State Guard Cost $42,000.

The expense the state has undergone by maintaining the First Brig-ade and the Naval Reserves as a military guard about and within the fireruined district during the last sixteen days has been $42,000. The guard was established Sunday, February 7, the first night of the fire, and since that time about 2035 men have been employed in the service. They have consumed more than $7000 worth of food, and their pay, averaging $1.50 a day for each man, amounts to more than $35,000.

The First Brigade is composed of the First, Fourth and Fifth regiments, Troop A of cayalry and the First Separate Colored Company. All but the latter were engaged in guard duty. The Fifth regiment had 640 men in service, the Fourth about the same number, the First about 520 and Troop A about 100. The Naval Reserves had 135 men in service. The pay for each landsman and seaman of the reserves and for each private of the several regiments averages $1 per day. Petty officers receive from $1.25 to $2 per day. In the regimental service corporals receive $1.25 per day, sergeants $1.50 and first sergeants and non-commissioned officers $1.75. The commissary departments of each of the regiments, of the cavalry troop and of the reserves allow thirty cents a day for food for each man. The only other cost included in the total Mr. Dixon, of Talbot, introduced in expense of maintaining the military transportation of members of the First Regiment from and to their

May not Meet in Baltimore.

The general committee which has in charge the arrangements for the International Christian Endeavor Convention, which is scheduled to meet in Baltimore in July, 1905, has encountered a knotty proposition. It has been said that the big convention will have to be called off, so far as Baltimore is concerned, on account of the recent fire. The great loss of monev to the business and commercial men upon whom the general committee expected to call for contribu tions has made the situation in the . Atwood is chairman, is full of en-

Why Sympathize with Japan?

Some of our Exchanges are inquiring—Why should American sympathy be with Japan? This is another way of asking-Why should not Americans take the part of Russia? It is stated, in connection with the query that there was a time, not so long ago, when Russian sympathy was this country, in its hour of greatest need, and that our present sympathy for Japan is not only a display of ingratitude, but an unnecessary infraction of the Golden Rule. Well, there are two or more sides to such argument. In the first place, the purchase of Alaska was a sort of payment for fayors received from Russia, and in the second our government very promptly proclaimed neutrality in the present affair between the two Nations at Again, it is out of harmony with the great American principle of fair play coupled with honor, for Russia to receive anything like popular sympathy in this country. The oppression, dictatorship and persecutions of the Russian government, both with its for the good of the public service, own people and with those offering rather than for the good of the "oreasy conquest, have been such, in recent years, as to turn away from her the sympathies of all Christian, humane people. The bear, as typical of Russia, is very properly applied.

The great thing to be feared, is, that the present contest will involve the world. Considering the practically unlimited resources of Russia, as but little difference which party gent men who realize that such recompared with Japan, the former is would win, aside from the radical disalmost sure to win, in the end, and agreements between platforms and lated from sufficient premiums to not only cleanse the system but they then, what would be the fate of the policies, and their relation to the latter? The star argument against the taxing of mortgages is that it is "double taxation." Probably it is. As there are two investments, both seeking profit, why should not both be taxed? The owner of the property expects his profit from the property; the mortgagee expects his profit from the mortgage investment.

Mr. Smith needs $1000 in order to purchase, or improve, a property. He goes to Mr. Jones, who agrees to loan him the money on a mortgage; not wishing to mortgage the property for so small a sum, he succeeds in borrowing the amount from Mr. Brown on an ordinary promissory note. The assessment law requires Mr. Brown to pay tax on this note, though it is unsecured, except by signatures. Why should not Mr. Jones, had he loaned the $1000, on a note secured by the property (mortgage) of Mr. Smith, also be required to pay tax on

There is no Christian mission field that has not its stories of self denial and heroism to tell. These characteristics are seen in the apostle Paul upon his first great missionary journey, as illustrated in the passage before us. Paul is at Lystra and has been received with favor for his work's sake. But enemies come from Antioch and Iconium. The people are stirred up against the apostle. They stone him and carry him out of the city, supposing him to be dead. But he was not so, and as the disciples stood about him he arose, went back into the city and thence to Derbe, continuing to preach the gospel. Is not this heroism? And yet it is but the story that may be told of every missionary field.

Turn from Asia Minor to China and to modern missions, and you will find this assuredly true. I have on the wall of my study a picture containing the portraits of five comparatively young people, two ladies and three men. I look at them now. Their faces are handsome, intelligent and cheerful in appearance. Their every expression shows culture and refinement. Beneath this little group I read these words: "Martyred Missionaries of Pantingfu, China, June 30, 1900."

June 30, 1900! Over 1,800 years since Paul was supposedly martyred at Lystra, yet still the work of martyrdom goes on in leading the world to Christ, and without going further this group of martyrs may teach us "heroism and other lessons from China." The names of these missionaries are Rev. F. E. Simcox and wife, Dr. C. V. Hodge and wife and Dr. George Y.

1. Missions in China teach heroism, at their post of duty. When their mission house was attacked Mr. Simcox had firearms, with which he might have caused great destruction among his persecutors, but he threw them down, refusing to use them. The house was set on fire, and there they stood, these five heroes and their children, and died as heroically as any martyrs ever died for Christ. The last seen of them was Mr. Simcox holding the hand of his little child as the flames leaped all about them. Such examples should spur us all to Christian heroism. We should dare to do our duty no matter what may be the difficulties or dangers that surround us.

Where duty calls or danger, Be never wanting there,

2. Missions in China teach lessons of sacrifice and self denial. These young people were all from Pennsylvania. Dr. and Mrs. Hodge were Philadelphians and members of two honored Philadelphia families. They all left homes of sick for Christ's sake. None but those who go knows what it costs to leave home and country and to go to a foreign mission field, where you are cut self denial for Christ, but what is it self denial for Christ, but what is it in comparison to the sacrifices of those who leave all for Him and risk all for Him? Let us think of the Hodges and selves, What have we done for Christ

3. Missions in China teach lessons of loyalty. This is beautifully illustrated in our little group of martyrs. Dr. Taylor was absent from the mission house at Pantingfu when the danger became most imminent. He had gone away on a business trip, but had promised to return. But before returning he heard of the danger that threatened his friends. Other friends pleaded with him not to return, but he listened not to their entreaties, but went back to keep his promise and to face life or death with his associates, as the case might be. What a story of loving loyalty and how it should teach us to be loyal to our friends, and especially to our greatest friend, the Master Him-

He's My Brother.

A gentleman once met a little girl carrying in her arms a sturdy little baby brother and inquired if the burden was not somewhat heavy. "Why, he's my brother; he's not heavy." was the simple but beautiful reply. How love lightens burdens, and how much easier all life is when lived in the spirit of love.

THE CHARM WORKED.

A Story Which Reveals the Key to Good Housekeeping. The Germans have a story which the home loving people love to repeat. A father when his daughter became a bride gave her a golden casket, with the injunction not to pass it into other hands, for it held a charm which in her keeping would be of inestimable value to her as the mistress of a house.

Not only was she to have the entire care of it, but she was to take it every morning to the cellar, the kitchen, the dining room, the library, the bedroom, and to remain with it in each place for five minutes, looking carefully about. After the lapse of three years the father was to send the key that the secret talisman might be revealed.

The key was sent. The casket was One of the most sensible resolutions parchment on which were written these opened. It was found to contain an old ing was that for a law giving a farmer worth a hundred pairs of servants' words: "The eyes of the mistress are
