Fissel but last week his condition had apparently improved and hopes were entertained of his recovery.

Mr. Shaw was a farmer, but was most widely known as an insurance agent, representing the Royal and Agricultural Companies, as well as the Carroll County and Dug Hill Mutuals. He had a large acquaintanceship all over this section of the state, and, having traveled extensively and being an intelligent observer. was a most entertaining conversationalist, a well posted man of affairs generally, and a most genial host. He was considerably interested in politics, yet not a politician, and was several times a candidate on the Republican ticket, but failed of election, though always receiving a large vote. He had, during his lifetime, atttended most of the great Expositions of the country, as well as state and county fairs throughout the East, at the latter, representing dairy appliances, a line of business with which he was exceptionally well acquainted. He leaves as his immediate family, a widow, one son and two daughters, as well as a large family connection. Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon from the Methodist church, Uniontown, of which he was a member; the I. O. M. also participated in the ceremonies. The funeral was largely attended, the services being in charge of his pastor Rev. C. E McCullough, assisted by Revs. G.

blys all over the land prove that the Nation is ever grateful and mindful of great deeds done. He drew the line between true and false heroes. The man who stands for right, in the face of might, is a true hero; the young man, surrounded by all the temptations of to-day, who maintains a pure and honored life, is a true hero; the manifestation of noble principles, is alone the stuff which makes manly men; perfidy and dishonor must be cried down everywhere; after all, he who serves his country best, serves God best.

He scored the false heroes of politics; it is a shame that success at the polls is so often heralded as the end of political heroism; in dealing with public questions, the men of to-day have as many opportunities to attain true heroism as at any other time in the history of the country; true heroism can be shown on election day in refusing to bow to party 'bosses' who are often grand villians; party leaders are often chosen, not because of real merit, but because of their dexterity in the use of unscrupulous political methods—of money, of corrupt practices; the true hero comes out boldly and shows up fraud and rascality, no matter by whom practiced, or for what end.

He made clear the opportunities for heroism in peace as well as in war; that we need not go back down the line of ages for the true heroe; that the same spirit exists now an and Bunker Hill. He paid a tribute to the veterans; called on the youth of to-day to respect and honor them; urged mothers to rear up heroes at home, children with pure hearts and noble purposes.

kev. D. J. Wolf spoke eloquently for a citizenship based on Christianity, drawing a parallel between the lessons of the day—the honors to the soldier dead—and the honors attaching to good citizenship. He said:

The upholding of good government by the truly patriotic means giving one's life, if need be, in the effort. In making up our ideas of what constitutes patriotism, we must not leave out our moral, spiritual and intellectual duties. Our aim and object in life should be te grow into such citizens as are a credit to this greatest of all Nations. We should not ferget to render praise to God on such occasions; he uses men' to carry out his designs. Soldiers may die by thousands, but of what value is this unless God is with their achievements. We as true citizens become a great brotherhood in our recognition of a Nation's heroes, whether dead or living.

"The place where we now are has won a double distinction. Here was fought one of the great battles of time, and here was spoken one of the few speeches which shall last through the ages. As long as this Republic endures or its history is known, so long shall the memory of the battle of Gettysburg likewise endure and be known; and as long as the English tongue is understood, so long shall Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg speech thrill the hearts of mankind,

The civil war was a great war for rightousness—a war waged for the noblest ideals, but waged also in thoroughgoing, practical fashion. It was one of the few wars which means in their successful outcome a lift toward better things for the nations of mankind. Some wars have meant the triumph of order over anarchy and licentiousness masquerading as liberty; some wars have meant the triumph of liberty over tyranny masquerading as order, the triumph of orderly liberty, the bestowal of civil rights upon the freed slaves, and at the same time the stern insistence on the supremacy of the national law throughout the length and breadth of the land.

Suicide of Mayor McLane.

Mayor Robert M. McLane, of Baltimore, ended his life on Monday afternoon, at 3.15, by shooting himself through the brain at his home, 29 W. Preston St. The bullet entered the right temple and came out below the left ear, death ensuing within an hour. No cause is assigned for the act, and the theory is held by some that the shooting was accidental. His wife last saw him alive less than five minutes before the fatal shot was fired, and he then seemed perfectly cheerful and gave not the slightest evidence that he was in any way worried or despondent. This is also the evidence of his friends who were with him within several hours of a sudden, temporary insanity, unless, indeed, it was accident and not suicide.

This question will probably never be satisfactorily settled, though the preponderance of evidence seems to favor suicide, however unexplainable such a conclusion seems. Without positive knowledge of the facts, we can conceive how a highly nervous and sensitive temperament may produce the type of man not best calculated to bear the worry, the criticism, the heavy burden of responsibility,

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning June 5.

Topic.—How my silence witnesses against Christ.—Matt. xii, 30; Luke xvii, 12-19. That any one who has really found Christ as his Saviour should want to be silent concerning Him seems almost incredible, and yet we all know that this is frequently the case. Many claim to know Christ, yet they do not want to confess Him by uniting with His people and engaging in active Christian work. Others who have united with the church are often silent when it comes to personal testimony concerning His goodness. The opportunity to speak for Christ in public meeting is theirs, yet, having the ability to use it, they do not avail themselves of it. Again, some particular blessing comes to us through the Master, yet we do not tell it to His glory. Like the nine lepers who were healed, we accept the benefaction, but fail to praise the benefactor. The silent attitude when the occasion demands confession or testimony is a false one. But let us particularly emphasize the condition. The believers should always confess Christ, of course, and yet there are many not qualified to testify before others, and no one's salvation is dependent upon his being able to speak for Christ or to pray in public. Some people witness against Christ more by a speech than by silence. "Swift to hear, slow to speak," was the apostles' motto, and it is corroborated by the world's proverb, "Speech is silver, silence is golden." But, there being the man and the hour, the speaker and the occasion, silence is not the true attitude toward Christ. "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so" is the exhortation of the psalmist, and Christ Himself commands us there are also times when silence is Write again soon tocowardice, and cowardly silence has no place in the Christian's creed or Silence when we should speak witnesses against Christ in two ways. (1) "He that is not with Me is against The world judges a man's attitude toward Christ by whether or not he confesses Him and takes his stand among Christ's people. If a man were at heart a Christian and yet was silent upon the subject, the world would count him against Christ, upon the ground that if he were for Him he would manifest it. By silence, there fore, all his influence would be against Christ. (2) By silence we lose golden opportunities to present Christ to others and thus witness against Him. The nine lepers who were silent lost most splendid opportunities to tell others what Jesus had done for them, and in the telling they might have won many converts for Him. Who can tell what a word in season will do? By it Andrew led Peter to Christ, Nathaniel led Philip, and the Samaritan woman brought her entire village to see Him. Has a word of ours eveled a soul to Him? If not, let us seek pardon for past opportunities and not fail to take advantage of those to

To Check Fruit Pest.

About a year and a half ago the Department of Agriculture sent an agent abroad in search of a bug that would prey upon and keep in check that great pest of the Southern and Pacific Coast States, the San Jose scale. This insect has been spreading over the United States with a speed exceeding that of the dreaded cotton boll weevil. The fears aroused by it have led to more legislation by the several states and by various foreign governments than has been induced by all other insect pests combined. It is particularly deadly to deciduous fruits, notably the pear and apple, peaches and other stone fruits.

The Amateur Nurse.

Although this is decidedly the age of the trained nurse, there are thousands of American families who take care of relatives and friends through every sort of illness, from whooping cough to typhoid, and there are so many things that the home nurse can do to make a patient comfortable and to keep a sickroom wholesome without any special trouble or expense and with just a little knowledge of simple facts that it seems important to talk about these things as often as organs to contribute to the blood all of the nutriment contained in the food. The soil is kept thoroughly stirred with a hoe and cultivator, and nothing is left undone to keep the plants in the most healthy and vigorous condition. The celery is all blanched with earth thrown up with an implement similar to a snowplow. It is made of steel with a curve a man with a single cultivator, stirring up and loosening the soil between the rows. The hilling is done gradually and at intervals as the crop matures. The blackbirds that come early in the spring to the Eastern Shore of Maryland take possession of all the locust trees in 'he vicinity and proceed to build their nests. Often one may see a single tree filled with nests, but the birds do not seem to interfere with one another in the least. It is a laughable sight to happen along on a fine day when the parents are teaching their young to fly. First the little birds are tempted out of the nest, and they si huddled together on a branch, hungry and frightened. Soon the old bird arrives with a worm and perches on a nearby branch. Then he calls the children, and very soon their hunger conquers fear, and they take a hop toward the food. This is the first lesson in
