Emmitsburg's water shortage still exists, but Tuesday's rainfall certainly was something to rejoice about. The reservoir, I've heard, is up about one inch from last week's level. More water would have run-off into the lake had it not been for the leaves piled inches deep on the hillsides. It seems those leaves trapped quite a bit of water, so we'll still have to hold off on washing our cars for some time. If I remember correctly, when we had the water shortage in 1965, water was pumped all winter into the reservoir. It took the spring thaw to finally refill Rainbow Lake.

I hope we don't have to wait until spring arrives to get our supplies of coal, though. With the coal miner's strike in progress, there may be many places in town left "out in the cold." I've heard talk that Mount Saint Mary's has only a two-week supply of coal left, so let's hope this strike ends soon.

No doubt most of you have noticed the "renovation" going on at Crouse's. I knew for a fact Mr. Crouse didn't plan on replacing one of his front windows, but had no choice when he found a liquor bottle thrown through the pane early Wednesday morning. One thing is certain: the fellow who tossed the bottle through Mr. Crouse's window didn't leave a drop of booze inside it.

This coming week has been proclaimed Seton Center Week by Mayor Sprankle. Understand, and that's something I sure will go along with. Seton Center helps this community an awful lot, and the Sisters there deserve "their week." They deserve more than just recognition, however. Like many institutions these days, Seton Center is in serious financial trouble. They're not asking for our money—though it would help, of course—but for our support. How about writing to somebody who could help? The sisters, I'm sure, have many suggestions, and they look forward to meeting with all of us during their open house Sunday, Nov. 17. Mark that date on your calendar and give a little thought on how we can help Seton Center.

I've learned since last week (yes, that is possible) that our children are not forced to sit on the schoolroom floors. There are desks and chairs for them to use. However, the new dining room furniture has not arrived as yet, but I've been informed that temporary tables and chairs are in use.

This year, like last, Emmitsburg has been advised to limit the amount of electricity used in Christmas decorations. Potomac Edison would prefer that we don't use lights at all, and they remind us that the energy shortage, like so many others, is still with us. One thing that puzzles me, though, is how are the town fathers going to hang the Christmas decorations this year? When the new traffic lights were installed, what happened to all the old wires?

With the town councilmen considering raising water rates in this area, I've discovered that some folks are having a hard time paying their water bills. It's not that they don't have the money. They can't pay their bills because the town office is closed while some officials are on vacation.

Letter To Editor

Editor, Emmitsburg Chronicle:
The reason I'm writing is for the safety of Emmitsburg's children and pedestrians.

In front of a local business, children can be seen riding in packs on bicycles on the street. I'm sure there is a law against this. Why isn't it enforced? You practically need a stop light on every parking meter in order to tell you when to step out of your door.

It's not only the riding on the pavement that bothers me but I hold my breath every time these children criss-cross the street. Three to six at a time cross back and forth across our highways. Most of these children think of a bike as a play thing. But in reality it should come with a tag saying "Bikes can be hazardous to your health." I hope people don't get me wrong. I don't wish bikes to be banned but I think the riders should be more carefully watched for the safety of all.

Since Maryland passed the law stating that bikes should obey automobile laws, I believe it should be fair to say that bikes, when necessary to ride them, should be ridden on the road, but close enough to the edge so that cars may pass safely. Riding on the shoulders or on the outskirts of town is extremely dangerous. The tire can rub the edge of the road surface or hit a stone or hole, and the bike and rider can be seriously hurt. In town the shoulders in some areas are extremely steep and the bike tends to slip off from under the rider. Again, serious injury can result.

I urge parents to allow bike riding when necessary and when they allow it for pleasure, suggest a little used road (perhaps Mt. View).

Sincerely,
Janet Smith

Happy Birthday Seton Center On 5th Anniversary; Plan Open House Sunday

Kim Brooks enjoys painting while Paula Toms admires masterpiece.

The children at Seton Center are making cookies and storing them away in bright tins. They're for the party.

And you're invited. It's to be a birthday party. Seton Center in Emmitsburg will celebrate its fifth anniversary during the week of November 17. Several events are planned, beginning with an open house on Sunday, November 17 from 2 to 4 p.m. That's when the Seton Center youngsters will be serving their cookies.

Yes, the children will be on hand for the open house. You are not being invited to tour quiet corridors and empty classrooms but to see real, live, how-it-happens day care. Throughout the building, teachers and children will be busy with their usual activities.

The adult education rooms and the Thrift Shop will also be open during the party. There will be continuous slide presentation of Seton Center doings, including summer activities for older children.

On Tuesday, November 19, at 10 a.m., Sister Grace will host a special coffee hour for the businessmen of Emmitsburg. In extending invitations to this event, Sister wrote: "Seton Center has serious finanial problems. As administrator, I find I must now seek substantial funding at county and state levels. In this effort, I would appreciate the advice and support of local businessmen."

Despite the uncertainty of the future, Seton Center has much to be proud of and to celebrate. The entire community is invited to Seton Center's 5th Anniversary Party on Sunday afternoon, November 17.

Attention is called to the displays which the day care children have placed in windows around town. You can see their craft work and drawings on display at the Library, Village Liquors, Emmitsburg-Town Office, Senior Citizens and Emmitsburg Pharmacy.

Local Fire Co.'s Pump 250,000 Gallons Of Water

Eleven fire companies from a four-county area Sunday pumped about a quarter of a million gallons of water into Rainbow Lake west of Emmitsburg to supplement the town's diminishing water supply.

Emmitsburg Fire Chief Eugene Myers said 100 volunteer firemen worked from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m. on a mile-long relay across a mountain to pump water from Camp Summit Lake to the town's reservoir at Rainbow Lake.

A critical shortage of rainfall, Chief Myers said, has created the crisis in Emmitsburg. The additional 250,000 gallons, he said, should help maintain a two-week supply of water if users maintain present conservation methods. Myers said the town was to receive a large civil defense pump on Wednesday which will be used to pump water through a two-mile ten-inch line from Tom's Creek to the town's filtration system near Rainbow Lake.

However, he noted, it will take at least a week to get the CD pump installed and in operation.

In 1965, Emmitsburg was faced with a similar situation, and had to call on volunteer firemen to relay water until a portable pump system could be installed.

Fire companies assisting Emmitsburg with the relay Sunday were Fairfield, Gettysburg, Cashtown, Blue Ridge, Taneytown, Harney, Westminister, New Windsor, New Midway, Thurmont and Rocky Ridge.

TAX—Q & A

Q. I pay a housekeeper to take care of my children and clean my house while I am at work. I know I can deduct her wages as a child care expense, but what about the social security taxes I pay in connection with her wages. Are these also deductible?

A. Yes. When a taxpayer makes deductible employment-related expenditures for household services and for the care of dependent children and those expenditures necessitate the payment of the employer's share of social security tax, such taxes are deductible as child care expenses.

Q. For more details on such deductions, see IRS Publication 503, "Child Care and Disabled Dependent Care." It's available free from your IRS office.

Q. I sold my condominium and plan to use the profit from the sale to purchase land to build and occupy the house within one year of the sale of the old residence to be able to postpone tax on the profit from the sale?

A. No. You may be able to postpone tax on the gain, if within one year before or after the sale of your residence, you have begun construction or obtained a building site, construction loan, approval of plans for a new residence, and a building permit. Also, you must occupy and use your new residence as your principal residence not later than 18 months after the sale of the old residence. You are entitled to benefit from this 18-month rule if you build your own residence or contract to have a residence constructed according to your specifications on specified land.

Q. I own a small office building and donated rent-free use of an office to a charitable organization. Am I entitled to a deduction for this donation?

A. No. In general, you are not entitled to a charitable contribution deduction for the donation of this kind of partial interest in property.

Q. Does a person have to live with you the whole year for you to claim him or her as a dependent?

A. Generally, a person must be a member of your household for the entire year for you to claim him or her as a dependent. However, this rule does not apply when you are claiming an exemption for a relative.

Presto! — you have both salad and dessert ready. With this swell gel idea, you can even "personalize" each portion to individual taste. (Tip: If you coat each tin with mayonnaise beforehand, mold will slide out easier.)

R for your child's safety

Thousands of children are the victims of terrible accidents every year, many of them unavoidable. But, according to Dr. Albert H. Domm, child safety specialist and medical director of the Prudential Insurance Company, many tragedies could be averted by clear, demonstrative parental warnings.

"The most important aspect of teaching youngsters proper safety habits is to be sure to associate the danger with the warning or admonishment," Dr. Domm stresses. "Too often, pre-school children don't connect disciplinary action with the behavior that prompts it."

As an example, he points out the hypothetical case of the tot who was told by his mother that he would be spanked if he went into the street. Thus, the next time the tot crossed the street, instead of looking for traffic, he glanced back over his shoulder to see if his mother was watching, and was struck by a car.

"You see," says Dr. Domm, "the child was fearful only of a spanking, and was not aware of the real danger — the automobile."

He reminds parents that in addition to making the danger clear to their young ones, they must protect and teach them through action and example.

ENTERTAINING IDEAS

TOP OFF YOUR PARTY WITH "TAPAS"

Looking for an easy, elegant, economical answer to entertaining at that "pause in the day's occupations" that is known as the cocktail hour? Just do it Spanish style! Serve Sherry from Spain and "tapas," which is what the Spaniards call hors d'oeuvres.

It's an easy, new "in" way to give a cocktail party. While Sherry comes in infinite varieties, there are only two basic types, "finos" which are dry and "olorosos" which are less dry. So you need only two bottles for a complete bar. No vintage years to be concerned with; all Sherry from Spain is a blend of many harvests.

Sherry may be served at room temperature, chilled, or on-the-rocks; in the traditional wine glass or in an old-fashioned glass.

More and more Americans are opting for this fabled liquid of Spain as a pre-dinner drink so they can better savor their dinner wine.

The word "tapas" comes from the custom in outdoor Spanish cafes of placing a small saucer with an assortment of hors d'oeuvres "on top" of the glass to protect the wine. Cold tapas couldn't be simpler; they are staples your pantry is likely to yield—cheese, salted almonds, pimiento stuffed olives. For hot tapas here are two easy-to-make favorites.

Choosing A Dentist

How do you choose a dentist? The American Dental Association offers some guidelines for consumers on finding a dentist. The time to find a family dentist is not in an emergency, according to the ADA. It makes sense that a person in pain does not have the time to make the intelligent decision he might otherwise.

Recommendations on dentists may come from friends, neighbors, co-workers, the local dental society, faculty members at dental schools, hospitals with an accredited dental service or the family physician.

Call for an appointment. Much can be learned in the initial visit.

Is he prevention oriented? Does he use X rays in his diagnosis? Does he seem to take a personal interest in you and your health?

Don't be embarrassed to ask him about his fees. The dentist should be willing to discuss fees and payment plans in advance of any treatment.

How to make intelligent, informed decisions in selecting a dentist is one of several topics discussed in a new booklet, How To Become a Wise Dental Consumer, which is available from the ADA. It also tells how a family can save on dental bills, and what the consumer should know in selecting oral health products.

For a copy of the booklet write the American Dental Association, Dept. J, 211 E. Chicago Ave., Chicago, IL 60611. Enclose 15 cents to cover handling and postage.

YOUR AMAZING SKIN

It's the body's largest organ—one of the most ingenious collections of "equipment" on the face of the earth—yet few people really know how the skin works, why skin problems arise, or what to do about them.

If you're like most people, you have about 17 square feet of skin, which weighs a little more than six pounds. Its thickness ranges from 1/8th to 1/32nd of an inch.

The skin has between two and three million sweat glands. Many people think that these glands put out visible perspiration only when the body needs to be cooled, but actually the process is more complex. Most of us are probably always sweating. Scientists call it "imperceptible perspiration" which cannot be readily seen. We also sweat in reaction to emotional situations, like anger or fear or excitement. Sweating caused by high environmental temperatures is more familiar to most of us. When the temperature is high enough, blood in the skin becomes heated and heads for the temperature-regulation center in the brain. There a message is sent to the skin: increase perspiration. And increase it does as the sweat glands go into action. The process is continuous, even though we aren't always aware of it. Even during the cooler months, the sweat glands perspire about a quart a day.

In addition to temperature regulation, the skin performs a variety of other useful functions. Most people, for example, have heard that the top layer of skin is made up of dead cells. But less well known is the great value of these dead cells. They can't be easily infected and therefore serve as an invaluable shield against bacteria, viruses and other threats to health.

Another little known skin function is performed by highly specialized cells in the skin that produce a pigment—melanin—which is responsible for darkening the skin. Oddly, though many people believe that this darkening is entirely responsible for increasing the body's resistance to the sun, the thickening of the skin is also responsible. In fact, a thick skin is an excellent defense against sunburn and for good reason. Prominent dermatologists maintain that sun can cause premature skin aging. They also blame dry, coarse and leathery appearance of the skin, pigmentation changes and wrinkling on too much exposure to the sun.

Many people find themselves at a loss because of another skin problem—dandruff. This disease is caused by excessive secretion of the skin's oil-producing glands. Physicians blame it on a variety of reasons: constitutional predispositions, infections, or changes in the behavior of internal glands, but many agree that the treatments should include proper rest, exercise and hygiene and a thorough hair cleaning at least once a week with a good anti-dandruff shampoo containing pyriithione zinc, such as Zincof®. Made by Lederle, Zincof contains hair conditioners for manageable hair, doesn't cause dryness or oiliness and has a pleasant fragrance. Some doctors also suggest that a dandruff-prone person should avoid wearing clothes that overheat and soften the skin.

Whether or not you have a problem, you should treat your skin well. After all, where would you be without it?

UNDERSTANDING OUR ECONOMY

Zero Growth In The Electric Industry Could Mean Zero Growth, Period

Many people, sincere, deeply concerned people, have looked at problems multiplying around them and have adopted as a battle-cry, "Enough!"

They're calling for zero growth, a moratorium on growth of all kinds, until answers can be found to the problems of growth: pollution, overcrowding and inflation, to name a few.

The electric industry is one target of the zero growth movement.

Many in the industry will readily grant critics two points: that the problems to be solved are critical; and that stopping electric growth is a very good way of stopping the growth of the economy as a whole.

But has it really been electricity that's helped to bring on these problems? And is the idea of stopping electric growth (and with it, economic growth) really a good one?

Many experts say no. Electricity Fights Pollution. Electricity is one of the cleanest forms of energy there is. Using it doesn't contribute to pollution problems.

Electric heat in homes, for example, gives off only heat, while oil heat gives off both heat and air pollution. But electricity does more than just head off pollution. It's being used in any number of ways to clean up pollution from other sources, put waste products to work, conserve natural resources.

Rapid transit in cities and electric trains between cities offer real hope of clearing foul urban air.

Tertiary sewage-treatment equipment can turn out water that's actually clean enough to drink.

Paper mills are cleaning the water they use electrically. Oil and chemical refineries are cleaning the smoke they release electrically. Glass, aluminum and paper are being recycled electrically.

Steel is being made in electric furnaces, and electric furnaces use less iron ore.

More than half of all newly-patented pollution control devices run on electricity.

It's estimated that by 1977, about 10% of all electricity used in this country will be cleaning up pollution, or stopping it from happening in the first place.

So the more electricity that's available, the more successful the country's clean-up efforts are likely to be.

Concentrating Pollution Makes It Easier To Stop. Now, while it's true that electricity is clean at its point of use, making the electricity, in most cases, is not so clean a proposition.

General Electric Company reports, however, that pollution from power plants can be controlled. Utilities spent more than $2 billion doing just that last year alone.

If a power plant, under tight pollution controls, can burn fuel to supply hundreds of thousands of users with clean electricity, they won't have to burn fuel themselves. So hundreds of thousands of potential polluters will be stopped cold.

If per capita electric growth is stopped, it will, in time, slow the productivity of the American working man.

That will force the American manufacturer's costs up. He may try to compensate for those costs by lowering wages, raising prices, or maybe even by opening a plant outside the country.

Inflation will get worse and money tighter.

Tight money is the last thing the zero growth movement should want, because money can help answer many of the problems the movement is dedicated to solving.

Money (especially money in the form of capital) will help answer urban decay. Unemployment. Housing shortages. Even inflation.

Economic textbooks bear out that what's needed is more electric growth, not less.

Electricity has always been a prime mover of our economy. Electric growth has always helped to increase productivity and with it the standard of living.

Even Tigers Go For Cookies

Tony the Tiger says Tiger Cookies are "Gr-r-real!" What further endorsement is needed?

These cookies are true to their name with stripes of melted chocolate morsels running through each cookie. Better watch those first ones, warm and fresh from the oven. You know how tigers, even make-believe tigers, feel about sugar coated corn flakes. Now you can guess what's inside Tiger Cookies.

BUSINESS AND THE STOCK MARKET

Labor Assesses President Ford
By Babson's Reports In, Wellesley Hills, Mass. — The voting record of President Gerald Ford has been almost universally "wrong" during his 25 years in Congress, according to his scorecard on significant votes as tabulated by COPE, the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education. This means that organized labor considered his balloting anti-labor on key issues, 109 out of 128. This would scarcely indicate that the Federation and new Chief Executive with open arms since he has consistently followed the conservative road in terms of legislation.

Many union authorities, however, are hopeful for the future since President Ford made gestures of amity toward labor in the opening days of the new administration. Leonard Woodcock, head of the United Auto Workers, feels that the new President may well become more liberal in his stance now that he represents the entire nation rather than just his highly conservative district in Michigan. Other laborites have expressed a similar opinion, claiming that the White House is now occupied by a man who is willing to listen to all points of view.

One of Ford's first official steps was to thaw the long-existing cold war between the White House and the house of labor, a move that Richard Nixon had avoided for quite some time. It was evident that the new Chief Executive realized at once that he had to have co-operation, not hostility, on the part of the unions if his fight against inflation was to get anywhere. So he invited George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, to visit him at his office, calling him a great labor leader. It worked, and a liaison between the Capital and the Federation was at least given a trial start without any delay.

While Mr. Meany is a tough man to deal with and wary of politicians uttering sweet nothings, he found Mr. Ford "a breath of fresh air" compared with his predecessor. Labor appears ready to go along with Ford's proposal to reactivate the Cost of Living Council, even though the AFL-CIO executive roundly trounced such a suggestion when it was made earlier by the then President Nixon. Union spokesmen were quick to applaud his signing of the education appropriation measure, which was strongly supported by the labor forces. Many Difficulties Ahead that look too high. Showdowns may be averted for a while but it will be a neat bit of tightrope walking to beat inflation without angering labor. Mr. Ford has ruled out wage-price curbs, after Nixon's unsuccessful efforts. But if inflation were to become so rampant that international collapse seemed imminent, controls might become a necessity. In such case, labor will insist on not just restraints on wages and prices but also on interest, corporate profits, rent, dividends, etc.

But bridging the gap between a conservative government leader and the AFL-CIO is unlikely to be an easy task. While both sides are optimistic in these early stages of the new administration, nobody really thinks there will be any lack of difficulties. For instance, a nationwide coal mining agreement runs out November 12, while railroad pacts expire at the end of the year. President Ford might call for intervention if he felt a nationwide strike were threatening the public welfare. He has always backed such action when he was in the Congress, and a move of this sort so early in his presidency could bring angry confrontation with virtually all the labor powers.

Both the unions and Mr. Ford agree that inflation fires must be damped one way or another; they are as one in their determination to contain the pressures that are keeping the wage-price upspiral going. Jawboning tactics have been largely approved by labor, particularly since they were first aimed at General Motors when car price hikes were announced. Mr. Ford, however, has indicated that he will make jawboning a two-way deal, hitting at any pay settlements

New higher interest rate on U.S. Savings Bonds.

Now U.S. Savings Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity.

Here's how it works: The higher interest rate applies to all new Bonds purchased since December 1, 1973, raising their rate from 5 1/2% to 6% when held to maturity. And the maturity period on Series E Bonds is shorter, too. Now E Bonds mature in 5 years, with a first-year rate of 4 1/2%.

Series H Bonds, with a 10-year maturity, will earn 5% the first year; 5.8% for the next four years; and 6% for the last five years. This gives you an average 6% yield over the 10-year period. It works for Bonds you now hold, too. There's no reason to redeem your older Bonds to buy new ones.

Their yield has improved, too.

All outstanding E Bonds will receive a 1/2% increase in yield for each semiannual interest period beginning on or after December 1, 1973, payable upon redemption. This also applies to any Freedom Shares you may still hold.

All outstanding H Bonds will receive a 1/2% yield increase for each semiannual interest period beginning on or after December 1, 1973. This is payable in the form of increased semiannual interest payments.

It all works to your advantage. Now, more than ever, it makes sense to buy higher-paying U.S. Savings Bonds and hold them to maturity or beyond.

Raising The Debt Ceiling

On May 23, 1974, the United States came within one vote in Congress of going bankrupt! Most Americans will react to that statement with disbelief if not even more violent or incredulous emotion. But, still it is true!

The vote was on a bill to increase the National Debt ceiling from its then $475.5 billion to $495 billion through March 31, 1975. The administration had made it clear that spending must be drastically reduced, or income to the Federal government through taxes must be drastically increased, or the limit on authorized borrowing must be increased, or the United States of America would be forced to default on its own honest obligations. The authorization to increase debt squeaked through by only one vote.

The fact is that the 191-190 vote passing the ceiling increase was nothing but a bandaid on the national cancer of deficit spending. It is not a cure, only a permanent, temporary shot to relieve the pain. I say permanent, because it has been repeated nearly every year since 1940, in fact all except six in the last 34 years. This makes it a rather permanent practice, even though it is always labeled a temporary "increase". For example, the "temporary" limit of $475.5 billion was due to drop back to the "permanent" ceiling level of $400 billion on June 30, 1974. That is why the "temporary" ceiling raise was enacted. But the cry in Congress was "this is the last time we are going to be pushed into such an emergency."

From now on, the Administration will have to keep us informed, so we can take corrective steps before we reach the point of not having the money to pay tomorrow's bills." And then, after all that oratory, the Congress went right on appropriating billions and billions of dollars, without knowing in advance the total amount spent in any single year's budget.

On May 23, 1974, however, the scene was a little different. Of course, a certain number of Congressmen have to vote against raising the debt ceiling because of their constituents back home. Some of them can't get re-elected if voting for increased deficit spending. That is why it is a good sign that the vote came down to a tie . . . 191 for and 190 against. The Speaker of the House had to break the tie and his affirmative vote decided the issue for at least the next few months. One member, in behalf of his affirmative vote, said, "we are paying for the sins of the past." That is true, but if past history is any guide to the future, next year, Congress will be paying for this year's sins, and calling them "past", as though they were the fault of a previous Congress.

Why was that session of Congress this time called a "dire emergency"? Simply because the members of Congress might not have received their pay checks if they had not passed the bill. It was very clear that the Federal Government could not go on paying all of its obligations without additional borrowing.

Since 1940, there have been only six years in which the Federal Government spent less than it took in—and deficit spending has become such a way of life, that Arthur P. Burns declares that it now threatens, "the very foundations of our society". In order to get re-elected, a certain number of Congressmen have to be able to go back home and tell the voters, "I voted against raising the national debt". So, the little scene of May 23, 1974, has been re-enacted year after year. But, this year there was something different.

In addition to the patently "staged - for-the-benefit-of-the-folks-back-home" actors, there was a larger number of sincere dedicated Congressmen determined to defeat the bill and let the employees of the Federal Government, themselves included, feel the treat of being unemployed. There has always been a small, hard-core, group of fiscally responsible members of the House and Senate who know that continuing deficit spending will destroy our economy and our freedom. But this year's vote, they were joined by another group of younger members of the House who are bent and determined to stop deficit spending with its accompanying inflation, to put a legal ceiling on the amount of money the Federal Government can spend in any one year and to start repaying the mountainous national debt.

This desire in the hearts of a group of young, Freshmen Congressmen, last year resulted in a proposed Constitutional Amendment embodying noble aims. Under the proposed Amendment, 10 per cent of the National Debt would be retired every 10 years, thus eliminating it in its entirety by the year 2075, or a hundred years from now. When we stop to remember that the debt was only about three billion dollars 44 years ago, it seems a very fair and reasonable proposition for the American people to set the goal of paying it off within the next hundred years.

It would be a great sign of moral integrity, for what we have been doing during the past 44 years is in reality stealing from future generations of children, many yet unborn. Now, if we had followed a course of borrowing only during emergencies, and then paying back when the emergency was over, as honest folks will do, then we could not label deficit spending as stealing. But what do you call such a practice, when a thought or effort is given to reducing the debt. Deficit spending is immoral, it is just as much stealing as the man who takes a gun into a bank and demands all the cash . . . at least the bank robber looks his victims right in the eye.

The proponents of deficit national spending can't look generations of unborn babies in the eye, but the fact is that every baby born in America in 1974, including every person already here, is in debt almost $2500; and the interest alone on National Debt is the third largest item in the taxes you pay each year. This reminds me of a calling card I

PERSPECTIVES IN LEARNING

A Second Chance
Brings Results

There are many successful individuals in our society who never sat in a high school classroom. Some of these people are graduates of colleges, universities, trade schools and vocational programs.

How did they accomplish this without attending high school classes?

The GED or high school equivalency testing program provided an alternate route to achievement and success for these dedicated and hard-working individuals.

"The Non-High-School-Graduate Adult in College and His Success as Predicted by the Tests of the GED" is a study done by the Educational Testing Service. The final report from this study reveals that giving dropouts a second chance is a very worthwhile venture which should be promoted and expanded as an alternative to meeting minimal education requirements.

The GED students who enrolled in colleges scored only slightly lower than the students with traditional high school backgrounds, but 72 per cent of them remained in college during the period surveyed.

The conclusions of the study suggest that high school dropouts who make satisfactory GED scores are likely to earn college grades comparable to those earned by high school graduates who enroll in college. The GED students were usually older than the traditional students and had more conservative attitudes toward academic and social issues. They took their education seriously. It would appear that the GED students appreciated the second chance for the education they had missed and were very eager to meet success in their new educational experience. The results of this study should encourage dropouts to give education another chance by taking the GED as a means of opening the doors to a formal education. The statistics indicate that getting a second chance can bring satisfying results.

ABOUT 260,000 LONG HAUL TRUCKS COVER AROUND 22 BILLION MILES OF U.S. HIGHWAY A YEAR. THIS IS COMPARABLE TO TRAVELING AROUND THE EARTH'S EQUATOR NEARLY 900,000 TIMES OR, IF YOU LIKE IT HOT, IT'S LIKE 110 ROUND TRIPS TO THE SUN!

THEY USED TO SWITCH KEYS ON THE PONY EXPRESS TO KEEP GOING NON-STOP. THESE DAYS THEY SWITCH DRIVERS. SOME LONG HAUL TRUCKS LOG A QUARTER MILLION MILES A YEAR BY USING A RELAY SYSTEM OF THE MEN BEHIND THE WHEEL!

TODAY'S BIG TRUCKS ARE A LOT LESS NOISY THAN THOSE PRODUCED JUST A FEW YEARS AGO. SAYS THE MOTOR VEHICLE MANUFACTURERS ASSOCIATION. THIS PROGRESS IS THE RESULT OF MANY YEARS OF RESEARCH AND TESTING BY THE MANUFACTURERS.

Cadettes Have Fun Learning First Aid

Cadette Troop 350 had an 'overnight' at the Incarnation United Church of Christ on Friday, Oct. 25. The girls not only had a lot of fun, but were also given a course in First Aid. The girls wish to thank Mrs. Golibart, R.N., for her excellent instruction, and her patience.

The Cadettes would also like to take this opportunity to thank Rev. and Mrs. Chatlos for allowing the troop to meet at their church every Tuesday night.

The first dance sponsored by Troop 350 was a huge success. Over 115 young people participated in the festivities, with many special dances. Prizes were won by many. Some of the gifts were donated by the following merchants: Gas Co.; record from Myers pocket radio from Matthews TV; bracelets from the General Store; and stationery from Crouse's. A very special thanks goes to Mrs. Gertrude Roger for donating the Pepsi Cola.

The girls from Troop 350 would like to give a big thanks to Scott Douglas for doing such a great job. Also thanks to Mrs. Sarah Green for making it possible for having Scott at the dance. Much thanks also to the parents for chaperoning and their contributions to the snack table. And last but not least our heartfelt gratitude to Mark, Rick and Dennis, three nice guys from Mt. St. Mary's.

What is the Environmental Quality Corps? A bill was introduced in the House last year to establish an Environmental Quality Corps as an independent agency within the executive branch. Under the proposal, Corps volunteers (consisting of 18 to 26 year-olds) would provide manpower for projects designed to better the environmental quality for all Americans. The bill, H.R. 11537, is currently pending before the Education & Labor Committee.

NEWS OF BEAUTY

YOUR EYES

Since Cleopatra fluttered her Kohl accented eyelashes at Antony, eye makeup has been, and will be, a major item in a woman's cosmetic collection. Most women would no more step out without their eye makeup, than they would without their clothes (streakers excepted).

According to the experts at Avon, eye makeup is not difficult to apply if you follow these tips:

- Play down circles and dark areas around the eye with a cover stick before applying foundation.
- Collect a variety of eye shadow shades to go with wardrobe, hair or eyes. Powder shadows are recommended for oily skin, and cream or stick shadows for dry skin.
- Emphasize the shape of the eye by adding eyeliner along the base of the upper lashes. Or, change the shape by drawing a line that makes them seem rounder, longer or slanted.
- Eyes will seem larger and brighter when emphasized with mascara, which should be applied from the inner corner of the eye, first on top, then on bottom lashes.
- Experiment with bands of color, when you become an expert, to emphasize brow bone, or contrasting colors, to create an individual look. Follow these suggestions to help you avoid contaminating your makeup:
- Follow the directions given with the particular cosmetic product.
- Be sure to securely replace the cap or cover on any cosmetic product after use.
- Never allow someone else to use your makeup.
- Do not mix saliva with mascara — a definite no-no, and can be a major source of contamination.
- If any discomfort is felt during or after the use of a product, discontinue use immediately. This may be a signal that a highly individualistic reaction to the product is taking place.
- Products such as those made by Avon are examined by microbiological methods to assure products of the highest purity and quality. Be exercising a little caution, you can avoid unnecessary problems.

St. Joe's Students Will Be "Metered"

Freshman Julia White measures her classmate Bernard Wehage with a meter stick. Students will be involved in this and similar activities during "Metric Week" at St. Joseph's High School.

Would a boy 150 centimeters tall be valuable as center on the basketball team? How long would it take you to drink a liter of coke? Students will be seeking answers to these and similar questions as they participate in "Think Metric" Week at St. Joseph's High School, November 18-22.

A joint project of the math and science departments, the week will provide students and faculty with an opportunity to work with, experience and actually "think" in the metric system.

Classes will take part in activities using scales, meter sticks and liter containers. Games, tapes and filmstrips will also be made available. The music department is also co-operating in the venture. They will learn "Halves Your Meter," a song written to help students remember metric terms.

Sister Mary Frances, chairman of the math department, commented, "Since conversion to the metric system has already begun in the United States, we must all become more familiar with the terms and what they mean. We must really learn to "think" metric. So parents and friends are welcome to stop in this week and check their "Metric IQ," too."

Dye Crafts

Block Dyed Apron

The bold, geometric pattern on this apron was obtained by sandwiching the fabric layers between wood blocks and dyeing. The result is a unique design, an original that would look great at an outdoor barbecue, a picnic or as an anytime cover-all.

Supplies: White 100% cotton fabric (muslin, denim, etc.), drawing apron pattern, liquid or powder Rit dye, plastic squeeze bottle, two identical wood blocks, C-clamps, large pot for dyeing.

General directions: Prewash fabric, then cut apron pieces out of fabric. Fold center front of apron in half, right sides out, so that top and bottom halves are together. Place one wood block on top of fabric close to folded edge and lightly trace outline with a pencil. Pour undiluted liquid dye (or 1 package powder dye thoroughly mixed into 1 cup hot water) into a squeeze bottle. A light color such as yellow is suggested. Using the squeeze bottle, pour dye directly onto fabric, filling in entire block outlined area. Press dye into fabric with fingers to make sure it penetrates both fabric layers; add dye to back side if necessary. Pour a small amount of contrasting dye color onto center of block pattern, pressing in to help penetration.

Place wood blocks on top and bottom of fabric so that block edges match exactly and dyed area is covered. Secure wood blocks tightly in place with one or two C-clamps. Prepare dye solution for the background color (royal blue is suggested) by mixing 1/2 cup liquid dye or 1 package powder dye into 2 quarts hot water. Prepare more dye solution if necessary to completely cover fabric without crowding. Heat to a simmering temperature. Add wet apron fabric pieces and dye, stirring occasionally at a simmering temperature for 15 to 20 minutes. Remove fabric and rinse under cool, running water. Remove clamps and blocks and rinse again. Dry, then sew the apron together as pattern directs.

Crew members used a total of 88 man hours while transporting patients and traveled a total of 805 miles during the course of October. Nineteen calls were answered between the hours of 6 a.m. and 6 p.m.; nine calls between 6 p.m. and midnight; and one between 12 midnight and 6 a.m.

Corn Support To Increase In '74

Basic county support loan and purchase rates for 1974 crop corn will be increased from the 1973 county loan and purchase rates, according to Raymond F. Jaeger, Chairman of the Maryland Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee.

Premium and discounts for 1974 crop corn will apply in computing settlement of off-grade deliveries on corn.

The county loan rates are based on a national average loan level of 1.10 per bushel (No. 2 basis) announced August 29, 1973. In Maryland the loan rate for all counties is $1.28 per bushel, up 5 cents per bushel from 1973.

The corn producer can borrow on his 1974 crop stored on the farm at the county loan rate and receive cash immediately at 9.375 per cent interest. If he intends to feed out his stored corn, he can simply stop by the ASCS Office and make a partial payment on the loan to maintain the margin of security needed to meet loan requirements. Livestock producers can in this way finance their feed inventories through commodity loans.
