On Thursday, while working with his brother's threshing outfit, Mr. Wm. Crops, Jr., had the index finger of his left hand caught in the machinery of the engine, almost severing it, between the second and third joints. Dr. F. H. Seiss rendered the necessary surgical assistance.

On Thursday evening, Mr. and Mrs. Perry H. Shriner very pleasantly entertained quite a number of friends and neighbors, including the members of the Taneytown Band, which rendered a number of selections during the evening. Refreshments, consisting of ice cream, lemonade, cake, watermelon and cigars, were served.

John T. Shriner, of J. A. well-known farmer, and for many years a huckster of this district, died on Wednesday morning. Mr. Shriner has been ill for quite a long while—several years—and his death was not a surprise. He was a generally respected gentleman, and leaves a large circle of friends. Funeral services this, Friday, morning at the Reformed church and cemetery.

The corn crop throughout this section, unless some unusual disaster occurs, will be the largest for years. The stalks are immense, and the ears according. Even poor land is making a remarkable showing, while the better fields are simply outdoing themselves. We shall expect a crop of items relative to tall stalks and long ears which will make Iowa hunt close to match, even from its many past years of plenty in this state.

The following ruling, just issued by the Postoffice department, relates to a practice heretofore used by newsboys in distributing their papers. "A news agent can not be permitted to take a package of newspapers or periodicals out of a postoffice, write an address on each copy and return them to the office for delivery without additional prepayment of postage at the pound rate. A Postmaster is also without authority to open a package addressed to a news agent and distribute any of the papers contained therein."

Receipt of Table Acknowledged.

Messrs Derr & Lambert. Gentlemen:—In reply to your announcement of my being successful in guessing nearest the correct number of grains of corn on the table displayed during the last two weeks in your furniture window, and out of the thousands, no doubt, of guessers, I being the fortunate one, wish to say myself and wife are much pleased with table given free, and express many thanks and our best wishes.

Very Respectfully,

JAS. T. FRATER.

Question Answered. Yes, August Flower will have the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Mervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower. It is liquid, so that you are satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac. R. S. McKinney, Taneytown, Md.

A Humorous Requisition.

Queer requests often reach the heads of departments of the government here from officials of the government in the fields of Uncle Sam's operations. The custodian of a Federal building in a Southern town wants the Treasury officials to authorize the placing of fly screens in the windows of the building over which he has control. The custodian makes a strong case. He admits that the government is not in the habit of putting fly screens in public buildings, but he says his building should be an exception for the reasons he gives. It will be strange if, after the plea he sends the department, he should fail to get the screens. He says:

"This office, to proceed at once to the point, is at times, notably when the temperature changes, the victim of a fly pest that would have started Moses and his people to wander, and than Pharaoh moved him. It would move anything but an office-holder. The walls, pictures, furniture, windows, curtains and crockery are defiled and defaced. My commission, bearing the flowing signature of our honored Chief Executive, hanging before the eyes of the public, is like a map of the Pacific archipelago; the looking glass beyond like a target of a shotgun tested at forty yards. There have been days when it has been taken to the wash tub, and the one room to interest such flies as were not already stuck to the postmaster or custodian, and a careful computation of the office statistics disclosed the fact that on one day four thousand of the insects had perished. We got this result by a count of the victims there seemed to be no vacancies in the ranks of the survivors."

"I have learned to swear and throw things. 'Attached to this you will find a list of flies setting forth the conditions which surround this building. Within the radius of one hundred yards there are three livey stables and mule boarding houses, one horse sanatorium, where the flies breed, one fish morgue, two shops for beef that should have been embalmed. 'The seacoast is 100 miles southward, the mountain 200 miles north. The summer is nine months long. At twilight the mosquito, whose mission in life is to spread microbes, relieves the overworked musca. 'And there you have it.'—Washington Co.

A Little Nonsense.

"Many years ago," says "The Providence Journal," "a village near twenty miles from Providence, a revival was in progress. A young man—one of indistinguishable twin brothers—who had been religiously observed, as was supposed, in an attentive attitude at the meetings, rose for prayers, walked to the anxious seat, and there was a sudden change to such good purpose that the deacons were sure he was on the high road to salvation. The next day he was overheard in the back yard at some chopping wood and swearing painfully at a refractory log. When remonstrated with for his sudden backsliding, he merely said: 'Oh, brother Jim, I didn't go to the meeting last night, so I went and hollered for him.'"

A Sunday school teacher in Carthage, Ill., has a class of little girls, and it is her custom to tell them each Sunday of some little incident that has happened in the week and request the children to quote a verse of Scripture to illustrate the story. In this way she hopes to impress the usefulness of Biblical knowledge upon the little ones. Last Sunday she told her class of a cruel boy who would catch cats and cut their tails off. "Now, can any little girl tell me of an appropriate verse?" she asked. There was a pause for a few moments, when one of the little girls arose and solemnly said: "Whatsoever God has joined together, let no man put asunder."

"I wouldn't be so concerned about my looks, Ethelinda," said the homey husband, crossly. "Beauty is only skin deep." "I'll tell you," snapped the pretty wife, still inspecting the effect of her new hat in the mirror, "but ugliness goes clear through."—Chicago Tribune.

Why Schley did not Know Code.

Washington, Aug. 12.—One of the principal charges made against Admiral Schley in the receipt under which the court of inquiry was convened, is the delay on his part in sailing from Cienfuegos to Santiago. The testimony that has been gathered in the past week by Captain Parker, the associate counsel for Admiral Schley, McCalla reported to Admiral Sampson, the completely vindicate Admiral Schley of the grave charge of culpable delay.

He will show, it is understood, that he sailed from Cienfuegos as soon as he learned beyond any question that Admiral Cervera's fleet was not in the harbor. The entries on the logs of the Marblehead (McCalla's ship) and of the Iowa, commanded by the reliable Evans, will entirely vindicate Admiral Schley of the charge of having delayed his departure for Santiago unnecessarily.

The flying squadron, in obedience to Admiral Sampson's orders left Key West early on the morning of May 19 for Cienfuegos.

Admiral Schley's squadron, on leaving Key West, left the Iowa, Captain Evans' ship, behind, and sailed after Schley's departure the Marblehead, the Vixen and the Eagle arrived direct from Cienfuegos. Captain McCalla reported to Admiral Sampson that he had arranged a code of signals with the insurgents, and had fixed a rendezvous where the Americans could meet the Cubans and obtain any information the insurgents had obtained as to the presence of Cervera's ships. The signal that the Cubans had something to communicate was to be three white lights by night and three horses on the shore by day. Admiral Sampson promptly gave orders that the signal should be communicated to every captain in the fleet, especially to Captain Evans of the Iowa, who was to rejoin Schley's flying squadron as soon as the Iowa finished coaling.

The Iowa joined the flying squadron on May 23. Captain Evans reported to Admiral Schley, but said nothing about the code of signals. It was agreed upon that night Captain Evans saw the three white lights on shore. He knew that the insurgents were signaling him, and he wanted to communicate with the fleet. No attention was paid to the signals by Admiral Schley for the obvious reason that he had been kept in ignorance of the code arranged.

Captain Evans has stated since that he supposed the code had been communicated to Schley. The next morning, McCalla arrived in Key West on the Marblehead, the Eagle and the Vixen again accompanying him. From him, Schley learned of the code and then he understood what the three white lights of the night before had meant. Captain McCalla went ashore on the Eagle, and soon learned that the Spanish fleet was not in Cienfuegos. Schley waited until dark before sailing, because Sampson's instructions to him ordered him to mask his true direction when he sailed. Admiral Schley's friends are confident that the simple recital of this chain of events, supported by the testimony of the logs, will fully vindicate the action of the commander of the flying squadron in delaying his departure from Cienfuegos until he was satisfied beyond all question that the Spanish were not in Cienfuegos.

A Lively State Campaign.

The political campaign in Maryland this year will be of the good old-fashioned sort, with public meetings in every precinct and spell-binders who will flood the voters with more or less silver-tongued oratory.

"We will go on the stump on October 1," said Chairman Vandiver today, "and by the way, that will soon be here. Our line of offense and defense is outlined by our platform, with which we feel entirely satisfied, notwithstanding the attacks made upon it."

Mr. Vandiver could not say whether former Senator Gorman would take a speaking part in the campaign or not. He said, however, that there would be no lack of forceful and competent speakers, both of local renown and from a distance. The list will, as usual, include many of the democratic members of the Baltimore bar, and a number of political aspirants from the counties.

As the race issue is to figure largely in the campaign, it is not surprising that some of Mr. Gorman's personal friends among the Southern Congressmen will be brought here to inform the Maryland people of the horrors of "negro domination" and the necessity for the elimination of the Americanized African from politics. These celebrities, if brought here, will be used as star attractions at the large meetings.

The Republicans have been no recreants recently in meeting their opponents in the open. It is probable that on one day four thousand of the insects had perished. We got this result by a count of the victims there seemed to be no vacancies in the ranks of the survivors."

Interest in political matters is at a low ebb at this time, owing to the depressing weather and the absence of so many prominent men from the city. With the approach of the cooler days of September and the time for the local nominating conventions, a season of activity will be inaugurated which promises to be as interesting as any campaign of recent years.

Browning's Bulldog.

A new story of the poet Browning relates that at one time he had been given a pure blooded bulldog of a rare strain, of so fierce a disposition and so devoted to the poet's mother that it was unsafe for a stranger to shake hands with her in his presence. Browning himself was the only other person whom the dog would allow to touch him, but even when the poet was more familiar with his mother than the dog thought right he showed his teeth to him. They one day put him to a severe test, Browning putting his arm round his mother's neck as they sat side by side at the table. The dog went round behind them, and putting his feet upon the chair, lifted Browning's arm off her shoulder with his nose, giving an intimation that he would not permit any liberty of that kind even from him.

Wanted the Experience.

At the recent meeting of a London nursing association Canon Ebskine Clarke told a story to illustrate his observation that one of the joys of childhood is to like many things that grown-ups people dislike. "I knew," he said, "a small boy who was found by the nurse sitting in the middle of a crowded street in Battersea and who said in answer to her inquiries, 'Please, I'm waiting to be removed.' That boy had heard of the delights of being in hospital."

A Day of Literature.

In an English blue book lately issued an inspector complains that many of the reading books used in elementary schools contain words and phrases far beyond the child's comprehension. "I found a boy," he says, "in a good school reading, 'And now another day of literature began to dawn upon me.' I could not resist asking him the length of that day, when I got the answer, 'Twenty-four hours.'"

All on $200 a Year.

A clergyman by the name of Matheson was minister of Patterdale, in Westmoreland, England, 60 years and died at the age of 90. During the early part of his life his benefice brought him only £12 a year. It was afterward increased to £18, which it never exceeded. On this income he married, brought up four children and lived comfortably with his neighbors, educated a son at the university and left behind him upward of a thousand pounds.

Alaska Driftwood.

No trees grow anywhere on the coast of western and northern Alaska, and yet these shores for thousands of miles and the islands of Bering sea are strewn with immense quantities of driftwood, in places piled high on the beach, bearing good testimony to the fact that the rivers, this drift, the salivation of the Eskimo, furnishing him with fuel and material for houses, boats and sleds. The entire northeastern half of Bering sea is very shallow, less than 500 feet in depth, while the southwestern half is mostly about 12,000 feet deep.

A Different Case.

The Silence of Discretion.

"Your cook sits on your front piazza every evening." "Well, we like the back porch just as well, and of course we never say anything to hurt cook's feelings in the hot weather."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Putting it Right.

"I didn't get home till dawn yesterday morning." "What did you wife say?" "That the wrong way to put it. What didn't she say?"—Philadelphia Times.

Dogged Obstinacy.

"I understand that dogs can have appendicitis." "Well, there's one thing certain, they'll never ask for an operation."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SHEBAIL.

She drank the wine's salt brim, Shebail, Glory of day, glory of day, And hope was strong, and life was young. 'My love will come ere set of sun; O'er the dark sea furrow sports the cold spray."

"The sea is high, Shebail, Shebail; Breakers at play, breakers at play, And life is long when love is gone. 'He ne'er will come ere set of sun; O'er the dark sea furrow sports the cold spray. 'Thy love is gone, Shebail, Shebail, Dead and away, dead and away, And life is long when love is gone. But life was done ere set of sun; O'er the dark sea furrow sports the cold spray. 'A. Foster in Longman's Magazine.

HE MEANT WELL.

An Obliging Man Who Made an Embarrassing Mistake.

A young editor took an apartment on South Twelfth street. The landlady said frankly to him: "I will tell you, sir, that my husband is a worthless fellow. I have to support him, and he sometimes comes home very late, drunk. There is no other objection to my place." The editor said this was no matter and thought no more of it until a few nights later, when a great uproar in the street awoke him. He looked out of the window and saw a man lying on the doorstep shouting ribaldry. "The husband," thought the editor. "I'll go down and let him in."

He ran forth in his pyjamas, grabbed the husband by the neck, and jerking him into the hallway, proceeded to drag him up stairs. But a man made strong objections to this treatment. He howled oaths and abuse, kicked, struggled, even pulled out a handful of the young editor's hair, but this was in vain, for the youth is strong and of a determined mind, and he was bound that he would do his landlady a good turn.

He had got perhaps three parts of the way up stairs with his burden when two heads were poked in the dim light over the balustrade, and the landlady's voice said, "Why, Mr. Blank, what are you doing?"

The editor panted as he took a fresh hold and at the same time ducked a sharp uppercut. "I'm bringing your husband up, ma'am. He's drunk again, I'm sorry to say."

From the editor's head on the landing these words then issued in a deep bass voice: "What do you mean, young fellow, by 'drunk again'? I'm this lady's husband. That man doesn't belong here."

Instantly realizing his mistake, the editor dumped his charge out into the street again. Then he returned and apologized lamely to the rightful husband for his strange words.—Philadelphia Record.

Liked the Samples.

An anecdote which is said to be characteristic of Yorkshire stories is that of a farmer who halted at a wayside inn and called for a quart of ale. He drank it off and called for another quart. Drinking this, he called for a third quart, having drunk which he said: "T'at's a verry fairish. I'll get down an' ha' some."
