Good Men and Nominations.

It is said that a prominent business man recently accepted the nomination for the City Council, in Baltimore, because of not knowing how to dodge the logic of the following letter from a political manager:

"You, in common with others, are rather prone to blame us for nominations that we make. You say that some of the men we name for the Council and Legislature are not up to the mark. This is an instance of the trouble we have. We ask a good man to take the nomination and he says that it is impossible on account of his business. Then we ask a man not quite so good and get the same answer from him. Finally, we have to let the man who wants it, have it, and he is the man whom people like you say is not a first-class candidate. We can do nothing while people of your class stand aside and say 'we don't want to go in for it.'"

For a terse and correct statement of the situation, as applied to nominations as a rule, the above is a gem, and hard to dispute. There are exceptions, of course, as "good men" sometimes consent to bear the burden of government, especially local government, but too infrequently, and until a general change takes place in this direction, imperfect and unsatisfactory government must result.

In local government, especially, the burden of office-holding is largely a gratuitous service; more than this, one is often called upon to bear criticism, if not worse, all of which requires one to have a strong conception of what is his duty, and an equally strong determination to carry it out, regardless of consequences. Many people are not so constituted as to be able to take this view of the matter, and many more will not accept the chances of having their business injured or their good intentions go unappreciated.

In some cases, no doubt, "business" may be properly held to represent a valid excuse for declining to give service for the benefit of the public—we speak of creatures of such instances are more rare than the number of excuses seem to indicate. If there was the proper "will," the "way" would not be so difficult to see. Should things go so badly as to demonstrate the absolute necessity of having better men at the helm, it is highly probable that more would find time to accept the places; but, the rule is for a passable management of things—simply a failure to produce the best that might have been accomplished—a long course of which represents years of delayed progress.

In other lines of public service, the emoluments of office have a tendency toward producing efficient candidates; but, the same inducement also creates a more persistent hunt for office on the part of those not so well qualified, which leaves the general situation practically the same, and brings us back to the point of bewailing the lack of interest, and too much "business," of the best citizens.

Relative Cost of City and Country Weeklies.

It is a more or less prevalent idea in the country that local newspapers "cost too much," especially as compared with the pretentious city weekly at its low club rate, or combination cost. The argument obtains, to some extent, that if a large city weekly costs but a fraction of a dollar a year, the smaller country paper should also cost as little. The reasons why this cannot be so have been often stated, but it may be well for the RECORD to go over them briefly.

In the first place, no city weekly, unless published in connection with a daily, is issued at a lower price than $1.00 a year, except in a very few instances. The pages of the average weekly are "made up" of type matter already prepared for the daily issue, therefore the expense of the former is limited almost wholly to cost of press work, paper and mailing, all items of small consequence in the production of a newspaper; besides, a certain class of advertising is very profitable for the city weekly, which makes its publication profitable, even at a very low price.

The city weekly is also cheap because its popularity is on the wane, many publishers having abandoned the field entirely within the past twenty years. The two main reasons for this are the increase in circulation of daily issues, and the great improvement in country weeklies. The publication of some is continued wholly because of the advertising revenue, coupled with the fact of cheap production, as above stated, and all such are long established papers with a "way-back" patronage. No new city daily indulges in a weekly.

The Sunday paper has also had a tendency toward shelving the city weekly, and the semi-weekly and tri-weekly have practically administered a death-blow; consequently, if the weekly issue is to be continued at all, it must be cheap. Even the semi and tri-weekly papers are simply "made over" dailies, the most of them having a comparatively small circulation. The country weekly, when properly published, cannot be profitably produced at less than a dollar a year, and then only when accompanied by liberal advertising patronage, a good subscription list and a busy job de-partmentment. The whole expense of the establishment must come out of the revenue from the daily, or depend on either for profit or cheap assembling of matter with which to fill its weekly columns.

There is no good reason, however, why the country weekly should suffer, or not be worth its cost, even should the city weekly or semi-weekly be had free of charge. It is not possible for any other medium for the dissemination of news to take its place, because of conditions too numerous to mention—we speak only of the modern, well conducted, country weekly, as there are some which are practically worthless as representative newspapers.

In the multiplicity of publications, the average reader is apt to lose sight of values. To the man who observes—who reads—for information, his home paper is frequently worth a dollar to him for the matter contained in a single issue. Discrimination against a paper for the sake of saving a quarter, or half-dollar, is very poor economy. It is not so much cheap papers, as good ones, that should be brought into a home.

A carelessly edited, non-reliable, morally impure paper, is as great a danger as infidel teachings and facetious school books. If one cannot trust a paper to the reading and teaching of every member of his family, it is dear at no price and should not be allowed within any home. If a newspaper is not a teacher of truth and good morals, as well as an educational factor, it is a contemptible impostor and an element of danger to the community in which it circulates. If it is all that circumstances will permit it to be, and if it is a clean newspaper, then, its value cannot be compared to that of any other, no matter where published, except in cases in which the proprietors are disposed to operate a monopoly for all it is worth, and such illustrations are practically non-existent. These opinions apply to all papers, whether city or local.

Do not begrudge the dollar a year to the country paper that represents your community, or the interests of your "old home." Criticize it, if you will—in an effort to increase its value, in a friendly way—but, stick to it with your support as you would to your best friend. Subscribe for a good daily, and for all the good periodicals you can afford, but never make the mistake of thinking that you can do without a good country paper, or that any other kind takes its place. The most skilled and intelligent physicians may live in the far away cities, but the ones you most need are the best within easy reach. So it is with newspapers.

Patriotism.

Patriotism, or the love of our own country, is one of the noblest sentiments that can be nurtured in the human heart. Next to love of God it should be cherished and held sacred by every true man and woman. Jesus said that he who was not willing to forsake father, mother, sister and brother to enter the kingdom of heaven, and so it may be said, that he who is not willing to lay down his life, if need be, upon the altar of his country, is not worthy to be called a good citizen. The poet, Sir Walter Scott, has beautifully expressed this idea in one of his poems.

Breathes there a man, with soul so dead, Who never to himself hath said, 'This is my own, my native land? Whose heart has never within him burned, As home his footsteps he hath turned? From wandering on a foreign strand? If such there be, go, mark him well, For him no minstrel raptures swell! High though his titles, proud his name, Bondless his wealth, unshaken aim; Despoite those titles, power and pelf, The wretch, contented all in self, Living shall forfeit early grave, To the vile dust from which he sprang Unwept, unmoned and unscared.

Patriots are found among the people of all nations, whether located in the bleak and inhospitable north, or in the bright, sunny lands of the tropics; and they honor and cherish patriotism in proportion to their intelligence, and the degree of safety and happiness they are permitted to enjoy under the social and political systems of their country. We who are so fortunate as to have our lot cast in this land of liberty, in a mild and salubrious climate, where nature is so prolific in providing for the wants of man, and where we can enjoy life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness under the protecting folds of the stars and stripes, have many reasons to be proud of our country, and, above all people on earth, we ought to foster the sentiments of patriotism, and remember the heroic deed who transmitted to our care the legacy of liberty.

A century and a quarter ago, thirteen colonial states, with a total population of less than four million, were struggling with their mother country for independence. Under the providence of God they were victorious, and by the inspiration of him who doeth all things well they set up a government such as had never before been found upon the earth. No king, no emperor, no lord or satrap to rule by so-called hereditary right, but a government of the people, for the people, by the people.

From this small but glorious beginning has grown a great nation, one mighty and strong, which has taken its place among the great powers of the earth. We now have forty-five states and six territories, with a total population of more than seventy-five million souls. Our national domain extends from the Atlantic ocean to the Pacific ocean, from the great lakes on the north, to the Gulf of Mexico on the south. And in addition to this, the fortune of war has, within the last two years, placed in our possession a vast archipelago in the Pacific ocean. The beautiful and fertile island of Puerto Rico, also Cuba, in the Atlantic ocean have become ours. Hawaii, by the request of its people has been organized as a territory of the United States. We have not only advanced politically, but we have made great progress in our manufactures, and in extending our commerce among nations. Go where you may, to Europe, Asia, Africa, you will find American products, and machinery of American manufacture. In Russia you will find cars and locomotives that were made in Philadelphia. The shrill whistle of the American locomotive is heard along the banks of the Nile, over the road from Joppa to Jerusalem, where Solomon used thousands of men to transport timbers for the temple. American locomotives draw trainloads of pilgrims and tourists to the holy city. And so it is all over the world; our improved goods and improved methods are gaining in favor with the people.

In the arts and sciences we have made rapid strides. Our inventors, artists, scientists, and professional men of all kinds rank along with men of like calling in any country. Our educational system challenges the admiration of the civilized world. We can not be too proud of our free schools in which the children of the most humble citizen can receive a liberal and even classical education, and be prepared to fill the highest places in our country. Our statesmen and warriors stand second to none; and in the list of the world's great men whose deeds adorn the pages of history, the names of many Americans have found leading places. The roll of honor is too long to be concluded in this paper; suffice it to say that in the constellation of great names engraven upon the bright escutcheon of fame, those of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln shine with resplendent light, and will continue to shine as long as time shall last.—C. M. Mills in Word and Works.

THE Outlook is making a point of publishing in each of its monthly illustrated issues, portraits and brief sketches of men and women of immediate interest. The May issue contains fine portraits of Governor Odell, the Countess Tolstol, the new Attorney-General Knox, Prince Ito (the Japanese statesman), Mr. Ben Foster, whose painting, "Lulled by the Murmuring Stream," is one of two American landscapes recently purchased by the French government for the Luxembourg; portraits of the men who have made the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo possible are also included ($3 a year). THE OUTLOOK COMPANY, 387 Fourth Avenue, New York.

To Fraternity Men.

Don't kick! If somebody is prospering or getting along a little better than you, let him prosper. Don't grumble and grumble; don't kick. Say a good word for him, look pleased, and let it go at that. If you see your Order is getting along nicely, feel good about it. Help things along. Shove a little, and try to get some of the benefit yourself. Don't stand around like a bump on a log and waste your time feeling sore because some other Brother has had the sand to forge ahead and prosper. Do a little hustling yourself, but don't kick. If you are sore, and disposed to say something mean, keep your mouth shut. Don't kick.

No man ever raised himself up permanently kicking some one else down. We are helped when we help our Brother. Be ready to give a kind word; give it liberally; it won't cost you a cent, and you may want one some day. If you want to throw something at somebody, let it be roses, bouquets or cognac. Don't throw mud, don't kick. However, if you must kick, lead yourself around behind the smokehouse and take a good kick at yourself.—N. J. Patriot.

Beware of a Cough. A cough is not a disease but a symptom. Consumption and bronchitis, which are the most dangerous and fatal diseases, have for their first indication a persistent cough, and if properly treated as soon as this cough appears, are easily cured. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has proven wonderfully successful, and gained its wide reputation and extensive sale by its success in curing the diseases which cause coughing. If it is not beneficial, it will not cost you a cent. For sale by R. S. McKinney, druggist, Taneytown, Md.

Catarrah Cannot be Cured with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrah is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrah Cure is a natural, safe, and reliable cure for this disease. It is a blood-purifier, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrah Cure is not a quack medicine, but a scientific preparation of the best tonics known, combined with the most powerful medicines, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing Catarrah. Send for testimonials free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Props., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, price 75c. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

"Something New Under The Sun."

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirelly eaten away the same membranes that their makers have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the disease. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a specialty of the specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the afflicted parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE, and is sold at the extremely low price of One Dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

"SNUFFLES" is the only perfect CATARRH CURE ever made and is now recognized as the only safe and positive cure for that annoying and disgusting disease. It cures all inflammation quickly and permanently and is also wonderfully quick to relieve HAY FEVER or COLD in the HEAD. CATARRH when neglected often leads to CONSUMPTION—"SNUFFLES" will save you if you use it at once. It is no ordinary remedy, but a complete treatment which is positively guaranteed to cure CATARRH in any form or stage if used according to the directions which accompany each package. Don't delay but send for it at once, and write full particulars as to your condition, and you will receive special advice from the discoverer of this wonderful remedy regarding your case without cost to you beyond the regular price of "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE.

Sent prepaid to any address in the United States or Canada on receipt of One Dollar. Address Dept. C. 345 EDWIN B. GILES & COMPANY, 2330 and 2332 Market Street, Philadelphia.

Another Fake Nailed To Whom It May Concern!

I have on several occasions received letters with circulars enclosed, asking my advice on Air Churns—wanting to know if they are frauds. The new process of churning is by the forcing of air through the cream, claiming several points of superiority.

The above is from the circular that explains the working of the churn, and if the churn has no more reason for existing than the claims in the above, its value must be but small.

Air Churns like Dilling Separators, seem to be an annual fake, gotten up for the benefit of the unwise Dairyman. There is nothing so good for a churn as an estimate, box or barrel variety, and to make good, but neither air nor complicated beaters are required; however if there is any danger of "mushroom" growing on the butter through the Air Churn will prevent it, but otherwise we should let the other man buy it.

Did you know that I sell EMPIRE SEPARATORS, which are neither Air Churns, or Dilling Separators, but the Genuine Separator which for seven years has demonstrated its superiority over other systems of creaming, and about 500 of these machines over my territory testify to this statement. I sell an EMPIRE cream Separator to-day from

Somebody Has Said,

"Popularity is what the world thinks of a man; character is what he is." Quite as many men desire to be better thought of, as the reverse. You can't make a distinction like that when considering stores—there is no such thing as long-continued, successful duplicity in store-keeping. Nor can straight-forward fairness pass unnoticed; a store sooner or later will get the reputation it is entitled to. This Store, not quite five years old, occupies foremost place in the hearts of the good people of Carroll County—is first thought by nearly everybody, when goods such as we carry are wanted. Why? You know.

Wash Fabrics to Delight Shoppers.

From Dora's Mother.

(We take the liberty of producing a portion of a personal letter from "Dora's" mother, which they feel for the reason that it will interest many of the readers of this department who have heretofore enjoyed "Dora's" letters.—Ed.)

"We had a delightful winter here, with rain enough to insure good crops. The orange crop was very large, and even now they can be bought for 25c per 100. The trees are white with bloom. The facilities for shipping them are very poor, as there is but one railroad here, and that not very obliging. Some of the fruit growers have recently formed an association and are shipping the fruit by steamer to San Francisco, then over the northern route to New York."

(Then follows extended description of symptoms preceding the illness of Dora, which developed into appendicitis.)

"The doctor examined her and told Mr. E. that she had appendicitis, and that he would treat her 24 hours, and see what he could do; the fever grew high, and on Sunday morning she grew stupid except when someone touched the bed, then she would cry. On Monday there was a change for the worse; the pain was almost gone and two dark spots appeared over the appendix."

"The doctor then told us that the only thing left was the use of the knife, and on Tuesday morning she was taken to the hospital, and the same day, from 4 to 6 o'clock, they operated on her, and I am more than glad to say that it was successful."

She is gaining in strength daily and by the first of May we hope to have her home again. Since all danger is past, the doctors have told us that she could not have lasted more than three days longer, and that the origin of the case was from the fall from the swing the time she broke her leg."

To Test Road Materials.

The secretary of agriculture has established in the division of chemistry a laboratory for testing physically and chemically all varieties of road materials. These substances include rocks of all kinds, gravel, shells, brick, clays and other bodies used in road building in country districts, but do not include materials for municipalities.

Any person desiring to have road materials tested in this laboratory is advised to write to the office of public road inquiries, department of agriculture, Washington, for instructions in regard to the methods of selecting and shipping samples.

Specimens will be tested in the order in which they are received, excepting those sent by the special agents of the department, which will be given preference over all others.

BUILDING CULVERTS.

SHOULD BE MADE TO TAKE EVERY ADVANTAGE OF FALL.

Avoid Placing Pipes in Mudholes. How the Excavation Should Be Made—Points on Intakes and Outlets—Constructing Abutments.

Only the best grades of culvert pipes should be used and these so placed as to take every advantage of obtainable fall and quickly handle the storm water that accumulates on the upper side of the roadway, says an expert in the Kansas Farmer. The placing of pipe in a mudhole and filling by dumping upon it has made more trouble for road builders than any other one practice. It is necessary to build a pipe culvert where a mudhole exists, it is better to go to one side on the hard, firm ground rather than to attempt to fill the mudhole, so as to obtain a solid bearing for the pipe. In most places where it is necessary for a culvert to cross the roadway a slight change can be made at nominal expense to divert the course of the water so it will go through the culvert wherever the ground is most suitable for it to be placed.

In excavating for culverts the upper end or intake should be kept as high as possible in order to retain all the fall obtainable. The lower end should not be lower than the ditch into which it empties, and the outfall of the ditch should be such as will thoroughly drain all storm water delivered by the culvert. The excavation should have sloping banks, the bottom being slanted to the contour of the pipe. Excavations should be made where the sockets come, so that the pipe will seat the entire length and not rest on the socket end alone, thereby giving an uneven bearing on the pipe.

In laying pipe for culverts the road builders should commence at the lower end, with sockets up, and continue laying section after section until the culvert is across the roadway. Then good abutments of large enough stone so as not to be easily displaced should be built around the end, the stone being carried from under up and around over the pipe. At the lower end, if much fall is obtained, a spillway should be ripped or paved with stone to prevent the water from washing out the lower section of pipe. In filling in the cover over the pipe care should be taken to preserve the alignment of the flow line on the inside of the pipe, so as to have a regular, even fall from the upper to the lower side. The dirt should be carefully tamped under and around the pipe in layers. There should not be less than two tampers to four shovellers when dirt is being filled in after the pipe is in place. The pipe should be compacted as possible and built up high enough in the center, with long slopes back on to the roadway, to prevent the accumulation of water in the ruts near the culvert. Avoid abrupt slopes. Covers on culverts should be so placed that one could drive along at a good gait without knowing he was going over a culvert.

The filling in on top of the pipe of a ridge of dirt that is an obstruction in the road should never be permitted, as it is a menace to the life of the culvert. These abrupt slopes do not drain the water off or away from the culvert, but permit it to accumulate in the ruts and soften up the roadway. The majority of culvert pipe broken in roadways is due to the weight of the vehicles on the pipe, but from a side blow in a deep rut, where the momentum, added to the lead by the team, fractures the pipe on the side as with a blow from a hammer. Long sloping covers should be placed on all pipe culverts, thoroughly draining the storm water away from the pipe, except where macadam covers are resorted to. The method of protecting pipe culverts in roadways with macadam covers where it is not possible to obtain dirt covers of sufficient depth is as follows: After excavating and filling and back filling as already described, tamp the dirt in thoroughly two or three inches over the pipe, slapping it like a roof, to an apex. After this alternate layers of macadam or broken stone and clay that will tamp well should be placed over the pipe and brought up to the surface of the road, so that it will not be below the surface of the grade.

In making the excavation for the macadam cover the sides of the excavation should be kept sloping and the contour of the pipe. Excavations, approximately on the following slope: If the excavation is two feet deep, the opening at the top of the grade should be five or six feet across, leaving a long sloping bank on either side. Care should be taken not to tamp the dirt under and around the pipe, but the bottom of the excavation should be carefully shaped to the contour of the pipe with a round pointed shovel.

The roadmaker will frequently find it impossible to place a large size culvert in position and obtain proper cover. By referring to the capacity table of pipe of different falls he can readily find the number of smaller pipe, two or more, that will equal the capacity of the larger pipe and obtain a proper cover at the same expense. If the capacity of a 24 inch pipe, and found that he would only have six inches of cover, he could substitute two 18 inch pipes and obtain the same capacity with 12 inches of cover without increasing the height of the grade.

The Terrible Melon Blight. The melon leaf blight is getting to be a serious matter. Practically all the melons in northern New Jersey, including an excellent stand on the Rural grounds, were badly injured or destroyed by this subtle disease last year. Most of the growers attribute it to atmospheric and temperature changes, and it cannot be denied that hot, moist weather interspersed with sudden cool spells favors the rapid spread of the trouble, but the general appearance of the dying foliage impresses one with the idea that it is really of bacterial origin. Our vegetable pathologists have thrown very little light on this troublesome and widespread affliction; at least no specially useful information concerning it has come to us. It is evident that until some way of controlling or avoiding the blight is developed it will be well to confine our planting to quick growing and early maturing varieties, as the disease is plainly more destructive to the later kinds. We regret to say that neither cause nor cure is known to us.—Rural New Yorker.

FATTENING CATTLE.

Plenty of Good Water Should Be Kept in Easy Reach.

The successful feeder knows the value of having good water within easy reach of his cattle. When steers are doing their best, they acquire a disease which we may call laziness, and therefore it is very essential that water be near at hand at all times. If not, they will endure the pain of thirst for some time rather than move about much to quench it.

If water is handy, they will drink from three to five times daily, while on the other hand if it is necessary to slip down a steep creek bank and wade in the mud in order to get to the water's edge they will drink only once or twice daily and of course all they can hold each time. Probably no bad effect would be noticed, yet the best results are not to be expected when such conditions exist.

Tanks are used by most stockmen, and in this way water is brought within reach of the cattle. Yet during the winter months, if the water is to keep the ice broken so they can drink when they are thirsty. Besides, it is clear to all that an animal cannot make the best gains if it must push away the pieces of ice in order to get a drink. The freezing water and after having just partially quenched its thirst stand shivering in the wind.

Here again the fattening steer will not drink the required amount of water to produce the best results, because the water is too cold. It is not palatable. It makes the teeth ache, chills the animal and retards digestion for a time. There is no better investment for a man who intends to fatten cattle during the winter than to buy a tank heater. These heaters have been used successfully with good results at the Kansas State Agricultural college. One will be all that is needed to heat a tank large enough to water from 40 to 60 head of cattle.

It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist W. W. Lawrie, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady undertaker, sending me a remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came to me with a complaint of colic, which he had been suffering from for some time. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he felt my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by R. S. McKinney, druggist, Taneytown, Md.

RAISING THRIFTY LAMBS.

Much Depends on Care Given Even During the Winter.

No small part of the success in raising lambs depends upon the care given the ewes during the winter. It is much easier to grow and fatten a thrifty lamb that is of good size and vigorous when dropped than one that has been stunted before birth and that has to overcome the weakness if not disease that it may inherit from a parent that is weakened either by scanty feeding or by overfeeding and getting too fat.

Give the ewe enough to eat, but let it be of such a character as to build up her frame and that of the young she is carrying and not to fatten her, says an experienced sheep raiser. For this purpose we always wanted clover hay or the best only cut hay we had and a supply of roots, for which pur-

GIVE THE HOG ROOM.

Animals Crowded in Small Pens Make Poor Pork.

It is a mistake to suppose that at any period of a hog's life, from birth to the day of slaughter, he is better off without exercise. Many, if not most, of our farmers make rail pens not more than seven feet square inside measure and besides the feed trough put in from four to six hogs. Thus crowded they cannot lie down even with comfort, and the continued "screeching" is all the exercise they get. Hogs that are kept in such pens, necessarily filthy and nearly always muddy, whether it rains or not, may take on fat rapidly, but not flesh.

The increase in weight is from a diseased condition of the digestive organs and the organs of elimination which results in deposits of fat, mingled with scrofulous tubercles and degenerated fatness. We don't want any such meat. The hog, even up to killing time, should have plenty of fresh air, exercise and room to keep himself clean, which he will do if afforded an opportunity and which he cannot do when confined in a narrow cage like a criminal. The average pigpen is a place of torture and should be abolished and is abolished by all intelligent and humane hog raisers.

Killing Insects as a Business. It may often happen that the amount of work in a community is sufficient to induce one or more persons to undertake the treatment of plants at a given charge per tree or per gallon of the insecticide employed. Where this is the case and the contracting parties are evidently experienced and capable it is frequently more economical in the end to employ such experienced persons, especially when a guarantee is given, rather than attempt to do the work oneself with the attending difficulty of preparing insecticides and securing apparatus for work on a comparatively small scale. In California this is a common practice and also in some of our eastern cities, and it has worked excellently, according to Professor Marriott.

Test For Glucose in Honey. Editor E. R. Root said at the Wisconsin convention that adding an equal amount of wood alcohol to honey, stirring well and then letting it stand, say, ten minutes is a good test for glucose in honey. If adulterated, the compound would show a milky appearance and remain clear if pure. This is a simple test, and we presume the wood alcohol method would be absolutely pure if self to start with.—American Bee Journal.

MOVING EASTWARD.

Two Great Forage Plants of the West Gain Ground.

"There is continued interest in alfalfa as a crop for the eastern farmer. It produces such large quantities of rich feed wherever it thrives that the eastern farmer can afford to go to considerable expense in getting a stand of plants if there are soil conditions at all favorable to growth," says a writer in Farm and Fireside, who gives also the following information: A light, heavy subsoil will not do, but wherever the roots can go down easily to the moisture below the surface and surface drainage is good it pays to try alfalfa. If the soil is not rich, make it so with clean manure. Make the seed bed fine, putting plenty of work upon it, and get the organic matter thoroughly mixed with the soil.

Having manured heavily, if the land is not a naturally rich loam it is best to grow a summer crop on it to destroy weeds and to give the soil a good sowing of the alfalfa in the spring after danger of freezing weather has passed. Oftentimes the seedling appears a failure on account of the weeds and the early appearance of the alfalfa, when it is two or three clippings with the mower in the summer will change the prospect with respect to the alfalfa. The hay is rich in protein, the most valuable part of feeding stuffs, and in the three or four harvests during the year a big total yield is secured.

Another crop that is gaining ground in the east for stock feeding is sorghum. It can be grown on a variety of soils and is highly valued by many dairymen, furnishing as it does a big amount of nutritious food and a supplement to the pastures in August and September. It is very palatable and is eaten with relish by hogs as well as cattle. It thrives in a dry season far better than corn, and a few acres of sorghum is a sort of insurance against the effects of drought on pastures and corn. It makes a rich hay, but is not so easily cured as fodder.

Consumption

is, by no means, the dreadful disease it is thought to be—in the beginning.

It can always be stopped—in the beginning. The trouble is: you don't know you've got it; you don't believe it; you won't believe it—till you are forced to. Then it is dangerous.

Don't be afraid; but attend to it quick—you can do it yourself and at home.

"Whoa, Ball."

An old man in Georgia named John Baldwin, having lost his hat in an old dry well one day, hitched a rope to a stump and let himself down. A wicked wag named Ned came along just then, and, detaching a bell from Baldwin's old blind horse, approached the well, bell in hand, and began to ring a ring. John thought the old horse was coming and said: "Hang the old blind horse; he's coming this way, sure, and he ain't got any more sense than to fall in on me—whoa, Ball—whoa, Ball!"

The sound came closer. "Great Scott! the old blind horse will be right on top of me in a minute—whoa, Ball—whoa, Ball!"

Don't be Afraid—To apologize when you find you have made a mistake. To tell your best girl how much salary you receive. To tell your daughter what you think of her best young man. To compliment your son when he does a good thing. To let your wife into some of your business affairs. To show your confidence in your wife's judgment. To carry a bundle home from your office. To own up when you can't meet an obligation. To show you have the courage of your convictions. To acknowledge your political and religious predilections when asked—Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

Mark Twain's Retort.

Mark Twain was a guest of the Brooklyn Clerical Union at the Manhattan Club on Saturday night. It was "ladies' night" and the president, the Rev. Dr. J. F. Carson, welcomed the ladies with a eulogy on wives.

"All our best and noblest inspirations and impulses come from them," said he.

When Mark Twain's turn came he said: "At just this time I am remarkably comforted by an invitation to meet a body of clergymen like this. It's only fair that you should be invited to meet us. But what's the use of lugging that in about our wives? Don't you think that's a little extravagant? Mrs. Carson was told to come, and I'm glad she was. I don't want her to hear things like that. Why don't you people, so far as your calling will allow, try to tell the truth? To be sure, you sometimes get out of practice, but, one saying one thing and one another, you produce confusion in the minds of the people about religious matters. The Rev. Dr. Carson, I don't mention his name—has just called me low born and ill bred. I don't mind that so much. Shakespeare was low born, too, and was named Adam—I believe he was born out in the woods, but I'm glad the Doctor didn't say it about Adam. When such a thing is said about the head of the family, Anthony, I think I would prefer to be low born—in a Republic—like the rest. If I had been born on the other side, why, then I would have liked to take a drink, as I suppose the Rev. Dr.—I won't mention his name—would have been if he had been born there."

How It is Done. The first object in life with the American people is to "get rich;" the second, how to retain good health.

The first step is to get rich, and the second, to keep it. The first step is to get rich, and the second, to keep it.

They were newly married and were calling upon one of the friends of the bride who had been particularly pleasant upon the occasion of their wedding.

It was evident that she was proud of the facts, and so was he. But the host, being of an inquiring turn of mind, wished to satisfy himself, so he got down a phrenological work from one of his library shelves and after much labor found the bumps on the chart.

"These bumps are most frequently found on cats and monkeys," said the host.

Other topics consumed the remainder of the visit, which was brief—New York Sun.

"I had occasion to examine two brothers who had applied for policies in our company the other day," said the medical examiner of a life insurance company.

"I was particularly impressed by their chest developments. They both had the same measurement and also the same expansion—from 39 to 43. When I found that they had smoked cigarettes from boyhood, I wondered at the most at a four inch expansion."

Both Expert in Logic.

"Tom," said a father to his son whose school report showed him to have been an idle young scamp, "what have you been studying this term?"

Billiousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is debilitated, the liver torpid, the bowels constipated. There is a longing of food, pains in the bowels, dizziness, coated tongue and vomiting, first of the undigested or partly digested food and then of bile.

What's the matter with the parrot that you are bringing him back to me after having had him for several weeks? The pa-par-par-parrot st-st-stutters so!"—Flegende Blatter.

FEATHERED FREAKS.

BIRDS WITHOUT WINGS AND BIRDS WITHOUT SONG.

The Penguin is a Bird That Walks and Swims, but Does Not Fly—A Bird That Can Run Faster Than the Swiftest Horse—The Tailor Bird.

Birds without wings are found in New Zealand and Australia. Kiwi is the name of one species. Beautiful mats are made of the feathers of the white variety, but it takes ten years and more to collect enough feathers to make even a small mat which would sell for about $150.

Birds without song belong to Hawaii. In Honolulu one sees birds about the size of the robin, an independent sort of fellow, that walks about like a chicken, instead of hopping like a well trained bird of the United States, and it has no song.

A bird that walks and swims, but does not fly, is the penguin. No nests are made by penguins, but the one egg laid at a time by the mother is carried about under her absurd little wing or under her leg.

The largest of flight birds is the California vulture or condor, measuring from the tip of its feet and extending considerably in size the true condor of South America. The bird lays but one egg each season—large, oval, ash green in color and deeply pitted, so distinctive in appearance that it cannot be confounded with any other.

The California condor is rapidly approaching extinction and is now found only over the world are eager to secure living specimens. It is believed that there is only one in captivity.

Another large bird is the rhinoceros bird, which is about the size of a turkey. One recently shot on the island of Java had in its crop a rind from a small telescope and three brass buttons, evidently belonging to a British soldier's uniform.

A bird which is swifter than a horse is the road runner of the southwest. Its aliases are the ground cuckoo, the lizard bird and the snake eater. It was found a favorite diet. In northern Mexico, western Texas and southern Colorado and California it is found. The bird measures about two feet from tip to tip and is a dull brown in color. Its two legs are only about the inches long, but neither horses with their four legs nor bounds nor electric plying machines are in it for swiftness when it comes to running.

Most curious are the sewing or tailor birds of India—little yellow things not much larger than one's thumb. These birds are found in the tropics and monkeys the tailor bird picks up a dead leaf and flies up into a high tree, and with a fiber for a thread and its bill for a needle sews the leaf on to a green one hanging from the tree. The sides are sewed up, an opening being left at the top. That a nest of this kind in the tree no snake or monkey or even man would suspect.

Many a regiment cannot compare in perfection of movement with the flight of the curlews of Florida winding their way to their feeding grounds. The sea is full in uniform lines of these perfect birds. The curlews are dainty and charming birds to see, some pink, some white.

Birds in flight often lose their bearings, being blown aside from their course by the wind. In this case they are as badly off as a mariner without a compass in a strange sea on a starless night.

All very young birds, by a wise provision of nature, are entirely without fear until they are able to fly. The reason of the delayed development of fear is that being unable to fly, the birds would struggle and fall from their nests at every noise and be killed. Suddenly, almost in a day, the birds develop the sense of fear, when their feathers are enough grown so that they can fly.

The extraordinary situations in which nests are found occasionally all give one the impression that birds must be endowed with a sense of humor. For instance, a wren built its nest upon a scarecrow, a dead sparrowhawk, which a farmer had hung up to frighten away winged ravagers of the crop. In the pocket of an old jacket hanging in a barn a bird, also a wren, made its nest, which when discovered contained five eggs. It was a robin that raised a young family in a church pew and a robin that built its nest in the organ pipes of a church. Places of worship have always been favorite building places for birds.

Consideration.

"My wife is very considerate," said the newly married man. "She is always buying me neckties and colored shirts."

"In the days of 'wild cat' money in the West, to say it is a 'good' plaster does not describe it; it is the best possible plaster. For every disease in which an external remedy is available, Benson's Plaster is used as a matter of course."

HUMOR OF THE HOUR

Not to Be Outdone.

"John," said Mrs. Cressus thoughtfully, "everybody in society seems to think a lot of genealogy in these days."

"Jennie what?" exclaimed John, looking up from his evening paper. "Genealogy," repeated Mrs. Cressus. "What's that?"

"I don't exactly know," replied the good lady, "but I think it's a tree of some kind—at least I've heard some ladies refer to it as a family tree."

"Well, what of it?" he asked.

"Why, it seems to me a sort of affair, you know, and every one who is any one has to have one."

"But I don't know anything about that," said the young woman.

"Find out, and if it's too big for the conservatory stick it up on the lawn, and if that ain't big enough I'll buy the next lot in order to make room. There can't any of them fly any higher than we can, and if they come to a question of trees I'll buy a whole orchard for you."—Tit-Bits.

Swindled.

"I wish I had that man where I could get at him," said the young woman.

"What man?" asked the elderly woman.

"The one that advertised how to get rid of rough red hands—for a dollar."

"You sent the dollar?"

"Yes, and what do you think the hateful thing sent?"

"I have to say," said the elderly woman, "that the advertisement was a good one. It said that the easiest way was to pay off the rough red hands and hire polite black ones."—Indianapolis Press.

Strong Party Feeling.

"The Squire—Well, George, did you vote?"

George—Yes, sir.

George—I dunno his name, sir, but he's the one who had the ginger whiskers."

"His Rightful Oversight."

"I'm afraid these sketches of slum life won't do at all," said the assistant.

"Why not?" asked the editor of the magazine.

"Oh, the writer has violated all precedent," was the reply. "Why, the policeman who arrests the waiter and does the other customary distressing things is not once described as 'burly.'"

"Great Scott!" cried the editor. "What inexcusable carelessness!"—Chicago Post.

A Change.

"The name of the sultan of Morocco is 'Abdul Aziz,'" remarked the snake editor.

"Thanks for the information," replied the horse editor.

"Don't mention it, my dear sir. I only wish to add that after he dies he will be Abdul as well."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Microbian Humor.

First Microbe—Have you ever gone up against any of these microbes killing the doctors are talking about?"

Second Microbe—Lots of them. First Microbe—Aren't you afraid?"

Second Microbe—Afraid, no, sir. Why, I'm a microbe killer, I am."—Detroit Free Press.

Composing Pieces.

Mrs. Hecorn—Young Ezra Hankins is getting to be right literary. He had three pieces in the county paper this week.
