ENTERED AT TANEYTOWN POSTOFFICE AS SECOND CLASS MATTER.

SATURDAY, SEPT. 8th, 1900.

WITH THE LION, the bear and the eagle, turned loose in the China shop, no wonder there is commotion in the celestial empire.

KEEP YOUR HEAD level from now until the middle of November. It is a good plan to read the "other side," occasionally in order that your thinker doesn't get warped.

WE ARE RUNNING but two special offers—with the N. Y. Tribune (Rep.) and N. Y. World (Dem). The weekly edition of the former, with the RECORD, one year is $1.25; with the tri-weekly, $1.75. The latter, tri-weekly, with the RECORD one year, $1.65. These papers will give the news of the Presidential campaign as well as the general news of the world.

AT LAST, the Sun and Ex-Senator Gorman have enlisted in a common cause—the election of Bryan. Should Maryland go Democratic and Gorman receive the credit for it, we imagine that the gratification of the Sun over the present administration's defeat will be decidedly lessened by the thought of Gorman's portion of the glory. Considering all phases of the situation, the Sun's enmity to President McKinley must be a fine article.

CRAM'S MAGAZINE for August gives its usual careful attention to the history of the past month; "The Great Crisis in China," "Russian Expansion," "The Anglo-Boer War," "The Philippine Insurrection," recent affairs in South America, and the "Ashantee War," being among the titles of this historical portion. Of more peaceful matters nearer home, there are articles on "American Railroads," "The Hog as a Food Supply," "Our Foreign Trade," "Mr. Bryan and His Coventions," "Our Common Poisons," "Musical Instruments," and in addition to these is the continuation of "Minette, a Tale of the Crusades."

Seasonable Advice.

Don't attend the Agricultural Fair this fall with the idea that it is an institution especially for the benefit of "agriculturists," or that it is largely attended by them, unless you want to be greatly mistaken.

If you do go, and find more "side shows," "fakes" and gambling devices, than machinery and live stock, remember that these devices have been provided largely for the purpose of satisfying those who want to be "taken in"—as Barnum said, for those who "want to be humbugged."

If you find a "midway" and the innocent looking "three card" and "shell" games, you have then the opportunity of being amused and of gathering "experience," in the same day, but be sure your return ticket is safe deep down in your trousers pocket.

If you should happen to possess both a gold tucker and a Waterbury, experience has demonstrated that the latter is decidedly the best time keeper on such occasions—leave the former at home, along with any surplus cash you may have.

Don't get smart, and "play the races." Sometimes, "money makes her go slow." You can't always tell about such things, and it's often very expensive trying to find out.

On the whole, we advise against giving your girl an outing at the Fair," because it's cheap. Better save up until you can afford a better show; besides, most of the very nicest girls really don't appreciate such jaunts.

We may not be agreed with, by many, especially by those with "axes to grind," but don't get it into your head that these Fairs are philanthropic institutions. The cold truth, is, they are after your "free silver," and it is calculated that what you can't conveniently spend on the grounds, you will surely leave in the towns, for refreshments or merchandise.

Don't count car fare, admission to the grounds, and dinner, as the whole cost of the trip. Many good scholars have tripped up on this simple sum in addition; better count it up, then multiply the result several times, for the correct cost.

"Want a suit of clothes," do you? That's a gray haired old excuse of very bad reputation. There is really only one suit more expensive than the average suit bought at a Fair, and that is a law suit. If you want to go, for the sake of "having a time," do so, but don't work the "clothing wanted" gag—pay your home merchant for the one you owe him, or the chances are he will trust you to another.

This advice is not given, as covering the whole subject. The fact is, there is no use in being wasteful of even such a cheap commodity as advice. Barnum, was right—only, don't come home and complain of hard times, especially if there are any "little bills," related to you, standing around.

An Appeal for "Fruit."

The Jeffersonian (Littleton, Pa.) is responsible for the following communications:

"Will Hon. C. H. Dutta tell why he assisted in the scheme to rob The Jeffersonian of its well earned and truly honest fruits of the recent Democratic victory in the county?"

The Jeffersonian desires to know whether the present board of County Commissioners intend to continue to ignore it, and continue giving favors to Republicans.

If we understand the true English inwardness and outwardness of the above direct questions, we suspect that our contemporary desires the plum tree of the democratic county administration to be shaken for the benefit of the democratic Jeffersonian simply because it is Democratic, and no questions asked.

Evidently, our logic cannot be at fault, as the language quoted is most positive. We admire the style used, as it goes right at the heart of the subject without any frills, or waste of elegant conventionalities. The Jeffersonian wants "fruit"—the fruit of "well earned and truly honest" in "the recent Democratic victory in the county," and furthermore, it wants to know whether the "present board" intends to "continue to ignore" the debt, and also "continue giving favors" (fruit) to the Republicans. In other words, it demands to know whether this particular code of political ethics is going to continue indefinitely; if so, where is the use in worrying along in an orchard of democratic journalism, barren of "fruit" for the faithful?

We acknowledge the regularity of the Jeffersonian's evidence and claim; and in a general way, the assumption, that, "To the victors belong the spoils." Still, there is a difference—an exception—to be observed. The victorious party, under regulation politics, has a right to the offices, providing they be given to competent, rather than the "earning," individuals. The party, and the people, are bigger than an individual, or newspaper, with only "earning" capacity to back his, or its claims. Generally, the selection is sufficiently large to supply proper servants, and the public service is well rendered.

The exception—and we do not mean to be personal—is in the division of the spoils among newspapers—our complaints, "fruits of victory." That a newspaper is thick-and-thin Democratic, or Republican, as the case may be, does not, of necessity, carry with it title clear to the "fruits." Newspapers are not as numerous as individuals, and very greatly in value as they relate to the public service they are able to render, therefore, the party emblem at the head of the editorial page should not alone stand for an absolute "fall," simply because the fortunes of politics happen to fall that way.

The RECORD has a claim on hand for public printing, but it is in the nature of better, and more economic public service, rather than a cry for "fruit." We do not want a reward for anything, except as we earn it, and can return therefor, to the people—not a party—a full equivalent. The rottenness of our system of politics rests almost wholly with just such demands as that made by the Jeffersonian, and this is especially true of public printing bills, many of which are simply levies on the people's money for political services rendered to party, and not for the work—the printing—done for the people.

The Hog Pen.

We have reached a point in our municipal development where the hog pen may well be reckoned among the mala prohibita. If no longer accepted by our size as a city, our intelligence, our culture and our enterprise. It is a relic of the dark ages, a gruesome inheritance from that remote period when the place was a village and when the inhabitants had to depend chiefly on their potato patch and their hog pens for subsistence. Now all these conditions are vastly changed. The village has given way to the embryonic city and the vegetable patch to the rapidly multiplying dwelling. Men no longer depend on what they grow in the garden and the pen for their living, but have instead profitable and permanent employment in the shops and in the varied lines of work and business incident to a great and thriving manufacturing town. Men no longer have to hoe cabbage and potatoes, at least on any very considerable scale; their time is infinitely more valuable at the lathe and planer. As to vegetables, they can buy them much cheaper, and better to boot, than they can raise them.

The same is true as to hogs. The time necessary to cultivate hogs is needed at the forge and the drill press. Pork is cheap and feed high; it costs more to raise hogs than to buy the meat. It is the height of folly and bad business management to bother with hog raising in town—to say nothing of the awful abomination and curse of the swine pen at the door of one's self and one's neighbor.

And yet, despite all these glaring reasons for not doing it, hundreds of people will persist in raising hogs and polluting the God-given atmosphere, with no profit to themselves and infinite detriment to the entire community, including the owners of the hogs. This business is not confined to the laboring man, who, were there anything in it for him, might be indulged, but it is some of the richest and best-to-do people in the town have their back logs decorated with a pen of hogs. Not only that but some of the vilest and most filthy pest-haunts of this kind are maintained by men who count their wealth away up in the thousands.

It is now time to cut this whole abomination out by the roots, as one of the insufferable traditions from a barbarous age. The theory has been that the hog pen, properly built and drained and attended to, was not, per se, a nuisance or danger to health. That theory may be all very correct, but these conditions are just the ones that do not and cannot obtain here in our present state of development and habits of life. The town has gotten too large and the people too busy for the exercise of such police supervision and individual care as proper sanitation requires. Not even is the Board of Health able to cope with the difficulties under existing conditions.

Possibly it might be different if enough salary were paid to justify a capable and fearless official devoting his entire attention to the discovery and correction of nuisances.

The result is that, between the health officials and the owners themselves, the average hog pen has degenerated into an unspeakable nuisance and outrage, polluting and infecting the atmosphere and not only endangering life, but making it miserable.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy a Great Favorite.

The soothing and healing properties of this remedy, its pleasant taste and prompt and permanent cures have made it a great favorite with people everywhere. It is especially prized by mothers of small children for colds, croup and whooping cough, as it always affords quick relief, and as it contains no opium or other harmful drug, it may be given as confidently to a baby as to an adult. World's Wheat Crop.

The official statistics of the wheat crop of the world for 1899-1900 have been compiled by the Department of Agriculture. They show that in the countries of the Southern Hemisphere, whose wheat crops are commonly included in statements of the world's wheat crops, the production will hardly fall less than 100,543,000 bushels. This is 10,000,000 bushels short of last year's production. Australia and Chili are the only countries showing any material reductions.

The crop in Argentina last winter is believed to be about 105,000,000 bushels, about equalling last year's large figures. In 1898-99 Uruguay's wheat crop exceeded 7,000,000 bushels. The only department of Uruguay yet officially reported has a crop over 8 per cent smaller than the previous year, but it is thought unlikely that such a reduction was general throughout Uruguay. Figures for Australasia indicate a deficiency of several million bushels.

The colonies of the Australian mainland, as a whole, to have fallen somewhat short of their production of 1898-99, and with the chances in favor of some reduction in the crop of Tasmania, the deficiency for Australasia as a whole, in comparison with the previous year's crop, can hardly be more than, and may be somewhat more, than 6,000,000 bushels.

The Chilean crop of 1898-1900 was so small as to be insufficient for home requirements during the current year. Indeed, Chile was said to be importing wheat as early as May last, or within a few months after the completion of her harvest.

Notwithstanding the Indian famine, the 1900 wheat crop in Bengal, northwest provinces, and Oudh and the Punjab was above the average, taking these three divisions together. Elsewhere the crop has been a lamentable failure. The Indian wheat crop, as a whole, amounted to 182,582,000 bushels, against 236,679,000 bushels in 1899, and an annual average of 225,486,000 bushels for the preceding five years.

Accounts from the southwestern governments are unfavorable as regards winter wheat, which in the years 1894-95 formed, on an average, over 93 per cent of the total crop of these three governments. The Russian wheat crop, as a whole, is anticipated at somewhat below the average. The small amount of spring wheat was expected to yield about an average crop. The South Russian yield will not be so large as expected. Eastern Russia reports are quite favorable, and a report from Riga indicates that the crop in the provinces bordering the Gulf of Finland was making good progress. A report from Poland represents its wheat crop as the worst in many years, implying a deficit of several million bushels as compared with 1898 or 1899 in that division of Russia. More than an average crop is indicated for Central Sweden. In Germany somewhat above an average yield and good quality is indicated.

The Austrian wheat crop is rather poor and thin in some districts. The last figures received in the United States put the Hungarian crop at 135,000,000 bushels. Rumanian reports generally are favorable, but the total output may be below the average. The Bulgarian crop is reported unusually good, although it is, as was the crop of European Turkey, suffering somewhat from the rain during harvest. About an average crop is indicated for Italy, Switzerland and Spain.—Commercial and Financial World.

TRUSTEES' SALE
—OF—

in and near Taneytown, Carroll county, Maryland.

By virtue of a decree of the Circuit Court for Carroll County, sitting in Equity, passed on the 23rd day of August, 1899, in and to the said Court, wherein Anna M. Koons et alare plaintiffs, and James M. Koons is defendant, the undersigned Trustees appointed by said decree will offer at public sale on the premises, on the following described Real Estate: At 1 o'clock, a. m., Property No. 1, on the premises, HOSES AND LOT OF LAND situated on Middle Street, in Taneytown, Maryland, and known as the House of the late William W. Koons. This property is located in the most desirable part of said town, contains 1520 square feet of land, more or less, improved by a new large Weatherboarded House with front porch, Summer House, stable and other out buildings, and excellent well of water. It is known as Lot No. 11 on the plat of said town and was conveyed to William W. Koons, deceased, by E. E. Reindollar and wife, by deed dated April 1, 1895. Also, at 2 o'clock, p. m., on the premises; all that valuable farm, containing 15 1/2 ACRES AND 2 SQUARE PERCHES of land, more or less, situate on the public road leading from Taneytown to Roberts' Mill, about 1 1/2 miles from former place in Taneytown District, Carroll County, Md. and adjoining the lands of Geo. Diel, Matthew Harner et al, and is the same land known as the farm of the late William W. Koons, deceased, obtained from James Thompson and wife by deed dated April 3, 1888. This property is improved by a good substantial Weatherboarded House, New Bank Barn, Wagon Shed, Corn Crib, Backsmith shop and other necessary buildings, all in good repair. This is one of the best and most desirable farms in Carroll County, and is in excellent condition and production. Two wells of good water are on the premises, and about 15 acres of the above farm is in excellent timber. Also immediately after sale of Property No. 2, and at the same place, that tract of parcel of land, containing 3 1/2 ACRES, MORE OR LESS, adjoining said farm (Property No. 2), on which are a number of Fruit Trees. It is the same lot of land William W. Koons, deceased obtained from Caroline Davhoff by deed dated September 27, 1887. TERMS OF SALE.—One-third cash on the day of sale, and the balance in two years from the day of sale, the credit payments to be secured by the notes of the purchaser, with approved security, all bearing interest from the day of sale, or all cash at the option of the purchaser.

ANNA M. KOONS, EDWARD O. WANT, Trustees.

The Hog as a Food Supply.

By Dr. Eugene Murray-Aron, in Trans. Magazine for August.

It is often the source of wonder to many, especially those who live in the less salubrious confines of the large cities, how it comes that our country districts, and even those of them most healthily placed, furnish so much more than their share of disease among their inhabitants. Any one who has traveled and kept his eyes open in the rural districts will be aware of the fact that the country doctor, in proportion to the population round about him, is kept very much more busily occupied than is his city brother of equal experience or standing in his profession. With purer air and with every opportunity to procure purer water, with an outdoor life that we are led to believe preserves health and longevity, and with the freedom from intense worry and carking care that kills so many city dwellers, the rural inhabitant yet succumbs in a greater proportion than his numbers warrant to the inroads of such diseases as come from an abuse of the digestive system and faulty habits of diet.

The source of much of this trouble, of this undue proportion of disease where disease should be most easily averted, is to be found in the farmer's pigsty, and in the kitchen frying pan, which that pigsty so largely makes possible. He would be the greatest benefactor of his selctees who, coming into autocratic power in this country, should forever abolish the use of the frying pan and who should succeed in getting the porcine hoards of this country to grow up in the example of the Gadarene swine, of Biblical times, that drowned themselves in the sea. For the torpid liver and diseases which grow out of the abuse of hog products as food are at the bottom of a very great proportion of the diseases which make life unbearable, and this is especially true of those diseases which womankind most suffer from and regarding which so many of them are willing to bear testimony and give descriptions in the print of the proprietary medicine man.

I cannot do better in an attempt to explain just what I mean by an attack on hog products for food, and by hog diseases as a cause, than to quote freely from the words of Dr. J. H. Kellogg, as condensed from "Good Health," in a recent number of "Popular Science." Taking as directly from the pigsty, where we can examine his hogship in all the abominations of his filth, Dr. Kellogg thus tells us what to look for, and what to mean:

Gaze over into that sty of pork-eating friend. See the contented brute quietly reposing in the augmented filth of his own ordure. Look a little sharper and see the protruding ears smooth and healthy? Not exactly. So obscured is it by better and surer and manage that you must almost expect to see the rotted and putrid matter grunting creature rubs it against any projecting corner which may furnish him a convenient scratching place. You glance around in the pen, you observe that all such corners are well served by that smooth and healthy, you are so smooth as to be almost inefficient.

Stir up the beast, and make him show his gut. See how he rolls along a mass of fat. If he were human, he would be expected to drop off any day, of heart disease. And so he will, unless the butcher forestalls nature by a day or two.

But we have not half examined our hog yet; just clamber over into the reeking sty, and take a nearer view of the animal that is dead that is light the palates of some of your friends, perhaps your own. Make him straighten out his fore legs. Now observe closely. Do you see any redness or sore or issue a few inches above his foot on the inner side? and do you see it is a mere accidental abrasion? Find the same on the other leg; and, wise and wonderful provision of nature. Grasp the leg high up, and press downward. Now you see its utility, a mass of corruption pours out. That oozing is the outer part which discharges from it. Should you fill a syringe with mercury, or some cold injecting fluid, and inject it into the contents into this same opening, you would be able to trace all through the body of the animal little pipes composed of muscle and fat.

What dainty morsel those same fat and legs make. What a delicate flavor they have, as every epicure asserts. Do you suppose in proportion to which they are saturated with any influence upon their taste and healthfulness?

Now let us look at the inside of this delicious beast.

Just under the skin we find a mass of fat from two to six inches in thickness, covering a large portion of the body. What is this? "Lard," says the eyes, very truly; and, we will add, as synonims, disease, scrofula, torpid liver. Where did all that fat come from? How did it happen to be so packed around that poor hog's body? This fat is much greater in amount than ever exists upon the animal in a state of nature. It is evidently the result of disease. So, too, have been the habits of the animal, so great has been the foulness of its body that its excretory organs—the liver, lungs, kidneys, etc.—have been entirely unable to carry away the impurities which it has been all its life accumulating. And even the extensive system of sewerage, with its constant stream, which we have already described, was insufficient to the task of purging so vile a body of the debris which accumulated in every organ and saturated every tissue. Consequently, this great flood of disease, which made the blood a black, turbid current, was crowded out of the veins and arteries into the tissues, and there accumulated as fat.

Lard, then, obtained, is nothing more than extract of a diseased carcass. Who that knows its character would dare to delect himself with it?

The Latin serofa, which means "a sow." The ancient Romans believed that scrofula originated with the hog and animal, and has resulted from the tempt on the part of one brother to raise fruit, and on the part of the other to keep bees. The fruit raiser claimed that his brother's bees had stung his peaches and spoiled them, hence his demand for damages. And the court finds that he has a grievance, and awards the bees to the beekeeper. There are several other bee farmers in Warwick, and other suits will be brought against them by the owners of orchards. But how is it possible to decide who owns the offending bees, and who owns the quieter ones that stay near home and manufacture honey from the clover and the juice of other flowers? Nobody will pretend to say that he can distinguish the bees of one farmer from those of another. Were we bees ourselves, we should undoubtedly discover their individuality in our fellows as we discover in the human race, and as a wide variety likewise of temper and disposition. There are some of bad complexion and high complexion, bees that tipped and bees that kept sober, bees that raised whiskers, and bees that bit their whiskers off, temperamental bees with hot feet, and bees of placid manner and cold feet. But these differences are not plain to the dim eyes of men, and for any farmer to say that the bee he discovers in the act of drinking juice from his peaches or stealing pollen from the posies in his flower bed belongs to such and such neighbor, would be preposterous. Moreover, there are millions of bees that belong to nobody, but are scatters in adjacent groves, but here is the fruit grower to distinguish them. There may be what lawyers call a burden of proof, but a scientist would not accept it as such.

Now, my friend, assist your eyesight by a good microscope, and you will see that the original trouble is not caught a glimpse of the enormous filthiness of the loathsome pig. Take a thin slice of lean flesh, place it upon the stage of your microscope, adjust the eye-piece, and you have opportunity, if you are not too fortunate, you will find displayed before your eyes, hundreds of voracious little animals, each coiled up in its little cell, with its head and tail protruding, and beginning its destined work of devastation. A gentleman of eminence after very extensive researches asserts that the trichinae are found in at least one hog out of ten. Other investigations have shown a greater frequency of the disease.

This creature, when taken into the stomach, immediately penetrates the thin muscular walls of the stomach, and gradually works its way throughout the whole muscular system. It possesses the power of propagating a species with wonderful rapidity; so that a person once infected is almost certain to die a lingering death of excruciating agony.

In Helstadt, Prussia, one hundred and three persons were recently attacked and twenty of them died within a month.

It is not known how many deaths are really due to this cause, for many persons die of strange, unknown diseases, which baffles the doctor's skill. It is, however, a disease resembling other disease in some of its stages, and is often attributed to other than its true cause. It is thought by many to be a form of cholera, but the disease without its true nature being suspected.

As a hog is nothing better than an animal of mere physical element, how wise and good is the command of God: "It is unclean unto you. Ye shall not eat of their flesh nor touch their dead carcasses." Do those of you who shrink your shoulders at the thought of eating hog meat, who turn away in repulsion when they see them and make their arboral monkey as its toothsome as a gray squirrel, or who regard with abhorrence one who can eat the giant horned rattle (gigana) of the American tropics, yet who partake of the various products of this filthiest of all the animals, the hog, consider this picture overdrawn. Can you assure you that it is not the most common of diseases? Let any one travel through our Southern States and observe the very much greater proportion of scrofulous manifestations than are to be seen in any other land, especially among the blacks, whom "hog and hominy" are for many months each year almost their exclusive diet.

Statistics do not most unmistakable to the fact that the Jew suffers much less from diseases of a scrofulous, eroding, and cancerous nature than does the Christian. The latter may think of the unpermissible moral laws laid down by the writers, commonly called Moses, we cannot gaily say that the Jews are not more especially adapted to the subtropical climate, they were in advance not only of their own time, but even of the present day. Thirty-five hundred years ago they knew better than we do fitted for the vast army on the constant move than our late war administration in the time of the Spanish-American difficulty, when they sent our soldiers to torrid Cuba, largely supplied with fat bacon. There is no other flesh eating animal beside man, except the pig, who can be instantly fed upon some form of hog meat. The cat will always eat of very sparingly. The dog will soon learn to refuse to eat it, if repeatedly offered. Even the bird, which will eat it, will go by in time. If other food is at hand in sufficiency. Only the Southern negro, and in some cases his neighbor the Chinese, are the only races that are an example of an animal willing to subsist continually upon such unsuitable food, and our Southern negro, to-day do nothing but eat and drink of the member of the human race on the face of the globe. Even in Washington, where a high degree of sanitary science is attained in municipal affairs, and where a fair average of wages enables him to choose largely among the various articles of diet offered, the negro at present is passing away at a death rate more than twice that of the inhabitants of Manila, so constantly alluded to as a tropical disease breeding center. The diseases from which the negro dies in the main are those that may be termed "the hog diseases."

Have you ever picked up a pamphlet of testimonial issues by a poor patient medicine man, who has written of "blood remedies"? Three-fourths of them come from our isolated rural regions where fresh meats are less procurable and where "king disease" pan rules the household. And, what is still more observable, more than that proportion claim to be cured of their ailments, than do those who have indicated as products of overindulgence in lard and bacon and ham, and all the category of "hog tainted."

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Thirty Years of Suffering.

"I suffered for thirty years with diarrhoea and thought I was past being cured," says John S. Hallaway, of French Camp, Miss. "I had spent so much time and money and suffered so much that I had given up all hopes of recovery. I was so feeble from the effects of the diarrhoea that I could do no kind of labor, nor could I travel, but by accident I was permitted to find a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and I have since been cured. I am an entirely cured of that trouble. I am so pleased with the result that I am anxious that it be in reach of all who suffer from it. For sale by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

Bees and Peaches.

A curious suit, brought by brother against brother, was tried in Warwick, N. H., on the 12th inst. The plaintiff, a farmer, brought suit against the defendant, a beekeeper, for the loss of his peaches and spoiled them, hence his demand for damages. And the court finds that he has a grievance, and awards the bees to the beekeeper. There are several other bee farmers in Warwick, and other suits will be brought against them by the owners of orchards. But how is it possible to decide who owns the offending bees, and who owns the quieter ones that stay near home and manufacture honey from the clover and the juice of other flowers? Nobody will pretend to say that he can distinguish the bees of one farmer from those of another. The Bravery of a Woman.

Was grandly shown by Mrs. John Dowling of Butler, Pa., in a three years' struggle with a malignant disease of the stomach. Her frequent attacks of nausea and indigestion. Her remedies failed to relieve her until she tried Electric Bitters. After using it two months, she writes: "I am now wholly cured and can eat anything. It is truly a grand tonic for the whole system as I gained in weight and feel much stronger since using it." It aids digestion, cures dyspepsia, improves appetite, gives new life. Only 50c. Guaranteed, at R. S. McKinney's drugstore.

Doughnuts.

Seal a pint of sweet milk, to which add two tablespoonfuls of butter, and set aside to cool. Then add a half-cupful of yeast, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and flour sufficient to make a soft dough; work lightly, cover and start the yeast. When ready, roll out as light, roll out, cut into doughnuts with a large, round cutter, cut out the centers, lay on a floured bread-cloth, and fry in a kettle of boiling oil, an hour. Fry in a kettle of boiling fat, turning as fast as one side is brown in order to brown the other. When done, take up, drain, and then dust with powdered sugar. Thus made, they are very nice.

Outs and Bruises Quickly Healed.

Chamberlain's Pain Balm applied to a cut, bruise, burn, scald or laceration will instantly allay the pain and will heal the parts in less time than any other treatment. Unless the injury is very severe it will not leave a scar. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism, sprains, swellings and lameness. For sale by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

Sweet Potato Puffs.

Steam six medium-sized sweet potatoes, wash them and mash them; add one tablespoonful of white sugar, two teaspoonfuls of butter and a little salt; beat until light, and turn into a greased tin, filling them evenly; brush the tops with the white of an egg and bake in a quick oven. These may be served for breakfast or dinner.

AN ITALIAN WOMAN WHO IS A TIRELESS WORKER FOR HER PEOPLE.

The "Society Bee"—Saving Scrofulous Food—The Advanced Woman of Paris—The Art of Entertaining—Carlyle's Wife.

Almost a lifetime devoted to the woman of her nationality is the record of Mrs. Anna Casareto, of 369 Milwaukee avenue, the wife of F. Casareto, a retired candy manufacturer and a leading member of Chicago's Italian colony. Mrs. Casareto has been in the United States for 42 years and is a native of Genoa, her father, Joseph Casareto, arriving here some years previously. The family first settled at New Orleans and later at Cincinnati, where in September, 1865, young Anna Nasano became the wife of F. Casareto.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE FISH LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES

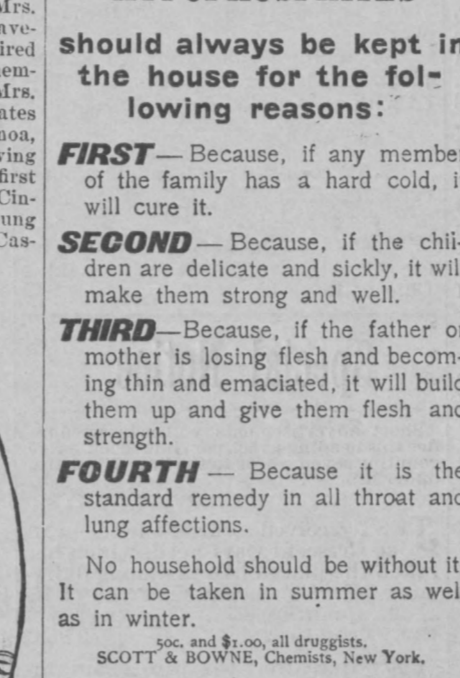

should always be kept in the house for the following reasons:

FIRST—Because, if any member of the family has a hard cold, it will cure it.

SECOND—Because, if the children are delicate and sickly, it will make them strong and well.

THIRD—Because, if the father or mother is losing flesh and becoming thin and emaciated, it will build them up and give them flesh and strength.

FOURTH—Because it is the standard remedy in all throat and lung affections.

It is at once covered with salt, the odor arising is immediately arrested and the flavor can be more easily cleaned than when the article is allowed to burn off.

If boiled or mashed potatoes must stand for a little while before serving, the best plan is to keep them only laying three or four thicknesses of a clean soft cloth directly over them, then covering the kettle closely and setting it where it will keep warm. The second best plan is to serve for two or three hours at a time. The cloth absorbs the steam and prevents the potatoes from becoming heavy and soggy.

If soft cloth is put into the steamer, and the slices of bread or cake to be steamed are laid in this and the corners folded over them before the steamer gets closely covered, it will absorb the moisture that collects in the steamer and the slices will be fresh, light and perfectly free from soginess.

For bread, the slices should be warmed up and be as palatable as freshly baked ones, if they are dipped into hot water and then put into the oven, care being taken to keep the water from getting into the bread. The slices should be long enough to get perfectly hot, but not long enough to become hard.

Wm. B. Dutta, Ph. D., of Cincinnati, Ohio, is here on a visit to his parents.

Chas. E. Yount, of Harrisburg, Pa., was here this week on his annual squirrel hunt.

Pennsylvania county papers are already publishing lists of public sales for next March.

Miss Salie Hoffman, of Woodboro, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. G. W. Grotle, on New St.

Milton Academy will open its doors for the coming school year, on Monday morning Sept. 10th.

Miss Effie Hess, of near town, has returned to Hampstead, where she is engaged as Principal in the Public School.

Frank Clingna, a young man well known in these parts, is "out" again. Without doubt, it is up to Frank to turn a new leaf.

Chas. B. Harbaugh has purchased a farm of 180 acres, at Fairfield, Pa., at $40.00 per acre, and will remove to his purchase in the spring.

Dr. Geo. T. Motter and family returned home, last Friday evening, from a two week's trip to Niagara, the St. Lawrence and Watkins' Glen.

N. B. Hagan has purchased, for his daughter, Miss Annie, a handsome pony and wagon which present quite a spry appearance on our streets.

The Uriah Zentz property, on the Middleburg road, containing 60 acres, was sold at public sale, on Thursday, to Theodore Feaser, at $40.00 an acre.

Andrew J. Ohler, of this district, has sold his farm to John W. Acl-house, and in turn purchased the house and lot owned by James L. Shriner.

Mrs. Joseph Kelly and daughter, Miss Joanna, have returned from a visit to friends and relatives in the neighborhood of New Windsor and McKinstry.

Clarence H. Forrest, Secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, Baltimore, spent Monday of this week, with his mother, in this place. He was accompanied by his wife.

Mr. John Baumgardner, of Willshire, Ohio, is in this district on a visit to his brothers, George W. and Franklin Baumgardner. John is the oldest member of the family, and a prosperous farmer.

William Vaughn, of this district left $1.00 at the office, saying, "Here is $1.00 for those poor starving children." The contribution will be forwarded next week, along with any others that may be handed in.

Wm. F. Clingan left, on Monday, for work in Hanover, Pa. For the first time in a number of years, carpenter work in this place is slack, owing, no doubt, to the advance in cost of building materials.

Mrs. I. M. Patterson died at her home in Trenton, N. J., last week. Mrs. Patterson was the wife of the Rev. I. M. Patterson, who was pastor of the Emmitsburg, Piney Creek and Taneytown Presbyterian churches, at one time.

Thaddeus Stevens held a camp, of New Windsor, with G. A. R., on Reinhold's grove, near Taneytown, Sept. 13th, 14th, and 15th. On Saturday, 15th., Dorsey's Oriole Band will be present, and a parade will be given.

Mrs. Amos Dutta returned from Ocean Grove, last Friday evening, having spent a very enjoyable season at this popular resort. She was met in Philadelphia, by her sons, William B. and Maurice, who had been at the Hyvelier resort, Atlantic City.

Mrs. Levi Buffington (Aunt Mary) and daughter Emma, of Charlotte, N. C., visited the family of J. Henry Lambert, this week. Mrs. Buffington is in the possession of her faculties to a remarkable degree, and looks twenty years younger than in reality.

H. E. Slagenaup, principal of the schools of Laurel, Del., well known here, was in town on Wednesday, looking as natural as ever. He will take charge of his position on the 17th. Mrs. Slagenaup and children have been visiting Mrs. S's home near Kamp.

Mr. James Neely attended, on Wednesday, the funeral of Noah Koontz, who was buried in the Lutheran cemetery at Emmitsburg. Mr. Koontz, who has been in feeble health for a number of years, served in Cole's cavalry from the beginning to the end of the Civil War, and was highly esteemed by his neighbors.

Irvin M. Fleagle, formerly of this section now a resident of Yorkers, N. Y., is spending the month of September with his relative and friends accompanied, by his friend, Albert Histon, of N. Y. Mr. F., is a very fond of hunting and is noted as a good marksman, so whatever is lawful to shoot, Mr. F., will claim it his.

Rev. J. F. Mackley, pastor of the Reformed church, Rev. W. J. D. Scherer, pastor of the Lutheran church, Captain E. McGinley and Clarence Musselman, all of Fairfield, Pa., spent a day Squirrel hunting with Sherman Sites, of this district. Miss Effie Hull, also of Fairfield, is visiting her aunt, Mrs. Sites.

Mr. Elmer Wantz, of Waynesboro, who has been ill with typhoid fever at Amos Wantz's, is improving. The disease was contracted at Waynesboro. Dr. Snively, of that place, who has a number of cases, says they are unquestionably due to "filthy barnyards and other foul nuisances." How is the sanitary condition of Taneytown, in this respect?

The Fire Company made a practice run, last Friday evening, from the hose house to the plug at Reinhold's warehouse, and then, to Bowersox & Reinhold's livery stable, having water on the building in exactly two minutes from the start. This was certainly a most satisfactory exhibition, and demonstrates what the boys can do in case of emergency.

Didn't Know the Country.

Englishmen know little of the geography of the "States" and what they do know does not object to putting Philadelphia next door to Boston, or San Francisco alongside of New York. An American and an Englishman, who had become friends aboard ship, had a pleasant encounter about distances on reaching New York.

"They breakfasted together and the following conversation ensued. "I guess I'll turn out to see Harry after breakfast," said the Englishman.

"Harry?" queried the American softly. "Yes, my brother," explained the Englishman. "I've two here. Harry lives in San Francisco and Charlie in Chicago."

"But you'll be back for dinner?" facetiously asked the American. "Sure for dinner, if not for lunch," he answered, and accompanied by his friend, now thoroughly alive to the humor of the incident, he found himself a few minutes later in the office of ticket buyers in the Grand Central Depot.

"An excursion ticket to San Francisco, stopping at Chicago station on return," he ordered. "The ticket agent put about a quarter of a mile of pasteboard under his eyes in order to give him time to look more, than it before the explorer and expectantly awaited payment."

"When does the train go?" asked the Englishman. "In ten minutes," was the answer. "How much is it?"

"One hundred and thirty-eight dollars and fifty cents." "What?" the Englishman gasped. "How far is it?"

"Six thousand miles." "Dear me! What a country!" Youth's Companion.

Staked His All and Won. The coasting young man and his young woman companion meandered into one of the swell restaurants and sat down at a table.

"I had met the young woman when he had not expected to. That explained the absence of his coat."

The waiter took their orders. "Then he went to the proprietor. There the waiter returned.

"Sorry, sah, but we can't serve shirt waist gentlemen in the presence of the lady," said the proprietor.

"The young man favored him with an eye stare. So did the young woman. Then they started out, but the young man fell behind, they young woman long enough to press the fourth part of a dollar into the waiter's hand and whisper:

"Your kindness and that of the proprietor will never be forgotten. My lady friend insinuated so strongly that she was so hungry that I was actually forced to ask her to dine. I have not got money enough to pay for the simplest kind of a lunch. If you had served us I would have had a fit. I staked my all and won. God bless you!" Indianapolis Sun.

SOWN BY GUNPOWDER. A Curious Case of Covering a Rocky Cross with Gunpowder.

In the grounds of the Duke of Athol and near Blair castle, England, stands a high, rocky crag named Craigiebarra. It looked grim and bare in the midst of beauty, and its owner thought how much prettier it would look if only trees, shrubs, etc., could be planted in its nooks and crannies. It was considered impossible for any one to scale its steep and dangerous crevices, and no other way was thought of to get seed sown.

One day Alexander Nasmyth, father of the celebrated painter, paid a visit to the duke's grounds. The crag was pointed out to him and he was told of the desire of the duke regarding it. After some thought he conceived how it could be accomplished. In passing the castle he noticed two old cannon. He got a few small cartridges made to fit the bore of the cannon and filled them with a variety of tree, shrub and grass seeds. The cannon was loaded in the usual way and fired at the rock from all sides.

The little canisters on striking the rock burst, and the seeds in all directions. Many seeds were lost, but many more fell into the ledges or cracks where there was a little moss or earth. These soon showed signs of life, and in a few years grassy trees and pretty climbing plants all sown by gunpowder were growing and flourishing in nearly every crevice of the formerly bare, gray crag, clothing it with verdant beauty.

Breeding Animals in Cuba. Mrs. Hugo Lange of Brooklyn has undertaken the betterment of the condition of animals in Cuba. During a visit to the island in winter she was shocked at the treatment of the horses and mules.

One of the peculiar institutions to which she was introduced was a nose bride, a sort of iron muzzle with saw edges, used on the Cuban mule instead of a bit. A strap attached to a ring in the muzzle and running up over the forehead of the animal keeps the nose bride in place. The reins are fastened to the outer ends. When the Cuban wishes to stop his mule, he pulls on the reins, and the edges of the nose bride saw grooves in the breathing apparatus of the animal and shuts off his air supply.

On her return to this country Mrs. Lange invoked the aid of President Haines of the S. P. C. A. in New York City, and issued of his help, she is planning to send a party to Cuba with the idea of having the government take the initiative in protecting animals in Cuba.

DODGING A GRIZZLY.

A LIVELY EXPERIENCE WITH AN OLD, DIRTY FACED SILVER TIP.

Why Two Hunters Felt Glim After Their First Meeting With Mr. Bruin—A Race One Man Was Honored and Earnestly Trying to Win.

"Speaking of bear," said the mining expert as he lit a cigar and leaned back comfortably in the corner of the smoker, "there's nothing sadder to meet out than an old, dirty faced silver tip. He's a boss between a grizzly and a brown, and he crosses generally, he inherits all the meanness of both sides of the family. Old Dirty Face is always ugly about something, and he goes around fairly spitting for a fight."

"Any one ever meet him? Well, I had a scrap with one out in the Buffalo Hunt country last year, and I shan't forget it in a hurry. I was out there looking for some mines, and one day I took a little stroll all alone to see what I could find. We were right in the midst of the big mountains, a hundred miles from anywhere, and the finest game country on the continent. I had my Springfield with me, although I wasn't carrying for game just then, but some times game hunts you, and then you've got to fight, climb or run."

"Along toward evening as I was starting back for camp, I heard something which I thought was the growl of a bear. I saw Mr. Dirty Face ambling along a couple of hundred yards behind me and making more interest in me than I liked. I didn't need any bear particularly, as there were no good trees handy, only a few little ones that didn't count."

"In the canyon below me was a good sized stream, and I made for that, thinking I could throw the bear off down by the water. When I came to the bank, I found a mountain torrent 30 or 40 yards wide and deep and noisy booming. I skirted up the bank pretty fast for some time, and then I saw a rock well out from shore that I thought I could reach. I jumped on it, and he jumped at me above and by hard work reached the rock all right. I didn't believe Mr. Bear would tackle me there, but there was where I was, and he was on my trail. He sniffed once or twice, sighted me on the rock and promptly struck in."

"The bear swung and the current was so swift that he missed the rock a few yards and so gave me a good shot. I let him have the best I had, and I made him kick, but he reached the shore all right, and now his clamber was up a crag, and I plugged at him again, but it didn't seem to count. On he came, higher up this time and sighted better for the rock. I waited for him, and when he leaped he was big, ugly paws on my rock I let him have it in the throat, and that fixed him. He swept by, fairly making the water foam. It's the best I ever seen, and I want to be tried on a rock by a half-dressed bear."

"It's funny," said the doctor, whose curious eyes and square jaw betokened plenty of experience. "The grizzly first plucks the nerve out of you. Two or three years ago I went hunting with a friend in Colorado. I had killed some big brown bears, and I thought I had killed plenty of it. But neither of us had killed a grizzly, and we were eager for the first chance."

"One day I happened to be out alone, as I came through a clump of quaking asp which I saw plump up against but a big grizzly busily employed in rooting around in the dirt after food."

"He hadn't winded me, and there I stood, just screened by the quaking asp, and I noticed to touch him on my gun while he went on merrily, entirely unconscious of my presence."

"Now or never," I thought as I brought my gun to my shoulder and carelessly sighted for his head. The next moment he began to wobble and an eagle seemed to seize the gun. I steadied myself, looked around for a convenient tree and tried again, the time for the shot had passed. Again the gun wobbled, and I ground my teeth in rage."

"The bear lifted his head, seemed to smell something on the wind and started off at a good gallop away from me. 'Well, old boy,' I thought, 'I can't hit you standing I can't run,' so I let him go."

"I felt pretty plum when I came into camp that night, but I didn't say anything. My friend was cooking supper, and he kept telling me how quiet I was. After we had lighted our pipes and sat by the fire thinking:

"What's the matter, old man? What are you so still about? He finally asked. "Oh, nothing," I said, trying to seem cheerful."

"Did you see a bear?" he persisted. "Yes, hang it, I did. I answered doggedly."

"Well, so did I," he said, and the incident was closed.

"We each got our bear afterward, however, so the disease didn't prove fatal."

"Well, gentlemen," said the commercial traveler, "I never hunted bear myself, but I heard a story the other day of some fellows who found one up in Montana."

"They were prospecting right up in the big bear country, but they let the bear alone, and the bear let them alone. One night they camped in a deep canyon, and while one was cooking supper the other started out with his shotgun to get some birds. Lots of birds up there. So same you can almost kill them with a stick."

"Pretty soon the man with the shotgun ran across a grizzly, and Mr. Grizzly was mad about something and started for him. The man hit the trail hard for camp, the bear right after him. When the fellow who was cooking supper heard the landslide coming down the mountain, he saw what was up and grabbed his gun to shoot. But he was afraid to shoot for fear of hitting his partner, so he couldn't do anything but yell."

"Run, r-n-n-t" he yelled, and the fellow who was cooking supper and a couple of links and the gravel flew faster than ever."

"Run, r-n-n-t" he howled, dancing around to try to get a shot."

"Run," yelled the other fellow. "Run? You fool, do you think I'm throwing this race?"—Portland Oregonian.

How He Got Out. Custodian—So you changed your mind about taking that fat as soon as you went to bed? "Run?" queried the partner. "Portly—Change nothing. Wasn't room in there even to change my mind. I just zacked out.—Denver News."

Hints For Housekeepers. Dried orange peel allowed to smolder on a piece of red-hot iron will kill any kind of odor and leave a fragrant one behind.

A solution of soda and water applied with a whisk broom kept for the purpose will remove the brown streaks in the room bowls made by sediments in the dripping water.

Refrigerators should be thoroughly cleaned once a week, sweeping, removing shelves and racks, washed in warm soda water, wiped dry and then sunned if possible.

The best remedy against ants is cayenne pepper. Spread it on the shelves of the store closet under the paper that covers them.

Add a little turpentine to the water when the floor is scrubbed. It will take away the close smell and make the room delightfully fresh.

Marks that have been made on paint can be removed by rubbing with whiting and washing with soap and water.

One can wear old, loose kid gloves while ironing, they will save many calloused spots on the hands.

If brass or copper after cleaning is rubbed with old soft newspapers, it will look much brighter and keep clean much longer.

A sprinkling of coarse salt on the sidewalks and driveways will destroy grass and weeds.
