> This unlooked for reduction is attribuing public. In 1905 there were registered 102,005 whites and 17,686 blacks. This year there are only 99,583 whites and 17,012 colored voters, a loss in the white vote of 2,422 and in the colored vote of 674, and this, too, notwsthstanding the increased population. It is true there is an increase of 2,031 in the white vote and a decrease of 317 in the colored Miller's. vote as compared with the registration

There are now pending in the courts a half dozen or more cases in which registrars refused to strike names from the books, and if these are displaced there will be a still greater reduction. Both parties are very much disappointed as they were led to believe by the figures of the supplemental registration that the number of votes this year would aggregate 125,000.

If you are one of those farmers who to shift for themselves and if you have not provided a place where your fowls will be warm and comfortable during the coming winter, we believe the fol-lowing little "poem" which appeared in the Poultry Item, will point a moral:

"I dreamed I was a chicken,"
Said good old Deacon Black
"With a comb upon my head
And feathers on my back, thought I was roostin' In the top of an oak tree; Iy comb was as hard as a brick And I could hardly see.

"The cold north wind went whistling by As I gripped an icy limb, And the farmer said as he passed by, 'Fresh air is good for him.'

"I flew down in the morning
And was searching for something to eat.
The farmer said, 'He's a rustler,
But I think he'll lose his feet!"

"I done without my breakfast— Didn't get a bite that day. 'My chickens are eatin' their heads off,' I heard the farmer say.

"I peeped into a hoss trough,
The corn looked good and sweet,
But they pelted me with cobs and stones
And I hastened to retreat. 'Then I woke up and you bet I was glad To find it was a dream, And now I've got me a new hen house— The result of that 'ar dream.''

WHAT TO EAT.

Why Fried Foods Are Considered In-

digestible. Why are fried foods considered indigestible? Because the fat in which the frying is done, no matter of how good quality that fat may be, forms a thin coating over each particle of food so fried. Now, neither the digestive fluids of the mouth nor those of the stomach can act upon fat, and so the fat incrusted food cannot be digested. Fats are digested only by a certain agent known as steapsin, which meets the food in the intestines. By the time the stomach gets into contact with the fat enveloped food, it has fermented-and that's indigestion. Salted and corned meats should be avoided, first, because they are usually taken from an inferior part of an inferior - often diseased-animal, and, second, because the chemicals used to prevent the meat from undergoing chemical change outside the body will act within the body to prevent the chemical change known as digestion. Meat is often denied to those suffering from rheumatism, because the disorder known as rheumatism is nothing more or less than an effort of the system to get rid of a certain poison which has been deposited at the junction of some of the long bones of the body.

Another question often asked is, "Why should I not drink with my meals?" Well, mainly because dilution of the gastric juice and the saliva with a pint or more of water will weaken their action, perhaps to such a degree that they may fail to do their work, and the consequence is indigestion. Of course fluids other than water, as wine, beer, tea, coffee and so on, not only dilute the digestive fluids. but complicate the problem by adding a poison to the food.

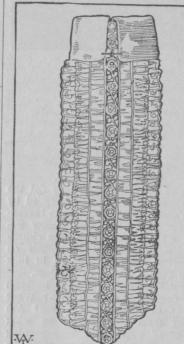

It is advisable to drink freely of pure water at other times than during meals because the body needs every day at least two quarts (water. The body of a man or woman of average size contains about a barrel of water. This is being literally "steamed" out of the body at the rate of six or seven pounds, upward of three quarts, a day, and so, in addition to the water contained in all solid foods (a beefsteak is about three-quarters water), the body needs about two quarts daily. Why are condiments, mustard, pepper, vinegar, tobacco and similar things condemned by food experts?

Because, in a word, they are irritants This applies with still more force to those other stimulants, tea, coffee, wine, beer and spirits. All are irritants, all sting the organs to frantic efforts, until the poor body labors like a tired horse spurred up a steep hill. When it comes to candy and pastry they are bad in every way. "There
