Maryland' as a text book, from which he read sections and expounded their meaning. He pointed out the points in which the Maryland code differs from that of other States. When he came to the portion referring to the power of the the portion referring to the power of the Chief Executive of the State he spoke with his usual fire and boldness.

He explained in what respect the Governor of this state has greater powers than that of the other State Governors. While the duties are more arduous, he said, the avenues through which craft may run are far more numerous, and for that reason, he concluded that it behooves the voters of the State to be more exacting in the qualification and credentials of the man who holds or aspires to that office.

"You never realize," he said, "what tremendous power a man could wield in this city who controlled the 900 policemen for partisan purposes. The Govern-or appoints the police magistrates and the men who examine the qualifications of the police apd determine their fitness or service. It is possible for a Governor f this State to weed out every man on the force who is opposed to him, and at the end of the four years to make the 900 men his henchmen

"The power of appointment is a great power. The time was when a Republi-can magistrate would put up with the the offenses of Republicans and the Democratic magistrates would take pretty good care of the Democratic of-fenders. If a man I have appointed would do a thing like that I would cut his head off pretty soon. We do not want justice administered with a club. "With regard to the power of reprieve and pardoning there are 2 800 pareons and pardoning there are 2,800 persons in state penal institutions who cannot be released without I say so. I am willng to exercise the pardoning power and take the trouble of investigating the peitions brought before me as long as that power is vested in me. Here every man or woman, black or white, has the right to petition for a pardon. I will hear the plea, but I insist on doing it openly. I want the people living in the neighborhood where the crime is committed to know that I have been asked for a pardon for the criminal.

THE AMENDMENT AGAIN. Governor Warfield spoke Thursday night before the Men's Club of the As-cension Protestant Episcopal Church upon the Constitution of Maryland, lay-ing particular stress upon the duties of the Governor A Startling Possibility Connected with the Question.

The Governor used the "Manual of The Annapolis Capital claims to have made several discoveries concerning the coming decision on the Constitutional mendment question, which have aroused some interest and speculation. Ac-cording to the Capital, the Judges may bring into the decision the consideration of facts which were not brought out by the attorneys and are not considered germane. The Capital goes on to say: "The original trial, as well as the appeal, was solely on the right of the Governor to refuse to proclaim the amend-ment if, in his opinion, the interests of the state demand it. No other facts, as far as the contents of the amendment itself were concerned, were touched upon in the arguments. Generally speaking a court does not bring into the considera-tion of a case such as this any facts which were not elucidated by the attorneys on either side. 'Those, however, who claim to know epresentatives to Congress. so much about what the decision of the court will be claim that the court has made a startling discovery in the phraseology of the bill which it will bring to the fore in making the decision. It has to do with the manner in which the voter shall give expression to his wishes with reference to the proposed amendment. "In speaking of this matter the amendment as it at present stands states that the voter shall 'write or print' the words 'in favor of the amendment' or words 'in favor of the amendment' or opposed to the amendment.' How a voter shall print or write his vote when

t was not discovered by anyone else and was not brought to their attention in the ordinary events having to do with a consideration of the facts as elucidated by sideration of the facts as elucidated by the attorneys on either side." If the Court of Appeals should call at-tention to the phraseology and point out as claimed, that a cross-mark for or against the amendment is insufficient, but that every voter must write the words "in favor of" or "opposed to" the amendment no illiterate will he able to but that every voter must write the words "in favor of" or "opposed to" the amendment, no illiterate will be able to vote. This would debar a large number of colored voters and not a few white ones. It is a very important provision. The opinion of the court is expected some time next week.

Politicians, especially those identified with the republican party, are much con-cerned over the reported conclusions of the Court of Appeals with reference to the constitutional amendment. They ac-knowledge that if the court passes upon that section of the act which deals with the marking of the ballot in the manner stated the amendment is built stated, the amendment is already as Baltimore has invested, within a year of its great fire, more money than was lost in that catastrophe. The work now represents an investment of at least $100-000,000, and much more will be added later. The city has a great opportunity for the complete rebuilding of its entire business center, and this opportunity will be utilized to the full. Once more an American city is realizing the fact that a fire covering large areas may be a blessing in disguise. The new buildings are often more of an improvement over the old ones than could have been secured through any other agency than that of the seemingly unrelieved disaster of the flames.

The effort now being made by the President to in a measure control the significance, and interests not only the fails to hold good. The "short" horses the settling up of your financial matters railroads, shippers and consignees, but are as follows; every citizen of the country. The secret methods of discriminating in favor of trusts, by the railroads, if true as charged, is such a manifest injustice that no one need be enlightened on the subject, and there can be no difference of opinion that if the practice can be discontinued in no other way, it must be done by the government.

That the railroads, by rebates and silent agreements, should give to the monster corporations the power to crush competition and silence the small operator, is not only highly detrimental to the development of the country and to the healthy growth of its business, but it strikes at the root of our freedom and everything an American citizen holds most dear.

General interest in such a condition is not only strongly sympathetic on the side of justice, but it has its equally strong personal side, for the reason that the people "pay the freight" in the end. Whatever scheme may operate in the direction of raising prices reaches the consumer. Even in the matter of freight charges, without considering issues under the surface, the people pay them because they are added to the cost of every article handled, and appear in the selling Topic.-Glorifying God in our daily work.-Matt. v, 13-16; Rom. xii, 11.

"What I write here is for the glory of God." This is the opening sentence of the autobiography of John G. Paton, missionary to the New Hebrides, whose thrilling story of carrying the cross to the New Hebrides cannibals electrified the Christian world. For more than twenty years he had been importuned to tell the world of his unusual experiences, but steadily refused, characterizing the idea as "savoring too much of self." But at last, convinced that this narration might be of use to the church of God and hence for His glory, he undertook it, mentality or ordinances He can make emphasizing the fact that it was writus whole; He can satisfy our hunger ten for the glory of God by adding, "I and use us to feed the hungry. And lift my pen with that motive [the glory of God] supreme in my heart." For blind, but He can give us sight and of God] supreme in my heart." For the glory of God he had undertaken his use us to open the eyes of others. Like missionary labors, and for the glory of this man, we were born blind, by na-

God he reviewed them to the world. Man's supreme business in this life is to glorify God. This is his vocation. He may have many avocations, but the calling which should have the supreme place in his life is that of living for the glory of God. "Man's chief end is to glorify God and to enjoy Him forever." "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter. Fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man." But if the supreme duty of man is the glorifying of God we must glorify God in our daily lives. Life is not a succession of Sabbaths, but the sum of the endeavors of every day. Out of seven days there is but one Sabbath. Therefore the man who limits his religion to the Sabbath day falls six-sevenths short of making it the supreme business of his life to glorify God.

Religion between Sundays is as important as religion on Sunday. We serve God and glorify Him by faithfulness in business and by fervency in spirit in discharging the most routine duties of life. The statesman should legislate, the business man direct his business, the agent buy and sell, the tradesman labor, the student study, the home life be lived for the glory of God.

When we can write over every act of life, whether performed on the Sabbath or on a week day, "What I do is for the glory of God," we shall have reached the point where our religion means what it should mean in view of the inspired injunction, "Whether, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

Glorifying God in daily life is the best sermon that can be preached. Observant men will see not only our good works, but also the propelling motive back of them, and they, too, will be led to glorify not you, but God. "What in your sermon converted me? Nothing," answered a questioned inquirer. "I have been led to accept Christ by the nine years' consistent daily life of the man beside whom I work in the ing apart from Him. He must do it shop." Let your light shine for God. all, yet He pleases to use sometimes That is your mission as a member of human instrumentality. Is not the God's kingdom on earth. Men will see it and will want to and will enter the from His mouth, suggestive of the sinkingdom and will also glorify God.
