The President today issued the Thanksgiving Day proclamation, setting aside Thursday "to be observed as a day of festival and thanksgiving by all the people of the United States at home and abroad."

Quoting from the President's proclamation, "It has pleased Almighty God to bring the American people in safety and honor through another year, and in accordance with the long unbroken custom handed down to us by our forefathers, the time has come when a special day shall be set apart in which to thank Him who holds all nations in the hollow of His hand for the mercies vouchsafed to us."

"During the century and a quarter of our national life, we, as a people, have been blessed beyond all others and for this we owe humble and heartfelt thanks to the Author of all blessings. The year that has closed has been one of peace within our own borders, as well as between us and all other nations."

As you've probably guessed by now, the above proclamation was not made by President Ford, nor was it made in 1974. Those are the words of Theodore Roosevelt as printed in an old 1904 edition of the Emmitsburg Chronicle.

What surprised me, in reading through that old newspaper, is that those words still make good sense despite the fact they're seventy years old.

There are so many traditions surrounding Thanksgiving Day — turkey suppers, church services, family get-togethers — that it's easy to forget how particularly American these traditions really are. No other country has so much to give thanks for. Can you imagine, for example, a Thanksgiving Day in drought-ridden India? A thought like that puts everything in perspective for me.

Locally, there'll be enough water to wash all those Thanksgiving Day dishes. That's something to be thankful about, right? As for the turkey this year, it will cost about the same, or maybe even less than it did last Thanksgiving.

Yes, America has again made it through another year "in safety and honor," and it still remains true that we are "blessed beyond all others." Peace, however precarious, reigns within our nation. It seems the things that really count haven't changed much since 1904, and for that we'll give thanks tomorrow, just as Emmitsburg folks did seventy years ago.

ZIP COLUMN

"Please mail early!" This term will be seen many times by our customers in the next two weeks, via newspapers, magazines, retail store counters and post office lobbies.

It shall also be heard on radio and TV commercials.

Likewise, this term has been used in many years past.

Possibly there may be a few of our customers, reading this column that might ask: Why? If so, please continue reading.

How many pieces of mail do you send in any given two weeks of the calendar year, other than Christmas? How many do you receive?

This is the basis for the USPS Operation, that is, personnel and machinery is geared to the normal everyday operation.

Now, at Christmas time, many customers double, triple or possibly mail ten times this amount.

Whereas, if this increased volume, from our entire population, was deposited several days prior to Christmas, the Postal Service would not have sufficient room to place it, let alone process and deliver it throughout the world.

So, please, the next time you see or hear the words, "Mail Early," consider it very seriously.

George E. Rosensteel, PM.

Library Grows Thru Book Donations

The Emmitsburg Public Library received many gifts this week. Gail Harris donated a handbook written and produced by Patrick Ott and Thomas Jackson; Mrs. Grace Wormley and Mrs. Donna Sanders donated paper back books; Barbara McGraw and Mrs. Talpa donated paper back books; Mrs. Betty Wilhelm donated a nice selection of hard back books; and Mrs. Mary Seess and Mr. Robert Marshall donated several hard back books. Gifts are always welcome at your library. Sometimes they are sent to Frederick to be disseminated to the other branches that need them more.

In the busy days of early fall with all the exciting courses being given in various places, don't forget to utilize your library for ideas in your favorite hobby or talent. The library has a vast assortment of books to suit your particular need, be it decorating, remodeling, upholstery, crocheting, decoupage, organic gardening, wine making, quilting, sewing, you name it. Visit your library also for the latest fiction, many of the best sellers are in the collection.

Fifty children mobbed the Emmitsburg Library to view the film on Monsters of the Movies. The movie projector refused to show the monsters and a projector had to be borrowed from Rev. Fearer to show the movie. If all goes well, we will try to show a film on drug abuse, titled "Go Ask Alice," on December 18 at 7 p.m.

An interesting book recently added to the county collection, but currently in the Emmitsburg Library, is titled: "Touching America With Two Wheels," by Vince Streano. The author is a Californian who made the trip cross-country from the west coast to the tip of New England — and back — taking photos and interviewing other cross-country motorcyclists along the way. He draws on his experiences to tell others who might be planning a similar trip how to prepare for it.

Another county book in the library will interest any one who has a yen to play a musical instrument is "Beginning the Five-String Banjo." This is a self-teaching method that really works. It was proved successful in numerous student workshops — and shows you how to play real tunes right from the start.

"The Technique of Stained Glass," by Patrick Reyntiens. The author is a stained glass artist who has been associated intimately with the major achievements in the medium in England since 1951.

"A Web of Salvage," by Brian Callison, is an exciting mystery of the sea for our patrons who like the excitement of the sea combined with a horrible web.

Capt. W. H. Wahl Ends 28 Year State Police Career Dec. 31

December 31st will mark the close of a distinguished 28 year career for Maryland State Police Captain Walter Herbert Wahl.

Captain Wahl, who is a native of Meyersdale, Pa., served in the United States Navy from 1941 to 1945. He served as a flight deck officer during combat operations in the South Pacific, Atlantic and North Africa. Among other decorations, he was awarded a bronze star.

After returning from the war and not being satisfied with quiet employment, Wahl joined the Maryland State Police in May 1946. He received basic training at Waterloo and was then assigned to Prince Frederick where he was promoted to Trooper First Class in 1950.

In 1953, TFC Wahl was commended for donating blood on numerous occasions for emergency cases at the Calvert County Hospital. He also took a leading part in directing rescue operations for four young boys who drowned in a tragic accident on the Chesapeake Bay.

When Hurricane "Hazel" swept through Maryland in 1954 it cut off all electric and telephone lines to the town of North Beach. Wahl assisted with evacuating residents from Bay front homes and established a radio link to keep local town officials and residents apprised of the storm's progress.

On August 8, 1955, the 183 gross ton wooden sailing vessel Levin J. Marvel departed from Annapolis for a six-day Bay voyage with 23 passengers and four crew members. On August 12, in gale force winds with its radio inoperative, the Marvel lay over on her beam and foundered. All persons aboard abandoned ship with life jackets and floating wreckage as their only means of survival. Fourteen of the 27 persons aboard perished. TFC Wahl waded into the heavy surf at North Beach to rescue one of the survivors.

In 1967 Wahl was promoted to Corporal and was transferred to Waldorf. Two years later he was promoted to the rank of Sergeant. In August 1964 he was transferred to the Frederick Barrack as the Assistant Barrack Commander. For several months in 1965 Sergeant Wahl was "loaned" to the City of Westminster to help reorganize and train their police department.

In 1967 Wahl was promoted to Sergeant Major. After a three-month stint in Headquarters Operations in 1968, he was promoted to Lieutenant and was assigned as the Annapolis Barrack Commander.

Letter To Editor

Editor, Emmitsburg Chronicle:
Now that the election is over and most of the incumbents were placed back in office, I feel it is time to write a few words on behalf of those young candidates who did not win. I feel, myself, defeated, in that I could not lift a hand to help those that were feeling the blunt hand of "Dirty Politics". It is becoming more apparent that Frederick County is wrapped up very tightly with corrupt and unethical standards when it deals with politics. It seems that you must be either wealthy, owned, or owe certain people favors. One cannot expect to go forward if the so-called "machine" or "political czar" in this county and Frederick City gives an unfavorable nod of his head. It is hard for a young man to remain his "own man" and there seems not to be a place for honesty.

I am tired of the attack on educators. What makes the local lawyer, businessman, car dealer or home builder such an authority on politics? I believe you will find some of our most corrupt people fall in one of these categories. I think it is time for youth (educators or not) to be given a chance with some honest, fresh approaches to our problems. I am sure the "political boss" would not agree with this.

I am also tired of the last minute distasteful article that appeared in the Frederick newspaper against "Rocky Curtis" that was taken out by the Home Builders and am alarmed that this newspaper (Frederick City) would even print it. When the Frederick paper posed the question to Mr. Zimmerman (a well-known lawyer) as to whether he had anything to do with the ad he declined to comment. Well, if he did in fact have nothing to do with the ad, wouldn't he have just said NO? The fact that he declined to answer seems to imply the answer to be YES. People can read between the lines.

I not only feel badly for Rocky Curtis, but I also feel badly for Galen Claggett who really ran an honest and close race. He only lost the House of Delegates post four years ago by 16 votes and perhaps the incumbents would not have gone back this time if he had not been put in an entirely different district (which he had no control over), been given more coverage (it appears that the Frederick newspaper is a bias one), and had won if he would have allowed himself to become a part of the ever-working dirty political machine of this county. I say he should be given recognition for not joining and making deals with this "sort" — glad he remains his "own man". I wonder how many in the political world of Frederick County can say this?

Are we the people of Frederick County to remain silent forever? People in positions such as our Liquor Commissioner, who clearly had a conflict-of-interest problem regarding his firm's selling liquor store signs should be displayed, is way out of order! No store owner would dare not go along with him for fear of his license. Are we still living in the days of Al Capone? Was he acting alone or for the "political machine"? We apparently have a great deal of "puppets" in our land.

Well, I say to all of you puppets, political bosses and old lawmakers, enjoy your next four years, as they just may be your last in power. The people of Frederick County are not as dumb as may appear and we will come forward next time to rid this county of dirty political behavior and people in political office who do nothing for this county but draw their salary. I say let some of these incumbents print just what they do for us.

I appreciate your taking time for this letter.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Martha Reynolds
Rt. 3, Frederick, Md.

Gospel Road To Be Shown Dec. 1

Miss Susie Snowflake was on hand to welcome and talk with the many kids. She also received many requests for Santa to fill this year. Susie will make visits every Sunday from 2 to 3 p.m. The interviews will be aired on WTHU.

Several animated Christmas displays fascinated the kids while the adults were busy browsing through the Christmas Shoppe and seeing the large selection of Christmas decorations, china, glass, and jewelry, etc.

The Annual Floral Open House will be held on Sunday, Dec. 8, from 12:30 p.m. until 7:00 p.m. At that time, the Gingerbread Gift Shoppe and the Mistletoe Botanical Display House will all be decked out for Christmas with over 650 Christmas flowering plants showing their beauty and numerous Christmas decorations made personally by Cozy designers.

Officers Elected To Tourist Council

Election of officers was held by the Catoctin Mountains Tourist Council at the monthly meeting held recently at the Shamrock Restaurant.

The following officers were elected: President, Ross V. Smith, Jr., Hillside Turkey Farm; vice president, C. W. (Pat) Buch, Mt. Liguors; secretary, Mrs. Marian McIntyre, Thurmont; treasurer, Mrs. Dorothy Gigeous, Thurmont Bank. Elected to the Board of Directors are: George B. Germand, Crow's Nest Lodge Campground; Mrs. Barbara Freeze, Cozy Complex; Harry Black, Catoctin Mountain Orchard; and George Kramer, Agrotors, Inc.

Mr. Germand reported that the State Highway Administration has approved the Council's suggestion that U. S. 15 from the Pennsylvania line to Point of Rocks be named "Catoctin Mountain Highway" and that new maps and road signs will so designate.

Also at the meeting, a letter addressed to the State Highway Administration was read and approved, calling to their attention a serious problem of directional road signing that exists for approximately 16 miles along U. S. 15 from the Pennsylvania line south to the White Cottage Inn. The problem concerns the remnants of State Rt. 806, formerly a continuous route, but now a series of ten non-continuous pieces cut up by U. S. 15. Police, fire and rescue units are never sure when they receive an emergency call for an incident on Rt. 806 which of the ten separate sections (20 intersections) is involved. Serious delays are caused while trying to find the location of fires or accidents. The letter suggests that an appropriate identifying name be given to each separate section of Rt. 806, and includes a list of names that might be used.

It was also announced that the Winter Festival is planned for February 1 and 2, 1975.

The Sled Dog Races will not be held in Thurmont in 1975. The next meeting will be held on December 19 at Royer's Restaurant at 7 p.m.

His sermon is entitled "The Enemy of Gratitude".

The offering received at the Thanksgiving Service will follow the custom of past years and be given to the Emmitsburg Community Fund. This fund is used to help provide emergency relief for transients and local residents.

MASS THURSDAY
Father Edward Sargus, pastor of St. Anthony's Shrine, has announced that there will be a Mass at 9 a.m., Thanksgiving Day at the church.

Leftovers Can Stretch The Budget

Feeding the family at today's prices is harder than ever. It calls for taking advantage of weekly specials and bargains, buying in quantity when advantageous, shopping with lists and cents off coupons in hand. It also requires making the best possible use of all purchases including the use of leftovers, a word that pops up whenever prices soar. Today it is a smart practice to stretch a small amount of leftover meat to make another meal. Here, ham is stretched to make stuffed green peppers. The recipe is from the book, "Too-Good-To-Be-Leftovers" available for 75 cents plus a label from a quart or 48-ounce jar of Hellmann's or Best Foods real mayonnaise. For the 144 page 7-inch full color paperback book write to: Leftovers Cookbook, Box 307M, Coventry, CT 06238.

STUFFED PEPPERS

- 1 tablespoon pickle relish
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard

The Search For The Perfect Toy

With the thousands of toys displayed for Christmas, it's not hard to understand why many parents, family and friends looking for the "perfect" toy for a child can be easily bewildered.

What makes a toy 'perfect'? Important criteria for buying toys for children are that they be both fun and safe, points out the Health Insurance Institute.

Another important consideration is that the toy be simple enough for the child to master. Why spoil a youngster's expectations by giving a toy that may continue rather than entertain?

"Perfect" toys for babies celebrating their first Christmas? Among favorites of the playpen set are soft, cuddly plush animals, non-toxic wooden rattles, and musical toys with moving parts to hold their attention. Some toys such as clocks with movable hands can be used later to teach a child to tell time.

As for the toddler crowd, climbing and building toys will delight them as well as help develop their coordination. Wooden puzzles and toys they can push-pull and manipulate will give them a sense of achievement.

High on the list of favorites for children between two and six are stuffed animals, dolls, cradles, picture books, tricycles, trucks and engines.

Youngsters from six to 12 will appreciate bats, balls, gloves, cooking sets, dress-up dolls, construction sets, games, puzzles, chess sets, footballs, basketballs, roller skates, gym equipment, bicycles, and arts and crafts sets.

For older children eager to find out more about the environment, microscopes, magnets, prisms, ecology toys and chemistry kits will help develop that interest. Keep in mind, however, that sets which include chemicals should not be used by children without prior instruction.

Fun and safety should always go together when buying toys. Selecting toys carefully and instructing youngsters to use them properly will eliminate the hazards and double the fun this holiday season.

YOUR VETERINARIAN SPEAKS

(First in a series of articles prepared by the Maryland Veterinary Medical Association). On His Own

When is the best age to separate a dog from its mother? Behavioral scientists maintain, according to the Maryland Veterinary Medical Association, that a puppy's age at the time it leaves its mother's litter has great bearing on what kind of a dog (and companion to humans) he will grow up to be.

Give or take a week, the best age is about seven weeks, the veterinarians say. By that time he will have been weaned and yet not have developed an undue attachment for his mother or creatures of his own species.

On the other hand, a puppy deprived of maternal care and guidance at three to five weeks of age is apt to become too dependent on human beings and forgo the companionship of his fellow canines or not even able to understand or conduct a "dog-to-dog" relationship later on.

Dogs who associate only with other dogs during the first three months of their lives may find man an insurmountable social barrier and chafe at domesticity throughout their lifetime. Behavioral scientists, being cautious and of course scientific, don't say, but that could help explain the hapless dog who digs up the ponies or bites the mailman. Seriously though, if you're thinking of acquiring a puppy, one about seven weeks old is apt to develop into the most dependable companion.

A dog at this age has already had three weeks of socialization with its own species, so that behavioral abnormalities with its own species are less likely to occur at a later age.

This is also the optimal age for socialization with men, since primary social relationships can be easily established and simple obedience training, housekeeping and adaptation to the domestic environment can be most readily begun.

NEWS OF SCIENCE

TINY CAPSULE DOES BIG THINGS

"Microencapsulation"—it's a big word that stands for a tiny thing. It is the process by which chemicals are packaged in a capsule of pinhead size or smaller. As a result, toxic or short-lived chemicals release their contents in controlled quantities over a period of time.

This process is now being used in the field of chemical pesticides. Pennwalt Corporation has announced that the Environmental Protection Agency has approved labeling of its Penncap-M microencapsulated product for use on cotton, alfalfa and sweet corn. Penncap-M, a DDT substitute, is the only microencapsulated pesticide that has been so approved for agriculture.

The controlled release process means economic benefits to the farmer and greater safety in use, and it reduces harmful build-up of chemical residues in soil and run-off water. The product may reduce by 50 percent the number of sprayings of sweet corn needed in a normal season. Tests of Penncap-M were carried out for the past year at various state universities, stations of the Department of Agriculture, as well as on many working farms.

Microencapsulation is certainly a big word for a small capsule that will do big things!

Rocky Ridge 4-H

Holds Nov. Meeting

It was announced that a Beef, Sheep and Swine meeting would be held on Thursday at the 4-H office building.

Demonstrations were given by Mary and Becky Keilholz on "Parts of a Western Saddle and a Split Eared Bridle."

Dreamy Tips For Good Sleeping

Having trouble sleeping? Here are some experience-tested tips to get you into the good sleep habit.

1. Set the stage. Your bedroom is best done in blues, greens or soft yellows, with carpets to muffle noise.

2. Clear your mind of nagging worries. Easier said than done? Face the problem squarely, decide what to do about it — and then put it out of your head. For example, you're planning a trip abroad and you're worried about having a room waiting for you in a foreign country. The thing to do is call Holiday Inn. Its Holiday reservation system assures you of accommodations anywhere — with American-style comfort. Now that you've solved that problem, go to sleep!

3. Go ahead and eat. A light bedtime snack — a glass of warm milk or a piece of fruit — is insurance against being roused by wee-hour hunger pangs. If your "bite" includes a piece of candy, you're less likely to wake up tired.

4. Do some mild exercise. It should leave you pleasantly tired and ready for sleep. Nightly walks, for example, are effective sleep inducers.

5. Try the tonic of a hot bath. Soak for 20-25 minutes and feel your tension soaking away.

If nothing works and you still can't sleep, don't fight it. Reading quietly in bed will do you more good than tossing, turning, and worrying.

WHERE IN THE WORLD?

A QUIZ TO TEST YOUR KNOWLEDGE OF GEOGRAPHY AND CURRENT EVENTS.

Where is this city? Rising 2,500 feet above sea level it offers an ideal climate. There, summer comes when it's winter here. It's the greatest industrial city on its continent and the largest city south of the equator.

Here you can see one of the finest art museums on the continent, over 100,000 different species of plants and trees in the Botanical Gardens and the largest Japanese district outside of Japan. If you prefer, you can get a magnificent view of the entire metropolis from the top of the Edificio Italia, the tallest building on the entire continent.

This city is famous for coffee, cigars and a delicious dish called feijoada, made of meat, black beans and rice, cooked separately and spiced with herbs. You can taste it, along with other popular local and American meals at the Holiday Inn recently built just eight miles from the busy international airport in the suburb of Campinas.

The most important spectator sport in town is soccer, spelled futebol, but golf and tennis are also very popular. When saying "thank you" there, men say Obrigado; ladies Obrigada, and you can say it when you purchase local bargains in uncut gems, antique silver and fine wood carvings.

BUSINESS AND THE STOCK MARKET

Specialized Trucking Companies

By Babson's Reports Inc., Wellesley Hills, Mass., November 28, 1974—Common stocks of the leading trucking companies outperformed the market from the early days of the oil embargo until quite recently. Then, because of the increasing cloudiness in the outlook, trucking issues began to come under great selling pressure. While it is likely that this weakness will persist for a time, the longer-term prospects are considerably more encouraging.

First, The Adverse Factors

A number of negatives will temporarily limit revenue and profit gains within the trucking industry. There will be the economic softening effecting most of the business fabric, the runaway inflation, high costs of borrowed capital, heavier outlays for labor and equipment, and the difficulties in securing rate relief. Despite these depressive conditions, however, the possibilities for rebound in trucking equities are good. The unfavorable features seem to have been well discounted at today's common stock prices, and the likelihood of further large-scale price erosion is slim. So the basic longer-term appeal of issues in this line remains quite strong.

Auto Market Connection

While the trucking industry is of broad scope, the Research Department of Babson's Reports has analyzed for this report a special breed of haulers—namely those that carry new automobiles such as Ryder System, Woods Corp., and National City Lines. The business cycles of these concerns are affected by the output of new motor vehicles as opposed to other economic yardsticks. Since most auto-hauling companies have various operations, both major and minor, it is essential to measure the amount of business in this particular category. For companies concentrating in auto hauling, net and per share earnings can be dominated by the auto production pattern.

Drop In Auto Sales

Thus far in 1974, automotive sales and output have been off dramatically, seriously discommoding the auto transporters. Viewing the future, auto makers estimate that a 5% year-to-year gain in unit volume for 1975 is possible. Even this modest increase may seem suspect because of our lagging economy, but there are some pluses in the outlook. Shortages, for instance, are drying up in several major auto-related commodities. Then, too, the easing of money rates and the improvement in used car prices are favorable factors. And we expect a pickup in auto production as 1975 unwinds, which should be soon translated into more business for the auto transporters.

Weighing The Competition

Many new autos are, of course, transported by railroad because of the widespread geographical locations of the manufacturers. In recent years, specially designed railroad cars have been utilized for some auto carriers to help solve problems of theft and damage. With the soaring price of gas and the economies of longer-haul railway transport, the question arises whether the railroads will

The following questions were typical of the kind asked of me in recent weeks. Letters should be sent to me, c/o U. S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

What is the status of congressional budget reform legislation? The bill was signed into law on July 12 of this year. Copies of P.L. 93-344 may be obtained by writing my office here in Washington.

How may I obtain a summer job with the Federal government?

The U. S. Civil Service Commission informs me that the filing deadline for 1975 summer jobs is January 17, 1975. Each summer about 10,000 positions are filled from a pool of more than 100,000 candidates who qualify in the written exam administered in January and February. Complete instructions for filing, and information on opportunities available, may be obtained by requesting Booklet No. 414 from the Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C. 20415.

Is there any federal regulation to protect consumers from computer errors on their bills? Under the Fair Credit Billing Act, effective next October, if a consumer notifies a creditor about a computer error in the statement for his account, the creditor must respond within 30 days to the consumer's inquiry and the store must also resolve the problem within 90 days.

September marked the 11th consecutive month the Nation's highway fatalities have shown a decrease below the same month a year ago, according to the U. S. Department of Transportation. If the current trend were to continue for the balance of the year there would be 10,000 less fatalities compared to 1973.

How do I submit testimony as regards the Interior Department's Environmental Impact Statement on the Outer Continental Shelf?

Efforts To Reduce The Budget
From the founding of America, no Congress had succeeded in spending $100 billion in a single fiscal year until 1972. Only 9 years later . . . 1971 . . . the $200 billion dollar mark was broken. Only 4 more years later our present 1975 fiscal year budget calls for $300 billion. That budget has been approved by the present Congress, and with the prospect of reduced income, such spending would bring on another huge deficit. Where will the money come from? As a matter of practicality, a substantial part of the deficit in past years has been financed by the Treasury by borrowing in the ordinary private capital markets. These are the same markets in which homeowners compete for mortgage money, small business men compete for equity - capital, major business firms finance their long term growth, and State and local governments finance their basic capital improvements.

By being forced to borrow in such huge volume, the Federal government has absorbed much of the new funds which would normally be available to private individuals, businesses and State and local governments. As a result, the normal private users of the capital market have been forced to seek funds on a short-term basis at high interest rates, from commercial banks. The Federal Reserve system has been and is now faced with a dilemma; if they accommodate the borrowers in the commercial banking system by increasing the money supply, they will be fueling the fires of inflation for the future. If they do not provide the funds to the commercial banks to meet the growing demand for loans, business will be slowed down and the Federal Reserve System cannot meet both the demands of another Federal budget deficit and the demands of business. One or the other has to be trimmed down, and each must feel the pinch. The decision by the Federal Reserve finally is one of reason. It is urging reduction in Federal borrowing by reducing deficit spending in order to make more of the present money supply available for industry and private borrowing where our wealth is created. This is one of the reasons for optimism about the future.

It has been a long time coming. The advocates of deficit spending have had a field day in the United States which extended over a period of more than forty years. Many a college student has been reassured by some theoretic professor of economics that we didn't have to worry about the national debt because, "after all, we owe it to ourselves." When the national debt reached a proportion where we didn't have the money to pay "the interest to ourselves," those economists were the first ones to throw up their hands and admit they didn't know what to do about inflation.

Congress has now joined with the President in the determination to reduce the year's budget to $295 billion dollars which is still not enough to attain a balanced budget, but it demonstrates good intentions, and is a start. We should all remember, however, that a balanced budget alone will not cure our problem. There must be a reduction in deficit spending across the board. This means State and local governments will have to declare a moratorium on issuing bonds until inflation is slowed to a manageable level. Labor and management must get together and plan how to avoid increasing prices for goods and services. It means that the average American will have to cut back his spending and particularly his credit spending. America will have some hard times ahead in the next year or two but if we can have the moral fibre to tighten our belts and survive the next one to two years, and IF WE DO NOT SUC-CUMB TO THE LURE OF POLITICAL PROMISES, we will break the back of inflation.

Some very knowledgeable money experts predict it can be done in one year. Others are a little more conservative and predict two years, with the general picture continuing tight for possibly five years. But on one thing they all agree. Inflation will not be defeated just by balancing the Federal budget. That is the place to begin, but it is only a beginning. Budgets must be balanced right on down the line to the individual's family spending. Those who survive without undue hardship will be those willing to cutback, be content with a slowdown in business and personal financial growth and look to the future when the value of the dollar will be going up instead of down.

At present, the Administration's determination to reduce federal spending and balance the budget this year has the support of the Secretary of the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Board and the economic advisors to the President. It also has the support of some members of Congress. It is in the Congress where trouble may develop. Congress is in the process of voting the President authority to use his discrimination in cutting $10 billion dollars from the present budget, but there are some strings attached. Those strings could prove as disastrous as the same sort of authorization voted in 1972. In October of that year, Congress adopted legislation providing the President with comparable powers to hold spending to the level of $248 billion. However, they were unable to agree as to the details of the authority to be delegated. The President proceeded to achieve a significant reduction in expenditures through pocket vetoes and impoundments. Numerous court cases were brought against the various departments in which the cuts were made and Congress itself outlawed impoundments by the Executive in the budget reform law which goes into effect next year. In short, the efforts of that President to reduce federal spending and to balance the budget fell into the briar-patch of partisan politics. If that happens this time, there may not be another chance. The result of failure to control inflation will bring far greater suffering to us all.

Congress also needs to attack the problem of seventy per cent of the budget over which it and the Executive branch have lost control. The entire $10 billion cut in spending will have to be made from only 30 per cent of the present budget. This is bound to bring screams from individual members of the Congress and from those persons most affected. The road ahead is not easy and the course on which we are now headed will be difficult to maintain. It will require the patience and goodwill of all Americans, but it is the right course and if we steadfastly keep our present course, this nation will survive. If we fail, freedom itself will have failed.

In Maryland it is said that a toothpick made from a splinter of a tree struck by lightning will cure toothache.

NEWS OF FLYING BUSINESS TRAVEL
Scheduled airlines serve only about 500 airports, which often means a businessman has a long way to go from the airport to his destination. But with over 12,600 smaller airports available to private and company-owned aircraft, businessmen can often arrive closer to their final destination in light airplanes. Last year general aviation transported 90 million passengers, about 1 in 3 inter city air passengers. Yet, general aviation accounted for only seven tenths of one percent of the fuel used last year for transportation in America. Light business airplanes actually conserve fuel, according to Piper Aircraft Corp., since in mileage the average trip is about 20 percent shorter by air than by road. The company's figures show a single-engine, two- or four-place airplane travels two to three times faster than an automobile and gets 14 to 18 miles per gallon. Twin-engine planes use more fuel, but they go faster and carry more people. For information about learning to fly, write to B. Shantz, Piper Aircraft Corporation, Lock Haven, Pa.

PERSPECTIVES IN LEARNING

By Hazel Brown, President Harry Lundeberg School Understanding Is Comprehension

The key to reading is comprehending the written language. It is getting meaning through the recognition of known words.

Interested parents who understand the help for their children achieve successful growth in reading comprehension. They can supplement what the teacher does in the classroom if they know what is involved in reading with understanding.

The major goal of reading is to acquire the authors' intent and to interpret, evaluate, and reflect upon the meaning. Reading is a thought-getting process. Without comprehension there is no reading even if the words are identified.

There are many significant factors affecting reading comprehension. If parents understand these influences, they can help prepare the children for higher levels of comprehension. The most important factors are the experiences which the reader brings to the printed page. Experiences help to provide meaning for the imagery which must take place when reading. The more background the reader has for making judgements and drawing inferences the better he will understand and interpret what he reads.

Comprehension is also affected by language and mastery of the oral language. All words must be translated or interpreted when reading, so the verbal child has a great advantage. If he learns to talk well and develops a good vocabulary, he will have a headstart on reading.

The language experiences and listening activities which parents provide can support growth in the thought-getting process. Listening and talking are very closely related to reading. Development in any one of these areas will affect the others.

In order to read, children must be able to decode or recognize words. It is extremely difficult to get meaning from reading when there is a lack of fluency in word recognition. Learning to identify words involves perception and visual discrimination. If a child learns to look carefully at things and see shapes and sizes, this will be useful in learning to recognize words.

The identification of the words is just one small part of reading. Too many people consider this to be the main factor in reading and then develop little understanding of the content.

Comprehension is developed through interaction with other children and adults. Inquiry, curiosity, and critical thinking are essential and take place in an environment which encourages debate and discussion. Parents can provide the necessary climate for questioning and interpreting.

Children who learn to read well are exposed to life situations which cause them to think and to put ideas together in meaningful relationships. Understanding words and the way they fit together to make thoughts is the key to reading comprehension.

DO YOU HAVE THESE PHOBIAS?

Almost everyone is walking around with, at least one, often more, unfounded fears tucked into their psyches. Many people readily admit their fears are irrational, yet they continue to go through life avoiding confrontation with them.

Psychiatrists have a name for such obsessive, illogical or unreasonable fears. It's phobias.

You've heard of the fellow with a bulging medicine cabinet, who pops capsules and pills into his mouth like candy and shrinks from every sneeze or windward draft as from the plague, which he probably thinks he's about to get. Well, he suffers from hypochondria, the fear of disease. It's a common phobia.

Sometimes people have fears no one has put a psychiatric name to. Take the person who wants to see something of the world, yet is afraid of leaving familiar surroundings and way of life and trying to cope with new situations.

One solution would be to stay at Holiday Inns around the world. That way one can be sure of American comfort and plumbing, of a topnotch security system, of safe, wholesome American food — or, authentic local food prepared by local chefs instilled with an American regard for freshness and cleanliness. In short, American carefree comfort is combined with the foreign experience for maximum enjoyment.

Or maybe you have one of these phobias:

Claustrophobia: Fear of closed places, or of stifling. Locking a small child in a closet as a punishment has been known to give rise to this fear.

Agoraphobia: Fear of open spaces, or the crossing of a wide street or field unaccompanied. A subtype is kenophobia, the fear of entering a vacant house.

Acrophobia: Fear of high places. This is very common. In its milder forms it can be protective since it keeps people from potentially dangerous situations, such as climbing a crumbly cliff or rickety ladder. But in its more pathological forms it can involve intense fear of places no higher than a low balcony.

Hydrophobia: Fear of water. This has been known to follow near-drownings at an early age or excessive warning by parents against the dangers of drowning.

Microphobia: Fear of germs. Mysophobia: Fear of dirt. These are closely related.

Pyrophobia: Fear of fire. Ailurophobia: Fear of cats. This was a well-known Napoleonic phobia, and supposedly afflicted other dictatorial types such as Alexander the Great and Julius Caesar.

The next time you get into a swivel of anxiety over some harmless situation, you might stop and think if you have a real, full-blown phobia or if it's something you can nip in the bud with some stiff reasoning with yourself. It's worth a try!

Annual Meeting Held By Church Council

The annual meeting of the Emmitsburg Council of Churches was held Wednesday, November 20 in the Parish House of Elias Lutheran Church. Conducting the business session in the absence of Mrs. James Grinder, President, was Pastor W. Ronald Fearer, former President. Reports for the Ninth Annual Assembly were presented in written form by Mrs. Anna Margaret Martin, Chairman of the Worship Committee; Mrs. Mildred Breining, Chairman of the Parish Education Committee; Mr. Bernard Welty, Chairman of the Social Action Committee, and Mr. D. Fred Wolfe, Treasurer. A President's report was also submitted by Mrs. James Grinder who has just completed one year as proxy if the local Council of Churches.

A detailed account of the Emmitsburg Lifelong Learning Council was given by Mrs. Eric Glass, the representative from the Council of Churches. She told of the current courses that are offered and solicited suggestions for future course offerings. Other items discussed were the Pentecost Service, held each Spring, and future services that might aid in promoting unity among our Emmitsburg area churches. Lauded for their fine work in the community were the Tuesday afternoon Project Days and the Emmitsburg Community Chorus.

Among the activities sponsored by the Council of Churches are the Vacation Church School, the Week-day Church School, Good Friday Prayer Vigil, Community Lenten Services, and the annual Thanksgiving Day Service. Others during the past year included the Service of Christian Unity, the presentation of "The Crucifixion" by the Emmitsburg Community Chorus, Adult Bible Studies, the Project Hope, participated in the CROP walk, the Boy Scout Festival, the Circus Kingdom, the Community Day honoring our local firemen, and a "farewell" for the Rev. John King. Highlighting the work of the Social Action Committee is their concern for others. This committee continues to send get-well wishes to members of the local congregations, and has a telephone system in which daily calls are made to the elderly and shut-ins of the congregations. Notes of sympathy are sent to those experiencing death within their family, expressing the condolences of the Council of Churches.

DO YOU SET YOUR CHILD A GOOD EXAMPLE?

The art of child raising is a challenge to all of us—difficult yet rewarding. When you stop and consider that children will usually do as you do, not as you say, it's easy to understand the importance of setting the youngsters a good example with your own behavior.

For example, you can't expect a child to clean his room if the rest of the house is a mess, or be fussy about his appearance if you wear spotted dresses or wrinkled suits. But the children will benefit from your own practice of order and neatness.

Children do look up to others around them, besides their parents. If you want your youngster to turn to a responsible community group, not the nearest street gang, introduce him to the fun of Scouting, even before he's old enough to become a Cub Scout.

Scout Action Figure toys, Steve and Bob Scout, and their Adventure kits, let children learn about Scouting while playing. The figures, made by Kenner, wear authentic Boy Scout uniforms. With the High Adventure Path Finder kit, a child can have imaginary adventures with a truck and trailer, a canoe that floats; and he can jack up the truck with a working winch and change tires with the little tools. The Path Finder also comes with a cartoon-style story booklet depicting the adventure so youngsters can better enjoy and learn from the action figures.

For children to develop good financial habits, parents need to lend a firm guiding hand. When you teach a child to stay within his allowance each week and help him adopt the habit of saving in his own piggy bank, he's more likely to become an adult with the ability to live within his means.

For children to learn a sense of independence, help them learn to do things for themselves around the house: even little boys can learn to iron their own handkerchiefs, cook a simple meal, or sew their own buttons back on a shirt.

If you make sure your children have someone to look up to, both inside and outside the home, you can be more confident they'll grow up to be the kind of people your grandchildren will look up to!

Keeping The FAITH

"And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him."

St. Matthew 6:1

The Sermon on the Mount is the acknowledged statement of the ideal religious life. However, there is frequently a lack of true understanding as to exactly what Jesus meant by the proper way of life. For example, are the beatitudes to be taken literally? When Jesus said: "Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven," did he mean renunciation of material wealth or that we should be weak-willed? It should be noted that a strange tradition of parting with one's possessions has often been thought of as the mark of being truly religious. Is this part of the meaning of that beatitude?

An Australian minister, the Rev. R. H. Teed, who has spent over 60 years in the ministry, has written a detailed explanation of the sometimes puzzling Sermon on the Mount. In clear understandable language, Mr. Teed reveals the lessons which have so much meaning for modern man. He guides the reader step by step unfolding the symbolic meaning of the beatitudes as well as the Ten Commandments.

To fully understand what Jesus meant in this important sermon we need to know the underlying truths and the depth of meaning in the passages.

In his 89 page book SERMON ON THE MOUNT, Mr. Teed makes these limitless truths easy to comprehend. In a world torn by wars, social upheaval, and industrialization, this little book can be a profound source of strength—a "light in darkness."

SERMON ON THE MOUNT is available for $1.50 (postpaid) at the Swedenborg Foundation, Dept. SR, 139 East 23rd Street, New York, N.Y. 10010.

New higher interest rate on U.S. Savings Bonds.

Now U.S. Savings Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity.

Here's how it works:

The higher interest rate applies to all new Bonds purchased since December 1, 1973, raising their rate from 5½% to 6% when held to maturity. And the maturity period on Series E Bonds is shorter, too. Now E Bonds mature in 5 years, with a first-year rate of 4½%.

Series H Bonds, with a 10-year maturity, will earn 5% the first year; 5.8% for the next four years; and 6½% for the last five years. This gives you an average 6% yield over the 10-year period.

It works for Bonds you now hold, too. There's no reason to redeem your older Bonds to buy new ones.

Their yield has improved, too.

All outstanding E Bonds will receive a ½% increase in yield for each semiannual interest period beginning on or after December 1, 1973, payable upon redemption. This also applies to any Freedom Shares you may still hold.

All outstanding H Bonds will receive a ½% yield increase for each semiannual interest period beginning on or after December 1, 1973. This is payable in the form of increased semiannual interest payments.

It all works to your advantage. Now, more than ever, it makes sense to buy higher-paying U.S. Savings Bonds and hold them to maturity or beyond.
