begin to recognize the need of academic courses when they are related to the job or career they seek. Most students are not capable of accepting education just for the sake of learning. They want to know why they are studying and what benefit will be derived from the experience.

Vocational courses and apprenticeship programs are now being recognized as a successful means of meeting the individual needs of students. The idea that educational experiences can only be academic disciplines has been proven inadequate. The education of the whole person is finally being recognized and school programs which include all kinds of learning experiences are in great demand.

Private schools are being established to meet the needs of students who are having difficulty adjusting to the public school system. Many public schools are evaluating their programs and the trend toward career or job-oriented courses is growing.

The future looks bright, so let's offer our support and encouragement to continue the search for an educational utopia.

BUSINESS AND THE STOCK MARKET

Nixon-Meany Schism Widening
 By Babson's Reports Inc., Wellesley Hills, Mass., Aug. 16, 1973—The relationship between President Nixon and AFL-CIO President George Meany has always been extremely uneasy, and on more than one occasion in the past few years the top official of the Federation has openly declared his disillusionment and dissatisfaction with the performance of the present Republican administration. At his organization's recent summer meeting in Illinois, Meany adopted a particularly hostile attitude toward Nixon. In a number of critical comments, he emphasized the corruption within the federal government and went out of his way to say that the Watergate revelations might well give the Republican Party a difficult time in the 1974 elections. Nothing Really New

While many people think of Meany as having supported the President during the 1972 campaign, such was not the case. Rather, he remained neutral and proposed that his membership act accordingly, bending their best efforts in terms of work and financial aid in electing pro-labor congressional aspirants wherever they emerged. The Federation's top man, being of a relatively conservative background, could not back up George McGovern whom he considered impossibly far to the left. But on the other hand, he was in vigorous opposition to Nixon's wooing of Moscow and Peking. So Meany's only course was the middle road.

And the doughty Federationist still declares that his neutrality decision in 1972 was about the wisest move that could have been made. In a way, he risked his own leadership prestige since approximately 80% of the Federation membership has generally been considered as being Democratic. But his conservative co-leaders went along with his decision, and the Executive Council of the AFL-CIO simply declined to support either national candidate voting this course by 27 to 3. No Nixon Invitation

Traditionally, the President of the United States—whoever he may be and regardless of what party—is invited to speak at the AFL-CIO convention. Such an invitation went to the White House in 1971, but the results were neither friendly nor relaxed. Meany claimed that no acceptance was received until the last moment, and the reception at the convention for the President was not cordial. Meany recently told newsmen that a White House aide had deliberately tried to arrange a confrontation at that convention. He added, too, that Presidential staff members later accused the labor official of insulting the Chief Executive—which Meany stoutly denied.

The point is, however, that the steady deterioration of relations between President Nixon and George Meany have not ceased. They now appear to have hit rock bottom, with the Federation boss at a news session a while ago stating that the President will definitely not be asked to speak with Leonid Brezhnev. The Federation leaders still see Russia as a power seeking world domination, with consequent threats to our national security and world peace. They ask that in future negotiations the U. S. seek reciprocal concessions from Moscow.

at the AFL-CIO convention next October. For good measure, Meany went on to say that he did not intend, either, to invite Secretary of Labor Peter J. Brennan to speak, or Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz. The Labor Secretary was accused by Meany of taking anti-labor positions on a number of issues and also of boasting that he represented both union and nonunion workers in the nation.

Political Party Attitudes
 Basically, Meany and his closest cohorts are still standing off from affiliation with either political party. They see some improvement within the Democratic Party, but expect continuation of a struggle between the new and old guards. The Executive Council approved a statement that called the Administration to task for making "unilateral concessions" to the Soviet Union during the summer talks refund checks go astray because taxpayers moved and left no forwarding address with the Postal Service. Still other taxpayers neglected to correct the label attached to their tax return. This includes, for example, changing a label to show a new address or name resulting from marriage.

Taxpayers Ask IRS

Errors or omissions in tax returns have delayed refunds to some taxpayers. They should follow the instructions provided with the notification they received from the IRS to help speed their refund.

Taxpayers contacting the IRS about their refund should be able to give the name and address as it appeared on the return, the present name and address, social security number and the type of form filed.

Often, IRS employees can find out almost immediately what happened to a refund check through a computer system available in many IRS offices. The system indicates, for example, when the Postal Service has returned a check. Undelivered refund checks can be remailed almost immediately to the new address. After October 1, however, all undelivered refund checks are cancelled. Issuing checks in response to inquiries received after that date takes considerably more time because special processing is required.

As for refund checks lost or stolen in transit, those who have information on these checks should contact their nearest Internal Revenue Office immediately.

Q. My state has a lottery. If I should win one of the cash prizes, do I have to pay federal income tax on it?
A. Yes, proceeds from lotteries are gambling winnings and must be included in your income. However, if you itemize your deductions, you can deduct your gambling losses, such as the cost of losing lottery tickets, from your total gambling winnings, up to the extent of your winnings, you have no winnings, you can't deduct your gambling losses.

If you should win a valuable prize in a lottery, it might be to your advantage to "income average." This permits an unusually large amount of income obtained in one year to be taxed in the lower brackets of your previous tax years. More details are available in IRS Publication 506, "Computing Your Tax Under the Income Averaging Method." Write your nearest IRS office for a free copy.

Q. The local police boys club is sponsoring a benefit showing of a movie. Tickets are $10. Can I deduct the ticket price as a charitable contribution?
A. A portion of the ticket price is deductible, namely, that portion that exceeds the fair market value of the showing. For example, if the regular price of the movie is $3, your deduction would be $7.

Q. I understand that the IRS winds up with thousands of undelivered refunds each year. How can this happen?
A. The great majority of

As a member of the House Commerce Committee, perhaps, you could tell me the status of legislation streamlining th rail systems in the Northeast?

The proposed measure, which would create a streamlined rail system from elements of six bankrupt railroads in the Northeast, has passed in the Senate and is currently pending before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee.

What has Congress done about the Policeman's Bill of Rights?

What is being done to eliminate acid mine drainage which pollutes so many of the streams in our country?

I have been informed that the Environmental Protection Agency recently awarded a grant for the first phase of a project to demonstrate the feasibility of a new coal mining technique in helping control acid mine drainage. The four-year project is designed to remove shallow-lying coal without tearing open the ground above. Comprehensive testing and evaluation will probably begin later this year and interim reports will no doubt be available to the public.

How many animals are considered endangered species?

The Department of Interior now lists 169 native animals on the U. S. Endangered Species list. The most recent additions include the Utah prairie dog, No. 166, Rocky Mountain wolf and Eastern cougar.
