Most Anything At A Glance

- By Abigail -

Be extra careful driving these days, folks, as the kids are now off school for the summer.

The editor gave me the following letter. Is Patriotism dead? No, and it's our children who will lead us back to these ideals our country was founded on. Sometimes we forget, but with children like Matthew to remind us of our heritage, we can be sure our great nation will be in good hands.

The Spirit of '76
7 red stripes!
6 white stripes!
'76...the flag!
The Spirit of '76
7+6 equals 13...colonies; and all the history goes on from this point 200 years ago. The flag, to me, means the spirit of '76 because it has six white stripes and seven red.

Red stands for courage and hardiness. The pioneers had strong faith in themselves because they wanted all men to have freedom of religion. When the revolutionary war came, they thought they would lose because England was so big; but they had courage and did not show cowardice, and wound up winning. Red also means the blood of people who fought for freedom, and died.

This is '76!
White indicates purity and innocence. The country was like a newborn baby. So, citizens didn't dirty the country by greed for themselves. They kept their ideals. They built a great country without dictatorship. Innocence is shown as the settlers got to this country and had no bad history, but a whole future ahead of them.

This is '76!
Blue means vigilance, perseverance, and justice. Vigilance means keeping alert to guard ideals and beliefs. Perseverance is shown when colonists made sacrifices to keep freedoms and beliefs. Justice means fairness — and many settlers didn't think other people were less than they, just because they were a different race or creed.

This is '76!
When I look at the flag I see the 200 years of history — and the future ahead of us, where we, as in the past, must keep and uphold all that the flag stands for.

This...is...'76!

Matthew is the son of James D. and Anne W. Deatherage of Rt. 1, Fairfield, and I really think he has just about said it all. I'll make no attempt to improve on it.

Rumors have reached my ears concerning a rash that children have picked up swimming in our local pool. The question arises; is this due to incompetence or merely a simple mistake?

I sure hope this thing doesn't happen again as we are very proud of our pool and this sort of thing can create bad feelings and a bad itch to match.

Be sure to stop by the Chronicle office and reserve your copy of Emmitsburg, History and Society. It will be out soon, so be sure to get your copy.

The Emmitsburg Chronicle is planning a big fourth of July issue so be sure to watch out for it. It will be distributed free of charge. If you have any old pictures that show Emmitsburg's heritage, and would like to share these pictures with others, drop them off at the Chronicle office. All pictures will be returned after publication in the paper.

Mr. Roy Wivell and Great-grandson, Travis Green enjoy a tractor ride. Travis is the fifth generation of Wivell's to ride on this tractor.

A Salute To Mr. Roy Wivell

(The staff of the Emmitsburg Chronicle wanted to honor a father on Fathers Day. We thought and thought who deserves special honor. We decided to honor Mr. Roy Wivell.)

Mr. Roy Wivell of Emmitsburg is now retired; a rest he deserves after raising 19 children.

A farmer all his life, he has spent the last 66 years living in the same house; a large colonial house that was built before the Civil War. The bricks used in the house were made on the farm. His ancestors came to this area around 1830 and as he is quick to point out, they were English.

When he was old enough, he attended school in the building that is now known as Judge Glasse's Garage on the Old Frederick Road. He then attended St. Euphemias in Emmitsburg for two years.

On Oct. 20, 1926, he married the former Helen Guise, now deceased. This reporter asked him if he and his bride ever discussed how many children they would like to have.

"Never said a darn thing about kids," he says. "Planning is darn foolishness...People should take the children the Lord gives them. You can do whatever you have to do if you try."

According to Mr. Wivell, too many parents are working outside the home, when they should be with the children.

When asked if he could name all nineteen, he did: James, Joseph, Charles, Henry, Robert, Bernard, Margaret, Eugene, Thomas, Patricia, Paul, Helen, David, Therese, Genevieve, Richard, Joan, Sam and Roy Jr.

All the children had to help with the farm work. This not only kept them out of trouble but kept them healthy. The Wivell's raised most of their own food.

All the children were born at home with Dr. Morris Birely assisting. But the old Doctor said he'd never get rich off their illnesses as they were all so healthy.

"It wasn't always fun raising the kids — deviled a lot of work. Sometimes worked 15 or 16 hours a day." But he says there were plenty of good times too. "Christmas's got pretty lively!"

The children attribute their happy childhood to their parents concern, and the good example their parents set before them.

A deeply religious man, Mr. Wivell feels you can raise children without a strong faith in God, but he won't guarantee how they'll turn out.

This reporter asked one of his daughters, Mrs. Genevieve Little, why she feels her father is the best. Her prime reason is because "he knows that being a father meant more than just having children: He raised us to the best of his ability and instilled in us all the virtues and morals that we would need to get along in life."

Now holidays bring all the family together again. Mr. Wivell has 89 grandchildren ("If you wait a few days, it might be 91," he says) and one great-grandchild.

A father needs no further testimony.

Nat. Fire Academy Still Interested In St. Joseph's Site

Governor Marvin Mandel, in letter to County Commissioner Lawrence A. Dorsey, this week reported the National Fire Academy Site Selection Board is still considering St. Joseph College in Emmitsburg as a possible location for its proposed national academy.

The National Academy for Fire Prevention and Control is seeking facilities that will permit it to operate 250 days per year with a maximum resident enrollment of 300 and maximum attendance on any one day of 1,000.

In the letter, Mandel told Dorsey he had written to the selection committee, urging it to select St. Joseph. He also said he had offered his assistance in resolving any problems or questions regarding the site or state services and facilities.

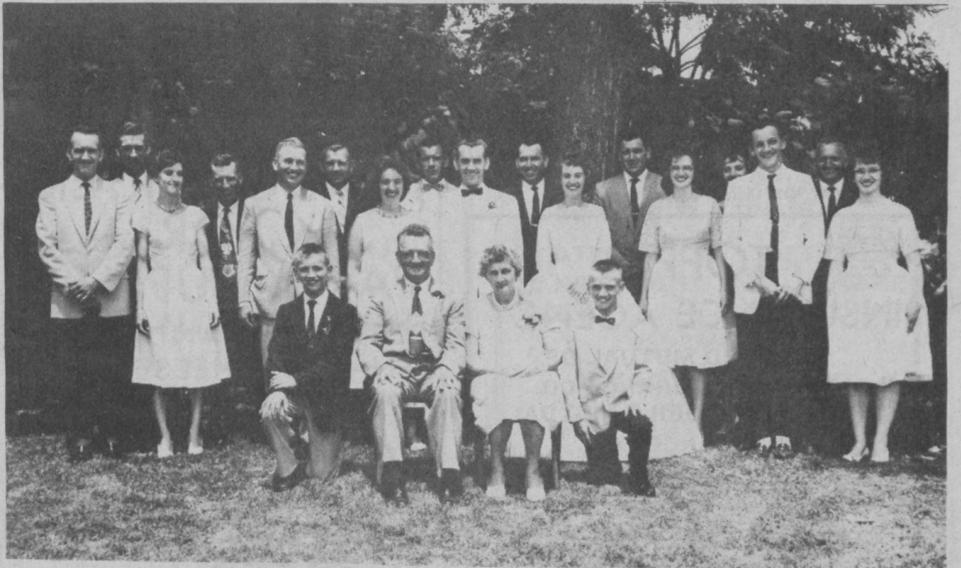

"We in Maryland are appreciative for your consideration," the governor's letter to the committee read. "The resources of Maryland state government are available to aid the board."

Local support is strong for the selection of St. Joseph. Last December the county commissioners voted unanimously to endorse the selection. This past March the town of Emmitsburg, an attorney for the Sisters of St. Joseph, and Dorsey made presentations in Washington before the site selection committee.

Commissioner Dorsey is optimistic about selection. "It's looking more encouraging all the time," he said. "It looks real good."

In his June 3 letter to Dorsey, Mandel said he understood the site selection committee is planning a second visit to St. Joseph to acquaint Howard Tipton, administrator, National Fire Prevention and Control Administration, with the facilities and site.

Visit Burying Ground of Key Slaves

Mr. and Mrs. Lee B. Brown, the present owners of "Terra Rubra", the birthplace of Francis Scott Key, has informed the interested public that they may visit the burying ground of the Key Slaves on June 20 (11-4) and June 21. Visitors may drive to the rear of the house and walk the short distance to the graves site following trail markers placed by the Silver Fancy Garden Club.

Upon learning of the slaves burying ground from Mrs. Charles Devilbiss and her son, Paul, (Mrs. Devilbiss having been born in the present house which stands on the original foundation) the Garden Club adopted its restoration as a bi-centennial project.

This plot, originating during the Revolutionary period, had been spared the plow, but the scattered field stones used as markers were nearly obscured by piles of old split rails which accumulated over the years and were placed in the area for protection. Garden Club members and interested friends with the consent of the owners, tidied the site, and placed trail markers.

The noted historian, J. Thomas Schort relates "when the labors of the farm were over in the evening, the negroes were summoned to prayer with the family; usually concluded by Francis Scott Key when he was there, or by his mother when he was away. After prayers almost every night, as was common on the plantation in Maryland, music and dancing might be heard at the negroes quarters until the late hours".

The memory of these early Americans is honored by the permanent memorial donated and placed by F. Kale Mathias of "Mathias Monuments" of Westminster, Md.

During Taneytown Bicentennial Week, two cemeteries will be on tour; the Baptist Cemetery on the Emmitsburg Road, and the Key Cemetery on the Keysville Road off Route 194 near Keymar.

The Brown's Welcome interested people to come enjoy this historical and beautiful spot.

Hood Sponsors Workshop

"Stay With Me, I'm Dying" is the theme of a two-day workshop that will take place at Hood College June 25 and 26. Open to professionals, paraprofessionals, and interested lay persons who may be involved with dying patients and their families, the individual sessions will focus on the needs of all the persons affected.

Interested persons are requested to register before June 18 in the Office of Continuing Education at Hood. The $25 fee includes all workshop sessions and materials, two lunches, bibliography, and 14 Continuing Education Units.

One of the featured participants in the forum will be Joy Ufema, a nurse at Harrisburg Hospital specializing in thanatology. She has been featured in The Washington Post and recently appeared on an hour-long television program entitled, "If They Want Beer and Pizza, I'll Get Them Pizza and Beer." At Hood, she will lead a discussion based on her work and the provision of help for the families of the long-suffering terminally ill, especially cancer victims.

Other discussion leaders will be Kathy Rouche, a nurse at the National Institutes of Health and founder of the Maryland chapter of Make Every Day Count, an organization to help terminally ill patients; Dana Cable, an associate professor of psychology at Hood and coordinator of the workshop; and Douglas Stauffer, owner and director of the Stauffer Funeral Home.

The two-day programs will include discussions on the language of death, our fears of dying, how to provide special help to the families of dying children, the responsibilities of various staff persons to the family after the patient has died and how they can help, acceptance of non-traditional decisions by the dying patient and the family, and understanding the patient's personal grief and the bereaved family.

In addition, two films are scheduled to be shown during the workshop. The first one, "To Die Today," is based on the work of Elizabeth Kubler-Ross, one of the world's foremost authorities on death and dying, as well as a recent recipient of an honorary degree from Hood. The film outlines the stages the dying patient goes through.

The second film, "The Final Proud Days of Elsie Wurster," focuses on euthenasia benemortasia. Discussion topics will include the patient's right to die and the role of the medical profession and hospital staff members in such a decision. It also touches on the topics of living wills and death with dignity.

Registration forms and additional information about the workshop can be obtained by contacting Dixie Miller in the Office of Continuing Education at Hood. The number to call is 663-3131, extension 372.

The Quiet Revolution of the Elderly

By Senator Charles McC. Mathias Jr.

Now, with the launching of the 202 Program, we are on our way toward solving the crisis of housing for the elderly, the cruelest dilemma of retirement.

Perhaps, as 202 takes hold, there will be other changes in the fortunes of the elderly in America. There is good reason to hope so. America is becoming a more venerable society. Our demographic curve shows that the average age of Americans is swinging upward. The elderly still are a minority, but they are becoming a larger one. By the year 2030, if trends continue, 17 per cent of our population will be 65 or older.

Perhaps, as the contingent of elderly Americans grows, our leaders and institutions will be compelled by sheer numbers to pay some attention to them. Perhaps, too, there will be shifts in the manifold and subtle prejudices that affect even the most compassionate of Americans. And this will be among the last triumphs in the quiet revolution of the elderly.

The ultimate victory comes when the elderly are accorded the respect and dignity that are many times, unknowingly, withheld from them. It will come when we stop treating our elderly as though

One of the pressing tasks left to the continuing American Revolution is to eliminate the often unconscious but insistent prejudices against the elderly.

Compulsory retirement is a good example of how prejudice can cramp and debilitate the elderly. The word "retire" does not mean to rest, or take it easy. It means to withdraw. To compel an able, experienced person of 65 to withdraw from an active, useful life is both discriminatory and wasteful of his or her talent. It creates an arbitrary obsolescence, by fiat, when obsolescence may well be years away.

Retirement is hard enough at any age. It means living on a fixed income, while inflation sends prices vaulting higher and higher. Retirement isolates a person. It removes him from the company of colleagues and from the contact and social life that derive from being out and around on a job.

Library Notes

Joseph Wambaugh, thirty-five, has been on the Los Angeles Police Force for twelve years. He now serves as detective sergeant in the Hollenbeck Division. He lives in Walnut, California, with his wife and two children, and after more than a decade of study at L.A. State College night school concurrent with his police work, has earned both a bachelor's and a master's degree in English literature. Joseph Wambaugh has written four books in which he tells about the police force. I will give a brief review of two of the four books that are in your local library.

The New Centurions The new centurions are three Los Angeles policemen: Serbe Duran, a tough, competent Mexican-American and ex-Marine who learns fast — except how to forget his Mexican blood; Gus Plebesly, a little man with the face of a baby, the speed of an antelope, and a panicky fear of violence; and Roy Fehler, a college man with ideas like a social worker, who discovers — too late — that you can get killed that way. This book covers five nerve-grinding years of training and experience, five years of investigating robberies and roasting whores, quelling gang wars and quieting family squabbles. It's a story of emergencies and frustrations. Where every week means new dangers and new routines, long hours of paperwork or the sudden, violent eruption of a race riot.

Whether on the night patrol or the vice squad, each man must learn, and learn fast, about the guts of the street — and the guts of the people; "We see them when nobody else sees them, when they're born and dying and fornicating and drunk. We see people when they're without shame or very much ashamed and we learn secrets that their husbands and wives don't know secrets that they don't even know, secrets that they even try to keep from themselves."

The Blue Knight — Bumper Morgan is one of the best damn cops in the business. Everyone on his beat's been saying it for twenty years. Never mind that He's turned fifty years old, or that he's broad across the back side, or that now his big belly sways and bounces when he dances to hard rock. He believes he's still the same macho his best friend, Sergeant Cruz Segovia always said he was. But in three days Bumper Morgan is retiring.

Bumper knows it's time. Time to take a better job that's been offered him, time to marry Cassie who is beautiful, loving and intelligent; "the best deal," he ever had. It's the story of the beat. A story of many kinds of love or the absence of it, and its consequences.

The Choir boys and The Onion Field are the two other books. Anyone interested in police work would do well to see what is happening on the West Coast or any part of the country for that matter.

Books have been donated by Mrs. Sandel, Mrs. Pat Wooley, and Frank Pieterzak. The library is fully air conditioned now. Come in and enjoy the comfortable new quarters. Open Four Mornings, Five afternoons, five evenings and Saturday mornings.

By Congressman Goodloe E. Byron

This regular column serves as another vehicle to keep in touch with all segments of my constituency. It is an open invitation for you to question me on issues, let me assist you with your problems, request information or comment on whatever happens to be on your mind. Letters should be sent to me, c/o U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515. While space is obviously limited for printing all replies, I shall make every effort to answer each person who contacts me.

The following questions were typical of the kind asked of me in recent weeks —
How did you vote last week on the Automotive Research and Development Bill?

I voted for passage of the bill which would authorize a program to develop advanced automobile propulsion systems to improve fuel economy and reduce pollution. The measure passed 296-86. Incidentally, I sponsored legislation last year authorizing the Energy Research and Development Administration to develop and demonstrate the commercial feasibility of electric vehicles.

How much foreign military aid has been approved for Israel and Egypt next year?

Under legislation passed by the House last week Israel will receive $785-million in security aid in fiscal year 1977 and Egypt will receive $750-million. Israel also qualified for $1-billion in military sales credits.

Does the government publish any booklets on buying used cars?

The Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado, publishes a booklet entitled "Common Sense in Buying a Safe Used Car." Checkpoints for inspection, the new odometer law and used car warranties are some of the topics discussed.

I understand that Congress is looking into legislation which would require foreign banks in this country to be regulated the same as our domestic banks. Please explain.

Foreign banks are currently regulated by individual states and are permitted to engage in activities denied to domestic banks. A congressional committee recently acted on legislation which contained provisions designed to protect individuals' deposits in foreign banks, prevent multistate activities and end nonbanking activities, including the sale of securities.

What is your position on the proposed curtailment of postal services in Hagerstown and Frederick?

A decision to eliminate weekend and holiday mail processing in Hagerstown and Frederick is ill-advised and would seem to run contrary to recent increases in postal rates and the current request by the Postal Service for general revenue funding. In short, I am concerned with the possible decrease in the quality of service provided to local patrons and believe this decision should be reviewed.

Is Congress considering another increase in the public debt limit?

The House Ways and Means Committee has reported a bill which would increase the temporary debt limit by $73-billion to $700-billion through September 30, 1977. I will oppose this legislation.

Bicentennial Parade Planned For Mountain Area

Our nation's 200th birthday will be celebrated in many ways throughout 1976 but the Cascade American Legion Post #239 and the Legion Auxiliary are planning one commensurate event for the mountain area of Blue Ridge Summit, Cascade, Fort Ritchie, Highfield, Sabillasville and Pen Mar. A Bicentennial Parade has been planned for Saturday, June 19 and will be complete with floats, marching units and all the makings for a first class parade. A first for many years in this particular area. Stu Kerr, also known as Prof. Kool of WMAR-TV, Baltimore, Md., will head the parade as Grand Marshal. Thus far, over forty units have registered to participate in the parade which is scheduled to form at the Fort Ritchie parade ground and start promptly at 2 p.m. and completing their destination at the Blue Ridge Mt. Fire Hall. According to parade officials, the parade route is as follows: departing Fort Ritchie's main gate, turning left onto Maryland Route #550, passing the American Legion, then onto the new Fort Ritchie Road to Wyndham Road near Pennsylvania 116, turning right onto Wyndham Road, the parade will continue onto Tracey's Corner, crossing Pa. Route #16 to the Blue Ridge Mountain Fire Company parking grounds where the units will disband.

putting on a demonstration, a forty piece Senior Citizen Kitchen Band, from Hanover, Pa., will be performing. Over $1,000. will be given away in prizes for competing units and the crowning of the Parade Queen. The Wayne Band, of Waynesboro, will be of local interest as they march in the parade. Complete coverage will be handled by radio and channel 25, WHAG-TV, of Hagerstown, Md. Much effort has gone forth to make this event a huge success and one to remember. Heading the Parade Committee are Freddie and Erma Pryor, assisted by Chuck and Marge Rossiter, Janice Duncan, Andy and Jean Mapes, Leah Radacke, George and Eldergarde Eaton, Sam and Catherine Catalino, Will McClain, Jim and Lita Harbaugh and Babes Decker.

The units may disband but the fun and activities don't end there as there will be booths of various types, including crafts, food and games, etc., set up for the public's enjoyment. Civil War and Revolutionary War groups will be

Folk philosophers Mark Twain and Will Rogers were Americans entertained for more than a century with sage observations about politicians and the weather.

But Willa Cather, a Rogers contemporary and Pulitzer prize-winning U.S. woman author, has provided the most perceptive quotation on the importance of weather to agricultural producers.

In her book, My Antonia, published in 1918, Ms. Cather notes that weather is "the great fact," and farmers' affairs go on underneath it, "as streams creep under the ice."

Both Twain and Rogers are often given credit, incorrectly for the more famous quotation that "Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it."

Taking cues from both remarks, the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service, headquartered at College Park, has announced an ambitious $25,000 pilot program that would do something about the weather — including farmers' needs for up-to-date local forecasts and crop insect pest management recommendations.

But it urgently needs some 150 to 200 volunteer weather observers to get the project rolling by the July 1 starting date. Interested persons may contact their local county Extension agricultural agents, or they may telephone the office of Dr. Galen P. Dively II, Extension pest management program specialist at the University of Maryland in College Park; phone: (301) 454-3845.

Elm Trees Can Be Saved

State Chemist, David Clarke, says the Maryland Department of Agriculture has now accepted for registration a DuPont company pesticide, "Lignasan BLP" for use in Dutch Elm tree disease control in the state.

Registration with Mr. Clarke's office is required before any pesticide can be legally used in Maryland and on June 1st the DuPont Company filed the necessary label information to receive clearance.

The fungicide, which recently received EPA clearance, can only be used by trained arborists. The material must be pressure injected into Dutch Elms which are not infested or are only slightly infested.

Some 2,000 trees were tested to determine the effectiveness of the new fungicide and Lignasan BLP proved very helpful in combatting the dread blight which has almost wiped out the handsome Elm trees in many states.

When the Environmental Protection Agency cleared the new pesticide it advised that it is not a cure all. It must be used in conjunction with an overall control program which includes sanitation practices, such as cutting out hopelessly infested trees, pruning and fertilizing health trees and vigilant control of the elm bark beetle which is the spreader of the blight.

Two EPA registered pesticides recommended for control of the beetles are Methoxychlor oil and Dicrotophos. However, the Maryland Department of Agriculture strongly urges property owners to consult a professional tree expert before taking steps to control Dutch Elm disease.

Brush Up On Milk Unit Pricing

In case you haven't noticed, some things have happened to the milk market in the last two years or so that should put dairy farmers and consumers in a good mood for celebrating "June is Dairy Month."

Producers, and their creditors, are happy that Class I wholesale milk prices in the Washington-Baltimore-Philadelphia federal milk market order area have tailed off less than 80 cents from the all-time record high of $11.86 per cwt. set last February.

And consumers can take consolation in the fact that retail milk prices generally have remained remarkably stable, too, for more than six months. Those who buy skim milk have a special advantage, especially here in the Baltimore-Washington, D.C., area.

Thanks to a "low-profile" price war on skim milk in the Baltimore-Washington area, retail prices of skim milk have gone down in recent months, while prices for butter and cheese have been going up. But retail prices for most other categories of fluid milk have been virtually unchanged — including whole milk, chocolate milk and two categories of lowfat milk.

Coincident with the lowered retail prices on skim milk has been a recent unloading of government surplus stocks of non-fat dry milk by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Facts on retail milk prices were verified in two Washington, D.C., area retail surveys taken in late February and again in early June by Dr. John W. Wysong, dairy economics researcher for the Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics at the University of Maryland in College Park.

Dr. Wysong's survey also brought out some unit pricing comparisons which should be of interest to serious grocery shoppers. As you might expect, the price per quart generally gets cheaper as the size of the container increases. But these economies of scale cease with one-gallon glass containers. A larger 2½ gallon plastic container offered no price saving for consumers.

Maryland Wing To Patrol Bay

Boaters on the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries will again this year have aircraft of the Maryland Wing, Civil Air Patrol, watching for them should they become disabled. The Bay Patrol, now in its eighth year, will be conducted from Lee Airport near Edgewater.

Flown on Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays from Memorial Day weekend thru Labor Day, CAP pilots fly search sweeps of the Bay from Havre de Grace to the Virginia State Line. Flight operations begin at 5 p.m. and continue until official sundown, weather permitting.

In 1975, 13 distressed boats with 43 persons on board were located by the CAP pilots, as well as one barge fire, one nun buoy off course, and one possible oil spill. The Civil Air Patrol works with the Marine Division, Maryland Natural Resources Police, and the U.S. Coast Guard, when conducting the summertime patrol.

Earlier this year over 100,000 mailers about the Bay Patrol were sent to the registered boaters in the State. These mailers explained the purpose and operations of the Bay Patrol, as well as giving vital emergency information to the boaters.

The Civil Air Patrol is an all-volunteer civilian auxiliary of the U.S. Air Force whose members are dedicated to humanitarian services.

Extension Service Recruiting Volunteer Weather Observers

Agricultural Weather Project, the pilot program is funded by the Extension Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Cooperating agencies include the University of Maryland's Computer Science Center and the National Weather Service, an agency of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in the U.S. Department of Commerce.

The pilot program would establish a system of weather stations throughout the state, according to the University of Maryland's Dr. Dively, who is project coordinator on behalf of the university's Cooperative Extension Service.

Special emphasis would be placed on Maryland's Eastern Shore, with its unique situation of weather phenomena coming off the Chesapeake Bay.

These weather stations would, in effect, be the homes of the observers who volunteer their services. All would be equipped with simple temperature and rainfall measuring devices.

Each observer would have special telephone equipment installed in his home, and he or she would be expected to transmit weather data on a regular basis to a computer terminal maintained by the agricultural service branch of the National Weather Service in Silver Spring, Md. (Montgomery County).

Volunteers for the weather observer network may be of either sex, and they must be 10 years old or older, according to Dr. Dively.

He noted that teen-age 4-H meteorology project members, as well as senior citizens and homemakers, would make good candidates. The only stipulations are that each observer already have a telephone installed in his place of residence and that he or she will be willing to purchase or otherwise provide his own thermometer and rain gauge.

These weather-measuring devices can be purchased from the University of Maryland at discount prices of $10 and $2, respectively. A limited number will be available free for hardship cases, and this quantity could be increased by businessmen's service clubs which might want to purchase the instruments for observers in their local areas, Dr. Dively suggested.

Some agribusiness firms are already equipped to record local weather data for their own use, he noted, so many of them may wish to be included in the statewide volunteer network.

UP, UP, AND AWAY — Water rescue techniques were recently tested by the Maryland State Police Aviation Division and Natural Resources Marine Police in preparation for the summer boating season. The joint training session checked various methods of hoisting injured persons into the hovering chopper. The tests showed that it was feasible to make lifts from different sized boats, ranging from small out-board powered whalers to large patrol craft. Last summer, the State Police hoisted a burned man from a boat explosion in the Bay and flew him to the Burn Center at City Hospitals in Baltimore. (State Police Photo by Corporal Tom Moore)

New Promotion Director Named For Area Malls

A new promotion director has been appointed to coordinate public and community relations activities for both Frederick Towne Mall in Frederick and Valley Mall in Hagerstown. She is Mrs. Anne Murphy of Williamsport, Maryland, according to information released by William Bulla, general manager of the two Shopco malls. Bulla explained that Mrs. Murphy has served as shopping center promotion director in Meriden, Conn., Atlanta, Ga., and comes to this area after a two-year stay in Illinois where she coordinated pre-opening publicity for St. Clair Square, described as the "largest enclosed shopping center in Southern Illinois." She also developed the new center as the commercial and cultural hub of a sprawling, multi-county area which included St. Louis, Mo. Mrs. Murphy was also hostess and mistress of ceremonies for a weekly radio show broadcast

"live" from the Illinois mall. Bulla said, "We feel that Mrs. Murphy's experience in various parts of the country will be invaluable in her new job here. Her goal of strengthening our malls' relationships with their surrounding communities will certainly receive top management support."

Mrs. Murphy, a native of Savannah, Ga., comments, "My feeling is that a regional shopping complex does not exist simply to exchange goods and services for money received. I feel we should give a community much more than that and should be an active, caring part of the region we serve."

Prior to her entry into the shopping center promotion field, Mrs. Murphy worked in radio and television and produced her own cooking and news television show in Savannah. She has also held public relations and writing posts in the medical/scientific field and in state government and has done freelance writing and fashion coordination.

Mrs. Murphy is married to fellow writer Cavanaugh Murphy, originally of Atlanta. The Murphys have four children.

Ladies from the local TOPS Club attended the state of Maryland Recognition Day held at Poly-Western High School in Baltimore. Attending were (front row)

Don't Waste Water

Water is a precious commodity, a necessity to your very existence and to your cleanliness and comfort. So, use it, but don't waste it! So says Ray E. Anderson, Jr., Head of Public Water Supply Section, Department of Health and Mental Hygiene.

Consider for a moment — in how many of one's daily activities...at home, at work, or at play...do you use water. Though the demand is unending, a supply of clear, fresh and sparkling water is always ready to satisfy a person's needs.

"Do you know that water, available at a twist of the wrist, costs you less than anything else you buy — by weight, by volume, or by any other standard you choose?" questions Mr. Anderson. "Even so, water is too expensive to throw away.

"Every drop lost through leaks or carelessness appears on a bill, wasting not only water, the water we all need, but part of hard-earned paychecks." He continues, "remember, maintain home plumbing system and don't squander water. Bills will reflect wastefulness! Don't be a water bug by wasting water!"

"The most common cause of water waste is the leaky faucet. How many times have you seen a dripping faucet at work and ignored it?" Mr. Anderson concluded, "Remember, turn the neglected faucet completely off because water costs money. There could come a time when there is no more water!"

Open House

For C&P Telephone, and the entire telephone industry, 1976 is a special and very important year. In addition to the observance of the country's Bicentennial there is a very special birthday celebration — 100 years of the Telephone.

It was March 10, 1876, when in Boston, Massachusetts, Alexander Graham Bell spoke those now famous words, "Mr. Watson, come here, I want you." These were the first intelligible words transmitted over a piece of wire.

Locally C&P, in cooperation with the Bell and History committee, is observing both occasions with a gala "Open House" at 33

East Patrick Street, Saturday, June 26, from 9:30 to 6:00 and Sunday, June 27, from 12:30 to 6:00.

C&P and its employees cordially invite its customers and the public for a "behind the scenes" look at the tremendous progress of these 100 years.

There will be guided tours of the Switching Center for explanation and viewing of operators processing calls, automatic message accounting equipment, local and toll call switching equipment, main cable distribution frames, repair service and many others. In addition many exhibits and displays will depict the advancement of the telephone.

Certain Employees Eligible For Special Unemployment Assistance

Certain school employees in the private, parochial and the public education systems, may be eligible again this year for Special Unemployment Assistance (SUA) benefits if they meet the eligibility requirements prescribed by federal and state laws, according to an announcement by the Employment Security Administration of the State Department of Human Resources. The Special Unemployment Assistance (SUA) benefits program was first implemented in December of 1974 and is designed to provide benefits for qualified individuals not covered by the regular State unemployment insurance program, such as farm workers, domestic workers and non-covered state and local government workers.

Mr. James N. Phillips, Executive Director of the Employment Security Administration, said that individuals in an instructional, research or principal administrative capacity who are under contract (written or oral, specific or implied) to return to a position in the next school term or academic year, are not eligible for benefits. Categories which may be eligible include aides, substitute teachers, cafeteria and custodial workers, and other non-professional employees.

To be eligible for benefits under the SUA program, claimants must be active in the labor market. They must demonstrate their attachment to the labor market by making personal contacts seeking work for each week of unemployment. Individuals may, in fact, be referred to suitable employment which they will be expected to accept or suffer an appropriate disqualification.

Local school systems are cooperating with local unemployment insurance offices by providing facilities to expedite processing of initial claims for benefits. Locations and times of these sessions will be announced by each school system.

Losing Weight? A Group Can Help

Fighting obesity can be a frustrating experience for both patient and physician. Every conceivable approach has been tried at one time or another, but no single technique works for all patients, or even a majority.

Whether a weight-reducing program depends chiefly on diet, exercise, medication, or patient motivation, success may depend on taking a pragmatic approach — a willingness to tailor the program to the needs and abilities of the individual patient and to make use of every available modality as it is needed.

One modality that has perhaps been neglected unduly by physicians is the weight-reducing self-help group. Some physicians may look askance at such groups because they are run by laymen.

But in a recently published medical study, the average result obtained by women in 22 chapters of TOPS (an acronym for Take Off Pounds Sensibly), one such self-help organization, was "apparently superior to that of routine medical management of obesity."

Albert J. Stunkard, M.D., formerly chairman of the psychiatry department at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine and currently with the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences at Stanford, California, found that although results varied from chapter to chapter of the nonprofit organization, the single most effective chapter was more successful in terms of weight loss than any of the medical programs described in 14 reports from the literature.

The nature of the weekly meetings varies from chapter to chapter. But a weighing of each member and the announcement of weight changes are essential; a number of members have said that the weighing is the most important factor in their effort to lose weight.

Weight changes are announced in terms of pounds lost or gained during the week, and never as a total weight. This is aimed at preventing discouragement among the heavier members and at focusing attention on immediate past performance. Announcements of weight loss are applauded and may be rewarded with prizes.

Between meetings, members stay in close communication to offer each other support in their efforts to lose weight.

The TOPS philosophy emphasizes self-discipline as well as competition between individuals. The competition takes the form of contests lasting for a week, a month, or several months. Winners are crowned "Queen" with a toy crown or given other prizes or tokens of recognition.

When members reach their weight goals, they receive diplomas in a graduation ceremony and become members of KOPS (Keep Off Pounds Sensibly). However, they remain in their original groups and apparently need continued group support to maintain their loss.

TOPS meets regularly every Tuesday evening at 7:30 p.m. at Seton Center in Emmitsburg. All are welcome to attend.

Rural America In Jeopardy

Thousands of small towns and rural areas across the country may lose interstate truck services if the federal government ceases to regulate the nation's trucking industry, Lee R. Sollenbarger, chairman of the American Trucking Associations (ATA) warned.

A nationwide survey of more than 900 trucking firms, Sollenbarger said, indicates vital small town freight service now required by the Interstate Commerce Commission would be dropped as unprofitable or marginal if that service is no longer mandated.

"I also expect shipping costs in these areas to skyrocket under deregulation," he said. "The total effect annually would be to add millions of dollars to the costs of goods and services in small towns."

The ICC currently requires, as part of its licensing procedures, that interstate trucking firms maintain freight service to small or isolated communities on their routes. This is important to areas where rail or water transportation has been discontinued or is unavailable. "Better than three out of five carriers, if deregulated, would drop small town truck service as unprofitable, according to our poll," Sollenbarger said.

The Ford administration proposed to Congress last fall a general phasing-out of ICC control over the $23 billion-a-year interstate trucking industry and in May unveiled another deregulation plan. Legislation incorporating the proposals has been introduced in Congress.

But truck deregulation has drawn considerable fire from smaller towns which fear they would lose necessary truck freight service. Last December the National League of Cities adopted a resolution opposing the deregulation plan "since it poses a threat to continuance of service to small communities."

According to Sollenbarger, there is good reason for small towns to be concerned because the ATA poll indicates every state except Hawaii would lose service to some communities.

"Hardest hit," he said, "would be towns of 5,000 or less." Four-fifths of the firms responding to the poll also say they believe broadscale deregulation of the trucking industry would very likely result in temporary rate wars, the failure or bankruptcy of many small truck firms and eventual decrease in transportation services, especially to small communities.

Just under half of those polled predict acquisition of small truck firms by large ones would very likely happen as a result of deregulation, and three-quarters foresee an eventual increase in shipping costs to consumers.

More than a third of the nation's consumers live in population centers of 5,000 or less.

"Our concern," Sollenbarger said, "is about deliveries to rural crossroads, country gas stations, or small factories in rural communities. It's not unusual for trucking firms to travel twenty or thirty miles to make a single small delivery, and it's obvious that kind of service would be quickly eliminated if firms are not required by regulation to offer it."

Repeating the ATA's opposition to deregulation plans, Sollenbarger said that more than half the nation's freight now moves by truck and that loss of interstate service to small towns is only one of the severe national economic dislocations deregulation would cause.

Nutsege Troublesome In Maryland

Some people claim to like dandelions, and there may even be a few nature enthusiasts who would eat nutsege tubers in a survival situation.

But to farmers throughout Maryland and the Mid-Atlantic area, nutsege is a pesky perennial weed which spreads rapidly through croplands by means of nutlets produced on rhizomes (underground root-like stems). It is troublesome both to commercial vegetable growers and corn producers alike.

The glossy, green-leaved plant tends to be most abundant in swales, or low spots. But severe infestations can affect whole fields, notes Dr. James V. Parochetti, Extension weed control specialist at the University of Maryland in College Park.

And nutsege infestations appear to be worse than normal in Maryland cornfields this year, Dr. Parochetti reported, since much of the early-planted corn in April went as long as three weeks without rain. This meant that pre-emergent herbicides applied at planting time were even less effective than usual in suppressing perennial weeds like nutsege — let alone the annual weeds on which they do the best job.

The Maryland agronomist recommends that farmers who notice nutsege infestations in their cornfields begin some control measures promptly — but not much later than when the weed reaches 3-4 inches in height. Otherwise, the affected areas are bound to be much larger next year.

Besides, most of the effective chemicals for nutsege control are those which can be used with corn — not in vegetable cropping situations.

The recommended method for post-emergence treatment of nutsege is to spray over the top of the corn with a sprayer rig or aerial application, Dr. Parochetti said.

Use atrazine (AATrex) and emulsifiable oil at the rate of 2½ pounds of the 80W (wetttable powder) or 2 quarts of the 4L AATrex (liquid) formulation and one gallon of emulsifiable oil per 20-30 gallons of water. A registered surfactant can be substituted for emulsifiable oil with fairly comparable results.

In addition, Dr. Parochetti reminds growers that this recommended post-emergence treatment is only a control measure — not an eradication program. If a treated field is planted to corn again next year, don't forget to follow up this year's post-emergent blow with a pre-emergent whammy at planting time in 1977.

The Maryland specialist further commented that the post-emergence treatment recommended above is effective for Canada thistle, quackgrass and yellow nutsege. But it does not work against purple nutsege.

Fortunately, most of the nutsege in Maryland is of the yellow species, Dr. Parochetti reported. But he added that the standard pre-emergence chemical treatment recommended at corn-planting time is effective against both members of the nutsege genus, Cyperus.

Youth Advisory Council Seeking Members

The Governor's Youth Advisory Council is seeking interested youth to serve as members. The Council is composed of 115 youth, between the ages of 13 and 22, who serve on the Council for a year. One hundred of these delegates to the Council are selected through a random process for equal representation in terms of age, sex, race and geographical location. The remaining 15 delegates are gubernatorial appointees.

The Governor's Youth Advisory Council was created in 1971 by Executive Order of the Governor to survey and articulate the concerns of Maryland's youth regarding State programs, policies and legislation that directly affect the lives of youth.

Since its inception, the council has demonstrated that youth of the State of Maryland are interested in and highly capable of participating in the affairs of the government. The council is involved in all spheres of youth affairs, promoting better governmental response to youth needs and speaking out on the issues and legislation related to youth.

The council is organized for statewide representation. Young people between the ages 13 and 22 and interested in becoming a delegate to the council, may request an application from the Council's office, 1100 North Eutaw Street, Room 603, Baltimore, Maryland 21201, (383-3780). Applicants must be received by June 30, 1976 for consideration. All interested youth are invited to apply.

After discussing the 1976 Chronicle All-Stars' idea with Bob Saylor, I'm convinced that a selection process independent of the league's normal all-star selection procedure could possibly cause hard feelings in the event that a player was picked for one team and not the other. Since the same thing could happen in the Slo-Pitch selections, we'll just drop the concept. Perhaps we could select a "Chronicle Player of the Year" in both leagues at the end of the season.

Starting to feel like I'm putting the Sports Illustrated curse on the Giants and Yankees. When I talked about the Giants, the Yankees took over first place, and when I gave the Yankees their due, the Giants retook first place. By the time this reaches print anybody could be on top.

Plaudits to the plate umpire at this Senior League game. A batter stepped out of the box after calling (or not calling) time out and the umpire either did or did not hear him and called the pitch a strike (which it was). Needless to say both the batter and his coach were upset over this seeming injustice and both complained vociferously. The fact is that a batter is not entitled to a time out because he steps out of the box or because he requests

Mountain Music At Catoctin

Sunday, June 20, the Folk Center at Round Meadow in Catoctin Mountain Park will be alive with the sound of mountain music. The Country Patriots, a traditional mountain music group from Waynesboro, Pennsylvania, will be performing three times during the afternoon. Complete with washboard percussion, mandolin, banjo, etc., the band will bring back the sounds of yesteryear on the mountain.

For dulcimer buffs, a group from Diamond Dulcimers in Glenmont, Maryland, will be interpreting the history and exhibiting various parts of the instruments and their construction, and, of course, singing and playing dulcimers throughout the afternoon.

In addition to the musical treats, the Folk Craft Center will be offering continuous demonstrations of mountain crafts between 12 noon and 5 p.m. The Country Store offers locally handmade craft items and jams, jellies, apple butter, relish, fresh bread and root beer for sale. Also open Sunday afternoon will be the Environmental Museum at Round Meadow. Through games, quizzes, touch and smell exhibits, and other displays, including a live bee hive, it tells the natural and cultural history of Catoctin Mountain.

For a day of old-time musical entertainment and enjoyment, visit the Craft Center between 12 noon and 5 p.m. Sunday, June 20. Anyone with a traditional musical instrument is welcome to bring it along too for some impromptu music-making. All activities are free of charge. Catoctin Mountain Park is located 3 miles west of Thurmont, Maryland, on Route 77. Catoctin Mountain Park is a unit of the National Park Service, U.S. Department of the Interior.

Our Heritage

In this bicentennial year many of us are looking backward to those early years of our republic and the part our ancestors played in its construction. There are some who do not know what part their ancestors played and wish to find out. Emmitsburg residents are in the unique position of having much material of a genealogical nature available to them.

Throughout the area such sources are the Md. Historical Society, Library of Congress, DAR Library, National Archives, and many area libraries, as well as county Court Houses, Church records and cemeteries. Books are also available for the beginner genealogist to start him on his way. There are other sources, as you will find once your "digging" begins.

One of the important sources of information is the census records. Most state censuses are on microfilm, although some have been put in book form. This places your ancestor in a certain place during a certain year.

For several weeks, the census of the Emmitsburg region will be printed in the Chronicle starting with the 1880 census and going back to the 1790 census. Hopefully, many of you will recognize your ancestors and it will incite your interest enough to start you on your way as an amateur genealogist. Who knows who you may find hidden in history. Maybe a hero, then again, maybe a skeleton, but whatever it is a part of your own family history.

This census has been copied from microfilm at the Burr Artz Library, Frederick, Maryland. Where occupation of head of household is omitted, it is because the census taker failed to enter it. Due to difficulty in reading some of the names, there may be some errors, but a real attempt has been made for accuracy.

School of Nursing Sponsors Symposium

Four professional schools of the University of Maryland at Baltimore — law, nursing, medicine, and social work and community planning — and the Hagerstown Junior College are sponsoring a symposium on the merging professional responsibilities.

"The Person with a Terminal Illness and the Family," Thursday, June 24 at the Sheraton Motor Inn, 1910 Dual Highway, Hagerstown.

The symposium, which is designed for clergymen, lawyers, nurses, physicians and social workers, emphasizes the interprofessional approach to care of the person with a terminal illness and his family. It provides an opportunity for members of the health and human services professions to discuss their respective responsibilities.

The format includes panel presentations and interprofessional discussion groups. Issues to be addressed include: how is the decision made to tell a person that he is dying?; how is the person informed?; how is the family advised and counseled in order to prepare for death?; how is the decision made to institute heroic life support measures?; when does death occur?; how is the family helped when death occurs?

Panelists include: Judith Fine, assistant director of social work, University of Maryland Hospital; John Regan, professor, University of Maryland School of Law; Lisa Robinson, professor, University of Maryland School of Nursing; Clyde R. Shallenberger, director of chaplaincy services, Johns Hopkins Hospital; and Dr. Peter Wiernik, associate professor, University of Maryland School of Medicine and head of medical oncology.

Baltimore Cancer Research Center.

Dr. John Levay, professor of psychology at Catonsville Community College, will be the luncheon speaker. Discussions and conclusions will be moderated by Charles Cacace, University of Maryland School of Social Work and Community Planning.

Koonz, School of Nursing. The symposium is being given in cooperation with the Washington County Hospital Association, the Washington County Medical Society, Inc., and the Washington County Ministerial Association.

Physicians attending the program will receive seven hours of continuing education credit in Category I for the Physicians Recognition Award of the American Medical Association. Nurses participating in the symposium will be awarded 0.7 continuing education units by the University of Maryland School of Nursing.

Birthday Cake For America's Birthplace

The largest birthday cake ever recorded is to be the centerpiece of Philadelphia's Bicentennial celebration during the weekend of July 3rd and 4th.

A gift to America's birthplace from Kitchens of Sara Lee, the cake will rise five stories to a giant American eagle from a base 42 feet wide. If arranged in a rectangle, its surface would cover a regulation basketball court. Its volume, including a specially designed support system, is equivalent to about one million Sara Lee chocolate cakes.

Key feature of the massive birthday cake, is its eight octagonal tiers which will be decorated with highlights of American history. Starting with the Declaration of Independence and ending with the Moon Walk, these 120 scenes are to be depicted in icings and confections handmade by the pastry chefs of Sara Lee.

The cake will be displayed in Philadelphia's Memorial Hall, which was built for the nation's 100th birthday in 1876.

Fire Drill At Mt. St. Mary's College

By Mary Johnson

On June 9, a fire drill was held at Mt. St. Mary's College. The purpose of this pre-planned attack was to let the Emmitsburg Fire Co. know how many hydrants they can pump water from; how much water can be pumped from each of the Mount's reservoirs; and how many fire lines the companies can supply from their water system. The firemen also get on the scene training to fight fires from ladders. Working in conjunction with several neighboring Fire Companies in case of a major fire, can be very beneficial.

Seven Companies responded to the drill; Emmitsburg Co. #6, arrival time 3 min.; Thurmont Co. #10, arrival time 16 min.; Rocky Ridge Co. #13, arrival time 17 min.; Fairfield

#2, arrival time 29 min.; Gettysburg #1, arrival time 32 min.; Greenmount #23, arrival time, 19 min.; and Taneytown #5, arrival time 25 min. Arrival time from all seven companies was excellent.

First alarms were Emmitsburg, Thurmont, and Rocky Ridge. Second Alarms were Gettysburg, Fairfield, Greenmount, and Taneytown.

From the time the first alarm sounded, water was flowing in 6 minutes. At no time did any hydrants rescual pressure drop below 40 psi, which is excellent. Thirty-eight min. after the first alarm sounded all 10 hose lines were in operation, delivering 2280 gallons of water per minute to the building used in the fire drill.

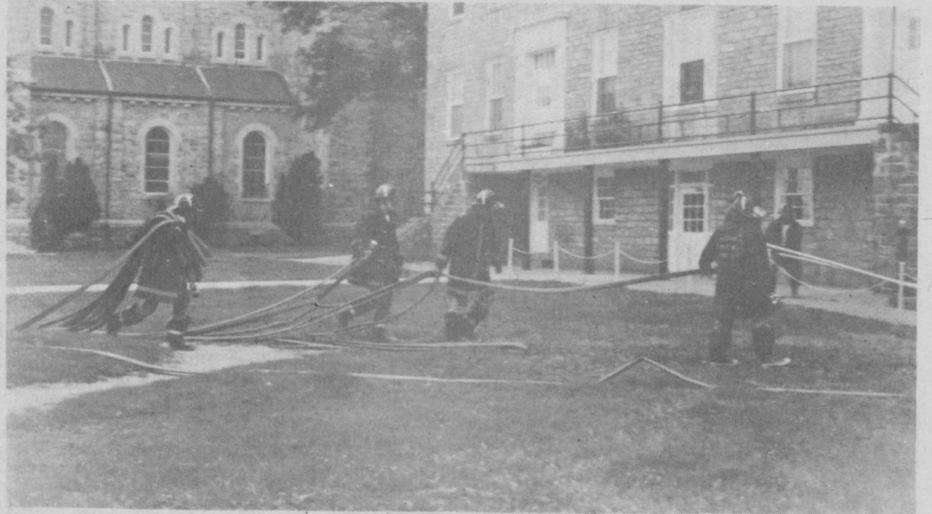

There were 4 hydrants used during the drill; six 1 1/2" attack lines, two 2 1/2" attack lines, one deck gun, one ladder pipe, five 2 1/2" supply lines, and one 3" supply line. Equipment used was; four pieces from Emmitsburg; two from Thurmont; Two from Rocky Ridge; One from Taneytown; One from Fairfield; One from Greenmount; and two from Gettysburg.

Minutes after the alarm sounded, Fire companies were on the scene; each company protecting the area of the building assigned to them by Emmitsburg Fire Chief, E. Eugene Myers, under the direction to first Assistant Chief, Thomas White and Lt. Carl Angleberger.

Be it a fire drill, accident or fire, our firemen, ambulance crew and rescue squads are always there giving the best protection possible.
