dent of Maryland Agricultural College, the substance of whose address was as follows;
He always felt at home before a Carroll county audience, because he felt that an account of his stewardship of the Agricultural College fell on the ears of those in full sympathy with its work and ambitions. It was largely through the aid received from Carroll county farmers which made the impression upon the state legislature and brought about the expansion of the institution. Farmers need only to stand together and ask for such things that they ought to have, in order to have all their requests met. The individual stands for little; it is the combined force which wins, and this is illustrated in the fact that the large combinations have ceased to fight, because there is nothing left to fight—except among themselves. Farmers must also get together or go out of business.

The objection that the Agricultural College does not "send the boy back to the farm," is illogical. It sends him where he can do best for himself—make the most money, There are not places on the farm for all boys, and not all are qualified for farm work. The mechanical engineering department of the College is a necessary feature, because it works harmoniously with the idea of securing the best results—the best means of livelihood—for farmers sons. Young men cannot be condemned for securing places paying large salary, in preference to working on the farm at $12.00 or $15.00 per month. The only way to keep the boy on the farm is to give him an interest in it; give him the opportunity to go into business. In some department, for himself; on every farm there ought to be something essentially the boy's own; if this be impracticable, then, he ought to be left go into some other department of work.

Boys not interested in the farm are not wanted there; but, educate the boy who wants to become a farmer, as well as the one who does not. The same applies to the girls—educate them for home-makers, as well as for other objects in life. There ought to be a girl's departme Pennsylvania, spoke at considerable length on the benefits of organization.

"It is a fact perhaps not generally known, that the people who live in the license districts of Frederick county, have absolutely no voice in dealing with the saloon question. The liquor dealers have it all their own way, so far as the law granting permission to sell is concerned. There is not even a provision for a protest by any citizen against granting a license, and the clerk seems under the law compelled to grant a license to all applicants, except in territory where the sale of liquor is prohibited, and in cases where the grand jury recom-mends the withholding of a license, or the court has suppressed the license.

Senator Gorman's Return.

Senator Gorman will reach New York the latter part of this week, re-turning from his trip to Europe, and will be welcomed at the pier by many prominent democrats. It is said that the senator probably will go to Saratoga for the month of August instead of coming directly back to Maryland. The senator's first concern, politically, will be with the Maryland gubernatorial situation. Candidates and policies are in the air pending a hint from the acknowledged State leader. The senator will be visited at Saratoga, it is expected, by the prominent party workers, and will open the campaign at long distance range.

Brubaker has frequently visited Taneytown, the native home of her husband.

Meanwhile, however, the interest in the presidential situation will grow apace. At Saratoga, if he goes there, as at present he is said to intend, he would be brought in contact with the Tammany leaders and the State democratic managers of New York. Doubtless, also he would be visited influential democrats from all sec tions of the country, and some presidential log rolling would be inevita-

The Pope's Wealth.

It has been understood that Leo XIII has willed his private fortune not to his relatives, but as a fund for his successor. No one but the Papal Secretary of State, Cardinal Rampolla and the Papal Treasurer, Cardina Mocenni, knows the amount of his fortune, but it is expected to exceed $5,000,000. It is on deposit in the Bank of England. The Pope leaves three nephews and a host of llesser made when he was elected Pontiff that he would not use his power to lieve that the bug exists. This machine was first put on the market in 1890, and was followed after by a machine we called the "United States Separator," and entered into a contract with the Vermont Farm Maselling them the patent rights of the old U. S. Separator, and began the manufacture of the Empire machine. Of course, the Empire of 1895 was not the equal of the Emire of 1903; there have been very many improvements.

The original Empire factory was in Newark, N. J., in rented quarters, with not much more equipment than could be set in one corner of our office to day. In 1900 they went to Bloom-field, N. J., erecting one of the largest factories in the world of its kind; the floor space of the plant, exclusive of warehouse, being 100.000 square feet.

A Christian Endeavor Sign. A little grocery store in the suburbs of Washington, D. C., has a sign which unwittingly advertises Christian Endeavor. It appears that in painting the word "Groceries" the first "e" was upon the children of the third and omitted and the mistake subsequently corrected by inserting this letter inside the "c." However this may be, the sign bears the C. E. monogram in its midst and looks like this:

Originality In the Home.

Every woman of taste aims to make her home distinctive. Furniture she must have for conventional use, but it need not be conventional or common in form or even in material. As for the decorative portion, there is no limit to choice since the designs in wall paper are innumerable and all sorts of conceits lie at hand. Strawberry Granite. Here is the way to make strawberry granite: One pint of orange juice, one pint of strawberry juice, one quart of whole strawberries, one and a half pounds of sugar, one quart of water. Boil the sugar and water together five minutes. Drop the whole strawberries into this sirup, lift them carefully with a skimmer and place them on a platter to cool. Then add to the sirup the strawberry and orange juice. Strain and freeze. When frozen stir in the strawberries and serve in glasses.

Automatic Screen About the only way in which a housekeeper can keep the house clear of flies in the summer time is to use screens in both the doors and windows, for these must be left open if there is to be any circulation of air through the house. With the use of these screens there arises the necessity of removing at least a portion of them every night if the house is to be protected from burglars, causing no small amount of trouble to the occupant of the house. The Unconquered Boers. A party of unconquered Boers has just arrived in Batavia, traveling to a Dutch colony under the auspices of a Boer relief fund committee. The government has assigned an abandoned estate for them to settle upon as small cultivators. These Boers will be utilized for experimental purposes. There is much distress among the lower class of Europeans and Eurasians in Java. Many of them seek grants of land on easy terms, on which they could start cultivation in a small way. As most of them have no experience in farming, the government hesitates to put them on the land from fear of failure. The Boers, as practical colonists and farmers, are expected to show how to cultivate the land and make money out of Gentlemen—Some six years ago I began to have sciatica, and also a chronic case of muscular rheumatism. At times I could not work at all (my business being baggage master on Southern R. R.). For days and weeks at a time I could not work. My suffering was intense. Physicians treated me, without permanent relief, however. Tried a number of advertised remedies without permanent benefit. Finally I tried "Rheumacide." It did the work, and I have had excellent health for three years. I can cheerfully say that all rheumatics should use "Rheumacide," for it is by far the best remedy.

In 1894, he says, he found a cent piece, dated 1893, in the restaurant of dinner scratched his initials on it just over the feathered head, while on the cheek he added those of the hotel. Until 1896 he treasured the coin, then drew it out of his pocket with a handful of other change and before he realized it the cent piece had gone the mysterious way of all money.

A year ago he chanced, being of a curious turn of mind, to fall into conversation one evening with a professional beggar at Broad and Chestnut streets. He upbraided the man for getting so much money for nothing. "Oh," said the beggar, "I don't get so much. That's all I've got in the last hour." And he held up a cent piece. At that moment the electric light fell upon the coin, and the business man, to his amazement, caught sight of the letters "H. L." on the cheek of the face. We have had some excellent poetesse in days gone by, but none of them could write; they dictated their inspirations. The common explanation given of this traditional prohibition-for it is a custom rather than a rule-was that if girls once learned writing they might have indulged in talismanic pastimes and eventually have become witches. As a matter of fact, the real reason was quite different. There was a fear, perhaps not ill founded, that, having once learned to write, they might hasten to make use of the accomplishment by composing love letters to young men with whom they could not otherwise communicate, for the strict seclusion of females cuts off all intercourse between young people of opposite sexes almost as soon as they have ceased to be infants."

Rapid Work at St. Louis Exposition.

St. Louis—A record in the rapid construction of big exposition buildings is being made by the contractors who are putting up the Mammoth Palace of Agriculture at the World's Fair, at St. Louis.

The building when completed will be 546x1660 feet, and will cover more than 21 acres. On July 15th., after 19 days of work, 1050 feet of the frame work of the giant structure had been finished and the work was progressing so satisfactorily that it was confidently predicted that the remainder would be completed in 13 days more.

She's never in a novel,
Although she isn't rare,
And she can't get into fiction
For, though her face is fair,
Her cheeks as pink as roses, Her teeth as white as pearl,

The authors all ignore her, 'Cause her hair won't curl. She's very fond of dancing; To row is her delight.

She glories in lawn tennis;
She could golf from morn till night. But she sits out half the dances (Lest her ringlets all unfurl), And she must not be an athlete,

'Cause her hair won't curl. She loves to go in bathing, But really doesn't dare; She knows she's simply hideous With lank and straggling hair. While other maids are splashing Their tresses twine and twirl,

She bakes upon the sea beach, 'Cause her hair won't curl. Her coiffure is a triumph When the days are cool and dry, But she bids farewell to beauty When the mercury is high.

She doesn't crave a million Nor pine to wed an earl,
But she prays for an invention
That will make hair curl.

Then he lifted himself up on his elbow and said plain-

Little Miss Myers was seated at a lewing machine. Mrs. Runkle and her daughters had gone off to see a milita-

In the midst of her reverie there was They had got him properly attired, or, a call at the telephone, and, being alone in the house, she went to answer it. The voice was a man's. "Who are you?" she asked.

"Henry Dean. Is that you, Aunt Jane? I'm down at the depot; start for Baltimore in ten minutes and thought I'd say 'How do you do!' and 'Goodby.' Have found another clew; pray heaven it may lead to something. Have you any message for the Carrolls?" There was a pause while Miss Myers stood there at the instrument, clutching the ear piece as if it had been a rope that was to save her from drowning. By a supreme effort of will she had recovered from the shock the mention of that name had given her, and now her brain was reeling with doubt, uncertainty and longing. What ought she to do? Should she reply and tell who she really was or not? It was evident that there was something wrong with the wires and that Mr. Dean imagined himself to be talking to his aunt. What claim had the "little Miss Myers" on him now after all these years?

Very likely he was happily married, and therefore was it not Miss Myers' plain and simple duty to say that she was not "Aunt Jane" and then go back to her work? "Harry," she called out softly.

the connection"-She heard no more, but with a gasp called out the Runkles' address, then hung up the ear piece and dropped into her chair with a face as white as snow. Yet even now the instinct to work was strong within her, and not many minutes had elapsed before her feet were again on the treadle and the whir of the machine once more filled the room. Now, however, its accompanying rhythm in her brain was not all in the past tense, for "Did he hear me? Will he come?" kept up its ceaseless throb till it seemed as if the words must be stitched to every seam of the shirt she was making.

But as the time went by the little dressmaker tried to prepare her heart for the disappointment. "I may have dreamed it all while listening to the playing of 'Marching Through Georgia' so many blocks away," she said to herself. "It's twenty years since we parted, and he was twenty then and I sixteen. Absence, they say, is the tomb of love, and though, of course, with me"- Here Miss Myers sprang up with the second little scream she had given that morn-This time, however, it was not the

"Yes; ever since I came back from Europe ten years ago," is the reply. "I was sent there by the doctors to recover from the effects of a wound, and I wrote you nearly a dozen letters then. I knew, though, it was only because you never received them that they were not answered. But when I came back and found all traces of you lost I sometimes thought you had hidden yourself purposely, because-because I had done my duty to my country. Yet I never abandoned the resolve to find you and have the truth from your own lips, and now, thanks to the gale, I have done so and learned how blessedly I was mistaken." "The gale?" repeats Agnes questioningly, and then he goes on to explain how the wind entangled the telephone wires and that it was by the merest chance they had been enabled to speak to one another. "And I have interrupted your trip," says Agnes a few moments later, looking up, with a smile. "Not for long," responds he, adding, "and when it is resumed it must be a wedding journey."

THE PITCHER. The pitcher takes a telling pose And holds the ball on high,
Then turns it with his finger tips,
His new in-curve to try.
Then swiftly swings his strong right arm;

The vicious deed is done!
The umpire dodges skillfully And hoarsely shouts, "Ba-all one!" The pitcher takes his pose again,

Both feet firm on the ground; Again he holds the ball on high And slowly turns it round.

Then once more he uncoils himself,

The batsman to undo.
The ball smacks in the catcher's glove;
The umpire shouts, "Ba-all two!" The pitcher fiercely grinds his heel, In desperation grim.
Once more he holds the ball on high;
All eyes are fixed on him.
Once more he swiftly lets it drive,
Then fiercely slaps his knee
Because the umpire coldly cries,
In fog horn tones, "Ba-all three!"

The pitcher's face is firm and set;
A wild gleam in his eye
Shows his determination as
He holds the ball on high.
He hurls it in; the bat swings round
And meets it with a thud!
The ball soars o'er the left field fence!

The pitcher's name is Mudd!
