Mr. Haman Addresses Editors

B. Howard Haman, whose name has become well known all over the state In connection with eyster and road legislation, delivered an address, on Tuesday, in Baltimore, to the editors of county papers in behalf of oyster culture and good roads. He said in part: "The politicians have been builders of our roads. The system was what might have been expected. Under this system have been expected. Under this system about $700,000 are still spent annually by the counties for their roads. This noney is disbursed by officials called road supervisors, who are really petty officers, captains and lieutenants of the Republican or Democratic organizations in the respective counties of the state. I am against this system. The county ssioners of the different counties should, I think, take the roads out of politics and place trained and practical men in charge of the business of road construction. This is not a business now at all. It is a part of the game of poliat all. It is a part of the game of politics. The farmers of the state, who are entitled to free channels for their traffic gifts." > this case, we have no means of judging, but it corresponds with much that we have often been told with reference to The story of the man in England whose friends conspired to tell him, one after another, how very unwell he looked, and who died in consequence, although in perfect health at the beginning of the test, is one that is constantly recalled. But there are other cases which may possibly be explained on this same theory of auto-hypnosis. Occasianally we meet the story of a man who had been bitten by a venomous serpent, who, on every anniversary of the accident, would experience another swelling of the wound, combined with much inflammation and some pain-in short, a repetition of the symptoms that attended the original poisoning. Now, it is conceivable that a man might partially recover from a snake-bite, and yet retain some of the poison in his system, but it is impossible to explain why there should be a recrudescence of the wound on every anniversary, unless the mind of the patient had something to do with bringing on a renewal of the attack. If there is such a thing as autohypnosis, it seems reasonable to believe that these are manifestations of it. With some hesitation we venture to last rites and may as well be laid away to do with the mysterious malady known as hay fever. es the importance of what we call medical missions as a part of the work of Christianity. Mark in the topical reference gives us an account of Christ's healing of Peter's wife's mother, and healing the sick seemed to be one of His supreme purposes in life, and through the power to heal He was our large cities almost all the great Christian denominations have hospitals, where the bodies of men may be are attended absolutely free of charge, those who are able, of course, being exthis the hospitals are erected by Christian money and principally sustained by the generosity of Christian people. These hospitals are Christ's for the healing of the sick, and in them many find peace of soul as well as healing of Medical missions have found their greatest fields of labor in foreign mission work. There are three principal reasons for this condition:

1. In most heathen countries medical science is very little advanced. Perhaps there is nothing cruder in heathen life today than the methods of taking care of the body. The practice of medicine, instead of being a science, is more largely a superstition. - Instead of helping the sick, the treatment practiced is more frequently injurious. This fact of itself makes medical missionaries an absolute necessity. Even before doctors went as missionaries those who had gone simply to preach the gospel were compelled to practice the art of healing as far as they could do

2. Medical missions are a great influence in winning the confidence of foreign people. They are naturally strongly prejudiced against foreigners, but when they see their loved ones relieved from pain and restored to health and strength this prejudice is very largely overcome. They can realize that the missionaries to this extent are beneficial to them, and anything that will assist in removing their prejudice to the missionaries is a great blessing to mission work.

3. Through the medical treatment of the body the opportunity to heal the soul by the gospel is the more readily attained. The medical missionaries gain admission to homes where the purely gospel teacher would be excluded. This is especially true of the women of the orient. Most of them lead secluded lives, where the ordinary missionary is never allowed to enter, but into these same homes the Christian woman who is a medical missionary has no difficulty in obtaining admission when there is sickness in the house. The king of an oriental country was once led to accept Christ and to sanction and support Christian missions as the result of the healing of his son by medical missionaries. The hour of sickness is always the hour of opportunity for all who would win souls to Christ. Let us visit the sick in our neighborhood, send them flowers and words of sympathy and support our denominational hospitals and at the same time earnestly pray for God's richest blessing upon the medical missionaries abroad and give

But with all these and other prayers recorded in in John xvii, are the most helpful of studies if we would learn how to pray.

By comparing i, 1, and ii, 1, we see that Nehemiah had been praying full three months before his opportunity came to speak to the king. He had the ear of the King of Kings for three months before his time came to make request of Artaxerxes. Doubtless he was always watching for the time to speak and to be ready when it should come. Nehemiah is very bold in his pleading and says notwithstanding their sinfulness, "These are Thy servant, Thy people, whom Thou hast redeemed. How to Serve the Formal and the Informal Repast.

In the formal luncheon if the table is a handsome wood without scratch or blemish it may be left bare, using small doilies under the plates and dishes and a centerpiece. This gives an unusual opportunity to display rare embroideries, but the fine damask tablecloth is always in good taste. When luncheon is announced the hostess asks her friends to follow her to the dining room without formality. The soup is served in two handled are more often served from the side.

In Asia among the Mongols and the Calmucks a woman dare not speak to her father-in-law nor sit down in his presence. Uallas in an interesting work on the Ostiaks of Siberia declares that a young married woman avoids her father-in-law whenever she can; especially during the early years of her married life. In the meanwhile the husband is not expected to see anything of his mother-in-law. If he

Many more instances might be mentioned, but these are enough to show that the position of the mother-in-law among many peoples is strange. The cause for it is not positively known. THE LIGHT BRAHMA.

A Popular Fowl With Many Fanciers and Market Poultrymen. Since its introduction in America the Light Brahma has been a popular fowl. Many breeds and varieties have come and gone, but the old Light Brahma remains, the love and pride of a host of fanciers and the mainstay of a large number of market poultry-men, writes Thomas F. Rigg in American Poultry Journal.

As an exhibition fowl the Light Brahma occupies a prominent place. This large, massive bird, beautiful in Its color markings of pure white and black, is very attractive in the show pen. In New England its popularity is the greatest, both as a fanciers' and utility fowl. It has been truly said that there is a time in the life of every fancier when he has a desire to breed the Light Brahma. There is a pleasing personality about the Light Brahma-stately and majestic and easy re-

As an egg producer the breed holds an enviable record. This fowl produces a majority of its eggs in the cold months, when the product commands the highest market price. Many fail in egg production with these fowls because of a lack of knowledge as to how to properly feed. An overfed

Brahma hen is an idler and is unproductive. As soft roasters no other breed or variety can equal the Brahma nor are in such demand in the best markets of the country. It can be stated as a fact that the paired the laying power of the breed, Williams and a number of other friends of the breed have strongly opposed this action and have retained the Brahma in its true form. This Cochinizing of the breed has, too, affected it as an exhibition bird. The west will have none of the Cochinized stock. Standard weights of Light Brahmas Cock, twelve pounds; cockerel, ten pounds; hen, nine and one-half pounds; pullet, eight pounds.

Care of Molting Fowls. More diseases are generally contracted during the molting period than at any other time, and by the use of good, sound, stimulating food, pure water, plenty of room and good, clean quarsafety, writes A. V. Meersch in Amer- SEND ALL ORDERS TOican Poultry Journal. The heavy strain upon the constitution of fowls in casting their feathers is much greater than one would suppose, and if the best of care is not adopted they become reduced in condition to such an extent that the liability to contract diseases is so alarming that they can scarcely escape it. The worst thing that can be done is to crowd too many in one roosting place at night, in badly ventilated and unclean quarters. Make everything clean first and use disinfectants. The best disinfectant that has ever been tried is crude carbolic acid and coal oil, about one pint of the acid to one gallon of kerosene. Use this cleverly and do not be stingy with it. Thoroughly paint the roosts and the dropping boards, or, better still, the entire inside of the poultry house. Paint the roosts once or twice a week through the molting season. Allow no more fowls in one house than there are roosts to accommodate them comfortably, giving each fowl enough space so other. Feed good, sound grain, and by no means the refuse of anything. Do not confine them to one variety of food, but different varieties-corn, wheat, among the Zulus of Africa, says a oats, buckwheat, any good, sound grain daughter-in-law must cut herself off relish and occasionally a little sunfrom her husband's relatives. Guinen Fowls. Guineas are not as bad to destroy crops as chickens are, and they are better insect destroyers, says A. J. Legg in National Stockman. They will range all over the farm in search of insects and will kill many insects that the chickens will not get. They will eat the gooseberry worm and the potato bug, and chickens will not. There are two well known breeds of guineas -the pead and the white. In shape and size they are about the same. The pearl guinea is not so well domesticated as the white and is more noisy. It is claimed that hybrids of these two breeds get larger than either full blood, Leg Weakness. Leg weakness in fowls is a form of rheumatism and is frequently caused by the fowls being kept in damp, filthy quarters. Ascertain wherein the surroundings of your fowls are lacking and try to remedy the same. This is also caused by the fowls becoming too fat. Give your fowls a teaspoonful of baking soda to each quart of drinking water and feed a cooling ration, such as wheat bran, middlings and vege tables of various kinds.

The Vanishing Home. People who know what a home is are not so many as middle aged men and women think, and they who never had one will hardly be expected to join in the lament at its gradual disappearance. That it is going out of fashion there is not a doubt. Every new pile of flats, every conversion of a dwelling to a boarding house, is elegiac of the circumstance. The modern family shifts from one tenement to another, loses or damages its goods in the transit, is constantly making new acquaintances, but as constantly losing the old, and is without quiet and retirement and peace. The older people regret the change; the younger have no standards by which to measure it .- Brooklyn Eagle.

Using the Toothbrush. Frequently as a woman takes a toothbrush into her hand she rarely uses it properly. It does very little good to rub a brush across the teeth. What the Lord told him.

The story is told about a certain church that was very exclusive, having well-todo and aristocratic members. A poor young man applied for membership and didn't want him. They hardly liked to turn him down, so requested him to take it to the Lord in prayer and come again. In about two months he showed up again. They asked him if he had taken it to the Lord and he said he had. They questioned him as to what reply, if any, he had received, and he replied as follows:

"The Lord told me not to get discouraged. He said he had been trying to get into that church for several years, but had not succeeded."

A Fair Deal.

A Southern Congressmau tells a story of an old negro in Alabama who, in his bargaining, is always afraid that he may get "the worst of it." On one occasion it appears, this aged darky went after a calf that he had pastured all summer, and asked what he owed for the pasturing.

"I have a bill of $10 against you," said the farmer, who had undertaken the care of the animal, "but, if you are willing, I'll take the calf and call it settled."

A Surprise Party.

A Surprise Party.

(For the Record.)

At the home of Mrs. Emma Haines, Uniontown, on Thursday evening, 9th., a surprise party was given in honor of her son, Frank. At 7.45 the guests arrived and found Mr. Frank in bed, hence the surprise was a complete one. After being disturbed in his "sweet dreams" and attiring himself, he then made his appearance in his usual cheerful and pleasant manner.

The well-lighted house was an ideal one for the occasion. The evening was pleasantly spent in various amusements. As the midnight hour approached, refreshments were served and ample justice being done to same, when time for departure had come. Then the "good-byes" were given and each expressing himself as having a general good time, and wishing Frank a piece of a peaceful night's rest, they left.

Those present were as follows: Nellie Weaver, Edith Roop, Margie Formwalt, wary Young, Anna Beard, Florence Young, Florence Formwalt, Annie Roop, Romaine Hollenberry, Florence Ogg, Rhoda Fleagle, Hilda Haines, Lillian Formwalt, Mattie Beard, Elsie Ecker, Clara Dotterer, Mamie Ecker, Nettie Myers, Cora Beard, Nettie Arnold, Edna Stoner, Lillian Haines, Bertha Lowe, Minnie Dickensheets, Irene Bare, Ethel Bankard, Mr. Morrison Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Keener Bankard, Mr. Annd Mrs. Guy Formwalt; Messre Frank Haines, Charles Baumgardner, Guy Haines, Harry Fritz, Ezra Horton, Myers Englar, Wm. Shaw, Arthur Sittig, John Wolf, Paul Devilbiss, Harry Formwalt, Clarence Roop, Samuel Myers, Marshal Roop and David Beard.

Harney.—Charles W. Cashman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Cashman, residing a few miles above Harney, departed this life on Tuesday morning, aged 20 years, 2 months and 2 days. A little pimple appeared in the nose, on last Friday. It opened on Sunday morning and erysipelas developed. His death was a shock to the entire community.

All good sizes and patterns, some are all wool and some are not; some are 5A and others are other makes. 5 sets of single harness. He was a young man of most excellent character. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. G. Minnick, on Thursday, and his body laid to rest in the Mt. Joy cemetery.
