Get into the "Ring."

There is a feeling against certain individuals, and against a body of them, to which the terms "boss" and "ring" are often incorrectly attached. which exists through the ignorance or wilful misrepresentation of jealous and fault-finding people. It is often true that a so-called "boss" is simply one who has the courage of his convictions, and the ability to so state his opinions that persons with less strong individuality follow naturally his lead.

Many of the "rings" which are bit terly and sneeringly opposed by a disgruntled minority, are simply a number of persons who are willing to make sacrifices, spend their time and cash, and work shoulder to shoulder in an effort to accomplish what they elieve to be right. Investigate most cases, whether in or out of politics, they are composed of people who success of their organization than for personal ends and profit—because of enthusiasm, and a high appreciation of what is required of them as citi-work and earnest co-operation in whatever we may undertake to do; organization, after a system in which each opposing element meets counter resistance, implies that like a machine, if effective work is to be produced, each part must be kept in perfect order by the different members and be personally directed by a competent head. This head, then, in the minds of many, becomes the "boss," and the organization, the "ring." No one, it seems, who is an active worker, can escape the application of these terms; if someone in his own party or faction does not apply it, the oppos-requirements of patriotic citizenship.

Leaders are indispensable, but all leaders are not "bosses." Don't forget this. Before you pronounce a man "boss," look into the matter and find out whether there is cash, or personal advantage at the end of his road, other than what his efforts entitle him to. Look over his past course, and count up how much money or power he has secured as a result of his manipulations. See whether he has been the monkey using the cat's paw to pull chestnuts out of the fire for his own delectaence between leader and "boss."

It is a lamentable weakness of our system of politics, that too little in_ patriotic, or essential to good citizenship, than that our local elections | Mexico. and affairs, should receive the attention and supervision of the whole membership of the party or opinion which they believe to be right. The late rise in prices of farm produce is certainly very gratifying, parthere is already an advance in the carners' dollars are double in number, but price of many of the goods which the agriculturist has to buy, and, as manfeeling and raise our hopes, rather than to justify boastful predictions of much better times. When produce goes up, so will the things for which it is exchanged-this is sure-and, if the fluctuation of prices of merchandise would follow closely the prices of marketable goods, and in the same ratio, there would be less need to care for low prices.

The price of grain, for instance, is affected directly by the manipulations of speculators, by the weather, by the destruction caused by numerous pests, and by foreign demand, and with it, according to directions, and none of these things have much to do within an hour I was completely rewith the prices of manufactured arti-the business. While there is certainly not much gained by howling calamity and hard times for any reason, and never creditable when used for some selfish end, it is equally inadvisable to blow too much about prosperity and better times, when only the dust of their approach is seen in the distance. Some newspapers in their anxiety to prove a political claim to their own satisfaction, may by their rash statements. succeed in producing a feeling over the country in reference to the times, which is wholly incorrect. It would no doubt be very much better if such things were left to their own development, and it would also be best that our markets should not be influenced by gambling speculators, for identical

Silver and Gold.

The following editorial from the Baltimore Sun of Saturday is so plain "rings," and it will be found that in and easily understood, that we reproduce it entire. It is so seldom that the silver question is discussed in work, work conscientiously along cer- language which people can undertain lines-more frequently for the stand, with out getting a headache, that this article is refreshing;

The money question is not, as Mr. Edmunds well said at Philadelphia, to be decided by party action, but "by the political action that the Romans referred to when every man was for the State." He aptly quoted Jefferson's great The present age demands active maxim: "The whole art of government consists in being honest."

Down at the bottom of this money question is one of honesty. By that we do not mean to say that every man is dishonest who favors free silver coinage at 16 to 1 by this country alone, with no other nation in the same commerical class joining. Far from it, for we are confident that thousands of the free-silverites believe that it would be both an honest and a wise thing to do. All the more imperative is the duty of educating them to a clear perception of the dishonesty and danger of it.

ilver by this country, without international treaty, would lead us straight and quickly to a silver monometallic basis. Our gold would at once fly the country and leave us on the same financial footing as Mexico, Central and South America and the Asiatic nations. Freesilver coinage is nothing less than a proposal to degrade this country from the rank of the first-class to that of the fourth-class commerciai nations. It would not bring back the old standard dollar worth only fifty cents. Yet it would not give us such benefits as come from

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

James H. Reindollar, No one need be much of a prophet to foresee that the general adoption of the Cream Separator on the farm will be the next step of progressive dairying. To-day there is but one impulse actuating all dairy operations, and that is greater economy in production, and a higher quality in the manufactured goods. And so it s all through, and so it must always be. If an easier and cheaper way of doing old and familiar work is found, the new plan must be adopted in the name of economy sooner or later. One of the points elaborated by practical men is, that with a Separator used beside the Cooley and other sys-tems, the yield of butter cannot be equalled by the gravity system, even under the most favorable circumstances. The gain over other systems We have the goods you want at prices you can afford to pay and easily average 15 to 25 per cent. Further, the machine takes out mi-nor particles of dirt and sediment that neither straining nor any other meth od, has been able to remove before. In the maufacture of Butter upon the LADIES', MEN's and CHILDREN'S | farm, the farmer who uses a Separator has every point of vantage, and all the claims of the creamery system are applicable to his work. He draws the milk from the cow's udder in the best of condition, and within a few moments has in his possession the raw material for the manufacture of butter, just at its inception and in its purest form. With skill and cleanliness, the product of his dairy should be Gilt edged and fit for the gods.

Thousands of Separators are in us now, and the prejudices with which the machine was first confronted have been overcome. The only question that a dairyman need ask now is, "Will it pay? # SWEET MEMORIES.

THE MELODY GRANDMOTHER SANG FIFTY YEARS AGO.

"As I Lay My Heart on Your Dead Heart, Douglas, Douglas, Tender and True." When Old Age Recalls the Dreams of the Past as Visions, There Is Tragedy. Three generations sat in the soft glow nothing else in the park attracts any attention at all from the children.

of the deep crimson lamp shade that mellowed everything in the little parlor. There was one daughter seated at most of all was glorified by the ruddy rays from the translucent paper that fell over her. There was the mother, and beside her sat the mother's mother, near the circumference of the halo, the one listening with a glow of pride, the other, to whom the girl's voice was new -the grandmother was a visitor at the house—listening as one who hears a voice calling in a lonesome place. She sat there thinking, thinking, thinking, did this dear old soul, of a day when she, too, had sat at the piano herself, so proudly, and had sung the tender ballads of that bygone day with a voice full of passion, a deep contralto voice, one that touched the heart in its most sacred depths, when the strong, clear notes were struck and then broke into a pleading tremolo in the upper register. Fifty years ago that grandam's voice had thrilled hearts now dust, or worse than dust-hearts that were numb to tender things-and there was borne in the burden of her songs one message, that of love-even before her heart had known its meaning her voice had spoken love. The voice of the girl sitting at the piano was like her grandmother's had been. It hunted chords in the hearts of those who heard her and set them pulsing in echo to her own sweet longing that could find no words. God only knows what long, silent, rusted chords she touched with her resonant voice, did this child, in her grandmother's soul.

She sang the simple ballads of the day—"Last Night," "The Clang of the Wooden Shoon," "Marguerite"—and as she sang her mother, to whom the singing was an old story, slipped out of SURREYS, the room-taking all her years with her perhaps-and left them together, together even in youth that sees visions. The young shall see visions, and the old shall dream dreams, saith the prophet. But when, by some magic of a voice or some alchemy of the soul, old age, which has dreamed dreams, sees in one vivid flash of light the dreams of the past as visions—there is tragedy.

The girl under the crimson lamp shade turned idly from leaf to leaf in her portfolio and sang by piecemeal. The elder woman only asked that she keep on singing. She only asked to hear that voice, her own voice, to the very quaver on C. And her dreams were all but visions, and life was all but youth again. There had been a wild song, one that the hearer did not know, and the chorus sobbed out:

Oh, is it forever, Love, that we must sever, O love, will you never Come back again?

And the story that the song told of was of two lovers who had met under of fancies the singing of the child sent music did not cease. The girl recalled a sweet old song, a peaceful, sorrowful ditty our grandmothers sang:

Could ye come back to me, Douglas, Douglas,
In the old likeness I knew,
I'd be so faithful, so loving, Douglas, Douglas,
Douglas, tender and true.

The girl sang on until she thought she had tired her grandmother, and then whirling around on the stool she said G. W. DEMMITT.

'Well, grandma, how do you like it? Haven't I improved in ten years?" even waiting for a reply, as is the way the room humming:

Now all men beside are to me like shadows, Douglas, Douglas, tender and true.

The girl went to her mother, who, she knew, was attending to some duties of the household. The words "all men woman's head when the girl left the a trial. room, and she was thankful for the child's thoughtlessness which had left her alone for a moment. The spell of the pleading song was upon her. Her life was turned backward.

Young faces smiled at her. She seemed as bold as youth, this shy old woman, who two hours before had been afraid to protest against the overcharge of a cabman. She heard her daughter's steps and the child's in the room above her, and, thrilled with the mesmeric enchantment of the song, she became if she could not sing the old song again.

She tiptoed about the room, and closing the doors and looking ever behind her, she circled to the piano.

She wished to sing out loud something that was in her heart, to put it into words and let it come from her lips. She believed that to say the aching words would ease a throbbing in her heart. She could not at first bring herself to begin the song, so she fumbled among the keys, pretending to hunt for the air, and said the words of the first stanza to herself in silence. She touched the pianissimo pedal of the instru-"I don't like this soup. It is not ment; then, as her hands upon the keys good." ALBION HOTEL, *

Visitors continued to be attracted to Sulphur Springs in numbers, and soon more hotels and boarding houses sprang into existence. Early in the present century, a hotel was opened in the building now accupied by Marshall Lambert, and was subsequently conducted by one Dick Burgess, a famous character of the time. He had the reputation of being a great win-ner at cards, but his methods were not always commendable. Once upon a time, a peddler, with a pack of large dimensions strapped to his back, stopped for a night's lodging at Dick's Hotel. The peddler not knowing his loading at his proposition. game moved along lively and interesting, Dick losing every one-interesting to Dick because he could 'laugh in his sleeves'—and interesting to the poor peddler, because Dick's spirits were sustained, and not depressed. Finally they agreed to put up stakes, then Dick commenced to win. They played until the ped-dler lost every cent, and he then commenced to bank on his pack for stakes. Towels, shawls, clothing, handkerchiefs, etc., were put up and swept away by the irrepressible Dick, until the pack was exhaused, and the poor peddler bankrupt. Then he be-gan to realize his losses, and rising excitedly from the table said. "Burgess, you learn faster than any Dman I ever saw." Poor Dick is gone, and even his tombstones do not speak of those qualities for which some loved him. Prior to Burgess' Hotel, the residence now occupied by Mr. George Granite, Md. C. Anders was kept as a hotel by Overton Harne. In 1835, John D. Woods opened a hotel in, or adjoining the lower end of the hotel now controlled by Mr. Louis Dielman. In front, there was displayed a very large red sign upon which was peculiarly painted the King of Prussia, dressed in military costume. This sign was suspended from a tall post, planted for the purpose. Mrs. Woods

ducted a hotel for a short time in the present residence of the latter, and in about 1842, Mr. Atlee, after being in sisted upon by many friends, opened a large boarding house in the hotel now owned by Mr. Dielman. He succeeded in drawing a large number of refined and influential guests, who came to spend the summer and take advantage of the sulphur springs. His influence in the Presbyterian church brought guests from Washington, Baltimore and other points, and among whom were Drs. Robert J. Breckenridge, Mushgrave and Back-

After Mr. Atlee discontinued his boarding place, Thomas Bartholow opened a hotel in the old Conoway property, recently purchased by Mr. Louis H. Dielman, and as quickly torn Bartholow. An unenviable character named Moses Cullison frequented the ranch, and upon one particular occasion, he imbibed too freely and became offensive to Poole. They wrangled until matters became desperate, and finally, in order to get rid of Cullison, Poole challenged him to fight a duel. No quicker was the challenge given than was it accepted. By this time, quite a crowd congregated on the street. Poole and Cullison next selected their seconds, into whose hands two rifles were given to be loaded and submitted to the duelists at their call. The ground was measured and staked, and the antagonists took their respective positions without fear or trembling. The seconds delivered the deadly weapons, time was called, and order given. "Fire." Bang! bang! rang out the shots, and Thomas Poole fell automatically to ly buried under a certain familiar old chestnut tree, from whose branches, in his youthful days, he threshed down the prickly burrs and rifled their contents." That tree stood on a farm in Baltimore county. The joke was carried far enough, so finally Cullison was made promise solemnly, that when liberated, he would never face was never seen again. CHURCHES,

Man is a natural worshipper. As the solitary astronomer in his observatory above the sleeping city watches the magnificent sweep of the stars in their courses, so do man's reason and insight eatch the sweep of divine and eternal forces. Thus, his devotion ever aspires to an ideal superior True it is that antiquity and tradition shed a halo around historical personages, and we endow them with powers and graces they never possessed or claimed. Our ideal Christ, Plato or Washington never lived. It was not until yesterday that our conceptions of them bade us believe they were fully human. Now we believe the inspiration of Whit-

While Secretary Carlisle has repeatedly stated that he does not desire to return to the senate, it is said to look as if he will be Senator Blackburn's successor, whether he wants to be or not. Blackburn in his canvass has repeatedly lost his temper, and made enemies by his bitter attacks on Carlisle, and, while the opinions of the latter may not be endorsed by his party as a whole, he is loved, and his ability is respected, by every Kentuckian, and, it is extremely probable that he will be compelled to be Blackburn's opponent for the

Mr. Edwin Warfield, president of the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland, has just returned from an that when liberated, he would never again make a disturbance in New Windsor. He left the town, and his Chicago. In each city he came in contact with many of the leading bankers, merchants and members of the bar and bench, and was afforded a splendid opportunity to ascertain the prevailing sentiment in the West in regard to the business outlook in that section. In an interview with an American reporter, Mr. Warfield stated that he found the people in the West to be largely in favor of free coinage of silver; in fact, that seemed to be the sole talk from a political standpoint, and he feared that the party that embodied in its national platform the free coinage of silver would capture the votes of the majority of the Western people .-- American.

What affects my business more than anything else is the bicycle. This diminishes the use of a better class of horses, a class not affected materially by the substitution of electricity for horses on street railways. The bicycle takes the place of the gentleman's riding horse, of the lady's riding horse, of buggy and carriage horses, and of the youngster's pony. People in general do not realize how disastrous the bicycle has been to the market for these kind of horses."

Mr. De Lome, the Spanish minister to the United States, has called the attention of the State Department to allegations that filibustering expeditions against Spanish authority in Cuba are being fitted out in the bayous of the lower Mississipi River. ### To keep out Flies.

"I never use window screens." said a wise housekeeper the other day, "because I have a fancy that they shut out all the air in hot weather, and, besides, they serve to keep the flies in the house equally as well as out. My remedy is a very simple one. I learned it years ago from my grandmother, when I used to watch her Louis H. Dielman, and as quickly torn away. Thomas had the patronage of many lively denizens in his ranch. He had a particular fascination for dominoes, and would frequently encourage the game in his house but seemed to be religiously opposed to card playing. He would conscientiously fight, or reverently eject patrons, who would attempt to play cards. Very frequently, a citizen named Thomas Poole kept bar for Bartholow.
