Punishing Pupils.

In a recent issue of the Waynesbore Record the amazing statement is made that some of the teachers in Waynes boro use gum hose for beating the school children. If true, this is simply monstrous.

The article referred to, also says; "It is high time that this barbarous means of correcting children, and particularly little girls, should be wiped out. Twenty years ago our people were convinced that a school could be conducted without the rod, and it is to be regretted that it is again being introduced. In New York state and many other states the penalty is severe for any teacher whipping a child. There are plenty of other means in this civilized age to handle children, and if they cannot be conquered by kindness, send them home. There is scarcely one teacher out of a dozen who can whip the child of another without doing it in a passion, and in many instances out of revenge."

These comments are unquestionably correct. That the lot of a teacher is a hard one, is also correct, and that the average pupil is full of "cussedness," is as true as either of these statements.

All the elements necessary for a successful teacher, are seldom found in one person. First, ability is required; second, teaching power; third, self control and patience. Many teachers are well endowed with one of these gifts, and deficient in the other two; it is likely that most of our teachers are fairly well possessed of the first two mentioned, and deficient in the last—a grave defect surely. Which of these three traits in a teacher is the most important, is a question, and the unfortunate thing is that there is any need for trying to find out. All of us desire our children to be well taught, and disciplined, yet we are obliged to take the chances of a weakness in the teacher. There is, however, no doubt that all sensible parents prefer to have their children imperfectly taught, rather than perfectly abused.

A good education is likely to be accompanied by a strong temper; an easy, good natured fellow, may not have any brains; another may know every thing, and not be able to impart it. It is a question of Poor, teacher-Poor, pupil.

Funeral Customs.

We have often thought that there is something wrong with the funeral customs of this an other neighborhoods, and now venture to ventilate the subject to some extent, at the risk of horrifying sticklers for the old practices. From the earliest times there has been a variety of sentiment manifested by various peoples in the wav in which they have paid the last rites to their dead, and, while these rites as they pertain to this locality are well known, yet it may be well to give them a brief review in order to see whether there may not be some improvement made.

What is a funeral? The ceremonies attending the laying away of the dead body of a human being. An office to be performed reverently, decently, and we think, unobtrusively-without unnecessary display. Do we not in the regulation funeral, consider too prominently what has been the custom, or style, and what the public may say in the way of criticism? Do we not often inconvenience ourselves in some way, and do things in which we have no heart in doing; or probably arrange for a long procession, a handsome casket, an unusual ceremony, profusion of mourning, or something special, so that the eyent will be favorably commented on? If this is true, then our customs a man can do in an hour, and do it a year. are wrong-even sinful.

We notice first, that a service is held at the house, and the remains exposed to the view of the public and the members of the family; then often world this would be! after delay, the undertaker is allowed to perform his duties, and the cortege moves on to the church, where, before or after a lengthy sermon, the casket is again opened and the public views the body, and the relatives take the last look and last farewell, before the gaze of the curious public. These public exhibitions are simply W. JESSE ROBERTS, DR. G. T. MOTTER, horrible; nine-tenths of the people G. A. ARNOLD DR. C. BIRNIE, P. B. ENGLAR. simply desire to see if the corpse looks natural, and, if there are any unusual circumstances surrounding the death, the crowd is corresponding. Published by request of a subscriber. increased.

This method is very satisfactory to those who like to see whether the relatives take it hard; if the manifestations are violent, very often they are set down as being put on; if they are moderate, then they didn't seem to care. No matter what the expressions of sorrow may stand for, they have no business to be public; properly they should be too sacred to expose to the gaze of the curious crowd. It is a parting scene, a breaking of the strongest ties formed on earth, hard for us to realize, and surey something which in all propriety and decency concerns only the afflicted, and God, the giver. In a recent issue of a religious weekly, the following reforms are suggested; (1) That the funeral services be as brief as the occasion will permit. This means that the discourse be rather informal, and mainly directed to the bereaved. (2) That the funeral be not held on the Sab. bath unless absolutely necessary, and that the pastor should first be consulted before the time is set. (3) That the practice of kissing the dead is unwise, for sanitary reasons, and that of paper for the world to look at, the exposure of the dead to the gaze of the promiscuous public is not desirable. (4) That the profuse display wisdom because they occasionally of flowers, and extravagance in the use of mourning apparel are to be guarded against. To the above it might be well to add: (5) That the church funeral be dispensed with altogether in many cases, particularly in the burial of infants. and that on all such occasions the hats be removed while in the house of God. (6) That the "feast" at the house after the ceremony, scarcely adds to the solemnity or needs of the occasion.

Many other things might be suggested, having in view the reform of our funeral customs, but, while many are conscious of a subversion of the | Taneytown, Md., Dec. 1, 1876. purposes for which such services are held, they are loth to accept less ostentations rites, or even to consider as desirable a radical change which would require an exhibition of moral would require an exhibition of moral in his clear were so severe that he had been a solution of the result of the r practices.

The question, is, however, quietly receiving attention all over the coun try, and simplicity of service is rapidly being adopted as being the proper way to show "reverence and respect." the particular business of ministers | Taneytown, Md. of the Gospel. The Sunday funeral in particular, has a tendency to interfere with regular church worship, and compels work on that day which seldom absolutely this feature alone, a question is preare cognizant of, and in which also information. appears inconsideration for them as

Business Improving.

Substantially all indications of the state of business are rather more favorable. Farm products are a little higher, railroad earnings a shade better, clearing house exchanges a small percentage larger in comparison with two years ago than in February, and most of the industries show a someundisturbed, the operations of the given April 1st. syndicate still prevent exports of gold, and withdrawals from the Treasury have of late practically ceased. There is not much enthusiasm about the Taneytown, Md. situation, however, because the gain is slow, and business is yet a long way from what was once considered a prosperous condition. Further, the gain is in some cases due to obviously temporary causes.—Dun's Review.

ETERNITY.

BY REV. W. H LUCKENBACH, A. M.

Over a river, deep and wide, Never ruffled by wind or tide, Never disturb'd by a reckless oar, But ever placid from shore to shore, A cathedral has stood for ages pass'd,— Unique and wonde: ful, grand and vast.

Of its mystic bells the solemn peal Softly o'er the river doth steal; Anon my ear, thro' mists of Time, The ding-dong hears of its muffled

(A monotone deeper than voice of the sea.)
"E-ter-ni-ty,—E-ter-ni-ty." Mutely, slowly through the ford Files a line of worshippers toward The strange c thedral; one by one, Entering its visty aisles to con Of mysteries all the mystery, Eternity,—Eternity.

One by one, since the birth of Time, Of every rank and age and ellme, A vast, vast host has been plotding o'er The quiet stream to the farther shore, To solve what for aye shall a problem be, Eternity,—Eternity.

"Fall in, fall in!" cries the angel, Death; And none, tho' shiv'ring with bated And node, the salving with bate breath,—
With childish fear of the water's chill,
But at once the flat must fulfil,
To make in line, for his destiny,
Etern.ty,—Eternity.

Never can feeble, finite man Its vasty, moving cycles span;
Forever be the task pursued,
Yet ever, baffled, man shall brood,
With questing thought, o'er what can be
Eternity,—Eternity.

If full a thousand years 'twould take
Of arctic snows to melt each flake,
The mountain drifts shall all dissolve,
And score with mighty score involve,
And yet pre-figure not to thee,
Eternity,—Eternity.

Did all the twinkling stars resolve
Their silvery glory to dissolve,-That hence, in each ten-thousandth year,
One, or another, should disappear,
The long 'forever' would not be
Eternity,—Eternity.

Think, think, O man! 'Tis not a jest,
By graceless, fathless w ts express'd;
List those, and, list'ning, fear as well,
How voices bud-from heaven and hell
Announce to thee most solemniy
Eternity,—Eternity!

Those art! And this is God's decree,
That those shalt never cease to be!
The he treas shall melt, the sun expire,
The whirling globe be wrapp'd in fire,
Yet leave unchang'd thy destiny,
Eternity,—Eternity!
