Shepherdstown is to have a new industry. Robert G. Miller has leased from Joseph L. Cooks an acre of land north of that town, and is now fitting it up as a skunk farm. Mr. Miller expects to stock it with about 50 skunks, and if he has any luck at all, he will make money from his new investment by selling the pelts from the odoriferous little animals. Pelts bring from $1.00 to $1.75 in the New York market, where they are sold to the furriers, and later grace fair lady's neck or back. He was a tall, lanky mope. He had been sent on an errand and was wending his way leisurely along the street when, all of a sudden, he doubled up like a jack-knife and grabbed one of his legs with both hands, and there he stood with a grip on himself as hard and fast as death. He did not make a move for a quarter of an hour. Some one noticing his condition went to his assistance, and soon four men had hold of him. It took their combined efforts to break the hold he had on his leg, or rather the snake which he was convinced had gotten inside his trousers, and nothing could show the nature of the actual and corporeal presence of that deadly and venomous reptile that only needed to get loose to end the affected mope's mortal career with a bite. When his hold was broken a banana peel quietly and coolly slipped down on the pavement and was as calm and placid as a piece of ice in the middle of January.—Md. Journal.

Birthday Surprise in Emmitsburg. An enjoyable surprise birthday party of relations and old neighbors, gathered at the residence of Mr. Daniel Sheets in Emmitsburg, on 15th April, in honor of Mr. Sheets' 50th birthday; his children all being present except two sons and one daughter, who are in the west. It was a genial company that filled Mr. Sheets' parlor; his house was crowded with his many friends who came laden with eatables; after a pleasant talk and congratulations to Mr. Sheets on his four score years, the company repaired to the dining room, where a table was spread with all the substantial, as well as delicate eatables. After all had done justice to the inner man they were escorted into the parlor where a pleasant time was spent in conversation.

Mr. Sheets was overjoyed—he knew nothing of his friends coming; his daughter, Mrs. J. H. Hostetler, in getting up the surprise did it very slyly. A most enjoyable time was had by all those who were present. Rev. C. Reinwald made an appropriate address for the occasion, several others responding; those who spoke were Mr. Jacob Waybright, William Scott and David Weikert, after which Rev. C. Reinwald made his address. After his discourse he had prayed, after which he bid adieu to the company.

Shantley of Fairfield; Mrs. Robert Watson of Waynesboro; Mrs. John Butt of Glenwood Mills; Mr. John Neely of Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Waybright, Mr. A. M. Rahter makes a Statement.

Ferdinand Rahter has made a statement through the columns of the Baltimore Sun, in which he denies that he victimized the Littlestown Savings Institution out of $30,000 or $40,000 in the recent transactions as published in the newspapers.

He also denies that he previously defrauded any bank, and denies the truth of the published statements generally, except the fact of his failure in 1869. He says he made good to the banks named all his obligations to them.

He says the statements have a tendency to injure him, and further, that all paper now held by the Littlestown Bank received from him, are perfectly good and collectable.

The First Game of Ball.

The first game of Base Ball of the season was played here on Monday afternoon, between the Westminster Ramblers, and the home club, and resulted in a victory for the former. The game was neither very interesting or well played, but was won by Westminster by slightly better all around playing, and lucky batting.

The home club was unfortunate in having twelve men left on bases, which means that safe hits at the proper time might have won the game. They did a lot of poor throwing to bases, and their errors were costly.

The afternoon was very cold and disagreeable, which, with the poor condition of the ground and the evident need of practice on both sides, made it impossible to play anything like a fine game. So far as our club is concerned they acted in a gentlemanly manner, and the same can be said of the visiting club, except that when on an occasion like this, at which we usually have a considerable number of ladies and children as spectators. Truth, however, and a desire to prevent the game of Base ball—which has many friends here—from becoming occasions at which drunken and disgraceful scenes are a prominent feature, compels us to say that if the games are to continue to be attended by persons in the condition that about half a dozen of the visitors were, they had better be discontinued.

It would be well for our town authorities to have the ballif on the grounds to promptly arrest those who have no respect for themselves, and teach them that they must have some consideration for our people, who do not want to be shocked and insulted where they have a proper right to expect relaxation and recreation.

ENTERED AT TANEYTOWN POSTOFFICE AS SECOND CLASS MATTER

SATURDAY, APRIL 20th., 1895.

WE DESIRE NEWS from all over the county, whether from regular correspondents or not. Our having a regular contributor at a place need not keep others from writing.

HAGERSTOWN AND Frederick are rivals something like Chicago and St. Louis, and just now the papers of the two places are indulging in pleasant remarks of a somewhat striking character.

EVEN THE BURGLARING business suffers with other trades. Six safes were robbed in Hanover one night last week, and only eight dollars was secured from the lot. This is certainly discouraging; nothing seems to pay in these times.

THE GETTYSBURG Star is trying to establish the Independent of Littlestown, as a democratic organ. The latter, however, is a somewhat "skittish" institution and does not consent to being located on either side of the fence, preferring to sit on the top rail and catch all the straws that blow.

CONSOLIDATION is the rule of the day. Senator Lodge shows how the large cities are absorbing the suburbs. It is the same way in business, and in some of the professions. The big stores are eating up the little stores. Trust companies attend to a man's affairs while he lives and settle up his estate after he dies, and the time may come when a representative may be at the bedside to soothe the dying man with the comforting assurance that, however he gets along in the next world, he may rest satisfied that his assets will be taken care of in this. The question is, "Where will this consolidation tendency lead?"

EVERY FARMER must admit that potatoes are a more profitable crop than wheat, but many decline to go into potato-growing more extensively lest the market be glutted and the prices go down. It strikes us this is a poor excuse. A local market may be glutted, but not the general market. As a proof of this we may mention that the domestic supply rarely comes up to the demand. Every year during the past ten we have been importing potatoes. In 1893 we imported over two million dollars' worth and in 1894 nearly $3,000,000. There is not the slightest doubt that with proper care and culture the crop can be made three or four times as profitable as wheat. What is more, in view of all that has been done in improved potato-culture during the past few years, it seems a reflection on the farmer who is content to gather a crop of seventy-five or eighty bushels to the acre. It can be doubled if the right plan is pursued.—Balt. Co. Union.

Children out at night.

A town in Minnesota has recently passed an ordinance that all children under sixteen years of age shall leave the street by 6 p. m. Any child found out after that time is compelled to give a good account of itself; if this be impossible, it is either taken home, or to jail. The movement is said to be popular, and other places are talking of adopting the plan.

We have heretofore referred to this subject, which is one which must impress thoughtful and solicitous parents, as being one worthy of consideration. Certainly the care and protection of one's children is the foremost duty of all; this question of street running at night may safely be set down as one of the dangers to be avoided, and more strict rules in reference to a proper hour, or a more perfect surveillance over our children, while on the street, is as necessary in our town as in any other.

Children are much alike all over the world, and it seems a very natural thing that they usually want what they ought not have. To say that "children will be children," and allow them the full license of their childish and immature ideas, is doing them an injury, and not in keeping with what is expected of a good parent. Too much restraint is certainly not right, but plenty of liberty, under certain proper restrictions, can be given without any injustice to a child either in its mental, moral, or physical development. Street running at night is connected with many dangers both to body and morals. Miscellaneous associations, and contact with all classes, are not desirable at any time, and it is at night when this contact is most likely to occur. Parents who carefully cultivate traits of politeness and amiability in their children during the day, may have all their work and pains for nothing, if they allow them the run of the streets with chance companions who will rub off the polish as fast as it can be put on.

The Old, and the New.

It is likely one of the things taken for granted, that new things, are improved things. That a late invention, is more perfect and more desirable than the article before it was rejuvenated. That late methods generally, must be better than previous methods—if for no other reason—because they are late ones. This pursuit after newness of things, or the fashion of taking up the new and dropping the old, is something which is possibly running away with the people, and which is, to a certain extent, leading them toward an incorrect standard—a lack of appreciation for worth, simply because it does not appear on the surface of things newly and attractively.

This mania may be said to be dangerous, because, in a personal way, it involves a tendency toward matter-of-fact friendship; a sort of don't-care-a-tiveness as to whether people like your style or not. People like to think, and probably boast, of their independence: such a thing as being really under obligations to some one for a favor, or of regarding any return necessary for a civility or assistance rendered, is, it seems, a sentiment becoming more rare every year—as we progress.

It seems strange almost, yet it is true, that the American people are becoming so "progressive" as to be pretty truly designated "fast" by the older nations. It is this trait of ours, that leads our American heiresses to look across the water for something new in husbands; not that they better themselves any—the race for the "anything-for-a-change" does not always bring that—but it is simply to do away with what seems conventional—possibly common.

This is a very unfavorable time to "hide a light under a bushel," as people show a tendency to take to the talow dip in sight, rather than go to the trouble of pulling the cover from a real electric light. In other words, merit, unattended with a certain amount of modern polish and pretension, is apt to follow, in the rear of the procession of the times as they be.

Progress is all right. Keeping fully abreast of the times is all right; but progress and modernism are things quite different from what is often mistaken for them. Caution and careful logical reasoning should always accompany new ventures, and new connections, if real advance and improvement is aimed at. Curiosity, and first impulse, are not good leaders to follow in many cases; neither will it tend to fast and long friendship to indulge in fickle and coquetish fancies, when they may in some way tend to destroy faith and confidence in previously formed good opinions.

Commercial transactions now are much interfered with and made much more uncertain than they once were, because of the uncertainty of the stability and habits of people, and the playing of the "confidence" game in some of its many forms. It may be contradicted, when we say that honesty is on the decrease, and it is unpleasant to think it true, yet there is a something at work in society, in trade, and in church and state as well, that is not pure honest Americanism, and far from it.

"Make haste slowly" is possibly one of the old mottoes not yet out of date for application, particularly in reference to the closer affairs of men; certainly it is a safe and wise injunction, even if it does seem to mean going slow, it may really mean that others are going too fast.

New York City Schools Rejoice.

Commissioner Goulden's Address.

The New York Times of the 10th, contains an account of the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the establishment of the Public school system in New York, held on the 9th, which was participated in by three hundred thousand students of the schools in the city.

Governor Morton had recommended that this day be appropriately commemorated by the use of appropriate ceremonies, and there was a general flying of flags and speech-making in compliance with the Governor's proclamation.

At Grammar school No. 86, the anniversary was observed with elaborate exercises, at which Commissioner Joseph A. Goulden, of the Board of Education, made an address. He began by saying that it always gave him great pleasure to visit the schools, because he saw before him future men who would one day govern this Nation. Because of this fact, he said, it was of the greatest importance to have the public schools under proper supervision to teach these boys to be good and patriotic citizens and fit them for all duties of citizenship. Continuing, he said:

"I think it very appropriate that we should honor and remember this the centennial day of the starting of our public school system, and I only wish Gov. Morton had made it a holiday, because none of us will ever see another centennial."

"Another reason we should observe this day is because it is the thirtieth anniversary of the surrender of Lee to Grant. The surrender wiped out the disgrace of slavery from this country, and made it truly a free country, which it was not while slavery was tolerated.

"This war, which brought out so many citizen soldiers, shows the importance of having patriotism instilled into the boys who may one day have to defend their country, as the boys of '61 and '65 did. Most of the volunteers were young men and boys who were in colleges or schools and many of those, too young to carry a gun, went as drummer boys.

"The schoolboys' cadet companies which a number of people object to, I think, are among the best ways to make good American citizens. The drill makes the boys more obedient. No one will deny that it improves

It helps them mentally by making them wide awake. It makes them more patriotic.

"But, I am glad there is some opposition, because opposition is a very good thing. It produces friction, and friction furnishes a thing and helps to bring out its strong parts.

"The schoolboys' cadet companies, or the American Guard—and that is a very appropriate name for them—was formed through the efforts of the Grand Army of the Republic. Those boys of '61 and '65 realized that they were rapidly passing away, and that the country was greatly in need of someone to take their places, so it was their idea to break in our schoolboys and teach them to march and to love their country, and, if she needs them, to defend her."

In closing Mr. Goulden said that on the 30th. of May the boys would capture all the smiles and applause, and the only regret he had was that they would take it all away from him and his comrades of the Grand Army of the Republic. "But I won't be grudge you it," he said, "for we had our day, and now it is your turn. So that all you need to do is to present a neat appearance, and if possible, I would like to see every boy with a blue cap with the letters A. G. upon it." After Mr. Goulden had concluded the boys gave him three rousing cheers, and saluted the flag.

A Talk On Immigrants.

Samuel H. Drew, who has given much study to the subject of immigration and its effect upon American labor, lectured at a recent date on this theme in Co-operative Hall, Brooklyn.

The speaker discussed at length the condition of the immigrants in the large cities of this country. He said there were 80,000 foreign lunatics, paupers and criminals maintained by the public at an expense of $10,000,000 per annum.

This shows conclusively that we are running lunatic asylums, poor-houses and penitentiaries for the world's lunatics, paupers and criminals, as well as furnishing a dump for the world's Anarchists and Socialists.

Household Hints. A white felt hat may be cleaned with pipe clay. It should be applied with a soft flannel.

One of the prettiest blue shades used to embroider white linen is indigo blue cotton, which imitates more perfectly than silk or linen floss the peculiar shade of blue seen on old china.

The chafing dish needs especial care to keep it looking nice and new enough for the table. The pans should not be put in water when washed, but the water put in them, and the nicked surface carefully wiped and polished with chamois.

Rice lends itself to a greater variety of dishes than any other article of food. It makes any number of sweet dishes and desserts, is excellent as flour, serves as a vegetable to use with meats or fish, makes delicious cake for breakfast when cooked like batter cakes, and for made meat dishes has no equal, withal, being extremely cheap when the nutritive qualities of the cereal are considered, yet it is more often served up in unpalatable shape than almost any other dish.

"We take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy because it is praised by all who try it," says J. W. Cox & Son, druggists, Marshfield, Oregon.

The Czar's private treasury is practically inexhaustible, for he has no settled civil list, but draws what he likes from the imperial exchequer every ruble of which is supposed to belong to him.

You cannot judge a remedy until you know its father and mother, and so understand the responsibility for its existence. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the formula of one of the greatest physicians of the last century, and its wonderful success in curing completely all forms of biliousness and liver trouble is due to the remarkable compounding of its ingredients.

A Solution of the help Problem.

"Have you good help?" I asked of a lovely woman a few days ago. "Yes, excellent," she said. "A neighbor's daughter comes in every morning and does what I call the drudgery. She stays until the dinner work is out of the way. My washing and ironing I put out of the house, so there is but little else left to do. Helen is very companionable and in some respects a better scholar than I, and after the work is done she frequently corrects a manuscript for me."

The lady with whom I was chatting is a writer and in this way she has plenty of time for her literary work and the out-of-doors exercise she requires each day.

How true it is that a large number of girls are good housekeepers and yet have no way of earning the money they so long for. They cannot make up their minds to go out as regular "hired girls," and yet if they could secure good places like my friend's it would be an excellent arrangement for both parties.

There are two sides to every question, and particularly so with this help problem. There are women who do not deserve a good girl because they are too selfish and too cold-hearted to treat their help even civilly, say nothing about kindly. I have known of women who expected their servants, as they always call them, to sleep in poorly furnished, ill ventilated, cheerless rooms, on a hard bed with no conveniences or comforts—not alone this, but the girls were expected to eat only such food as was doled out to them, while the supplies for the house were under lock and key.

Is it to be wondered that no self-respecting girl will stay long in such a place? Is it strange that such women are always changing girls? On the other hand there are women who are kind and considerate and thoughtful to their help as well as to their friends and companions.

The woman who does her own housework is just as much respected as her sister who keeps one, two or three servants. Why should the girl who prepares our meals and makes our homes cozy and inviting be less respected than the clerk who sells us dry goods or the woman who makes our dresses? To be a skillful housekeeper, cook, laundress and chamber maid—mind you I say skillful, not a second rate maid—requires as much high-grade intelligence as it does to become a first-class seamstress, teacher, bookkeeper or any other avocation open to women.

A thoroughly competent girl who was a milliner by trade and fully capable of earning a good living in that way, preferred to do housework, and hearing of a good place where she could have her time to sew for herself after her work was done, wrote to the lady and asked if she would like to hire her. The result was very satisfactory to both parties, the woman securing a valuable girl who was entirely trustworthy and capable, while the girl secured at good home, kind friends, a warm, pleasant room, books and magazines to read and a number of privileges not extended to the average American woman.—Carrie May Ashton.

A Maker Of Glass Eyes. Visitors at the World's Fair will remember the quaint little workman who sat in one corner of a great building and made eyes from morning until night, part of them for dolls, part of them for human beings and occasionally one for a horse or some other pet animal.

It will be remembered that he was marvelously deft in his work. First he blew a bulb of melted glass; then when it was cold he carefully broke off one side so as to leave a shell, the edges of which were blunted by melting. He secured the proper size of the eye by having the person for whom it was made stand before him as he worked. Having the shell complete, he bent down over a Bunsen burner, and just touching its upper surface to the flame, he worked the eye design on the glass with little sticks of vari-colored glass, the points of which were melted in the flame.

The work requires a wonderfully steady hand and a true eye to make the iris and the retina of the proper color and shape. The workman is so skilled that he can copy direct from the person who stands before him.

HISTORY OF UNION BRIDGE.

BY DANIEL WOLFE.

Part III.

Our town long went by the undignified cognomen of "Buttersburg," and this name originated in a very natural way...

At this time, and years after, Taneytown was the nearest post office. It was not until about 1820 that the people of Pipe Creek settlement, feeling the need of better postal facilities, applied to the department to establish a post office.

At this period (1820) the country was greatly agitated over the institution of slavery. Clay's Compromise Measure aroused a feeling of indignation in the north, and gave fresh impetus to organized opposition to slavery.

At a meeting of the inhabitants of Pipe Creek settlement, Frederick county, Md., convened at Pipe Creek meeting-house November 23rd, 1826, for the purpose of forming an ANTI-SLAVERY SOCIETY.

Wm. Haines Esq. was called to the chair. Samuel W. Stratton appointed secretary. The object of the meeting having been stated, a committee of five, consisting of the Rev. Daniel Zollikofer, William Shepherd Esq., Samuel W. Stratton, Thomas Wood and David Switzer were appointed to draft a constitution and code of By-Laws for the government of the society and present them at the next meeting.

Wednesday December 6th, 1826. The meeting assembled according to adjournment. Wm. Haines Esq. was again called to the chair and S. W. Stratton appointed Secretary. The minutes of last meeting were read, and the committee appointed to present their report on the constitution &c. reported that "they have attended to the duties assigned them and herewith present the draft of a Constitution which they humbly conceive adapted to the government of an association of the character we have in contemplation."

Rules for Highways. 1. Make the public roads neat and smooth, and pleasant and profitable to travel in and in driving to market. 2. Never throw rubbish of any kind into highways in order to get rid of it, nor deposit cord wood, logs or timber at roadsides, to frighten passing horses.

3. Whenever any build their houses facing square the public roads should show at least the same respect to these roads that they do to their own fields by excluding all weeds. 4. Remove all loose stones from the wheel track once a month, and replace the stones which strike and break the wheels, rack the tracks, rack the harness and tire the horses.

5. Where fixed stones cannot be removed, cover them well with gravel or other road material. 6. Remove all that fixed stone may strike different wheels a thousand times like a sledge hammer and cause a hundred dollars of damage. To remove it might cost five cents.

7. Never make a highway of muck, sods or soft material scraped from the mud ditches which worked into deep mud in wet weather, but draw them into the barnyard for the compost heap. 8. Where the roadbed has not a dry bottom, cut a ditch in the middle of the road, and let it run down with it, with side escape ditches at depressions, and fill it with gravel or broken stone, coarse below and finer near the top.

9. Plant shade trees three or four rods apart along the line, to allow air to circulate, and to shade and mud to dry. 10. Keep the roadside smooth, mow the grass for hay, and thus secure a good track when the center of the road is encumbered with impassable mud drifts in winter. 11. In windy places, make the windward road-fences of barb wire, to prevent the accumulation of drifts of snow.

oped all their slaves as early as 1780. They then set the seal of condemnation upon slavery as a system at war with human nature and the rights of God, and hence they championed the cause of human liberty at the peril of their lives.

Proceedings of the School Board.

The school board met on Tuesday; all the members were present. The teachers' reports for the spring term of school were examined and the pay roll made thereon was approved.

Payment for sundry amounts for rent of school-houses was ordered; also various bills for supplies and incidental expenses.

John A. Evans and thirty-six others presented a petition for a new school house at or within one quarter of a mile from Newport, in Mount Airy District, Afterwards Sylvester P. Lewis, representing a like number of petitioners, asked that the location be built on a different site proposed by them. The board promised to consider both sides before deciding.

A delegation consisting of eight representative gentlemen from Taneytown District was before the board asking for a new school house, to be built on the road leading from Taneytown to Union Bridge, about midway between the school at Oregon and Martin's. The delegation was assured by the board that the needs of a new school-house would be investigated.

O. A. Haines and twenty-nine others presented a petition from Myers' District praying for the removal of the Maus school house to Silver Run. The petitioners were informed that the board had some time ago decided to remove the school house to Silver Run, and would remove it as soon as funds were available.

Mr. Henry Galt of Taneytown, appeared before the Board, and asked to have the privilege of using one of the rooms of the school building there, for a private school for the summer term. The privilege was granted.

A Celebrated Cow Case.

The celebrated Punktown cow case has come up in the courts again. Several years ago Richard H. Furley had a cow to wander on the green swards of Punktown, in violation of an ordinance. The town bailiff looked up the cow in his stable and issued a warrant for the arrest of Mr. Furley, who broke down the fence and rescued his imprisoned cow, driving her home in time for milking.

Justice South, who found him $8 and costs, keeping him imprisoned in his house until he paid the fine, the justice's wife guarding one door and a constable another door. The fine was paid and Mr. Furley appealed, Justice A. D. Merrick being called in favor of Mr. Furley. The corporation in the meantime got the Maryland Legislature to change the name of the town from Jerusalem to Punktown, and also appealed the case to the Circuit Court for Frederick county, Judge Edward Stake sustaining Mr. Furley's case, ordering the corporation to refund the fine, which it refused to do. Mandamus proceedings were instituted to compel the burgess and commissioners to order a special levy for the repayment of the fine, the treasury being found to be depleted.

How Woman Suffrage Works.

"I never met with such tough luck in my life," he said, in explaining his case. "If this woman's suffrage business keeps on, we will be a nation of dyspeptics, and the country will go to the dogs."

"I struck Ohio in the heat of a political campaign, and started a house to house canvass of one city. I rang four or five door bells without getting an answer. Finally, at one house a boy came to the door with jam all over his face."

The Colored Man's Plow Team.

An old darkey, near the western part of the State of North Carolina, had counted the rash act of feeding his only mule too many beans, and the mule died. Then when the time came to plow corn the question arose how was it to be done? The old man finally hit upon a scheme. He harnesses himself to the plow and instructed one of the boys to drive. All went as smooth as a high-salaried job in a soap factory, until, as the procession neared the fence at the end of the field, a rooster suddenly flew up and frightened the old man so badly that he became "too many" for the driver and ran away, breaking the plow and tearing up the corn in a wholesale manner terrible to behold.

After the old man "got his head" and realized the error he had wrought he in his mighty anger, returned and beat the boy severely for "letting the boss run away." The neighbors were indignant at this brutal treatment of the boy and threatened to lynch him forthwith. The matter was compromised, however, by the old man promising faithfully to treat the boy better in the future and to vote the "proper" ticket at the next election. The neighbors gave him a brand-new mule, and the old man is still a large, thankful and still lives, and trusts that each day will bring with it the proper amount of hoe cake and taters.

She Only wanted to Know.

A white eyed black woman went into a Griffin drygoods store and asked: "Got any yarn knittin' thread?" "Yes; step this way, please."

"Wait a minute, honey," said the old woman grabbing the floorwalker by the coat tails, much to the amusement of all the clerks who began to gather around to see the fun. "I ain't ax you yit. Got any pins an' cotton straws, an' silk dresses an' parols an' bleached termestic an' blue ribbon an' piller cases an' undershirts an' sewin' machins an' buttons an' crimpin' pins an' table cloths an'—an'—"

A Schoolboy on Corns.

Corns are of two kinds—vegetable and animal. Vegetable corn grows on toes, and animal corn grows on feet. There are several kinds of corn; there is the unicorn, the capricorn, the corndodger, the field-corn and the toe-corn—which is the corn you feel most. It is said, I believe, that gophers like corn, but persons having corns do not like to go far if they can help it. Corns have kernels and some grow on ears, but animal corn grows on feet, at the other end of the body. Another kind of corn is the scurf; these kind grow on onks, but there is no hoax about the corn. Many a man when he has a corn wishes it was an acorn. Folks who have corns sometimes send for a doctor, and if the doctor himself is corned he won't do so well as if he isn't. The doctors say corns are produced by tight boots and shoes, which is probably the reason why, when a man is tight, they say he is corned. If a farmer manages well he can grow a good deal of corn on an acre; but I know a farmer that has one corn that makes the biggest acher on his farm. The bigger crop of vegetable corn a man raises the better he likes it, but the bigger crop of animal corn he raises he does not like it. Another kind of corn is the corndodger. The way it is made is very simple, and is as follows, that is if you want to know: You go along the street and meet a man you know has a corn, and who is rather a rough character; then you step on the toe that has the corn on it, and see if you don't have occasion to dodge. In that way you will find what a corndodger is.
