Against Chance Schemes.

The action taken last week, at Westminster, by the Maryland State Camp of the P. O. S. of A., in prohibiting Camps of the order in the state from indulging in raffles, drawings and schemes of chance for raising money, is an object lesson for churches and societies, making higher pretensions than does this order in their championship of moral laws. It is also a sign to individuals that long-standing practices which have passed current as allowable—though in fact disreputable—are now being properly branded, and public sentiment will be given the opportunity to fall in line back of the crusade for the public good.

It is argued, with much force, that chance confidence and contentment that the chance element permeates all investments and all efforts for securing money; but, while there is some truth in this it is not the sort of chance which underlies the lottery or gambling proposition. The speculator in margins, perhaps, fills the gambler's role—buys the lottery ticket—and hopes to reap where he has sown little or nothing; but, that the business man, or investor in securities, does the same thing is rather hard to believe. The latter, in fact at least, accompanies his investment with honest toil and effort and while aiming to better himself financially is also apt to benefit others along the same line, while the former depends on the turn of the wheel or drawing of a card, knowing that while one must win, a dozen must lose.

The lottery proposition is wrong because it appeals to the gambling chance getting something for nothing. There is nothing about it which leads to the establishing of character or country.
There is no co-operative feature which mixes with the investment and ultimate profit a healthy industrial development and widespread consciousness of honestly made money. We are all learning more, just now, than we ever knew before, about a system of sharp practices and gambling with the necessities of the people that is rapidly developing into monstrous aggregations of corruptly acquired wealth, that is leading up to some great public calamity as yet undefined but sure to appear.

Green Mail Boxes.

One of the papers, published presumably in the interest of Rural Mail Carriers, has it that the P. O. Department will soon issue an order that all boxes are to be painted green, by the Carriers, and numbered, for which service they will receive extra pay. Our opinion of papers of this class is that they are both unreliable and mischievous, at times, and that some of their items of news are not to be depended on.

In the present instance, it is somewhat difficult to understand by what authority the Department can paint green or any other color, a private mail box, without the consent of the box owner, and it is probable that there is but little foundation for the item. In any event, green would be a very objectionable color, for all reasons. If the boxes are to be uniformly painted—and there are good reasons why there should be uniformity—then the color should be plain white, with name and number in black. Better than white, would be aluminum, as it gives the white effect and stands the weather better than oil paint of any kind.

While on this subject, we see the opportunity to recall our first contention; that all boxes should be painted green, not more than three designs, with not over three makes of locks, and that the boxes should have been critically selected by, and provided through, the Postoffice department, at the minimum of cost to the patron. Or, that they should have been owned and kept in repair by the department, and a modest annual rental collected for the use of each, the same as rent for boxes in a postoffice is collected.

Very much of the unpopularity of the Rural Delivery System is due to the box question, and this might have been avoided, at the outset, had the department considered this very important detail in its practical application. Just now if it wants to start a big rumpus, let it order that all boxes be painted green.

Our Preaching President.

"The religious discourse delivered by the President at Oyster Bay, Sunday, was good as any ever delivered by Kaiser Wilhelm, who is the only other political personage of high distinction with pro-tensions of an ecclesiastical kind. But why should laymen want to hear sermons from Kaisers and Presidents, when there are priests and ministers trained to the work, whose services may be obtained? It is possible that the gospel is more edifying when set forth by a person of distinction than by a clergyman who has no claim to attention beyond the goodness of his life and his familiarity with the sacred word?"—Criticism of Argus.

While the Argus does not say so in so many words, it intimates that "religious discourses" should be left wholly to "clergymen"—preaching to the preachers—but the Argus does not really mean any such thing. It is too honest and sensible a paper to lose sight of the fact that the most effective work for the good of the country, and indirectly for the salvation of the world, may be done, and often is done, by the laity, and the Argus has its own share in this by publishing an exceptionally clean sheet, full of matter with a tendency toward the elevation of the morality and citizenship of its readers.

We do not in the slightest discount the magnificent work, the high calling, of the clergy. They undoubtedly bear the world from falling into the depths of sin and ignorance, and the privileges and privileges are higher than those of either our President or the Kaiser; but, their work, after all, will avail little without "sermons" from the exalted publican Congress to try a contested election case by the census return, instead of by the election returns. Republican Congresses did that sort of thing in former times, but never except when it needed the vote. In the Fifty-ninth Congress the G. O. P. will have more votes than necessary, and more than it wants.

Thirty years ago "running for Congress" was a Republican industry at the South. In those days the G. O. P. needed martyrs, and South Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana furnished them. The white people of those States were so im-patriotic that they refused to be governed by the black people, and the Republican party made a deal of capital out of the fact in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania; Ashtabula county, Ohio; around South Bend, Ind., and around Elgin, Ill.

Whenever a time comes that a political party needs martyrs, it is a very easy matter to find them. The case of Mis-sister Eliza Finkston is notable in this point. She was arrested by the Republican party much of the campaign literature that aided in the election of Cos. Foster as Governor of Ohio the first time. Her "testimony" contributed to the seating of Mr. Hayes in the White House.

In those days there were patriots down who were pretended to be running for Congress, but were really running for the allowance made to the contestant of a seat. This was a regular business, but there was a living in it, such as there is in higher esteem. An impression is gaining that an unjust decision in a single election case tends to cheapen every seat on the floor. The Republican party is no longer in need of martyrs. It will no longer encourage the practice of bestowing ensignships on Southern Republicans defeated for congress. It is going to have just as little as possible to do with contested elections. There are many other fronts in the fire, and he will be a fortunate contestant who gets a hearing of the first session.

It is rather curious that no contested election case comes from a Northern constituency, though there are many more districts at the North than at the South.—Washington Post.

The Press on Good Roads.

The columns of the newspapers of the land may always be depended upon for accurate showing of the trend of public opinion on proposed national legislation.
The honest press is but the mouthpiece of an enlightened people. We give space below to some extracts from leading papers on the question of national aid to highway improvement—as follows:

Cleveland, Ohio, Leader. It is worthy of note that the pressure in the direction of National aid in road building is becoming stronger and stronger. The Government, in aiding to build roads, would stimulate industrial activity, while it would, at the same time, stimulate the highest ambition in the citizen, command his loyalty, and insure an ardent patriotism.

Atlanta Constitution. The Brownlow bill has much to commend it, and it stands for a sound, worthy principle of government, designed to benefit not a class, but the whole people. The road legislation is beginning to show results.

Chicago Tribune. It is difficult to see how anyone can believe in National responsibility for internal improvements without favoring National aid for road building.

Binghamton, N. Y., Leader. It is widely hoped that the policy of Federal aid will be found to be applicable to the construction of good roads. In so doing any other way could the National purse be opened with the prospect or possibility of contributing to the general advantage. Special interests have for so long a time and so exclusively felt the invigorating influence of the Government's beneficence that it is difficult about time that something was done for the general interest. A small part of the taxes the people pay properly and justly should be used for the people's benefit.

New York Press. Congress has no more widely useful measure of domestic legislation in hand than this is contemplated in the bill put forward by Representative Brownlow and Senator Gallinger to give National aid to the good roads movement.

Jacksonville, Fla., Metropolitan. The passage of what is known as the Brownlow bill by Congress would be material help and bring results more quickly than the slow and limited plan of county and State taxation.

Northfield, Vermont News. The idea of Government aid in State road building is everlasting right, and unless such aid is given it will be many years before the small States will have much of this needed improvement.

Philadelphia Telegraph. The purposes of this bill unquestionably receive the heartiest approval of every patriotic man in the United States, without respect to political or other affiliations.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Times. We are cordially in accord with Mr. Brownlow in the matter, and we trust that the people who are to be so greatly benefited by the proposed law will get the best of the Congress and hold up his hands in an enthusiasm and an energy that will give him influence in carrying forward his project. It is not necessary to argue for the very good to be accomplished by the inauguration of the plans contemplated by Mr. Brownlow.

Newark, Tenn., Courier. "Better roads" is the exclamation coming up from the agricultural classes in all States, and it should have such a power behind it that Congress will not hesitate to pass such a law.

The above hurriedly gathered excerpts are from leading papers. We might er-rone our columns with similar expressions, but these suffice for the present.
They are taken from hearings submitted to the last Congress and published in the document No. 304, Fifty-Eighth Congress, 2nd Session. Write to your Senator for a copy of this document, and receive a mass of most useful information on the road question.

The Only Way.
There is no way to maintain the health and strength of mind and body except by nourishment. There is no way to nourish except through the stomach.
The stomach must be kept healthy, pure and sweet of the strength will be down and disease will set up. No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, and other stomach troubles that are curable are quickly cured by the use of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure. Kodol digests what you eat and strengthens the whole digestive apparatus. Sold by J. McKellip, Druggist, Taneytown, Md.

The Savings Bank.
Have you a bank account?
If not, why not?
Your wages are small? Demands are large? Saving is impossible?
Pardon me, saving is not impossible.
The saying may not be large, but it may be pitifully small at the first trial, but saving will be a beginning, and it will grow.

There are several reasons why you should have a bank account, however modest it may be.
First of all, some day you will need some ready money. Sickness, loss of work, a slight turn in the wheel of fortune—what will you do?
Another reason may be found in contention and peace of mind. He who has some savings feels more secure than does the spendthrift. Discontent and "My hair used to be very short. But after using Ayer's Hair Vigor a short time it began to grow, and now it is four inches long.

Short Hair
worryes do the footsteps of the man who lives up to all his income.
But the big reason is this:
The saving habit is reflex in its action.
It is an index of character.
It is easy to spend money. It requires foolishness to save it. The badly-minded man lets his money recklessly fly. The strong man resists the strong temptation to spend more than he can afford and, in resisting this temptation, grows stronger.

Nor need one grow stingy and hard-hearted.
There are many inducements for a young man, especially, to let go of his money. He is urged in a hundred ways to squander his hard-earned dollars foolishly. He who resists is laying the foundation for a strong business character.
There are thousands, especially in the cities, who, drawing good salaries, gauge the outgo by the income. They do not save a cent. And it is usually these who envy the successful, and point to the latter as lucky ones. Whereas it is true that the foundation of every fortune has been laid in the habit of small savings.
Go to the savings bank and start an account, however small it may be, by the habit of saving that is more important than the saving itself.
Get the habit.—Adams's Magazine.

The Delineator For September.
The earliest creations of Autumn are attractively set forth in the September Delineator, along with the fashion contents of the month. Helen Berkeley, Lloyd, Edouard La Fontaine and other authorities in the world of styles, and others, give the number of interest from other than the standpoint of fashion.
Mrs. Mary Hinman Abel contributes an article on the pure food question.
It is the first of a series and opens a discussion by outlining the part of the consumer, the housewife, in procuring safe foods. N. Hudson Moore writes interestingly on English poetry and the "Collector's Manual," and Dr. Grace P.
Murray has a paper on the child in the nursery which will be read by the profession. The "Nearer, My God, to Thee" is the subject of a paper by Allan Sutherland.
Weyner Jay Mills concludes his "Romances of Summer Resorts," and there is an enjoyable travel sketch, describing and picturing the beautiful Lake District in England. In the way of fiction, the number contains the continuation of Albert Bigelow Paine's serial "The Lucky-Piece," and of Helen Winslow's
New England story, "At Sunrise." Two and two short stories by Cornelia Atwood Pratt, and Elizabeth M. Cracken.
There are also entertaining pastimes for children, including an amusing fairy tale by L. Frank Baum. As usual, many pages are devoted to domestic interests and the needs of woman within and without the home.

A Warning to Mothers.
Too much care cannot be used with small children during the summer months to guard against bowel troubles. As a rule it is only necessary to give the child a dose of castor oil to correct any disorder of the bowels. Do not use any substitute, but give the old-fashioned castor oil, and see that it is fresh, as rancid oil nauseates and has a tendency to grip. If this does not check the bowels give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy
number contains the continuation of Albert Bigelow Paine's serial "The
and two short stories by Cornelia At-
wood Pratt, and Elizabeth M. Cracken.

Flourished the Prescription.
Dr. William Oeler, formerly of Johns Hopkins, now Regius professor of medicine at Oxford, was talking during his recent Canadian tour about the importance of precision in the writing of prescriptions.

"Accordingly the physician wrote the directions down—namely, the young man was to drink hot water an hour before breakfast every morning."

"The patient took his leave, and in a week he returned, saying to the physician:
"Well, how are you feeling?" the physician asked.

"Worse, doctor, worse, if anything," was the reply.
"Ahem." Did you follow my advice, and drink hot water an hour before breakfast?"

"I did my best, sir," said the young man, "but I couldn't keep it up more than ten minutes at a stretch."

Applejack in Lemonade.
Ammande, N. J., Aug. 10.—Believing that church festivals were becoming a little too mammoth, a practical joker thought he would infuse more life into an affair which was held near here the other day by pouring applejack into the ice cream and lemonade. The applejack that was used was of the copper riveted variety peculiar to certain sections of New Jersey, and the effect had on the staid old farmers and their sons and daughters was electrifying.

The festival was held in a Methodist church a few miles from here. It was attended by about one hundred persons, principally young men and women. Several of the young people had their hands of the locality gathered about the ice cream freezers and lemonade booths with their best girls and proceeded to spend their money. A number of young women who ate of the ice cream soon began to act in a peculiar manner. Those who took of the lemonade also became unusually excited.

The young man, some of whom are believed to be in the secret, pronounced the ice cream the "best ever." After several of the young people had become ill and others had exhibited unbecomingly impetuous "jags," the farmers suspects of the mischief, and a severe dose of the tested ice cream and lemonade. Their conclusion that it had been doctored was unanimous. Conspicuously they removed the freezers and jars to the room to make a more thorough examination.

It was the verdict that apple whiskey had been mixed with the cream and lemonade. The deacons have started an investigation to discover the practical joker. Parents of some of the young women have demanded that they be arrested when located.

To Cure a Balky Horse.

A crowd blocked the streets and the horse doctor joined in to see what was up.

"Ah, a balky horse," he murmured. Then he worked his way to the time Carlow, saying in an authoritative voice, "Let me pass, friends, I am a veterinary surgeon."

He soon reached the balky horse. He said to the master of the animal: "Put up your whip. It will do no good. I am a veterinary and I know your horse of the balks for you. Watch me."

He took hold of the horse's front leg at the fetlock, bent it at the knee joint and held it in this position for three minutes. Then he put the leg down again and chirruped to the animal. It started off as though it had never balked in its life.

"An odd remedy for the balks, but an infallible one," said the doctor. "It has never failed me. Any balky horse, if you hold one of its forelegs up three or four minutes, will be over its balkiness by the time the leg is lowered to the ground again."

Dangerous and Uncertain.
For sunburn, tetter and all skin and scalp diseases, DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve has no equal. It is a certain cure for blind, bleeding, itching and scalding piles. Sailor's Weird Yarn.
"This here hot weather," said the sailor, "together with the lack of ice in these here waters and me was wrecked in the South Seas."

"In them hot waters we drifted on a raft for eleven days. Our food was raw fish and turtle. Our drink was rain water."

"The rain water we got by catching it in our shirts and wringing it into a bottle. The shirts were red flannel, and when we wrung them the color run a little. Thus our drinkin' water was all the hue of blood."

"But I started to tell you about the turtle."

"We caught this turtle after two days' fastin', and he was the size of a trunk. There was enough meat on him to last ten days, but would he keep? If he wouldn't he were liable to starve. Carlos says to me, he says:

"We'll have to treat this here turtle like the native does," he says. "We'll have to hang him up and cut chunks of him as we need them, keepin' him alive," he says, or otherwise," he says, "he'll spill."

"And so, to save our skins, we done it. We hung up that there turtle and we cut steaks of it as we needed them, and, by golly, he kept healthy to the end. To the end? Why, what remained of him was still livin' when a sail blew in sight and we was rescued, and we tossed them remains overboard they swam off in good shape, if a trifle awkward."

"The natives in the tropics, where there ain't no ice, always use turtles in this way, Carlos Ribeira says. I consider it the cruelest deed ever heard of. Sometimes I think that, instead of takin' part in that cruel deed, it would have been better for me if I'd 'a' let myself starve to death on that raft, in the South Seas."—(Chicago Chronicle).

Took No Chances.
Culpepper Pete who, being enamored of some dusky maiden, and not having the courage to "pop" her to face, called up the house where she worked, and asked for her over the telephone. When he got the property party on the line he asked: "Is dat Miss Jonsing?" "Ya-as," said the native. "I've got a most important question to ask you." "Ya-as," "Will you marry me?" "Ya-as. Who is it please?"

On West Tenth street lives a little girl who doesn't like lettuce.

"I just hate lettuce," she said one day, "and I'm glad of it."

"Why are you glad?" asked her mother.

"Because," she replied, "if I could be eating it all the time, and I don't like it."—Kansas City Times.

Mr. C. W. Brook, editor of the Aberdeen Enterprise, Aberdeen, Maryland, writes us:

"I need your Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy some twenty years ago and discovered it was a quick and safe cure. No one can sell something said to be 'just as good' as the Chamberlain's Remedy, for in all these years I have used it and recommended it. I have never known it to disappoint any one in its results when Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was taken for the complaints it cures. "But I started to tell you about the turtle."

"We caught this turtle after two days' fastin', and he was the size of a trunk. There was enough meat on him to last ten days, but would he keep? If he wouldn't he were liable to starve. Carlos says to me, he says:

"We'll have to treat this here turtle like the native does," he says. "We'll have to hang him up and cut chunks of him as we need them, keepin' him alive," he says, or otherwise," he says, "he'll spill."

"And so, to save our skins, we done it. We hung up that there turtle and we cut steaks of it as we needed them, and, by golly, he kept healthy to the end. To the end? Why, what remained of him was still livin' when a sail blew in sight and we was rescued, and we tossed them remains overboard they swam off in good shape, if a trifle awkward."

"The natives in the tropics, where there ain't no ice, always use turtles in this way, Carlos Ribeira says. I consider it the cruelest deed ever heard of. Sometimes I think that, instead of takin' part in that cruel deed, it would have been better for me if I'd 'a' let myself starve to death on that raft, in the South Seas."—(Chicago Chronicle).

Took No Chances.
Culpepper Pete who, being enamored of some dusky maiden, and not having the courage to "pop" her to face, called up the house where she worked, and asked for her over the telephone. When he got the property party on the line he asked: "Is dat Miss Jonsing?" "Ya-as," said the native. "I've got a most important question to ask you." "Ya-as," "Will you marry me?" "Ya-as. Who is it please?"

Showing Him the Way.

Basiful Beaumont—Er—I—er—dreamt I—er—kissed you last night. What's that a sign of?

Madam Mathey—Well, it's a sign that you're more sensible asleep than awake.

Good to Get Rid of Her.
Gray—And your milliner's bill is $500? My, I should think you would be terribly afraid to show it to your father!

Glady—I should be but for the fact that Frelly is going to ask papa for my hand this evening. The bill may incline father toward giving his consent.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Reason.
On West Tenth street lives a little girl who doesn't like lettuce.

"Why are you glad?" asked her mother.

"Because," she replied, "if I could be eating it all the time, and I don't like it."—Kansas City Times.

Mr. C. W. Brook, editor of the Aberdeen Enterprise, Aberdeen, Maryland, writes us:

"I need your Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy some twenty years ago and discovered it was a quick and safe cure. No one can sell something said to be 'just as good' as the Chamberlain's Remedy, for in all these years I have used it and recommended it. I have never known it to disappoint any one in its results when Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was taken for the complaints it cures. Have it handy in the house; don't wait until you need it before you buy it. You don't have time for sale by R. S. McKinney, Druggist, Taneytown, Md. 8-12-41

A Scheme.
He—Here's a collar I bought for the dog. Isn't it a beauty? Only paid $1.25 for it.
She—A collar for that cur? I thought you wanted to get rid of the dog.
He—So I do. Some one will be sure to steal him now with that collar on him.—Catholic Standard and Times.

Qualified.
Chief—So you want a place on the police force. What are your recommendations?
Applicant—I've been hounded for twenty years and can listen to troubles by the yard without ever turning a hair!—Detroit Free Press.

Phonographic.
Bleeker—The chap across the hall has a phonograph, hasn't he?
Baxter—No, he's a dentist and is filling Mrs. Gabbit's teeth. She is trying to talk with two relatives, and has a man a mirror and a drill in her mouth, that's all.—Flick.

Kece your credit good with the newspaper-man. He expects it, appreciates it and deserves it.
