Extreme Editorial Partisanship.

A recent article in Newsperdom on the subject of the aggressive participation of small papers in politics, is worth reproducing. The writer says:

"These papers are virulent, not to say violent, in their editorial antipathy toward the tenets of their political opponents' faith and, not seldom, towards those opponents' personalities. Doubtless a milder tone of opposition lacks the spice and color of a 'red-hot' editorial, but, at least, the real newspaper can usually be expected to believe that even a question of politics may have reputable supporters on either of its sides. There is no certainty, moreover, that the newspaper of today has any real tangible influence upon any election, in so far as its editorial pronouncement may go. He is surely a flabby citizen who can be swayed to any party allegiance by the assertions or the contentions of a newspaper editorial."

This opinion of the general subject is one which the RECORD has always held to. The more or less vain-glories style of the country editor in politics is one of the relics of antediluvian journalism, and an insult to intelligent readers, especially in the badness of his efforts to prove everything angelic in his own party, and everything devilish in the opposite one.

This practice is decidedly nauseating, when illustrated by a continuing fit-for-fat wordy duel between the representatives of opposing parties in the same county, who vie with each other for the applause of the least intelligent readers, and who forget dignity, truthfulness and journalistic cleanness, in their efforts to outstrip each other in the use of billingsgate. Truly, "he is surely a flabby citizen who can be swayed" by such stuff.

A newspaper has real influence only in so far as its utterances may be depended upon for truth and fairness. The thick-and-thin party champion, does not, and cannot, belong to this class, for the reason that not all the good is now, or ever will be, centered in any political party. As long as politics is the intensely human profession that it is, the thoroughly conscientious and intelligent voter must continue to seek, and indorse, the lesser evil, and he will not find this through imbibing the sentiments expressed in the columns of extremely partisan newspapers, whether large or small.

Somebody is—Fabricating.

For widely differing opinions, the following, as to the management of the Female House of Refuge, are hard to match.

The report of the Jail Board Committee, condensed:

"The administration of the refuge prior to its management by the Grand Jury's superintendent was cruel, vicious and immoral to a shocking degree."

Under the present management we are of the opinion that the cruelty to the inmates exceeded that under the former superintendent.

The very cells in which the unfortunate victims were incarcerated bear marks of the struggles of the inmates.

Some of the officers employed amount for the positions they hold, and are guilty of acts of great cruelty.

The superintendent should be removed."

The report of the Grand Jury's investigating committee, condensed:

"In every case examined only the proper and necessary punishment was given, and in no case can we find brutality or unusual severity."

In regard to the superintendent and her assistants, they have faithfully and intelligently conducted their duties.

Under their management a spirit of contentment exists, and they have secured a firm grasp upon the affections of the girls.

The moral influence exerted has been most efficacious.

We find the officers and teachers kind and sympathetic, and in their dealings with the girls they have administered justice generously tempered with mercy."

This is either a case of unjustifiable vilification, or one of very thick whitewashing. The Herald says the first report was inspired by a political "boss" for the purpose of furthering factional ends, while the latter is a complete vindication by unimpeachable men.

What is the matter in Maryland, anyway? For sensations in politics it is leading the country—what it lacks in size, it makes up in noise and startling acts. If it keeps up its present record, Uncle Sam will have to lay it across his knee and give it a good old-time spanking. Probably, the state, being so close to Washington, is the first heir of tricks—too bad for us there, yet too good to waste entirely.

Monopolies must be Regulated.

Legalized gambling—speculating in stocks—and monopolies, are twin evils which must sooner or later be suppressed by legislation, or effectively regulated. We have always held to the opinion that limited trusts, and large capitalization, are not necessarily evils, but have their beneficial side in limiting the cost of production; but, unless there is competition between such concerns, a monopoly may result, which is always dangerous.

be fixed at will, thus creating a condition liable to produce disaster on the one hand, and a greater degree of financial supremacy on the other.

This is an extreme view, of course, and many conditions may arise to prevent any such consumption, but the danger of it is almost as bad as its reality. Labor organizations and small dealers become restive and dissatisfied, capital in small or moderate amounts is practically worthless, politics takes on new issues and the professional agitator is busied with his plots.

We do not take the view of the alarmist, in such matters, but the condition of things is certainly one to be met in some way which will prevent the growth of such views. It is neither satisfying nor sensible that the financial affairs of the country, as they apply to private business affairs, cannot be regulated for the good of the country. They must be, or there may come a revolution. Not that this event would be wholly justifiable, but because such disasters usually come without full justification—through excitement, magnified wrongs and mischievous leadership. The accumulation of capital in individual or combined ownership, must be limited, and thus destroy monopolistic tendencies and national unrest.

While theoretically believing in the above, as applied to railroads and the production of steel, we are compelled to admit the facts that we have the most efficient and cheapest railroad system in the world, and that the price of steel has been reduced almost to the minimum. In fact, the cost of nearly every article controlled by present day trusts does not show the influences of monopoly, so generally feared, and, until they are more clearly shown, it will be the part of wisdom to rest quiet, and adopt merely precautionary measures of a character to satisfy popular demand for safety.

The Hon. Tom Johnson.

Hon. Tom Loflin Johnson, the newly elected mayor of the city of Cleveland, Ohio, who is talked of as eligible for the Democratic nomination for the presidency in 1904, is one of the most picturesque characters in American public life to-day.

A southern man by birth, he is a western man by association, and an eastern man by business affiliations. Rising from poverty to riches through street railroad building and operating, he is eminently practical, yet no man in public life is so penetrated by sentiment and moved by the kind of abstract principles that are scoldingly called "theories."

No man seems more full of contradictions: A democrat in that broadest sense of the word which calls for the completest political and economic equality, he had made his fortune through forms of privilege. Possessed seemingly of all the qualities that make riches pile up riches, he renounces further money-making to use his great means and powers to destroy privilege. Denounced by his fellows of the privileged class as a renegade, who, having acquired wealth by sundry methods, turns his brilliant abilities and large resources to the destruction of those privileges, in order to ride into power at the head of the deluded and debased masses, he is hailed on the other hand by tens of thousands as a Prince of Privilege who has turned deliverer, possibly in some degree as was Moses by the Jewish slaves when he left the place of pride and power in Pharaoh's court and bade them follow him through the desert to freedom.

The boldness and frankness with which Cleveland's mayor avows his principles, charm those who are careless of the principles themselves. In the heat of his Columbus railroad fight he said with characteristic freedom:

"I am in this fight with a purely selfish motive. I want something, I want a three-cent-car fare and my street railroad plan, because I want municipal ownership and operation of street railroads, and I think my proposal will make a short-cut to it. I want municipal ownership, because I believe that that will clear away one of the most important forms of privilege, which, so long as they exist, will fight against the abolition of the supreme form of privilege, the monopolization of land. Therefore, I want municipal ownership and operation of street railroads, as of all other law-made monopolies, because I believe that that will lead to the adoption of the single tax—the abolition of all taxes but one falling upon land values irrespective and exclusive of improvements, and I include in land values public franchise values so long as they are in private hands. I want the single tax because I believe that it will bring a large measure of justice—justice, the only solution of the great social problems of the world."

A Dangerous Time.

The transactions in the Stock Exchange on Wall Street last week were the largest in the history of the country, and the largest in the history of any exchange. That there has been a great and substantial advance in values is beyond question, and while there may be in the future serious reactions, the condition of the country justifies the belief that values of all well-managed properties have advanced permanently, and that the wealth of the country in all departments is greater than it has ever been before. Those who go into Wall Street, therefore, for the sake of making investments are taking advantage in a normal and legitimate way, of the rapidly increasing resources of the Nation.

But there is a great difference between buying for investment—that is to say, buying with relation to actual values—and buying for purposes of speculation—that is, buying on the strength of the value of the day, in the belief that the value will be increased to-morrow, and that the purchaser can then sell at a profit. This often means buying what one has not the money to pay for, and gambling what one does not possess; it is selling, pure and simple. Such gambling always accompanies a great rise of values. The substantial purchasers who deal with realties are surrounded ed by a hoard of speculators, usually of small means, with narrow margins which they cannot afford to lose, who play the game in Wall Street precisely as professional gamblers play it around the roulette or card table.

One day last week, when the excitement was at its height, a young girl of fine instincts was taken to the Stock Exchange, and looked down for the first time upon the turmoil of one of the most extraordinary days in the history of the Exchange. Her comment when she came away was, "It is one of the saddest sights I have ever seen." There is something profoundly saddening in the spectacle of the mad rush and whirl of a great speculative movement, when men seem to part with their sanity and rush at prospective profits with a kind of unhuman intensity. The most significant thing in last week's history in Wall Street for the sober-minded and thoughtful observer was the fact that on Friday the values of many stocks even went below their physical exhaustion of traders and the inability of the machinery of the Exchange to deal with the enormous volume of transactions.

We have come to a perilous stage in the present rise of values—the stage at which sober men are apt to lose their judgment, and young men, who have not yet arrived at years of judgment, are likely to entangle themselves, perhaps for life. It is a good time for all men who do not intend to purchase for investment, or who have not abundant means to lose, to keep away from Wall Street. Nothing is more demoralizing than the gambling mania, the desire to secure large returns without commensurate effort and without the long patience and waiting which the accumulation of wealth by legitimate means involves.

Magical stories of sudden turns of fortune are in the air; one overhears young men recounting Arabian Night tales of fortunes made in an hour. It is a time to turn a deaf ear to all these tales of money which is not their own, to light at this moment a great many delusions; for men of excellent impulses are tempted at such a time to risk money which is not their own. The gambling mania is as old as humanity; it is felt by all classes but especially by people of leisure. During the past two years there has been an outbreak of gambling of very serious extent among certain fashionable sets. Dr. Huntington's timely word in a sermon preached in this city during the winter called attention to an evil the existence of which has been recognized by sober-minded women in fashionable circles, who have striven to stem the tide by individual effort and sometimes by organization.

Nothing is more frightful in its vulgarity and general demoralization than a woman, turned gambler, buying her wardrobe or gauding an additional sum for personal expenses by her winnings at cards; and yet this is precisely the way in which some fashionable women have been making money during the past few years. This means not only loss of character but loss of youth and of beauty; it means nervous exhaustion and kindred physical ills; for the gambling mania, when once it has seized its victim, is like the opium habit—extremely difficult to shake off, and involving in the end absolute disintegration of the moral nature. Mature men of means, young men generally, and all women should carefully guard their sanity while values are rising, and not attempt to gain by gambling that success which ought to come only as the fruit of foresight, intelligence, energy, and patience.—The Outlook.

greater and greater. In fact its growth within the past year has been nothing short of marvelous.

But then it might be considered natural enough when the causes of its growth are so visible to all who consider the store's policy and grand trading possibilities.

The character of the stocks we carry has long since stamped itself upon the minds of all within our reach, who like the best.

There's no extravagance in buying from such stock as ours. It's economy—the extravagance, in truth, lies in buying the other kind.

Next to the importance of the stock is the service you get. Well, we do almost anything that's reasonable, as far as that goes. But, after all, we're not perfect, so come right out open handed and tell us our mistakes when you find them.

ENGLAND'S FIRST SHIP.

Great Harry was the Country's Premier Fighting Machine. Of the first ship, properly speaking, of the British navy, known as the Great Harry, the following particulars are given in an old number of the mechanical Magazine, dated Oct. 25, 1823:

Though King Henry, as well as other princes, hired many ships, exclusive of those which the different seaports were obliged to furnish, he seems to have been the first king who thought of avoiding this inconvenience by raising such a force as might be at all times sufficient for the service of the state. Historians tell us that he caused his navy, which had been neglected in the preceding reign, to be put in a condition to protect the British coasts against all foreign invasions, and that in the midst of profound peace he always kept up a fleet of 1,000 tons, which was at that time the largest vessel in the British navy.

The catalogues for Maryland Collegiate Institute, at Union Bridge, were turned out from the Record office this week, and will compare favorably with the very best work of this character. The cover is unique, in that it is of heavy dark paper with a square cut out, through which the name of the school shows.

Arehie A. Cronse, who has secured a position in York, Pa., as engineer, met with a narrow escape from severe injury, or possibly loss of life, on Tuesday, when the engine he was running struck itself. It is said that no blame attaches to Mr. Cronse, as the engine was an old affair and has been regarded unsafe for a long while.

While we do not wholly agree with the movement proposition advocated by the "Interested Citizen" in last issue, we admire the caution displayed in the expression that Taneytown is a "model" town in "some" respects. The word, many, might have been used, but "some" is very good. If all had been the word, the writer would have made an egregious misstatement, for then, our cemeteries would have been designated, "models."

Fair Warning. A popular Cleveland doctor tells this story of a bright boy—his own—who had reached the mature age of 9 after an early career marked by many wild and mischievous pranks.

His restless nature had made him something of a torment to his teacher at times, and one afternoon not long ago she kept him after the others were dismissed and had a serious talk with him. Perhaps she was a little afraid that her admonitions were falling on stony ground. Anyway, she finally said: "I certainly will have to ask your father to come and see me."

"Don't you do it," said the boy. "The teacher thought she had made an impression. "Yes," she repeated, "I must send for your father."

"You better not," said the boy. "Why not?" inquired the teacher. "Cause he charges $2 a visit," said the camp.

Wanted to be Sure. An old woman of undeniable Celtic origin entered a provincial savings bank the other day and walked up to the desk.

"Do you want to withdraw or deposit?" asked the clerk. "Now of deposit," she wanted to put some in," was the reply. "The clerk pushed up the book for her signature, and indicating the place, said, "Sign on this line, please."

Postmasters may use Private Banks

Postmasters have been advised by the department of a ruling which permits them to deposit funds and stamp supplies in private banks, for greater safety. This ruling has no doubt been made because of the numerous robberies of Postoffices at places in which there was no National Bank, in which cases it was the custom to keep cash and supplies in the Postoffice building. The ruling is as follows: "During business hours, money and stamp supplies must be kept so as to be inaccessible to the public and concealed from view. If the post office, when unoccupied, is not in such a safe place as to warrant the postmaster in leaving his personal funds therein, all Government moneys and stamp supplies must be removed therefrom to a place of the greatest possible safety. The law provides that a postmaster may deposit his funds in a national bank if there be one in his town, city or county. If, however, there be no national bank so located, and a private bank be accessible, there will be no objection to a postmaster placing his Government moneys and stamp supplies therein; provided, that they be placed in a private receptacle, as his official property, and subject to his control, and that this be done at his own risk and expense."

Biliousness is a condition characterized by a disturbance of the digestive organs. The stomach is debilitated, liver torpid, the bowels constipated. There is a coating of food, pain in the bowels, dizziness, coated tongue and vomiting. First of the undigested or partly digested food and then of bile, Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets allay the disturbances of the stomach and create a healthy appetite. They also tone up the liver, thereby ordering and regulate the bowels. Try them and you are certain to be much pleased with the result. For sale by R. S. McKinney, druggist, Taneytown, Md.

Burned Her Wagon.

A gypsy custom, say those who pretend to know, is sooner or later after death in their number, to destroy all the effects of the deceased by fire. That this is true and strictly adhered to would be indicated by an occurrence which took place in the vicinity of York, Md., on the morning of May 21. An old lady, an ex-gypsy queen has been camping near that place. Her sole companion is a boy whom she took with her last spring when, as the result of a quarrel, she left the tribe with which she had been numbered, since which she has conducted her nomadic life, independent of her former companions.

The queen's husband died some time ago, and his effects are to be disposed of in accordance with tribal custom—all but a wagon. On Monday she prepared to destroy the old wagon by burning it.

A son of a nearby farmer named Lentz observed these preparations, and concluded that the disposal of the abandoned vehicle could be more advantageously made by turning it over to him. But Lentz could neither beg nor buy the wagon. Oil was thrown upon it and a match applied, and the old lady sat calmly by, smoking a pipe of oil in the flames which reached to the ambulatory habitation to ashes.—McSherrystown Advocate.

Question Answered.

Yes, a green apple has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for indigestion or Biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clear out the bowels, to regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and to relieve the pain when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing so good for the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac. R. S. McKinney, Taneytown, Md.

He Backed Off His Leg.

Caught in a bear trap on the banks of the Athabasca, near Milford, Me., John McLeod, a lumber scaler, was obliged to take out his jackknife and cut off his leg. The trap was too heavy to move and was sprung in such a way that he could not reach over and release it. He was far from any human being, and the only way out of it seemed to be to cut off the leg.

That was no easy job, because the leg upon which he operated was of wood. But when he stamped back to camp it made him mad to hear the jeers of the French-Canadian coveys of the lumber camp.

"Why you no take off you whole wood leg, ah? You get out our trap and no spide you no big tall, ah?" Such a way out of his difficulty had not occurred to McLeod before.

Skill in Throwing Off Mail Bags.

The busiest clerk in any crowd or car is the one who is detailed to receive and throw off the sacks and pouches. To lift a heavy mail sack and throw it from a car moving at the rate of a mile a minute is a matter of good target shooting. "Looks easy enough," commented one of the veteran clerks at the latter end, "and it does seem as if a man should be able to hit a station platform without much difficulty, but you see that station is passed and gone in about one second. Then, the suction of a train running at this speed is something terrific, and until the knack of throwing a pouch is learned a man is liable to feed the wheels with a few letters."—Saturday Evening Post.

Origin of the Word Sterling.

The origin of the word "sterling" is very curious. Among the early miners of coin in northern Europe were the dwellers of eastern Germany. They were so skillful in their calling that numbers of them were invited to England to manufacture the metal money of the kingdom. The strangers were known as "sterlings." After a time the word became "sterling," and in this abbreviated form it has come to imply what is genuine in money, plate or character.

HIS DOG'S WELCOME.

It Caus'd the Detroiter to Do Some Lively Climbing. "I have a client living 15 miles out," said a Griswold street lawyer. "Up to within the last year he had nothing for me to do but draw important papers and advise him as to negotiations with contractors. Now he has a sort of mania for getting out in front of his dog, hailing the suburban car and coming in to consult his lawyer. It is fair to add that he is good pay and never haggles. I found him waiting the other morning when I reached the office."

"I'm thinkin'," he began, "of havin' Jimson, 'cross the road from me, 'rested and 'carcerated. He's kep'in and harborin one of the savagist dogs you ever see, 'gainst the peace and dignity of the neighborhood. I'll illustrate. Bein in the city 'other day, I staid ter see the general, and that made it near midnight when I got out ter my place. Just as I got my hand on ter the latch of the gate I heard a terrible scratchin of gravel and a rushin sound, and I bein quick witted, I tho't of Jimson's dog and realized how everything was dependin on myself. I slipped up 'gainst the tree just as the dog thumped 'gainst the fence, turned, set down and freed me."

"Didn't bite you?" "Nope, but there I shivered and holered and said pet names ter the dog, and the best just name same as he was one of the best iron critters. I yelled till my wife kin with a lantern. Then I got down outen that tree like it was a green pole and kicked that dog all over the premises till I was winded."

"My! Would he didn't eat you?" "No wonder 'all. It turned out ter be my own ole yellow dog which had his teeth and his voice. He wa a-tryin ter welcome me, but what I wa a-actin of was that infernal man eatin dog of Jimson's, and I want the law on him for intimidation or subhin of that kind."—Detroit Free Press.

THE RIGHT THING TO PUT ON. (Benson's Plaster is Pain's Master.) From the natural impulse to "put something on" for all spots all applications for the relief of pain have arisen. The most successful have ever been plaster or plasters, and the best of these is Benson's Plaster.

No other has anything like the same power as a curative agent; it is highly and scientifically medicated, and its standard is advanced year by year.

Use Benson's Plaster for coughs, colds, chest distress, rheumatism, grip, neuralgia, kidney trouble, lame back, and other ailments that make Winter a season of suffering and danger. It relieves and cures quicker than any other remedy.

Do not accept Capcium, Strengthening or Bull's Eye Plaster, place of Benson's, as they possess none of its curative power. Insist on having the genuine.
