

TANEYTOWN RECORD.

Vol. 1, No. 13.

TANEYTOWN, MARYLAND, SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1894.

$1.00 Per Year.

Explanatory.

In our editorial on "Town Nuisances" the foreman in correcting the proof has made a sentence read "What he came here to see, and what his investigation will amount to is not our purpose so disclose." The words "so disclose" should be, "to discuss," and they were so written plainly on the margin of the proof. How such an idiotic error could have been made we cannot comprehend, and there is no good excuse for it. The truth of the whole matter is, I did not know of the coming of Dr. Steuart, did not send for him, and did not advise him after he came here, nor do I know what his further intentions are in the slightest degree. Such an error as this is enough to make one resign his position as Editor—or suicide.—Ed.

LOCALS AND PERSONALS.

Mr. Walter Lefevre and Miss Mabel Getty of Littlestown, were in town Sunday evening.

The last chance for registration—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Oct. 1 to 4th.

Miss Carrie E. Baumgardner who has been visiting friends at Fairfield, Pa., for the past week, intends returning home on the 29th.

Mrs. David Biehl, of Washington, D. C., and Misses Mary and Ella Biehl, of Middleburg, were the guests of John Renner's family on Thursday.

The manure yards in connection with the Hotel Stables on Baltimore St. are being filled with manure, which removes for good, we presume, an eyesore and a nuisance.

Miss Grayson Valentine, of Gettysburg, Pa., and Miss Anna Galt are visiting Miss Anna Motter. Miss Bertie Yeakel a recent visitor returned to Baltimore last week.

Mr. Wm. W. Koons has purchased from E. E. Reindollar that desirable dwelling on Middle St., now occupied by Mrs. C. A. Kohler. The price paid was $1200.

The cold weather this week suggests the advisability of looking up the condition of stoves and heavy clothing, and laying in the seasons supply of coal and wood.

There have been rumors that another steam flouring mill would be built here in the near future, but the report is not authentic enough to give details.

Mr. F. H. Elliot, who has been in the mercantile business in this place for a long time, will remove to York Springs, Pa., next spring, where he will engage in merchandising.

The Western Maryland Railroad declines to run any excursions to Baltimore to the base ball games between the Baltimore and New York clubs. If you want to see the games you must pay regular fare.

Mr. George W. Wilt, of Kentucky, lately a visitor here, has sent us $1.00 for his subscription to the RECORD, which he says he forgot to leave in the "bustle and pleasure of meeting and greeting old friends." He reports that both himself and daughter arrived safely and found all well.

Mr. Jos. Stevenson, who has many friends in this place, paid us a short visit on Wednesday. He has for a number of years been living in Pullman, Illinois, but left about the beginning of the year, and is well posted on the operations of the Pullman Company and the differences between it and its employees.

Complaints have been made that some of our subscribers have not been receiving their Tribune regularly. We have a letter dated Sept. 26th from the Tribune office which says "All your orders have been examined, and find that every name is correctly entered on our mailing list. If they are not received, the trouble is in the mail."

A very familiar stranger with a trouble hand, calling himself Frank Stewart from York, Pa., secured work with Mr. McC. Davidson on Monday last and skipped for parts unknown on Thursday night, after having secured a few credit purchases from several of our merchants. Such characters as this have a tendency to shake our faith in humanity—particularly the kind which tramps.

Mr. A. H. Zolliekofer has left at our office a very handsome pamphlet containing the premium list, and description of the attractions of the coming Hagerstown fair. This year the event promises to outstrip even the best of the previous ones. Mr. Zolliekofer states that he will be pleased to receive for exhibition there from this neighborhood, anything in the nature of farm produce which is of a kind worthy of such an exhibition, and will forward the articles if brought to him. Last year he secured two first and one second prizes for specimens of wheat sent in by farmers of this neighborhood. He is making an effort to secure railroad connections for one day of the fair and will announce the result in our issue of next week. Remember the date—October 9-10-11-12th.

NOTES HERE AND THERE.

Mr. John D. Engel of near Middleburg raised over 1,000 bushels of potatoes of various varieties this season.

The Blue Mountain House will close next Monday, having entertained fifteen thousand guests during the season.

The Carroll county C. E. convention meets in Union Bridge on Oct. 5th and 7th. The session promises to be an interesting one.

The Liberty Banner is booming the street light question. This is progressive, and the cost is small. It is surprising that a town of the age and size of Liberty, should not have had them years ago.

Mr. J. Oscar Beard, a grocer of Hagerstown, has received a bale of coffee from Muhlenburg, Africa. It was grown on a plantation there by the converts of Dr. D. A. Day, a Lutheran Missionary.

The engine and boiler of the Westminster electric light plant has been satisfactorily tested, and the wiring of the town is rapidly progressing. The company expects to have things in complete working order by the middle of October.

The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company has put in a long distance telephone at the Hotel Albion, Westminster, and has made a pay station of the same, which is a great convenience to the guests and the travelling public in general.

The movement of new corn from Maryland and nearly all points which finds a market in Baltimore, is attracting attention at the corn and flour exchange. It is generally expected that the crop will move earlier this year than for some time past.

The trunk of T. Harry Davis of York, Pa., was robbed at Smithburg station, W. M. R. of two gold watches, a diamond pin, $80 in money and a quantity of clothing. He will sue the railroad company for $500, the amount of the loss, claiming that his baggage should have been locked up.

Mr. Rufus Starner, a farmer near Pleasant Valley, was preparing ground for seeding, when his horse took fright and ran away. Mr. Starner became entangled in the lines and was dragged quite a distance. He was about the head and face and severely injured.

The races and other attractions with which the Carroll county Trotting, driving and pleasure associations will open their new grounds, will take place on Wednesday October 3rd. The event had been advertised in the RECORD to take place on Sept. 19th, but was postponed to the later date on account of rain.

Howard Manahan, aged thirteen, of Emmitsburg, was accidentally shot and instantly killed by his brother on Thursday last. The boy had loaded a gun but was afraid to fire it off. So they tied a string to the trigger intending to discharge it from a distance, but by some means the string was pulled before Howard got out of the way, with the result as stated.

Rev. George William Kiracofe, of Hagerstown, a minister of the United Brethren Church, has been nominated for Congress by the populists in the sixth district in place of Horace Resley, declined. The nomination was made by the executive committee of the populist party. Mr. Kiracofe has sent his letter of acceptance to Mr. William H. Lewis, chairman of the Rockville convention. The populists were dissatisfied with the nomination of Mr. Kiracofe met in Hagerstown on Tuesday and unanimously nominated Adam S. Garis. A resolution was passed declaring against introducing prohibition doctrines in the party and fusion with other political parties.

Our Gutter Crossings.

We have heard considerable complaint in reference to the gutter crossings in our town. The pavements are excellent—we do not know of a small town in which they are as good—but the narrow board crossings are a nuisance as well as dangerous, and not in comparison to the sidewalks and streets.

There are crossings in town, very much used, which are not even as wide as the board ones, at one place a narrow iron plate is used and at another a single narrow stone. Persons at night have hereof a receipt, while many others have made narrow escapes, and if these places are not properly remedied there may some time be a just suit for damages for injuries received brought against the corporation authorities. All such crossings should be at least four feet wide, and of iron or stone, as the board ones are continually tilting up and becoming loose.

Why such an important improvement has not been made long ago, we do not know, as good pavements are not complete without good gutter plates in connection with good stone street crossings, and as our officials have amply shown that they are in favor of improvement in this line, we are led to believe that the point has simply been overlooked. Now is the time to do the work, before the ground becomes frozen and before the season of mud begins. Iron plates from 4 to 5 feet wide would be the proper thing for the main streets, and the cost is not great.

Terra Cotta Chimneys.

It would be well for persons who build dwellings, or other houses which require chimneys, to know that all, or nearly all, Insurance Companies on the stock plan, refuse to insure buildings, which contain fire clay, tile, or terra cotta chimneys. The leading Mutual Companies also require a considerable higher rate than for brick chimneys. The amount saved in the first place by using these chimneys is not great, and in a few years extra insurance will soon amount to more than it would have cost to put in brick ones. Then too, the owner of the property is compelled to take such insurance as he can get, which may probably not be the kind he wants. Experience has shown that brick chimneys are the safest and best, and cheapest in the end.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Convention at Union Bridge, Oct. 5-7.

The Carroll county C. E. Union will hold their 7th. semi annual convention at Union Bridge, on Friday night, all day Saturday and Sunday afternoon and night, Oct. 5-7.

Special effort has been made to present the live subjects of the day that should be of interest to every Christian Endeavorer and to all good citizens, and the very best orators will be here to convey the message. Here is a list of the subjects and speakers.

Friday night, Rev. Wm. M. Paden, Philadelphia, Pa. "A 19th. century Pentecost."

Saturday morning, Rev. E. T. Root, Baltimore, Md. "Christian Citizenship."

Sunday afternoon, Rev. R. L. Patterson, Union Bridge, Md., address to children, "Show your colors boys." S. W. Coe, Finksburg, Md. "Christian Endeavor against the saloon."

Sunday night, Rev. T. H. Lewis, D. D., Westminster, Md. "Personal Consecration."

Also other speakers and other subjects—committee conferences, and interesting exercises. All are invited.

Henning Carries the County.

In the contest in the county at the Democratic primaries on Saturday, and also at the Convention on Monday, what is known as the Cleveland Democracy defeated the Gorman party quite effectually. The point at issue was whether the county should send delegates to the Congressional Convention of the second district favorable to Mr. David N. Henning, or J. F. C. Talbot the present incumbent.

The Convention met in Odd Fellows Hall, on Monday, and Henry Galt of Taneytown, was selected for temporary chairman with Guy Steele secretary. The usual committees were appointed, which reported after a short retirement. The interested members of the county should see the committee on resolutions, which turned out to be as was expected a stinging rebuke to Gormanism, and the methods pursued by him and his followers generally.

Delegates were elected to represent the county who will use all honorable means to secure the congressional nomination for Mr. Henning, as follows—J. Herbert Shriver, S. P. Snell, Benj. F. Crouse, Peter Buchman and Augustus Brown.

The result was a surprise to those at whose beck and call the party in the county has heretofore seen fit to follow, as well as to many whose interest in county politics is merely nominal.

A Correction.

The Holy Name Rectory, Washington, D. C., Sept. 26, '94.

Editor RECORD:

Dear Sir:—

THE CARROLL RECORD, Sept. 22nd. inst., states that "The interior of St. Joseph's Church of this place sadly needs renovation, nothing in the way of improvement having been done to it since its erection in 1876." You have been misled, as the statement is inaccurate. I was appointed pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Taneytown, January 1st, 1879, and in the fall of 1880 (Sept.-Oct.) the church was frescoed and the altars painted by Messrs. George Slate and Adam Krise of Emmitsburg. In August, 1883, the church was repainted inside and out side, and the altars were marbled by Bernard Kelly, of Emmitsburg. A reference to the day-book kept at St. Joseph's will verify this statement.

Please publish this note in next issue and oblige,

Yours truly,

JOHN T. DELANEY.

(The article referred to was secured from good authority, and the statement is correct.—Ed.)

The Ground Hog is Dead.

Mr. Uriah Royer, one of our famous huntsmen, will be responsible if we do not have any more weather in this section, because on Tuesday last he shot the ground hog. While hunting for squirrels Mr. Royer hewed an animal on the ground coming towards him which he first thought to be a large fox squirrel, but after shooting it was surprised to find that it was a ground hog. The animal is very rare in these parts, in fact this is the first which has been captured in many years. It was evidently a young one and was plump and fat, and weighed five pounds. Their flesh is said to be excellent and the pelt of some value.

Death of William J. Cox.

Mr. Wm. J. Cox, who for twenty-five years had been principal of Male Grammar School No. 1 of Baltimore, died on Monday at the home of his sister Miss M. E. Cox near Union Bridge. Mr. Cox had resigned his position several years ago on account of his health and since that time has been living with his sister. He leaves one sister Miss Mary Elizabeth Cox, and one brother James L. Cox who live in Frederick county near Union Bridge. The late John L. Cox and Dr. E. G. Cox, of Balto., were his brothers. The interment was in Friends cemetery at Union Bridge on Thursday. He was sixty years of age and unmarried.

Women's Missionary Society.

The twelfth annual convention of the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Maryland Synod of the Lutheran church has been in session in Baltimore during the week. The society has supported a special mission in India for a number of years which will be continued. A home mission at Ann Arbor, Mich., has also been recently added for assistance. The secretary reported 72 societies under the jurisdiction of the organization, with a membership of 2900, which is an increase of 300 members for the year. The contributions for the year amounts to $3800, besides which a number of boxes of clothing and supplies have been sent to pastors in India, Africa, and this country.

Hurrah for Baltimore.

The Baltimore Sun, the representative non-sensational paper of Maryland, whose utterances both editorially and otherwise usually border on the dry and practical, became rather intemperate in its issue of Wednesday, when it made known the fact that the Baltimore Base Ball club had won the pennant. The sporting editor evidently owned the plant for the day, as the following editorial will confirm:

"We have arrived. We are there. The pennant is ours. The New York heathen may rage and their journalistic coaches imagine as many rain things as they please, but they cannot alter the solid, adamant fact that they are beaten, and that the Metropolitan 'Giants,' as they fondly term themselves, have been the dust before the victorious Baltimore. It is a modern instance of David and Goliath, and a very bad case of Goliath, as far as the New Yorks and their newspaper friends are concerned. But the Baltimoreans can afford to pass by with contempt the efforts of the supporters of the New York club to detract from the glory of our victory. Every man must fight with the best weapon he has. The Baltimoreans won the pennant with bat and brain, with skill and courage. The modern baseball Goliaths of New York tried to win it with their tongues. They did well as bluffers, but base-ball is not a game that can be won by the tongue, no matter how skillful it may be in boasting and misrepresentation. The New York team, however, will have a chance to obtain consolation in the contest for the Temple cup. Let them play ball and not brag so much when they strive for that prize, otherwise they may have to find consolation in a cup that will not cheer, but inspire, as for our Baltimoreans, if they continue to maintain the fine self-control they have exhibited all through the season and especially during the last few weeks, and the splendid form which they have attained, it need have no fear of the result of the struggle for the Temple cup. Let everybody shout for the Baltimoreans, but let us be careful not to kill them with kindness. They are as fine a team of players as the greatest base-ball enthusiast could desire to see upon the diamond, and they deserve the plaudits of their admiring fellow-citizens. They will bring to Baltimore the pennant of victory. Long may it wave o'er the home of the free and the land of the brave!"

GARBER.—On the 18th., near Union Bridge, John Garber aged 68 years.

Don't throw away your old over-shoes. Sink them in some waste of waters or bury them in some unfrequented place. Old rubbers boiled over make rubbers which are pleasing to the eye and will still hold water through at the toe in a week. Your duty to your fellow men demands that you prevent other people from wearing your cast off apparel.

Parson Whangdoodle Baxter—"Sistah Snowflake, yer shouldn't go on dat way about de deff ob yore late husband. Rememb' dat he'll be better off he is now he is dead."

"Dat's meant as a disreproach for me. Is dat de way you consoles de widders and orphans? Git out nighgah, 'fore I selds you!" retorted the dusky widow.

Be not too anxious to give away yourself, to wear your heart upon your sleeve. It is not only unwise, it is wrong to make your soul common property, for you bring the delicate things of the heart to contempt by exposing them to those who cannot understand them. If you throw pearls before swine, they will turn again and rend you.

Two well known clergymen lately missed their train, upon which one of them took out his watch, and finding it to blame for the mishap, said he would no longer have any faith in it. "But," said the other, "isn't it a question, not of faith, but of good works?"

"Wurra! Wurra!" groaned Larry. "Bad luck to the 'lax' was bor'n in! Here's thim banks all bustin' up an' me not got a cint in anny wan av'em."

He also states that he will go back as soon as arrangements can be made to start work again. This was one of the largest harness manufacturing establishments in the country, and employed about 500 hands. This is the second time the company has been burned out.

On last Saturday night some one who doubtless is possessed with an evil spirit, entered Mr. Slangenbaum's melon patch and not being satisfied with as many as he could eat, went to work and cut to pieces quite a number of green melons. That is nice conduct, is it not, for any person in a civilized community? We are surprised, and hope the parties will soon be caught and dealt with according to the strictness of the law.

On last week we had the pleasure of visiting the coal mining regions of Maryland, in the interest of the A. O. K. of the M. C. We are happy to say that the order was found to be in a most flourishing condition in that community. Three new castles will be instituted in the near future, thus making in all 10 castles in the state. Let the good work go on, and try to swell the number to one hundred before our select body meets again in regular session next September at Harney. Who will be the first to send us an application for a charter. Any one desiring information concerning the order and its merits, will please call on or address J. W. Reck, Harney, Md. This order, like many others is deserving of the support of all good thinking people; its principles are pure and holy, and its ritualistic work and beyond description, every feature tending toward the elevation of mankind and the protection of the widow and the orphan.

They were preceded by Miss Frankie Reese as bridesmaid and Mr. Harry Stealy, brother of the bride, as groomsmen, and were met at the chancel rail by Rev. M. E. McLinn, of Lovettsville, Va., who in a few well-chosen words pronounced the happy couple man and wife. After the ceremony, they with a number of invited guests returned to the home of the groom's parents where a reception was held from 8 to 12 o'clock, during which time they were treated to an old times serenade by a calathumpian band which made night hideous by its noise and tumult. The bride was dressed in steel colored cloth trimmed in watered silk to match, and carried bride's roses; the groom wore the conventional black with white tie. The bridesmaid wore a dress the counterpart of the bride's. The ushers at the church were John Bushey and John McKinney who wore white ties and boutonnières. On last Thursday evening, Howard the thirteen year old son of Mr. Alfred Manahan, living on the farm of the late Jacob Krise, was accidentally shot and killed by his brother. Mr. Manahan brought him some water, and in passing the building, his brother pulled the string, when the gun fired and he died. He said "I am hurt" and died before they got him to the house. ### Town Nuisances.

Dr. James A. Stewart, secretary of the State Board of health paid our town a short visit last week. What he came here to see, and what his investigation will amount to is not our purpose so disclose. The truth of the matter is that there are nuisances in all small towns like ours, which ought not to be allowed to exist, and which every good citizen should be willing to remove, if on his property. The convenience of one should not be a menace to the health and comfort of another, nor does ownership of property confer either a legal or moral right to maintain a nuisance. It would be a good thing if towns like ours would be thoroughly inspected once a year, and the objectionable and filthy spots ordered cleansed by authority of the state. A good housekeeper cleans up house once or twice a year. A town is simply a large household, or encampment as it were, and needs systematic cleaning at frequent intervals for the same reason that a house does.

We fear that public cleanliness is a selfish matter; most people desire to keep their houses clean, because it is a personal comfort, and protection to their immediate household, but they do not care so much about their outside nuisances particularly when not near their own doors, and the stench from them does not offend their own nostrils, and are apt to retire behind the fortification "I will do what I please on my own property." This is no real defense, nor will any honorable person seek for any excuse to maintain that which is really offensive, and may produce sickness and death, but will even at considerable personal inconvenience and expense, suppress it. The golden rule is the correct guide in all such cases.

Axes to Grind.

There is an aim beyond, in many of the public acts of people. This renders it somewhat confusing at times to understand the motive for an action or an expressed opinion, which seems somewhat extreme when compared with the established character of the man. These concealed aims are often praise-worthy, probably more often the opposite, and always require skill to hit the target in view, as well as the "bull's eye" beyond, particularly when it is desired that the public shall see only the first, and not the last effect. Those who openly or covertly have political aspirations often practice this form of deception to secure popularity and support. Many a church has received a liberal donation, and many a public enterprise has been boomed, not for the sole purpose of bestowing financial aid, or for a genuine desire to be public spirited, but that the popularity of the act might strengthen claims for a hoped for political position.

Incidentally such schemes are often productive of good, and possibly, the realization of them do no great harm, yet there is an air of unmanliness and trickery about them which a strictly honest man would scorn to profit by. Hypocrisy, however, in its polished form passes current nowadays for virtue, and the man who would attempt to unmask the real object aimed at by one of these sharpshooters, is apt to get worsted for his pains.

There are persons who become morbid on this very subject, who cannot give any one credit for a worthy action, without first making a diligent search for the "axe to grind," and are never thoroughly satisfied that it is not being done surreptitiously. It is hard to determine which is the worst of these two classes. It is undoubtedly the mean between the two which is the correct position.

No one should thoughtlessly jump to a conclusion, yet he should not be so suspicious as not to arrive at one at all, and, in cases where an extreme interest is manifested in something which does not vitally affect our personal interest, the better plan likely is not to lose any sleep over the matter, and calmly await developments. The time may come, however, when light should be unsparringly turned on, and the public verdict met without fear, as the boldness of the plotter may become dangerous to the point of positive injury to innocent people.

What a delightful country this would be if plotting and scheming for personal ends, at the expense of others, could be effectually exposed in each case, so that only honesty of purpose could exist, and philanthropic and progressive views pass for what they really are, and not for their outward appearance.

Increase of Suicides.

One of the results of the business depression of the country is a noticeable increase in the number of suicides. During the last few weeks the New York papers particularly, have chronicled numerous deaths, principally from the use of poisonous acids, by the hands of persons, who by their statements preferred self-destruction rather than continue the battle for existence. Suicide is said to be caused by a diseased condition of the brain, which magnifies trouble out of all proportion to its actual existence. Whether this is true or not, it is certainly true that only cowards take their own lives. There are undoubtedly those who had better be out of the world than in it—for the good of the world—but such people never suicide. We can also understand why certain persons who have disgraced themselves and family by some crime, feel like being hid from the world and the light of their actions, but they generally go to Canada or some other seaport. The time has gone by when reputation and honor is retained in part by the deadly bullet or poisonous potion, and it remains for the ardent coward and weak minded misanthrope, who usually leaves a wife and small children, to bring his career to an untimely end.

In most of the recent suicides, the reason given for the crime is—want of work, and the means to secure the necessities of life for self and family. How a man can expect the wife and little ones to fare better without him, is hard to see. One must be in a fearful mental condition, when he forgets love, duty and honor, either of which should be sufficient to deter him from self-destruction.

While suicide is always a crime and the result of some mental obliquity, it serves to show how easily the times affect people for good or ill, and also points out a class who may be easily swayed by politicians or socialists, on account of their diseased ideas of things—as it can be taken for granted that if a man will take his life on account of a condition before his mind, he would vote for, or be led by a tempting promise held out by an oily tongued orator. May we not go further and say that it is just such poorly balanced morbid creatures, only of a more dangerous type, who think it incumbent on them to reconstruct society by removing some prominent light from it? We can easily imagine that a man who contemplates suicide on account of a condition which makes it difficult for him to procure the necessities of life, might decide that his troubles are caused by a certain class or party, and that by removing the head of that body, he would thereby in some indefinite way be a public benefactor.

After all, suicide may be a safety valve which carries off that which might produce infinitely more harm if it did not find vent in this way, and, if this course of reasoning be true, and the times be responsible for the increase of such cases, then can we remember that truly, "There is never a cloud without a silver lining."

The Political Backbiter.

Shakespeare makes Hamlet tell Ophelia: "Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny," and the warning may be accepted as a fair reflection of the poet's belief about English society in his day. Most of us in this age have had some cause, at least, to think that society at large has not materially changed. The gossip is not credited with a disposition to wait for cause. In fact, there are people who are tempted to look upon slanderous talk as the one thing in nature that exists spontaneously and without any cause whatsoever.

But whenever a man becomes a candidate for political office, either of his own notion or at the instance of his friends, the gates of gossip are thrown wide open. If St. John the Evangelist list were in the flesh and were urged for political office, somebody would discover at once that in his youth he had been an adulterer and in his maturity years a speculator and a thief.

To the man of refined feeling, or even of cool thinking, it is a disgusting feature of "politics," as we practice it, that it exposes a man to endless personal attacks. If he has not a skin like a rhinoceros he would better keep out of politics.

It doesn't matter that the gossips are usually twice as guilty as their victim, nor that the guilt or innocence of the candidate can have no possible effect on his fitness for office. The gossips are smitten with a sudden and amazing reverence for virtue, and a long-repentant sin of youth or a lying imputation of one, which is just as effective—is likely to be blazoned as a disqualification for knowing the multiplication table in age. The use of weapons such as this is not peculiar to any party, but common to all, and it makes a man with any honest feeling blush for his kind.

Fresh illustrations of the fact suggests another thought. Most men's characters can stand a vast amount of being lied about without actual injury, painful though it may be to the targets of talk themselves, but civilized humanity has always held the character of woman as peculiarly susceptible of stain—as open to the curious injustice of suffering a stain even from an utterly false imputation. What is to be the effect of the incursion of woman into politics? Will it have that of softening the political methods of the partisan slanderer, or will it result in making the female character as leathery as the male?

We may laugh or treat such a question as too trivial for consideration. But it is not. It is a very grave one, for any modification of the relations of the sexes projects itself with ever widening divergence through all the relations of life.—N. Y. Advertiser.

Sound Sense from Firemen.

During the Debs strike and insurrection the belief was commonly expressed that the vast disturbance so wantonly produced would prove in no long time to be worth far more than it had cost. It was felt that the remarkable development of patriotic sentiment to which it gave rise would, in itself alone, be clearly recognized in the future as a great recompense. Events in close succession have already crowded the disgrace and misery of that period out of recollection to a great extent, but there is no reason to withdraw the predictions then made. It has not been necessary, moreover, to wait long for conclusive proofs that important practical lessons were learned from that conflict. Every week and almost every day brings, in some form, proof that the sympathetic strike has had its day in this country. Not only by common consent, but by the acknowledgement of labor leaders themselves, it is a fantastic device which can never accomplish its purposes.

One of the most emphatic and gratifying of recent declarations on this subject is found in the resolutions adopted on Thursday by the convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen at Harrisburg. The delegates confessed a prevalent disposition among members of the order to disrespect and ignore agreements with their employers, in direct violation of its constitution and by-laws; they condemned such action as "at all times irrational, fanatical, illogical and injurious," they resolved that in the future members of the Brotherhood must live strictly up to their agreements, and they demanded that other labor organizations should not interfere with them in the performance of their contracts. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen has, in recent years, generally imitated the conservatism and morality of the engineers, and evinced a purpose to place itself upon a par with their admirably managed order. The action taken on Thursday is wise and sure to be salutary, not alone in its effect upon the firemen whom it should control, but also upon other labor organizations.

One of the chief reproaches against railroad operatives, as well as many others whose fidelity to obligations is less important to the public, has been their failure to keep their contracts; and one of the chief embarrassments which railroad companies have encountered has been their inability to enforce the performance of promises freely made. It is worth much that a great order of workmen should so frankly and forcibly declare that agreements must be kept. The convention put the matter just right when it declared that disrespect for their own word on the part of members of the Brotherhood is "in total disregard not only of the interests of their employers, but of their own welfare." This is a point which has generally appeared to escape the comprehension of labor leaders and of those who obey their commands. The convention, furthermore, showed sound sense and commendable independence in demanding that other organizations should not intervene to drive or cajole the firemen from the performance of their duty. The adoption by all representatives of labor of the principles embodied in these resolutions, and the general, practical and consistent application of them would quickly produce results of enormous value to those immediately concerned as well as to all the people.—N. Y. Tribune.

THE CO-OPERATIVE CREAMERY.

How Farmers Can Start a Small One and Make It Pay.

A good creamery is of great value in any community of farmers, and, as a rule, more is obtained at such places for the cream than the farmer can get for the butter manufactured from it. But creameries are not always located just where they are needed. It takes a large productive dairy district to supply even a small creamery with all the cream it needs. There are consequently many farmers scattered throughout the country who must make their cream into butter to dispose of it and accept small rates for the product at the country stores that there is little profit in it. The result is they find little money in dairying even with good cows. It is in such places that co-operative dairying is today proving of great value to farmers. Where the business is run on right principles money is made much easier and faster than according to the old plan of making a little butter on each farm and selling it to the country stores in return for other articles. Of course there are some farms situated so close to good markets that farmers can make money in putting their butter up in fancy prints for special customers. Where this is possible it is not advisable to enter into a combination with the neighboring farmers to make the butter on the wholesale plan.

To build a small separator factory in the neighborhood is a small undertaking. The whole outfit, including a cheap building, a separator, a small engine and cream and milk vats, should cost about $800. Sometimes a vacant building could be used for the work, so that these expenses could be deducted from the amount. Such a sum is not great in a community where a dozen or more farmers are going to contribute toward its erection. All of the farmers could then cart their milk direct to the separator, where the cream could be taken off and the milk returned each day. The separator will do the work better and quicker than any other invention. The hauls will not be long, as the farmers contributing will all be in the immediate neighborhood.

In this building the butter can be made all at once and after some one method. Such butter is superior to the small amounts made at different times and packed away in the same jar. Plenty of ice can be supplied to the separator company at a small cost per head. The manufacturer of this butter must be given into the hands of one who understands the work thoroughly. The work can be divided among a number, or one man can be selected for the work who is known for his ability to manufacture the right article.

It is almost as easy to make a ton of butter as it is to manufacture 10 pounds, and all of the labor that is now spent on the individual farms will be disposed of. But, after all, the real gain is in the selling. The butter will be made in large quantities, packed carefully and kept on ice until needed. In this way arrangements can be made to send the butter to large cities, where cash can be obtained for it. Cash should be taken every time in preference to trading it out. By the latter course the farmer always loses, for the storekeeper imposes upon him with double profits.—E. P. Smith in American Cultivator.

Much In Little.

It goes without saying that the separator is the best method for creaming milk, as it saves both butter fat and time lost and consumed by following either of the old methods. Next to the separator comes the submerged, deep setting method, and, lastly, the open pans, which is the system now most in use by those butter dairymen who are following in their grandmothers' ways and making grandmother's quality of butter.

The separator not only produces more butter from a given amount of milk than does any other process, when all breeds, ages and conditions are considered, but produces best flavored butter under like conditions. Therefore if we had 10 or more good butter cows we would employ the separator in preference to any other cream separating device. Properly used, the starter will be found the best method for ripening cream yet adopted. Mr. Van Alstyne described the starter (Boyd's) which he uses and gave full directions for using it and said that always, within 24 hours, and with the regularity of a clock, the cream is ready for the churn, which should be one devoid of inside fixings, and which does its work by concussion. Such a churn properly operated will recover practically all the fat in the cream.—Hoard's Dairyman.

St. Louis Fair.

In the line of legitimate fair attractions the dairy department will be treated more liberally than formerly, and instead of being an appendage to the fruit and vegetable department, as in former years, it will be given a building entirely to itself and made a separate and distinct department. The annual meeting of the State Dairy association will be held on the fair grounds during fair week, and preparations are made for a meeting of the National Dairy union to be held in St. Louis during the same week. Mr. Levi Chubbuck, former secretary of the state board of agriculture and now secretary of the State Dairy association, has been put in charge of this work.

A writer in The American Cultivator says, "We are coming more and more to the belief that good grass is really the foundation of good farming and dairying." Dairy farmers ought to make their grasslands richer and their grass crops heavier year by year.

TO KEEP ENSILAGE FROM SPOILING.

This Gentleman Pours Water on When He Puts It Up.

When corn is left until it is fit to husk and crib before filling the silo, it lacks the amount of moisture necessary to swell the boarding of the silo, or, in other words, the boarding of the silo absorbs so much of the moisture that it causes the ensilage to spoil as far as the moisture is drawn out by the boards. The corners spoil worse for the reason that absorption goes on from two ways. I reasoned that the necessary moisture must be supplied by water. In 1892, when filling, I kept the edges thoroughly wet down with water—two to three pailfuls to each load. The result was perfect ensilage right up to the boarding. The corn was so dry that it rattled when put in the silo.

I had a man with me through the winter of 1893 that had had considerable experience with silos. He said that it was the most perfect ensilage he ever saw fed out. So well pleased was I with the experiment that in the fall of 1893, each morning before starting up, I put about one pailful of water to every 20 square feet over the surface of the silo. The result was that there were no moldy streaks in the ensilage this winter. If, in case of breakdowns or shutdown on account of bad weather, the top is thoroughly wet down every morning, no harm will come to the exposed surface for several days, the water supplying the necessary moisture that is constantly being expelled by the heating of the ensilage. When the silo is full, run on about six inches of cut straw; then put on about one pailful of water to every 15 square feet of surface, tramp thoroughly, continue this for three days, lessening the supply of water at intervals of two or three days. When a silo thus treated is opened, a common wagon box will carry off all the waste from a silo 12 by 12.

In the construction of silos nothing but single boarding matched and jointed should be used, put on perpendicularly. Why? If the framework is as strong as it should be, the silo becomes tighter the more the boarding expands. If put on crosswise, as the silo is filled, the boards at the bottom expand, crowding the next up, and so on until by the third or fourth year the tongue toward the bottom of the silo, when it shrinks, will pull apart. Use no paint or coal tar on the inside of a silo. It takes long for the painted siding to expand, which means just so much more moisture wasted. One side of my silo is painted with coal tar. I am glad I did not have time to finish the job. It has been built six years, and I can see no signs of decay yet in the unpainted surface. I have visited several silos made of rough boards, with paper between, but they are not generally satisfactory.—L. D. G. in Rural New Yorker.

Keeping Jersey Cows In Milk.

Cows, especially Jersey cows, may be kept in milk by correct feeding and handling. This includes regular and clean milking—that is, to the last thimbleful—for two or three years, without detriment to the cow, except a very gradual drying up. Time and again we have milked a Jersey two or three years without going dry, but they had their calves every year all the same. The Jerseys are precocious as well as prolific, and when they come in heat they should be served. If not, conception becomes harder every time, and finally the cow is ruined for a milker. Jerseys and all kind will have about three weeks between heats, and with them nature's demands are imperative. Pregnancy does not shorten the yield of milk materially, nor does it vitiate the quality.

Jersey calves are small, as a rule, but the butchers are glad to get them when four or five weeks old and fat and pay a reasonably good price for them. A heifer or steer calf at that age will bring, if fat, from $5 to $6. A Jersey will breed until 12 years old, but in the last years of her life she wants particular attention and conceives more readily from a young than an old bull, though one of the most esteemed bulls is now doing service at the age of over 12 years.—C. W. M. in St. Louis Republic.

Dairy and Creamery.

The hornfly has been an awful pest again this summer. It is enough to kill the cows. It is worse than the 17 year locusts and nearly as bad as congress. But a way will undoubtedly be found to get rid of it. In any case it will probably wear itself out and disappear in a few years. The potato bug and the army worms are not now so destructive as they once were. Insect pests seem to be like epidemic diseases. They come with great violence, reach their culmination and die out.

The way some of the northwestern states are going ahead in the dairy business is wonderful. One Nebraska creamery marketed, for the year previous to June 1, 1,618,890 pounds of milk, besides making a great quantity into butter.

Never use a churn that is too small and never fill one too full of cream.

The silo goes with dairying and high pressure farming. Denmark sells 100,000,000 pounds of the best butter in the world every year. Dairy schools are what made the trade for her. What Denmark did the United States can do on a still larger scale.

Cheesemaking is most profitable in summer, because the flow of milk is heaviest then, and milk, except from cows that have just calved, contains less butter fat and a larger percentage of whey elements. In winter the milk is richer in butter fat; consequently it can most profitably be used in butter making. This is another reason in favor of winter butter dairying.

The Rural New Yorker says, "There is mighty little reason why a first class butter cow should be eaten any more than a horse."

Milk and cream are now frequently sold by the pound, and it is the best way.

Climbing Higher.

A New York girl, Miss Lillie J. Martin, has gone to Germany to enter the University of Göttingen as a student. She is a Vassar graduate of the class of 1890 and has been a teacher, occupying responsible positions since she left college. To go abroad and perfect herself in higher branches of science, to which study she is specially devoted, she resigned the vice principalship of the girls' high school at San Francisco, a position she has filled for several years. She hopes to enter the department of experimental psychology.—New York News.

Lamb and the Scotchman.

Charles Lamb said he never could impress a Scotchman with any new truth; that they all required it to be spelled and explained away in old equivalent and familiar words and phrases. He said he had spoken to a Scotchman who sat next to him at dinner of a healthy book.

"Healthy, sir. Healthy, did you say?"

"Yes, healthy."

"I dinna comprehend. I have heard of a healthy man and of a healthy morning, but never of a healthy book."
