ENTERED AT TANEYTOWN POSTOFFICE AS SECOND CLASS MATTER

SATURDAY, MARCH 23rd., 1901.

The Christian Herald now refuses all medicine advertisements, notwithstanding the fact that this action represents an annual loss of revenue of about $30,000. The Herald no doubt thinks that if it admits the class, at all, it cannot discriminate between the worthy and the unworthy, therefore, to be on the safe side, it excludes all. This action might be considered, without impropriety, by other religious periodicals.

WHILE APRIL 1st., does not represent general "settling day," to the extent that it once did, it is but fair to say that there is not as much business in this line falling due April 1st., as there was years ago. Many loans which were then made from individuals, are now made from banks, and the "due" dates are more or less distributed throughout the year. Still, it is yet the great financial day in the country, and should be more closely observed than it is.

Patriotic Editors.

A dispatch to the Sun, from Annapolis, published under the above caption, strikes us as being artistically sarcastic. It refers to the recent meeting of the Democratic editors of the state; or, as the Sun says, "the aggregate of thoroughly representative, industrious and hard-working Democratic journalists," who, as the dispatch further says, "established the rate of $150. for publishing the forthcoming proclamation of the Governor, submitting to the vote of the people three constitutional amendments."

From the same dispatch we also gather this further information: "The Governor's proclamation will require these amendments to be published in at least two newspapers in each county and in three newspapers in the city of Baltimore, one of which shall be in the German language."

"The county editors consider that the $150. rate for 13 insertions is very poor pay, but they are patriotically inclined and leave it to the city newspapers to charge full rates. The total number of county papers to make the publication is 48, and the total expenditure for advertising, not including the city, will be $6,900."

We regret that this subject cannot be handled by us without the appearance of its being a case of "sour grapes," and also of opposition to the "democratic" editors referred to. We assure those who may feel inclined to charge either or both, of these designs to us, that the point we wish to elucidate is one of very old standing in this office, and one which expects to remain a good while longer, unless the unexpected happens.

For the purpose of bringing out our point, it matters not to us whether the "special session" of editors represented democratic, republican or mugwump politics. It is the stand-and-deliver style of fixing the rate for this work, which, under the favorable laws in force in reference to publishing such items, must be paid by the state without recourse, that we want to emphasize. We are glad to know that the Sun considers the rate of $150., "patriotic," and "very poor pay," and we feel like spreading the glad tidings abroad.

Until these "amendments" actually appear, of course we cannot say whether the rate is "fat," or "poor," but we shall make it a point to do a little figuring on the job when the time comes. This interesting dispatch also said, "They have decided (the editors) to have their annual outing in the summer, either at Buffalo, to take in the Pan American Exposition, or at Fredericksburg."

The two important items being hitched together, is suggestive; possibly, if the Exposition of St. Louis was on the bills for this year, the "patriotic" rate of $150. would have been increased to correspond with the necessities of the "outing."

This, of course, is speculative—simply a flight of the imagination—and has nothing to do with the fact that the editors, and not the state, fix the charge for public printing, and with this we emphatically disagree. What business has the state to spend the people's money with highwaymen publishers who say—"Hands up, until we take $150. for this job." Why has not the state the same privileges possessed by private business concerns, which have their advertising done by whom they please; at so much per thousand of circulation, or at competitive rates.

Not long ago, our legislature was republican. Was any effort then made to prevent steals of this character? Not a bit of it. They knew a good thing when they saw it, as well as the democrats. What is the objection? Simply a little game of "going hunk," and the people—the power often without power—foot the bills.

Not long ago, the RECORD charged the state $3.50 for a little advertisement that other papers "patriotically" charged $25.00 for. We were "too cheap," in all probability, as we have not had a job from the same source, since.

Call this "sour grapes," if you choose, but the facts remain. This state has been rendered helpless by legislators past and present, and is likely to remain unless the people demand relief—demand that the state advertise on equally as advantageous terms as a country store-keeper. There would then be no need of "special sessions" by editors, for the purpose of fixing the price on a job coming in sight—a $6,900 job, not including the charges of the city papers.

Let us see whether this conclusion would be proper. A recommendation is solicited, as a rule, from a man well known for his integrity and good standing in the community. Suppose the applicant for the favor is known to possess but few first-rate qualities; that he has never demonstrated his fitness for the position he asks for; suppose, indeed, he has shown positively incorrect habits, how can the man of integrity conscientiously grant the recommendation? It would not be proper. A recommendation would be solicited, as a rule, from a man well known for his integrity and good standing in the community. Very Much "Amigo."

Recently, about one hundred Filipinos became employees of the U. S. Ordnance Department, at Manila, and made the occasion a fiesta. After taking the oath of loyalty, one of their number, Hugo Asuncion by name, according to the Manila Times, made quite a graceful and flowery speech to his associates, which we reproduce:

"Filipino: This is the hour in which the light spreads itself over the fields like a mantle of gold; when the ancient trees, with their clinging parasites, lazily move their great crowns in the breath of the early breeze; when the shrubs greet the daisy with the delicious odors of their flowers, on whose tendrils the dew has left a pearl which the sun turns into a beautiful gift from a serene master of love; then the birds raise, in concert and choir, their hymn of praise; in short, all nature salutes the father of life, the luminous representation of the Creator of the world. Now that we have had the happiness of being gathered under the stately banner, do not doubt, Filipinos, that the grand republic of America is that which will conduct us, be it late or early, to the moral and material good of these islands. Therefore, you who have signed and sworn your fealty to this grand nation, join with me in crying: Long live the stately banner! Long live our Colonel! Long live our Lieutenant! Long live AMERICA!"

Headache often results from a disordered condition of the stomach and constipation of the bowels. A dose or two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will correct these disorders and cure the headache. Sold by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

Roosevelt Disappointed Them. Disappointment is evinced in certain quarters because Vice President Roosevelt did not signalize his advent as president of the Senate by firing his pistols and uttering a few war whoops. To see him calmly and with all needful dignity doing his duty, pains as well as astonishes those of our fellow-citizens to whom Colonel Roosevelt has become merely a confused and terrific vision of mustangs, lariats, guns, wild game and teeth.

There are others, more intelligent but not less unfriendly, who are waiting with eagerness for one of two things to happen—either an explosion of temper in the Senate chamber that will wreck him, or his gradual fading from public attention as he proceeds from year to year with his humdrum functions.

But Col. Roosevelt is not the man to gratify his enemies. He knows perfectly well what they hope for. Therefore it may be reasonably expected that he will make an equally sedate and efficient presiding officer. Also, he can be trusted to evade vice-presidential oblivion by the use of his pen, for the employment of which he will have plenty of leisure. Col. Roosevelt has his ambition set on the Presidency, and he is not going to lessen his chances by any failure in the decorum demanded by his present position.

The cowboy page of his history is closed.—Phila. North American.

Remarkable Cures of Rheumatism. From the Vindicator, Lutherford, N. C. The editor of the Vindicator has had occasion to test the efficacy of Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice with the most remarkable results in each case. First, with rheumatism in the shoulder from which he suffered excruciating pain for ten days, which was relieved with two applications of Pain Balm, rubbing the parts afflicted and realizing instant benefit and entire relief in a very short time. Second, in rheumatism in thigh joint, almost prostrating him with severe pain, which was relieved by two applications, rubbing with the balm until on retiring at night, and getting up free from pain. For sale by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

Deafness Cannot be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by the use of Chamberlain's Deafness Cure. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is closed, deafness is the result, and the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be restored forever, nine cases out of ten are cured by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 25c.

Then, and Now. Ex-President Harrison is dead. We do not mean to make light of this most sad event; but does it not seem that the politicians and press of the country were a little late in paying tribute to his "statesmanship, sterling honesty and remarkable ability?" Not so many years ago, many of the papers that are now so eloquent in their praises of the dead were searching the dictionary for opprobrious terms with which to characterize him, as candidate and President.

He was the same man, then, as at his death. What is the logical conclusion? We leave the reader to draw it. What a National disgrace it is that politics is neither a respecter of ability, honesty, or greatness—a man must die, before the truth dare be told of him.

The late ex-President is not an exception to this rule. There have been hundreds of parallel cases, and there will be hundreds more; nevertheless, the shame of this truth is not palliated by the knowledge. For absolute dishonesty, persistent cruelty and relentless persecution, there is nothing to equal American political methods.

Mr. Bryan, on Self-government. Mr. Bryan expressed what the majority of Maryland's best citizens are now thinking when he said: "Once admit that some people are capable of self-government, and that others are not, and that the capable people have a right to reign upon and govern the incapable, and you make force-brute force—the only foundation of government and invite the reign of the despot." Again, "Behold a republic in which civil and religious liberty stimulate all to earnest endeavor, and in which the law restrains every hand uplifted for a neighbor's injury—a republic in which every citizen is a sovereign."—Dorchester Standard.

Should the Milk be Separated on the Farm, or at the Creamery? I advocate the Farm Separator system, not only on the ground of the greater economy in transportation of cream over milk to the creamery, and more than all, for the greatly increased value of the skimmed milk, to the farmer, when fed twice a day fresh from the Separator; the cream should be delivered to the creamery every day, else it will greatly deteriorate, and large loss will come in impaired flavor and quality of the butter.

Whether each farmer delivers his own cream, or arranges with the others to deliver it, or the creamery sends for it, is largely a matter of local conditions. Either way is good, if well and promptly done. Every patron should take care to thoroughly clean out the Separator bowl, and all utensils immediately after separating, or else foul cream will surely result.

The fresh skimmed milk is worth at least double to the pigs and calves than is the ordinary skim milk of the creamery. Even if creamery skim milk is pasteurized, it is as good as good, but by that very process it is rendered less digestible than fresh milk would be.

Hand Separator cream and whole milk can be handled at the same creamery if the cream is of the right consistency; so its value can be measured by the Babcock test; the cream should not be run too thin from the Separator.

In regard to so-called dilution, with which so many farmers, who do not read, have been longed, and the only way to prove their expediency to such farmers, is to show up the loss of butter fat in the skim milk. I think that those creameries that receive cream from Hand Separators, pay more in the end for the butter fat at the farmer's door, than he would receive for it if it was delivered in the form of whole milk.

The "Dairyman" believes that the farm Separator, and its agents, will prove a blessing and of great profit, if it will stir up the average creamery patron to a sense of what he does not know about this business of Dairy farming. The most contented among them are those whose practice is the worst. Then again, the natural feeling of the creamery is to make the patron careless and indifferent, unless special effort is made to be otherwise. So in that direction the farm Separator, or as it is better known, "THE EMPIRE," may prove a blessing and pay for itself once in money, and twice in satisfaction.

Presence of Delty.

(For the Record.) When the mind is in flight through the universe, when the soul in devotion looks up and adores, pervading through everything distant and near. The marks of a presence supernatural appear. In the deep of the sea and the sky all serene there is something supreme, though unheard and unseen. And 'tis felt in the calm of the soft twilight shade. When the rose-tinted clouds are in beauty arrayed. There's a power sublime in the swift lightning flash. And the delty speaks in the loud thunder crash. And he whispers in zephyrs 'o'er valley and hill. In harmony nature is tuned to his will. Not alone is he found in creation afar. In the bright, golden sunbeam or glimmering star. But his presence exists in the deep of the soul. As well as in worlds that in majesty roll.

A Good Cough Medicine for Children.

"I have no hesitancy in recommending Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," says F. P. Moran, a well known and popular doctor, of Petersburg, Va. "We have given it to our children troubled with bad coughs, and it has always given perfect satisfaction. It was recommended to me by a druggist as the best cough medicine for children as it contained no opium or other harmful drug." Sold by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

How to Save Doctor's Bill.

Never go to bed with damp or cold feet. Never lean with the back upon anything that is cold. Never begin a journey until the breakfast has been eaten. Never take warm drinks and then immediately get into the cold. After exercise of any kind never ride in an open carriage or near the window of a car for a moment; it is dangerous to health, or even life. Never omit regular bathing, for unless the skin is in good condition, the cold will close the pores and favor congestion or other diseases. Never stand still in cold weather, especially after having taken a slight degree of exercise, and always avoid standing on ice or snow where the person is exposed to the wind. When going from a warm atmosphere into a cooler one keep the mouth almost closed, so that the air may be warmed by its passage through the nose ere it reaches the lungs. Keep the back, especially between the shoulder blades, well covered. Also the chest well protected. In sleeping in a cold room, establish the habit of breathing through the nose, and never with the mouth open. The steam produced by putting a hot brick in a pail of water will sometimes relieve a child suffering from a cold.

Cleaning Grease Spots.

Ordinary grease spots yield readily to gasoline and clean cloths. Put a layer of clean cloths under the spot and rub it repeatedly with a cloth dipped in the gasoline; as the cloth becomes discolored, change it. Finally air the spot, and it will be found eradicated. When a little liquid grease has been poured over cloth and has unleavened bread. Its taste is agreeable, somewhat aromatic, and as sweet as honey. The manna is said to have been the puncture of an insect called Coccus mannaparus. The other kind of manna which has been supposed to be that of the Scrip, is called the name Alhaji. One of the Arabs, the Alhaji maurorum, is remarkable for the exudation of a sweetish juice, which concretes into small granular masses, and which is usually distinguished by the name of Persian manna. These products of the Arabian deserts and other oriental regions, do not, however, possess the qualities and uses ascribed to the manna of Scripture. They are all condiments or medicines rather than food, stimulating or purgative rather than nutritious. They are not produced all the year round, come only in small quantities, never affording anything like fifteen million pounds a week, which must have been requisite for the subsistence of the whole Israelitish camp during a day, and that for forty years. They are just as liable to deteriorate on the Sabbath as on any other day; nor does a double quantity of it the day preceding the Sabbath.

dened there, it is more difficult to take the spot out, but with patience this may be done. The grease on which the grease is hardened must be first steamed until hot and the grease melted. It must then be cleaned out. Chloroform is a very good cleaner, if gasoline does not do the work. To apply the chloroform, dip a clean cloth in it and rub the spot quickly. Chloroform will breathe the chloroform, but hold the head away, and do the work in a room with the windows open. Keep the grease melted in the cloth by steaming it often, and use a thickness of clean cloths under the spot while it is being rubbed. Gasoline can be applied in the same way as chloroform. It is wise to keep the windows open when using gasoline, because the cloth must be kept hot while cleansing, and the fumes of the gasoline cannot be allowed to reach near the fire.—L. M. L.

THE SCHOOL LAW.

Address Delivered Before the Allegany County Teachers Institute, Feb. 12, 1901, by Clayton Furnell, of Frostburg, member of the State Board of Education.

In four parts—PART III. Each teacher is responsible for the discipline of his school, and for the progress, contentment and development of his pupils. It is his imperative duty to maintain good order, and to require of his pupils a faithful performance of their duties. Should he fail to do so, he would be looked at as a delinquent. To enable him, therefore, to discharge these duties effectively he must necessarily have the power to enforce obedience to his lawful commands. For this the law gives to him the right to inflict reasonable punishment for wrong-doing.

This is a great power, and one that must be used with sound judgment and discretion at all times. Some of the English cases seem to hold to the view that the teacher has all the power to punish that the parent has, but the American decisions do not go so far. Here the true doctrine seems to be as follows: The teacher has the power to punish such a portion of the parental power as may be reasonably necessary to answer the purpose for which he is employed. And here an important distinction is to be noted. The parent in administering punishment is answerable only for malice, or wicked motives, or for an excess of power. It is assumed that the parent in the exercise of this great power is restrained by natural affection, growing out of the relation which he bears to his offspring. He feels it to be a painful duty, rather than a power.

The schoolmaster, however, has no such natural restraint. He is not to be safely trusted with all of the parent's authority, for he does not act from the instinct of parental affection. He should be guided and restrained by a sound judgment and a wise discretion, and, hence, inaccountable for their reasonable exercise. A failure to observe this distinction may lead to unfortunate consequences. A North Carolina case undertakes to do the doctrine in a sentence, as follows: Teachers exceed the limit of their authority when they cause lasting mischief, but act within the limits of their authority when they inflict temporary pain. The court in a more recent Alabama case said:

A more correct view, however, and the one better sustained by authority, seems to be that when in the judgment of reasonable men the punishment inflicted is immoderate or excessive, and a jury would be authorized to find that the case is not justified by the facts of the case in law, or that it was induced by legal malice or wickedness of motive, the limit of legal authority may be adjudged to have been exceeded.

Now, while no rule of universal application can be laid down, it is evident that the teacher must at all times act in such manner as shall accord with the general judgment of reasonable men. It is not so much what he may himself deem reasonable as what his neighbors, and other reasonable persons may believe to be so.

Happily few cases require the teacher to go to the full extent of his authority, and to breathe the chloroform, a little short of the limit. Though always essential that the teacher should know his rights, it is rarely necessary that he should push them to their limit. In this connection it may be worth our while to inquire how far, if at all, the teacher may take notice of and punish for offenses committed out of school hours and beyond the limits of school property.

In dealing with this branch of the subject I feel inclined to advise the teacher to view such offenses, as when the child is in school, as a part of the school property. While courts have recognized the right to punish in such cases, the circumstances of each case, and the power to those which injuriously affect the school and directly tend to break down proper management of its affairs. In a recent case it was said:

The view that acts, to be within the authority of the school board and teacher, for discipline and correction, must be done within school hours, narrow, and without regard to the spirit of the law and the best interests of our common schools. In contemplation of the law the pupil in going to and from school is under the control of the teacher from the time when the parent's authority ceases until the child returns to the parental custody; but when the teacher's authority begins is sometimes a question involving difficulties. It is a question depending upon the particular circumstances of each case, and as each must be dealt with separately, no general rule can be given, and the authority to punish, if used at all, should be exercised with extreme caution.

Aets committed out of school hours, and beyond the limits of school property may, if suffered to go unrebuked, tend to disrupt school government, destroy discipline, and seriously impair the usefulness of the teacher in his work. Such cases call for action upon the part of school authorities, and steps that may be deemed necessary to prevent or correct such abuses, but the cases requiring the teacher to take immediate action are not many, and he should proceed with caution. Being fully protected by necessary penal statutes in his school work, so that he need suffer no undue interference on the part of outsiders, he may safely pursue ordinary legal remedies as to offenses which constitute a misdemeanor under our criminal law, and with reference to the other class of offenses not penal in themselves, and not necessarily involving a violation of law, he can afford the same protection for himself and his school. Let him seek information as to his legal rights, and act with deliberation. No interest will suffer by reason of the delay occasioned. Far more injury may be caused by wrong and hasty action than by non-action on his part.

Easy Going Japs.

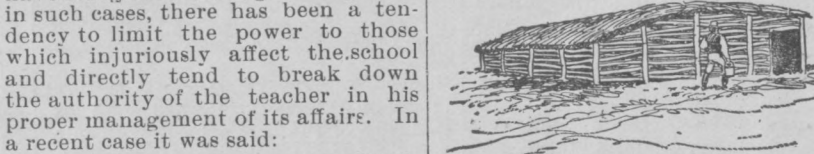

Japanese business methods are in the less important places of a very go as the other day a foreigner calling at the branch of one of the chief shipping companies found the whole place deserted. It appeared that the day being fine the manager and staff had gone out on a mushroom hunting expedition. Mushroom hunting is a pursuit that appeals to every true Japanese.

HOG SHED OF STRAW.

WARM SHELTER IN WINTER, COOL AND AIRY IN SUMMER.

Cost of Construction is Practically Confined to the Labor—Preferable in Every Way to Building of Timber.

"The best shed I ever had," said a successful swine raiser the other day, "was a straw shed. It was much warmer in winter than one could possibly be that was built of lumber, and by taking out the north and south sides in summer time it furnished a cool airy retreat. It was practically inexpensive, the cost being almost confined to the labor." He went on to explain the building of the shed. It was 12 feet each side the ridgepole, or 24 feet wide and 32 feet long. Of course will not be changed. Both the words and the music date back to the eighteenth century, having been composed in honor of a birthday of George II and first performed in public in 1740.—Indianapolis Journal.

posts eight feet above the ground. These posts should be set deep enough in the ground to give solidity to the structure. For the same reason it is well to place them not more than eight feet apart.

The outside posts should be set the same distance apart and should be two or three feet lower than the middle row. Lay poles across the tops of these also. If it is not possible to obtain croches, the poles can be flattened at the ends and spiked to the posts; then cut poles long enough to reach from the ridgepole to the outside and extend over a foot or so. Notch these poles where they lay over the ridge and eave poles. This will keep them in place. These poles should be laid at a distance not to exceed three feet over these, crossing them at an angle from the ridgepole, with a few poles to support the straw, which is to be thrown on to complete the roof. When enough straw has been thrown on, weight and fasten in place, so it will not blow off.

For the slides set posts extending to the top of the roof and about three feet from the roof supporting posts; then fill in the spaces between with straw, with poles lying horizontally just inside the posts to keep it in place. Near the bottom for a distance as high as put close enough together to prevent the hogs from pulling the straw out. The door should be made on the south side. It is not necessary to have this more than three feet wide and four high. It can be put in by setting posts and building up the sides of the door with the slide walls are being built. When the door has reached the desired height, a half dozen poles laid across will support the straw wall to be built above. For closing the opening a door can be made of lumber or the opening left, as little cold will enter.

If there is any better material for the roof than straw at hand, such as long slough grass or cane, it can be used, as it will turn the water better. The shed should be built on high ground and the inside filled with so that there will be no surface water running into it. Fresh manure for roof and walls will not be necessary often than every two or three years, and this will take but little work, as the posts and poles of the shed will be in position for the new.

Sunny Rooms.

It is said to be true that in all hospitals those rooms facing the sun have fewer deaths, other things being equal than those which are on the shady side of the house. Likewise statistics, where they have been kept, prove that the average time for a recovery is much less in a sunny room than in a shady one. From these facts and from the fact that the tendency toward illness is greater on the shady side of buildings, like prisons and asylums, it follows that light is second only in importance to fresh air. A dark room is nearly but not quite so bad as a close room. In the case of sickness the sick room should be the sunniest one the house affords.

"God Save the King." The national anthem of Great Britain, "God Save the Queen," will now have to be changed in phraseology to "God Save the King," though the air will not be changed. Both the words and the music date back to the eighteenth century, having been composed in honor of a birthday of George II and first performed in public in 1740.—Indianapolis Journal.

Rheumatism.

Nobody knows all about it and nothing, now known, will always cure it.

Doctors try Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil, when they think it is caused by imperfect digestion of food. You can do the same.

It may or may not be caused by the failure of stomach and bowels to do their work. If it is, you will cure it; if not, you will do no harm.

The way, to cure a disease is to stop its cause, and help the body get back to its habit of health.

When Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil does that, it cures; when it don't, it don't cure. It never does harm.

The genuine has this picture on it, take no other. If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you. SCOTT & BOWNE, Chemists, 409 Pearl St., N. Y. Soc. and $1.00; all druggists.

Allowed Plenty of Time.

Speaking of the late William Travers leads me to remark that, so far as I am personally aware, only one of the actually true, I had the honor and happiness to reside at Newport for a year or so once, and at the time Mr. Travers was a summer resident there. He certainly stuttered a good deal, but he did not go around habitually discharging staccato witticisms at me from all the stories you hear. But the one story that I know about is this one:

Travers was at a garden party one afternoon when a young lady said to him, "What time is it, please, Mr. Travers?" Travers took out his watch, wobbled his mouth awhile, blinked and finally said, "It'll be s-s-s-s-s o'clock by the time I can say it."

It really lacked five minutes of 6 when he began.—Boston Transcript.
