SOME of our exchanges howl frantically against trusts, yet have become members of the Armour-Bowen scheme for controlling advertising rates; all of which emphasizes the fact that it makes a heap of difference as to "whose ox is gored."

THE authorities responsible for unheated churches and public halls, during gold and damp fall days and nights, take upon themselves the direct blame for bad colds, it not pneumonia and death. Such instances constitute criminal neglect, and the same can also be truthfully said of improper ventilation, after the season of regular heating has commenced.

THERE is a general expectation that the administration of President Roosevelt will be distinguished by an earnest effort to enact some legislation in restraint of trusts. The utterances of the President before he came to the high office he now holds encourage this belief, and as he has always had the courage to put his convictions into practice whenever the opportunity presented, it may be accepted that the next three years will witness some trust legislation advised by him.

The Negro, and Social Equality.

SOME of the arguments advanced against the negro, along the line of so-called "negro domination" and "social equality," are not only preposterous but unchristian. A very few of the rankest partisan, negro-hating newspapers, have commenced severely on the fact that President Roosevelt invited Prof. Booker T. Washington—an intelligent and noble-minded instructor of his race—to dine at the White House, and have indulged in fits of cholera over the fact sufficient to cause apoplexy.

We do not for an instant advocate a system of "social equality," as it is a condition impossible of accomplishment, with which color or nationality has but little to do. Many of those who rave against the negro as being socially inferior to themselves, could not enjoy "social equality," because of the whiteness of their own skins, and the so-called upper strata of society; in fact, "poor whites" and those outside the proverbial "four-hundred," may quarrel among themselves over social distinctions, but cannot enter the charmed circle of the elect, established by each separate community.

There is no rule defining social equality, which has a general application. The "big-bugs" of one place are sneered at by the same class in another, and this is true the world over. There may be common grounds on which these various sets may have interests and sympathies to a limited degree, but there is not in existence a free pass into the highest social status everywhere, according to worldly distinctions.

Some people hold that if a man is an intelligent, decent christian gentleman, he is as good as any other, regardless of the flimsy standards set—most frequently by money—by the local milliners of social distinctions, and this, regardless of birth, color or nationality. They take the unfashionable, and apparently unreasonable position, that every human being has a soul; that all have a chance of finally entering heaven, accordingly as accounts are rendered at the "last great day." They even assume that a "good nigger" may pass through the pearly gates, whether he be black as tar, or just colored a little bit, and do not admit that the whiteness of the skin will in the slightest benefit a man's chances for final salvation. Somebody is awfully wrong in their conclusions. Logic compels the admission that if a Prof. Washington is not good enough—not "socially equal"—enough to dine with a white man, then the white man ought to decline to go to heaven with him. There must certainly be a "washing-out" place somewhere, or probably there are two heavens—one for negro angels and one for white. We confess that we are not posted on the details of this somewhat complex question, and have no doubt that some of our exchanges might elucidate it to our complete edification.

Quite a Difference.

Both republican and democratic papers, in Frederick county, without exception, we think, publish the statement of county expenditures, and there is some sort of division of work among all papers in the county. From the county statement, just published, we find that the following sums for printing were paid during the year.

Examiner Publishing Co., $48.25
Great Southern Printing Co. (News), 187.50
Bangman Bros. (Citizen), 156.00
Midtown Register, 75.00
Herald Publishing Co., 60.00
Herald Publishing Co., 31.00
Banner of the South, 31.00
Emmitsburg Chronicle, 18.13
Catoctin Clarion, 15.40
Woodsboro Advance, 6.25

Total, $1,016.67

Carroll county does things differently. We have before us for reference, but two recent county statements: that for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1898, contains the following "Public Printing" items:

Vandover Brothers, $612.43
American Sentinel, 90.50
Total, $702.93

the other is for the year ending June 30, 1900, and is as follows:

American Sentinel, $1,500.41
Vandover Bros., 1,146.85
Carroll Record Co., 5.00
Total, $2,652.26

Mr. Rayner Speaks Out.

Attorney General Isidor Rayner came to his home in Baltimore to-day, the Schley inquiry hearing having been adjourned until Monday. Mr. Rayner was seen at his home by a reporter for the News and asked several questions in regard to the marking of ballots.

Mr. Rayner was first asked whether he had given or would give any opinion to the authorities in regard to marks on the ballot which were not in exact conformity with the law but where the intention clearly appeared on the face of the ballot?

Mr. Rayner said: "I have not given any official opinion, nor do I know that I will be called upon for one."

Mr. Rayner was then asked whether he would object to giving his views on the subject. He said:

"Of course, I do not wish to give any views which might bind men in any way or prevent me from changing them in case I am called upon for an opinion."

Mr. Rayner was then shown a sample ballot with a cross mark upon it, one prong of which extended below the line, and was asked if he thought a ballot of this sort ought to be rejected. He said:

"Looking at it as it is shown to me, my impression is that it would absolutely subvert the right of suffrage to reject a ballot of that sort. Anyone might mark his ballot in that way, and to cast aside his vote when the intention of the voter is so plainly apparent would be monstrous."

Mr. Rayner was then shown another mark upon the ballot where the X mark was not made, but another device or letter resembling a cross-mark. "I doubt very much whether a ballot so marked ought to be counted," said Mr. Rayner, "because if a mark of that sort is allowed a voter might use any sign or emblem or letter, which, under the law, is not indicative of his intention. The law requires an X mark, and it must either be in that shape or something so substantially identical with it that the intention of the voter must be patent upon the face of the ballot."

Mr. Rayner said these were just impressions he was giving; that he had read the New York decisions and those of other States upon the subject and, while he believed there must be a literal compliance with the law, that when the ballot shows on its face, as in the first instance given, that the voter intended to comply with it, and that fact was demonstrably apparent to the impartial mind of the judges, it ought to be counted, notwithstanding the language of the statute, and that no quibbling technicalities ought to be availed of to annul the elective franchise.—Balt. News.

Agricultural Building.

The largest of the structures at the St. Louis Exposition is that to be devoted to agriculture. This building will be 2000 feet in length and 700 feet in breadth, and will be nearly the size of the largest building at the Chicago World's Fair, which was that devoted to manufactures and liberal arts. The Agricultural Building at Chicago was 850 feet long and 500 feet wide. The great Northwest, the acquisition of which is commended by the exhibition to be held in the Missouri territorial, ranks agriculture on a Titan scale as one of its greatest wealth producers, and it is fitting that this branch of industry should have liberal representation at the St. Louis fair. Thirty-two and a half acres of space will surely be ample to illustrate all the methods that make farming in the West profitable, and leave little room to prove that, while the East and South have not such great farms as some Western states, they have agriculturists who are also up-to-date and prosperous.—Balt. Herald.

Maryland Farming.

The following article, under the above caption, is from the Baltimore Sun, of Sunday last:

"The excellent farms of Washington and Carroll counties seen from the Western Maryland cars were very pleasant surprises to visitors to the Hagerstown Fair from the Western and Eastern States. The large corn fields, with their immense corn shocks placed close together in long rows extending clear across the field, and the bright green of the newly planted wheat fields were a revelation. Such corn yields as they saw where hitherto was in progress were another surprise. The length of the corn stalks, some of the visitors said, is 'about twice the length of what we grow in York State.' Between Hagerstown and Smithburg, in addition to hundred of peach orchards, there are many apple orchards. In the apple orchards there were teams hauling out loads of apples, some in barrels and some by the wagon box load. At Smithburg apples were seen in piles of hundreds of bushels. A stranger looked out of the window and remarked: 'Say, Charlie look out the window here. We are back in Western New York again, in the apple section. Maryland seems to be able to raise almost any kind of crop.'

A number of strangers asked, 'What are those beautiful flowers?' 'They are cosmos,' answered a resident. 'The cosmos is the most beautiful of all flowers, is of various colors, and its growth and prolific bloom in the Hagerstown gardens are marvelous. Mr. E. A. Seidewitz, of Baltimore, who judged the floral display, said to the writer that he never saw such magnificent cosmos before. Dahlias also seem to excel in growth here.'

Talking about Maryland corn, it was a surprise to all Western farmers when it was exhibited in the Maryland Building at the Chicago World's Fair. They could hardly believe that such large and full ears were grown in a 'poor little State like Maryland,' not knowing the richness of the soil, the salubrity of the climate or the skill of the farmers. It would be well for the farmers of Maryland to make a display of their products at the Charleston Exposition."

When you wake up with a bad taste in your mouth, go at once to R. S. McKinney's drug store and get a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. One or two doses will make you well. They also cure biliousness, sick headache and constipation.

Patent Medicines in Austria.

The sale of "arcanas," or secret remedies, has always been strictly forbidden in Austria. Only those medicines which may be considered as pharmaceutical specialties that contain drugs acknowledged to be medicinal remedies, or pharmaceutical preparations, or simple mixtures of these in a new and more practical form of application, or more pleasing to the sight, smell, and taste.

In the case of all specialties for sale by apothecaries, the authentic prescriptions, carefully listed—native and foreign separated—must be kept on hand, ready for instant inspection upon request of the authorities. Every new medical preparation intended for use by the public must be reported to the authorities, and its sale may not be begun without permission. Prescriptions of foreign medicines must be accompanied by precise directions for their preparation from the foreign manufacturer, and be provided with his signature and business stamp.

The regulations in regard to advertising patent medicines are likewise strict. All laudatory notices of cures and remedies coming from abroad transgress the trade laws, and, under certain circumstances, are foundations for complaint of unlicensed medical practice. Simple announcements of the medicines in the papers are not forbidden, if done in accordance with existing laws, but advertising druggists are responsible for any illegal action.—Inventive Age.

A Typical South African Store.
O. R. Larson, of Bay Villa, Sundays River, Cape Colony, conducts a store typical of South Africa, at which can be purchased anything from the proverbial "needle to an anchor." This store is situated in a valley nine miles from the nearest railway station and about twenty-five miles from the nearest town. Mr. Larson says: "I am favored with the custom of farmers within a radius of thirty miles, to many of whom I have supplied Chamberlain's remedies. All testify to their value in a household where a doctor's advice is almost out of the question. Within one mile of where the store is located, there is a population of perhaps one hundred and fifty. Of these, within the past 12 months, no less than fourteen have been absolutely cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. This must surely be a record." For sale by R. S. McKinney.

Mr. D. W. Garner, Agent for the

Dear Sir—I had been trying a De

Laval Separator, Alpha Baby No. 1, for more than a week before you set me in the EMPIRE. After you placed the EMPIRE ones in the De Laval agent heard of it, two of their special agents came to see me with an Alpha Baby

No. 2, and they spent over a day trying to induce me to buy one of the De Laval machines. I had been using the EMPIRE for a couple of days and it was so much more simple than the De Laval and so much more easy to operate and clean, that when you came around, it did not take me long to decide to make definite purchase of the EMPIRE. I have had it for a week and to take their two machines away.

I can cheerfully recommend to any one wanting a cream separator that they buy an EMPIRE, and make no mistake.

Yours truly,

Mrs. Roosevelt's Secretary.

Miss Isabel Hagner, daughter of Dr. Charles R. Hagner of this city and social secretary of Mrs. Roosevelt, for several years has been a recognized social authority. Miss Hagner is one of the most beautiful and accomplished of local belles, and hers is an eminent example of the pluck and energy of the American girl. Seven years ago she made her debut in Washington society from the mansion of her family on Rhode Island avenue. Her father was one of the leading physicians in Washington. From her mother she had inherited a fortune of nearly $100,000. Through unfortunate speculation her money was lost. Her father became a confirmed invalid. From being a belle she was placed under the necessity of providing not only for herself, but for her father and small brothers.

She bravely set to work and in a short time was appointed to a clerical position in the War Department. Her friends had been accustomed to consider her in regard to social forms and she finally resigned her position and devoted her talents exclusively to this line of work. Her plan was to devote two hours a day to each of her clients. Miss Hagner possesses infinite tact, and to her Senator Dewey confided the delicate task of making public the rupture of the engagement between Miss Paulding and Lieutenant Edie last spring. Senator Dewey was always a great admirer of Miss Hagner and at one time they were reported engaged.

As social secretary to Mrs. Roosevelt, Miss Hagner's duties will be arduous. Besides keeping up to date the private correspondence she will supervise all the details of the state functions. She will know all the little intimacies, and it will be her task to arrange the functions with a view to personal harmony. A revision of the guest list will be confided to her. Miss Alice Roosevelt's debut will be under Miss Hagner's direction and it will be her duty to name the young women entitled to invitations.

Miss Hagner will devote four hours each day, from 9 to 1 o'clock, to her duties at the White House. A carriage has been placed at her disposal and a little flock in the private library has been fitted with a telephone and with messenger calls for her convenience.

Another Immoral Fable.

There was once an almond-eyed Princess, of great beauty, considerable wealth and average principles. And when the time drew near that she should be married she bade her grand vizier bring before her suitors, that she might hear what they had to say, at the same time not binding herself to accept the lowest or any tender. When the day came there were but three who had the courage to step forward and urge their claims. The first was middle aged and portly and spoke after this manner: "Princess, if you will be mine, I will give you the finest palace in this country and the largest diamond and the fleetest horse."

moreover, by a private arrangement between the Court physician and myself, I will succeed my father as king, and you shall be my queen."

"Number Three," the vizier called out, and very shyly the third man stepped forward. He was very young and as beautiful as a young god. He was simply but tastefully attired in a suit, no longer new, of his Sunday clothes.

"O Princess," he said, in a rich and fruity voice, looking round absently and very shyly, "I have no treasure to offer you, no power nor title. Only an undying love."

There was a faint trembling on the strings; the musicians, being used to Oriental stories, had expected something of the kind. The vizier spoke: "O more than diamonds! O sweeter than power! Higher, far higher, is love undying. Love that—"

"I wish you'd sit down and not talk like a book number," said the Princess. "Xanthus wears all earnest."

"Immoral!—The highest feelings are the furthest out of reach."

The excitement incident to traveling and change of food and water often brings on diarrhoea, and for this reason no one should leave home without a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. For sale by R. S. McKinney.

Be on the Watch.

A gentleman stopped suddenly before a sign that told him messenger boys were to be had inside. He hesitated, and then went in. "How many boys have you in just now?" he asked. "Six," was the reply. "It's too late to-day."

"Then they're all here," said the gentleman, looking around, while the boys themselves, all attention, wondering "what was up?"

"Boys," said the gentleman, eying them scrutinizingly, "I suppose you know there is to be an exhibition of trained dogs to-night?"

The faces of the boys showed that they were perfectly aware of the fact, and that they might even give him some points in regard to it. "Well, I'm looking for a boy to take a blind man to see it."

A fitter was the first response; then followed a variety of expressions, as: "A blind man?" "You're foolin'!" "What could a blind man see?" and "You can't say that way."

"I'm not saying I'm in earnest," said Mr. Davis, and then, looking at one of the boys who had said nothing, he asked: "Well, what do you think of it?"

some young eyes to do his seeing for him, with an owner who could report intelligently. My stopping here yesterday was with the thought that possibly such a pair of eyes could be found here. It was an opportunity held out to every one of you; but only one understood and grasped it. For the rest of you it was a lost opportunity; for my friend is delighted with the experiment—says he is sure I hit upon the one boy in town who will suit him, and has offered him a good position with a fine salary. Messenger boys are easy to get; but a boy who can make a blind man see is at a premium. And yet you might—well, you see, that boy, though he did not know it, was on the watch for a good opportunity, and when it came he knew how to manage it. It is the only way to keep good opportunities from slipping away; boys; you must be on the watch for them."—Anne Weston Whitney, in the Sabbath Recorder.

McKinley to Young Men.

In an address delivered to young men the late President McKinley said: "No man gets so well in this world as he whose daily walk and conversation are clean and consistent, whose heart is pure and whose life is honorable. A religious spirit helps every man. It is at once a comfort and an inspiration, and makes him stronger, wiser and better in every relation of life. There is no substitute for it. It may be assailed by its enemies, as it has been, but they offer nothing in its place. It has stood the test of centuries and has never failed to help and bless mankind. The world has use for the young man who is well grounded in principle, who has reverence for truth and religion and courageously follows their teachings. Employment awaits his coming and honor crowns his path. More than all this, conscious of rectitude, he meets the cares of life with courage; the duties which confront him he discharges with manly honesty."

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod Liver Oil is the means of life, and enjoyment of life to thousands: men women and children.

When appetite fails, it restores it. When food is a burden, it lifts the burden.

When you lose flesh, it brings the plumpness of health.

When work is hard and duty is heavy, it makes life bright.

It is the thin edge of the wedge; the thick end is food. But what is the use of food, when you hate it, and can't digest it?

Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil is the food that makes you forget your stomach.

ROADSIDE WATERING TROUGH.

An old iron kettle, even if it has a hole in the bottom, can be utilized in the manner shown in the cut. A wall of rough stones is laid under it, using sand and cement mortar and smoothly filling any break in the kettle with cement. The water can be brought into the kettle in a pipe over the top or through a hole drilled in the side. Such a watering place is an ornament to a roadside as well as a great convenience.

A good friend is one's nearest relation. One's greatest relation is not always a good friend.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Among other good stories told by Cyrus Townsend Brady in his "Under Tops and Tents," published by Scribners, is this:

It is related that a large number of naval cadets were negligent in following the service in the chapel, which was during the ritual of the Episcopal church. An incautious officer in charge on Sunday morning made a little address to the church party on the subject, saying he supposed that some of them erred through ignorance, but if they would observe him carefully and do as he did—in military parlance, follow the motions of the commanding officer—they would not go wrong.

Word was passed quietly through the battalion. They marched into the church. The officer in charge took his place in the front pew, settled himself in his seat and calmly blew his nose. Three hundred noses were blown simultaneously with a vehemence that was startling. The officer looked around and blushed violently in great surprise. Three hundred heads "followed the motion."

For the machinery of your body

The most complicated machine that exists to-day is your body. The most delicate piece of mechanism ever made by man is a body in its simplicity compared with it. The stomach is its furnace, the food its fuel, the blood its steam, the nerves its safety valve. And the parallel extends even to the care of this complex machine. It must be watched, it must be lubricated, it sometimes needs repairs. The most careless watcher knows when the mechanism is running down. He gets dull and listless. Food is no longer fuel. The nerves are all the time tingling out their warning. The blood gets clogged and refuses to do its work. What it needs is the medical lubricant
