All advertisements for 2nd and 3rd. papers made in our office will be published each week; otherwise, insertion cannot be guaranteed until the following week.

THE EDITOR is away on a vacation, and the editorial department of the RECORD is in the hands of amateurs. The critical readers of the paper had better skip the editorial page, or put on the mantle of charity before they begin to read it.

THIS is the season for picnics, and while they often are a great bore to grown-up people, the children enjoy them heartily. A good illustration of this was a remark made by a little boy on the street one evening last week. A friend hailed him with, "Were you at the picnic?" "Yes, I was," he answered, "and I had the greatest supper I ever eat." The carter and sorrowful life come with deadly certainty to every one who lives long enough, and it is a good thing to make the days bright and happy for children in a reasonable way.

PEOPLE who drink the town water would do well to filter it. A good cheap filter can be made with clean sand and charcoal. There has necessarily been a great deal of muddy water in the standpipes this summer, and at the best, streams that run through a farming country, and get the overflow from the houses and barn-yards are not very pure. If the water is boiled before it is filtered, it will be quite pure. By the way, would it not be a good thing if our city fathers would have the stand-pipe cleaned out, and the mains flushed; there must be a quantity of mud in them.

The Blue and the Gray.
For some time a movement has been on foot to bring about formal union of the veterans of the Federal and Confederate armies; but the effort has been rewarded with only partial success. C. S. A. Camps and G. A. R. posts have exchanged social calls, and at the National Encampment of the Grand Army, held last week at Boston, a body of Confederate soldiers were entertained royally by their foes of forty years ago. Notwithstanding the good feeling that seemed to exist, a motion to hold a grand reunion of Northern and Southern soldiers was tabled; the wounds have not had quite time enough to heal. It has not been very long since the red-coated British soldier and his American antagonist were not able to meet on friendly footing; but now after almost a hundred years' hands have been joined across the sea, and that long-standing quarrel has been closed.

One could scarcely expect a bitter civil strife to be forgotten in forty years; even though the terms of surrender were different from any the world has ever known. The soldier on one side fought, as he honestly believed, to protect his fireside; the one on the other side fought as he just as honestly believed, to right a wrong and to maintain the Union. The "Yank" thought the "Yank" was an oppressor, and the "Yank" reciprocated by thinking that his Southern enemy was a traitor. Unprincipled politicians to serve their own selfish ends, waved the "bloody shirt," and the breach was kept open; unwise legislation, partisan history, fanatical literary productions, and above all—a lack of knowledge each of the other, all tended to keep the two sections apart in sentiment. These influences, coupled with the fact that the business interests of the North and the South were, in a manner, antagonistic, and the underlying cause that in the veins of the men of one side flowed the aristocratic blood of the Cavalier, while the other boasted the puritanic blood of the Roundhead, have been practically overcome. It is wonderful when one stops to think of it; yet it is true.

The wave of sectional hate is receding and while it has not reached the low water mark, the fact that it is going down is patent to the most casual observer. Robert E. Lee, whom Theodore Roosevelt says is the greatest general the English-speaking race has ever produced, surrendered his men to the great armies of the North, and he bowed to the magnanimity of Grant. He refused a large salary from a Northern insurance company and spent the remainder of his life in teaching the youth of the South that the Union was indivisible. The memory of Lincoln and the broad policy of McKinley did more to bring about a better understanding than all other personal factors combined.

The friendly invasion of the South by Northern capital struck at the vulnerable pocket book and this time the South surrendered to the money clink of gold, certain preconceived ideas were abandoned, both sides bent a little to meet the other, and the desire for more perfect unity was, in part attained.

When the cloud of the Spanish War loomed large in our National sky, the fact that some of our citizens had worn the Gray and some the Blue was forgotten, and, as in '76, a common danger drew us closer together. Lee, Wheeler, Hobson and a score of other Confederates, in fact or in sympathy, became popular idols of the whole country. At last the line of demarcation had been obliterated, the Stars and Stripes were the place of the Stars and Bars in the heart of the old Confederate soldier, and the respect and confidence of his former enemy covered him as a mantle of honor. The war is over, even the paper battles are fought with less bitterness, mutual admiration takes the place of mutual hatred, and the Blue and the Gray are united on a basis of common sense, common desires and common interests.

The history of this war and the reconciliation that has followed it would not be credited in the field of romance. Just one particular alone will show its unique character; the conquered were allowed to wear their uniform and to carry their flag in processions. In any other country or any other time this would have been tantamount to another declaration of war. To accustom this unprecedented privilege, even the flags that had been captured in battle were, in some instances, returned to the vanquished. Perhaps the explanation of all this lies in the fact that we are a peculiar people, and our peculiarity makes us kin whether we live in the East or the West, the North or the South; and this peculiarity with its attendant kinship makes us a nation united beyond the possibility of disruption, and an incomparable force among the powers of the world.

H. K. B.
The Campaign.
The leading candidates in this Presidential campaign are true gentlemen, and so far, are conducting the campaign in an earnest, dignified manner, and the people are not alarmed. The politicians are working and scheming and prophesying; the party papers are ranting and abusing the opposite candidates, as usual; most of the men who sit on the fence till they can decide on which side to get down have taken their final jump, and been greeted with the usual amount of cheers and jeers. The so-called independent newspapers—according to their own account—after carefully (and let us hope prayerfully) considering the matter, have finally decided on which side they will range themselves, and announced it in glaring head-lines and bold type, evidently with large ideas as to the importance of the announcement. But the American people are learning to do their own thinking.

The RECORD would like to join in the chorus of advice that is rising all over the country, as to how people should vote, but being a non-partisan paper it refrains. It has this to say however, get the facts in the case from a clean, truthful newspaper, decide for yourself, vote for what you honestly believe to be the good of the country, and if your brain is so muddled by the outcry that you don't know what to do, vote the way you would like to tell you which ticket, having very decided opinions on the subject, but in that case would be breaking the rule of the paper. But if you really believe in the principles of your party vote its ticket, and don't believe the country is going to destruction, because some politicians are saying so.

The Subway Saloon.
Some men in New York City have established a saloon where pure drinks of all kinds are sold at a moderate price, including soft drinks and beer for women. The saloon is to be kept clean and quiet; no intoxicating drink is to be sold to a drunken man or woman and it is to be a place where moderate drinkers can go and spend a pleasant evening without being thrown into bad company; in short, as its promoters say, to be for the poor man, what clubs are for the rich. Bishop Potter, of New York was at the opening, made an address approving of it, and led in the singing of the long meter doxology.

This is an age when men are advocating all sorts of schemes for social reform, many conscientious, good people, advocating schemes that others believe to be positively bad in their results; none has caused more discussion than this. Its advocates argue that men will drink, and that it will do them less harm to drink pure liquors in a decent place, than adulterated liquors in a saloon, and openly advocate moderate drinking as good for the health and morals; opinions range from this all the way to those who think that a saloon, touch, taste or handle any intoxicant. Of the various opinions we think the last is the safest, although it is extreme and unattainable. It is only another proof of how little we know of social science. Man seems to be compelled to get his knowledge of that, as well as of other things that go to make him better, by bitter experience.

Another minister in the west is having a building erected which is to be a combination church, saloon and theatre. The money made is to be devoted to charity. To many of us, these schemes seem to be dangerously near to sacrilege.

The Summer's Large Crops.
The offices of country newspapers are filled with prize fruit and vegetables this Fall—Irish potatoes and tomatoes weighing more than a pound each, corn fourteen and fifteen feet high, branches of plum trees with a plum on them for every inch of length—altogether it is a famous season for the growth of all sorts of crops. With a fair crop of wheat and a good price, the promise of an unusually large crop of corn, a fine hay crop and an abundant potato crop, our farmers ought to be glad and to be commended, for last summer was a hard season for them. Many farmers had to buy feed for their stock, and wheat was a poor crop and low in price.

We all reap the benefit of prosperity for the farmers. This is a rural country and if the farmers have no money it is scarce with every one. Wheat is now a dollar, and still going up; whether the price will stay up or not, depends on the truth of the reports of injury to the Spring wheat in the northwest.

Floral Antiseptic
Tooth Powder. Efficient and exceedingly agreeable. It thoroughly cleanses the Teeth, keeps them white, the breath sweet, and the gums healthy. Contains nothing injurious. Cap bottles only like McKellip's Drug Store.

Mosquitoes.
Ever since it has been proved that the spread of yellow fever and malarial fever are mainly, if not entirely, due to mosquitoes, scientists and sanitarians have been making earnest efforts to get rid of them. Mosquitoes breed in still water, and the most reasonable and successful plan for their extermination is to drain swamps, fill up cesspools, keep cisterns and rain barrels covered up, and allow no stagnant water to remain. Where it is impossible to do this, some success has been attained by putting coal oil on the ponds or marshes, which in rather small quantities is fatal to the larvae. This, together with cleanliness, has had wonderful results in many places, as for example in Cuba, where yellow fever has been exterminated.

There are however, some very amusing plans to fight mosquitoes—amusing at least to the merry of the world. One man has invented a mosquito-killer which looks like a large lamp shade made of sheet metal, black outside and bright colored inside. In the top of it is an electric light of 30-candle power; also wires which are so arranged as to give out a soft musical sound, which mosquitoes are said to be very fond of. Inside the shade is arranged sticky fly paper. You have only to elevate your shade over a pool, or place where there are plenty of mosquitoes and connect it with a battery, and the mosquitoes will meet their death, soothed by the sweet sounds they are said to love better than life.

It is said by some persons who profess to be intimately acquainted with them, that certain chords and strains of music will cause instant death to mosquitoes whether from excess of pain or pleasure, deponent saith not. Now this good town of ours is a musical town. In it you may hear vocal music, the music of graphophones, mouth organs, cabinet organs, pipe organs, pianos, violins, mandolins, banjos, a drum corps and a brass band. Suppose we get all these musicians together, having first learned what chords are fatal to our sharp little friends. If sweet music will attract them we will no doubt come in clouds; then strike the fatal chord, and the thing is done promptly and in a way that combines business with pleasure.

Situation at Atlantic City.
Here is what a writer in the Nesogay column, of the Philadelphia Record, thinks of Mayor Stoy's effort to stop "spooneing" on the beach at Atlantic City:
"Take my word for it, Cupid is doing business at the old stand," remarked the man who went down to Atlantic City Sunday expressly to find out. "I expected to find him perched on some old-of-the-way pile with drooping wings and a mouth down at the corners. Wasn't I left! Never was the little rascal fatter of ginger, and more maliciously gleeful over the seeming assistance he receives from the ozone. Why, he had one girl so dead that she only squealed regisly when a human was torn out of the surf and embraced her—a real bear hug. Let alone nearly crushing the life out of her ruined her creation in white, which was a limp horror when he broke away. Why, in town a slow death in boiling oil would be too good for such a man! I Down here it's another story, the whole of which is never told for obvious reasons. I expected, too, to see more clothes, considering all I'd read about the wren abbreviated bathing suits. I can't say, though, that I found the area of exposed human flesh less or contours more hidden. Strikes me as being the same old town, same old ways, same old clothes, and the same young Cupid."

No doubt the Mayor will have to submit to a good deal of chaffing for his effort. Most persons like to see young people enjoy themselves, but any one who has been in Atlantic City will wish him success in his endeavor to keep them within the bounds of propriety.

World's Fair Echoes.
An interesting feature of the Spanish exhibit in the Palace of Agriculture, the only one made by Spain at the World's Fair, is an old brand of sherry wine. It was bottled exclusively for American use in 1865, while the wine was stirred by Lincoln's assassination, and hence has been called "Salero Lincoln."

A mantle worn by General Santa Anna is exhibited in the New Mexico pavilion at the World's Fair.
A complete electric bulb plant in full operation is an attractive feature in the Palace of Electricity at the World's Fair. A force of twenty-two girls is employed and the daily output reaches 1250 perfect globes.

Stereotypic views of California's 28 richest counties, and lectures on their resources are given daily in the Palace of Agriculture at the World's Fair.
A large collection of bows and arrows of Chinese manufacture are exhibited in the Palace of Liberal Arts at the World's Fair. The bows are curiously shaped and decorated and are of various sizes. The arrows are made of wood, but are tipped with sharp pieces of steel.

A model coffee-curing plant in miniature is shown in the Mexican section of the Palace of Agriculture at the World's Fair. The plant shows in every detail the way the coffee crop is handled from from the time it is harvested until ready for the market.
A reproduction of Liberty Bell, carved out of golden creamery butter, is displayed in the dairy section of New York exhibit in the Palace of Agriculture. Exact measurement of the bell was made by Charles Brown, the famous butter sculptor, and the butter bell was carved in accordance with them. Every feature of Liberty Bell is faithfully reproduced even to the crack and the historic inscriptions.

Governor's week at the World's Fair will probably be a feature of the latter part of September. The influence of the individual commissions will be exerted to persuade each chief executive to arrange his affairs so he can participate, and it is expected with this concerted movement it will bring together the majority of the governors of the United States.
The Model Library in the Missouri building at the World's Fair contains 10,000 volumes, 1800 of which are by Missouri authors. The library was formally opened August 1 and is free to all.

An interesting group of Japanese carved panels is a feature of the loan collection in the Art Palace at the World's Fair. These panels are called "Choshu Ramma" and are made from wood known in Japan as "Keyaki." The panels date back to the 16 and 17 centuries and vary in value from $200 to $500.
The Grandeur Guard Band from London, England, one of the most famous of the royal bands, will begin an engagement at the World's Fair, August 29. Special permission was obtained from King Edward to allow this band to leave England.

A mammoth bottle forty feet high and twenty feet in circumference overtops every exhibit in the Italian section in the Palace of Agriculture at the World's Fair. It is made of a thousand quart bottles of the famous Marsala wine, the Italian sherry, which bears the name of the little town in which it is made. The export trade in this product is more than $1,500,000 yearly, and the wine is shipped to all parts of the world.
One hundred and thirty-five different kinds of macaroni are exhibited in the Italian section of the Palace of Agriculture at the World's Fair. This staple of sunny Italy is made in almost every conceivable shape, of which the characteristics of each kind, though partaking of the same general nature, are essentially different.

Entries of six representatives of Hungary for the Olympic Games at the World's Fair have been received by Chief James E. Sullivan, of the Department of Physical Culture. The entries are for swimming, track, field and fencing championships.
A Perfect Painless Pill is the one that will cleanse the system, set the liver to action, remove the bile, clear the complexion, cure headache and leave a good taste in the mouth. The famous little pills for doing such work pleasantly and effectually are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Both Moore, of Lafayette, Ind., says: "All other pills I have used grip and sicken, while DeWitt's Little Early Risers are simply perfect." Sold by J. McKellip, Drug-gist, Taneytown, Md.

Claims Against Uncle Sam.
The officials of the War Department are firm believers in the truth of the old adage that experience is a valuable teacher and think that their recently completed plans for the settlement of damage claims that are sure to grow out of the

Ayer's Hair Vigor
Why is it that Ayer's Hair Vigor does so many remarkable things? Because it is a hair food. It feeds the hair, puts new life into it. The hair cannot keep from growing. And gradually all the dark, rich color of early life comes back to gray hair.

Gray Hair
When I first used Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair fell out all over my head. Now it is a nice rich black, and as thick as I could wish. It is the best I ever used. Sold by J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

army manoeuvres on the Bull Run battleground at Manassas, Va., in September, and about the best that could be devised. The corps of "observers" under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Hull, of the Judge Advocate-General's office, appointed some time ago, will be charged with the duty of estimating any damage done by the troops during the manoeuvres "on the spot" and endeavoring to secure a settlement then and there. A court will pass upon the reasonableness of the settlements immediately after the troops have left the manoeuvre camps for their homes.

Army officers say that with 30,000 regular and militia troops roaming over the woods and fields of Prince William county, fighting sham engagements and participating in all the details of minor warfare, hundreds of claims against the government for damages caused by the troops are sure to ensue. If previous experience is any criterion, some of these claims will be real and a considerable portion imaginary. Not a few of them will be unique, too, for it has been found that the average farmer, he be from the North, South or West, is very quick to take action against the government for injury, actual or fancied, and doesn't always wait to make sure that his claim is backed by common sense.

At the close of the manoeuvres at Fort Riley last year, a Kansas farmer sent a claim to the War Department for $2.50 for "lost time." The farmer's communication contained no further details, but upon request he informed the department that while he was plowing in his field one day he had seen a regiment of soldiers pass by and became so much interested that he left his plow and followed them. He argued that if the soldiers hadn't passed by he would not have left his plow and consequently wouldn't have lost any time. The Judge Advocate-General didn't waste any time arguing the matter in his reply to the farmer with the claim, but simply wrote: "Does the circus pay you for the time you lose when you follow the elephants?"

Another Kansas—who, according to the War Department officials, are a nation of many low-waters $1,000 for "the destruction of a field of valuable flowers." On investigation it was found that a regiment of regular troops had camped on an unweeded field on the farmer's land, which happened to be white with daisies. The farmer unblushingly informed the army officer who made the investigation that he usually sold the daisies for ten cents a dozen, and that he estimated he had lost a thousand dollars when the regiment tramped over the flowers, and still trying to collect.—Brooklyn Eagle.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week.
Topic: National missionary heroes.
In the sense in which we use the word missionary today it requires a considerable stretch of the imagination to look upon Barak, Samson, Jephtha or even David as missionaries.

Moreover, these ancient worthies of Israel possessed the traits of all workers for God, whether it be mission work at home or abroad.

1. Israel's national heroes were men of faith. They believed in God and based their lives upon their faith in God.

2. Israel's national heroes were men of consecration. Service was the keynote of their lives. They "subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises," etc. They were men of deeds.

3. Israel's national heroes were men of zeal. Through self sacrifice and suffering they sustained and carried forward God's work.

4. Israel's national heroes were men of love. Through self sacrifice and suffering they sustained and carried forward God's work.

5. Israel's national heroes were men of courage. Through self sacrifice and suffering they sustained and carried forward God's work.

6. Israel's national heroes were men of faith. They believed in God and based their lives upon their faith in God.

7. Israel's national heroes were men of love. Through self sacrifice and suffering they sustained and carried forward God's work.

The Banana.

There is a vast amount of ignorance prevailing among intelligent people of the world as to the growth, production and marketing of bananas.

Acid Dyspepsia is a very common disease. It is indicated by sour stomach, heartburn, tongue coated and flabby, stomach full, and a feeling of fullness.

Appreciate Her. If a man wishes to hold the respect and love of the woman he has married, he must show her consideration and sympathy.

Endeavor is "going." Other wise one tells us that the day of Endeavor is passing. Yes, I think Endeavor is going, but "going" in quite a different sense.

More and More. God's promise is ever on the ascending scale. One leads up to another, fuller and more blessed than itself.

Christian Endeavor. I promise to do as best I may. I'll do my little task each day. And nothing shall I'll let Christ have His way in me. I'll show unswerving loyalty to His work.

Get Your Money's Worth. You get your money's worth when you buy Ellinger's Oil Liniment. A full half pint bottle costs but 25 cents, and you get your money back if not satisfied with results.

Squabs for Market. The keeping of pigeons has become a regular business in some sections, compared with ten years ago, and a great deal of interest is now being taken in the pigeon business.

Birds that Live too Long.

After seventy-five years of captivity a female owl has just died in an aviary in England. Brought from Norway in 1829, this bird, within the past thirty years, has reared no less than ninety young.
